Third—Taxpayers in general are given a hearing and notice, but the defendant is assessed without notice or opportunity to be heard. The learned counsel argued that the defendant had notice. I say, first, that the answer alleges, of course the demurrer admits, that the defendant had no notice whatever. The answer alleges, and the demurrer admits, that the defendant had no opportunity to be heard—none whatever. The learned counsel says that the Board had power to make rules. I reply that the answer alleges, and the demurrer admits, that the Board had made no rules whatever. The learned counsel says that to consent to "furnish," in the language of the statute, a list of property and earnings was to acknowledge the correctness or validity of the assessment. I answer that the statute which makes it obligatory to furnish the list says no such thing, and implies no such thing.

But to pursue my list of the objections we do make to the process of assessment:

Fourth—Taxpayers in general are given an appeal from the Assessor to another tribunal—a local Board of Equalization. The defendant has no appeal, and its property is assessed by a body which has no power to equalize assessments of or for individuals, but only the total assessment rolls of counties.

Fifth—Taxpayers in general are assessed under predetermined rules of evidence and notice, and a prescribed mode and manner of assessment—rules made by the Legislature, uniform in all counties and permanent. The defendant is assessed by a body for which no rules are made—a body which makes its own rules. No rules are predetermined; and if made, they may be changed at pleasure. They need not be uniform, and no notice is required to be given.

Sixth—Taxpayers in general are entitled to deductions for liens on their property. The defendant is denied all deduction.

Seventh—Railway property in general, or rather the property of railroads generally, is not subjected to these special provisions and denials, but only the property of railroad companies like the defendant, doing business in more than one county.

Eighth—Property in general operated in more than one county, such as telegraph property, water channels, flumes, and the like, is not subjected to the treatment or terms prescribed for the defendant, but only property of the exact description of ownership of the defendant's property.

And lest I may not be understood at this point, I beg so far to repeat myself as to say that according to this Constitution, flumes, water channels, turnpikes, and telegraph lines, and other property situate in or operated in more than one county, are to be assessed like property in general, under all the provisions constituting "due process of law," and the property, and only the property of a few, of whom the defendant is one, no matter what species of property he may own, or whether it be operated in different counties or not, is selected to be visited, tabooed, and outlawed. The sole test is, does the person operate a railroad in more than one county; if so, then all his property is outlawed.

Such unjust and discriminating requirements are not "due process of law," and no matter by what State instrumentality they are inflicted, whether by one of the departments of its government, or another, or by all, or by the organic law of the State, the fourteenth amendment of the Constitution of the United States acts upon them and prohibits them.

Virginia vs. Rives, 100 U. S., 313, 318.

Ex parte Virginia, idem., 339, 346.

These are the objections constituting our argument that due process of law was not observed in taking the defendant's property, or in burdening it by taxation.

Rather than dwell upon them, I would ask your attention to my next proposition.

"Equal protection of the laws" is denied by an ordinance which provides that taxpayers in general shall be taxed on the cash value of their property, less the amount of incumbrances upon it; and that certain selected taxpayers shall be taxed on the actual value of all their property, without deduction for incumbrances. If the discrimination be not founded on the nature of the property, nor on the use made of the property, and be not confined to specified kinds of property, irrespective of its ownership, or applicable to all property of the same kind, then the distinction is founded on ownership and is leveled at particular owners.

This is unjust taxation, utterly at war with the fundamental principle on which all rightful taxation rests.

Abundant warrant for this position, will I think, be found in—

Hills vs. Albany Ex. Bank, 105 U. S. 319.

In the latter case (National Bank vs. Britton), the tax system of Indiana did not permit deduction of debt from assessable personal property in general, but only from "credits, or money at interest" and "other demands against persons or bodies corporate;" yet this Court said bank shares must be put on the footing of the most favored property. The Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Gray dissented, on the ground that Indiana's system did not confer the right of deduction for debt in respect of the same class of property, and therefore no inequality appeared; but the whole Court concurred in holding that if discrimination be made in the same class of property, the vice will be fatal.

Dealing now with what I suppose to be the major point of the argument on the other side, I deny that this proceeding was a lawful "classification of property for taxation."

The Constitution of California makes no classification of property for taxation. On the contrary, it declares all property to be taxable, save only such as it exempts—crops, school property, etc. Suppose, then, it was provided in this Constitution that school property and crops belonging to Episcopalians, or native born citizens, or Communists, or Democrats, should be exempt; and that the same kind of property belonging to others, or to quasi public corporations, should be taxed, and taxed without deductions for liens upon it—would there be any difference in principle between that case and this? Such provisions might seem more glaring to a layman; but would they, in law or in ethics, seem more glaring to this tribunal. Suppose the Constitution, or the Legislature, had said schools, unless they belong to such and such people; growing crops, unless they belong to quasi public corporations, or railroad companies, shall be exempt; thereby meaning if they do belong to these particular owners, then they shall be visited without any deductions for liens upon them, although all the other properties and ownerships in the State, real, personal, and mixed, are free from taxation to the extent of the liens upon them.

Classification, to be lawful, must distinguish between different kinds of property. If land is to be favored by a partial rate, it must be all land, certainly all land of the same kind, and in the same place. I am now speaking of taxation of property as property, and taxation upon values; not of poll taxes or licenses. If it be improvements of land, edifices, wells, shade trees, irrigating channels, coal beds, mines, quarries, or the like, which are to be favored, it must be all such improvements or developments.

My learned friend says a statute would be competent which authorized the assessment of the property of a wife to her husband. Yes; if the rule was uniform. But even in that inconsequential, exceptional, and merely formal case, would it be competent to provide that the property of a femme covert might be assessed to her husband, unless her husband was a member of a quasi public corporation, and that then it should be assessed in some other way, which other way would visit it with heavier burdens? Would that do? My learned friend will hardly say that.

Suppose it were declared that all outstanding debts incurred in making betterments, or in developing mines, quarries, and coal beds, or in digging irrigating ditches, should be deducted in assessing their value, unless the property belonged to a married man, or a copartnership; and in such cases no deduction should be made. In these instances obviously the test applied would be the ownership. The test would be, not the kind of property or the use to which it was put or even the locality, but who owns it. Is not that this case?

I now cite the authority of counsel on the other side to the position I am endeavoring to maintain. He said deliberately yesterday, in the hearing of your honors, that if the question which arose in the Sun Insurance case in New York, had been this—if the Act of the Legislature taxing the surplus of insurance companies had taxed only the surplus of owners over seventy years of age, it would have been unconstitutional, and would have been a denial of the "equal protection of the law." Is that case so strong as this? In that case there would be at least a sentimental equality; nature's laws suggest it. Every man, if he lives, will be seventy years of age; if he dies he will not afterward miss what he has lost, if the loss be of money, or profit by what he has not lost.

But in this case the distinction is wholly arbitrary and invidious, and laid on those whose vested rights existed at the time. The defendant organized years ago under the Act of 1861. Many persons, citizens, the answer avers, of California and other States, came forward and paid money in good faith to construct its railroad and acquire its property. This corporation, with its property and cestui que trusts, existed already when this novel Constitution came in, and finding it and its shareholders with their vested rights, Article XIII says, not those of you who grow to be seventy years of age, not those of you in respect to whom some natural contingency shall occur in the future; but all of you shall be assessed as nobody else is assessed, not upon a particular kind or particular kinds of property, not upon property hereafter acquired, but upon all the property, all manner of property which you, aggregated, hold, or may hold, no matter whether it be a tract of land in a distant county as far as the great area of California (and she has 185,000 square miles) will permit one tract of land to be distant from another, no matter how dissevered from your railroad, no matter how impossible from its nature to be used as railroad property, no matter how utterly divorced from the uses of a railroad corporation, no matter how unproductive it may be; it is enough for the Constitution to know that you own it, and because you own it, it shall be visited as that property would not be visited if anybody else owned it, and as no other property is visited. Is that lawful classification? Could the wit of man suggest a greater burlesque or travesty of the idea of the classification of property for taxation than that; infinitely worse, as it would be, than the case the learned counsel himself put, in which he said the vice of inequality would be fatal.

Again, the learned counsel said that duties and imposts must be uniform throughout the United States. We were reminded from the bench that the uniformity there meant is geographical; but take that provision for illustration, take it as the learned counsel understood it, and let me ask this question: Suppose the revenue laws of the United States provided that on such and such imports a duty of one per cent ad valorem should be collected, but that railroads and other quasi public corporations should pay two per cent ad valorem, and should pay double duties on anything else they should import. Taking uniformity to mean, not geographical but more especially ethical uniformity, has any member of the bar the courage to contend in this presence that such a provision would not be an affront to the Constitution, a violation of it in its very teeth? And yet the case in hand is that case, with an additional ingredient of offense in it.

Property situated partly in one county and partly in another, is not thus selected for "classification," even if that would be competent.

Property "operated in more than one county" is not thus selected, because in fact and in law it appears that telegraphs, flumes, stage and turnpike roads, water-ways, and other kinds of property are operated in more than one county in California, and yet are assessed with deductions, and required to be so assessed. The distinction cannot rest on use, for all property used in more than one county is not "classified" alike.

It cannot be said that railroad property is a class by itself, and is so classified and treated. Railroad property is largely real estate—land.

Locomotives and cars are not classified by themselves, because, unless owned by "railroad or other quasi public corporations," liens upon them are deducted.

But more than all—most of all—it is not "railroad property," or property used in railroading, that is thus outlawed; but all manner of property, the title of which is in a railroad or quasi public corporation. How can such a pretension be disguised as classification of property for taxation?

The distinguished counsel said that it would have been impossible, or would be impossible, to make deduction for railroad mortgages. I would ask him, and this learned Court, Why would it be impossible, or even difficult, to provide for the deduction of a mortgage given by a railway corporation to the two trustees whose names appear in the answer? The property of the railroad is to be taxed under this scheme, in lump, as an entirety. If the mortgage amounts to $2,133,000, can it not be deducted in a lump? What necromancy, magic, or miracle is necessary for this? Has not this Court given judicial superintendence of the act and the methods under which trustees and those in charge paid, in gross, the tax on interest coupons, and then at their own pains and in their own methods (not very troublesome) made the deductions specifically from each coupon or bondholder of his aliquot part? Is there any reason, I repeat—although I do not consider the question very important in finding the law of this case—is there any reason why this railroad mortgage, as one debit, should not appear in the account?

MR. RHODES: The lands are not to be assessed as a lump; they are to be assessed separately.

MR. CONKLING: Well, what then? My learned brother no doubt means that each parcel of land being covered by the whole mortgage, it would be difficult to find and deduct the proportion due to each parcel. How does this fact answer my suggestion? The mortgagor—the defendant—is to be assessed in bulk upon its "franchise, roadway, roadbed, rails, and rolling stock." These are the words of California's Constitution (Article XIII, Section 10). The assessment, in fact made, appraised the actual value of these properties at $16,500 per mile of road. The mortgage amounts to $3,000, or thereabouts, per mile of road. Can anything be more simple than to deduct $3,000 from $16,500, unless it be more simple to deal with totals—make one sum of it—and deduct $2,133,000 from $11,739,915?

In this instance the margin to deduct from is quite broad; suppose it were quite narrow; suppose there were no margin at all, because of the road being mortgaged for all of its worth. Then there would be no value to assess to the mortgagor, and the whole value to assess to the mortgagee. This would be right and just, and this is what California does in the case of all other mortgages.

Put any imaginable case of relative values between mortgagor and mortgagee, and the same general principle of fair dealing will work out just results and just assessment and taxation.

Considered not as matter of right, or of law, but merely as matter of finance—as matter of bookkeeping—what does it signify, what difference need it make, that a deduction of the lien in bulk from the railroad in bulk would leave scattered and distant lands to respond, and respond without deduction, in the tax districts wherein the lands lie? No loss of rightful revenue would follow. The article just referred to declares that the lump assessment shall be "apportioned to the counties, cities and counties, cities, towns, townships, and districts in which such railroads are located, in proportion to the number of miles of railway laid" therein.

If it be said that there are counties wherein there are lands owned by railway companies, but no railway; and that such counties would reap advantage because of rating the lands without sharing the deduction, there are two answers. First, State as well as county taxes reap the supposed advantage; second, if the State wishes to exactly adjust items and fractions, she can do so by providing for the ascertainment or appraisal of the proportion of the mortgage which should be attributed to lands separate from the roadway and its appurtenances, and to such lands in severalty. It cannot be said that by thus putting the defendant on a footing with other taxpayers the value of the mortgage would escape assessment or be lost to taxation; because, as other mortgages are "deemed and treated as an interest in the property affected thereby," and as the same kinds of property, when held by other owners, are "assessed and taxed to the owner of the property, less the value of such security, mortgage," etc., so the mortgage in question and the property in question could be, and should be, "deemed and treated, assessed, and taxed." Thus just taxation would fall on the whole value, and at the same time the tax would become a lien and its payment be insured.

I have a farther thing to say, but I will fit it with a better time, of what seems to me the greatest wrong of this whole proceeding—the visitation of these distant lands, alien to the railroad, isolated from it, with unjust and vindictive taxation, merely because of hostility to the proprietor who owns them.

The learned counsel said, in answer to his honor Mr. Justice Bradley, that railroad mortgages are not taxed under this scheme. I say, with all the emphasis I can command, that this Constitution ordains that they shall be taxed. They are assessed, they are taxed; the tax to be paid not by those from whom the tax is due, but by those from whom it is not due. All of these several tracts and parcels of land, which the counsel referred to a moment ago, together with all the other estate of railroads, are taxed at their "actual value"—whatever that may mean—a term for some reason specially chosen, because the term employed for everybody else is "cash value," the meaning of which we do know; all possessions—even choses in action—are to be assessed at their "actual value," and no deduction for mortgages is to be made. In the name of common sense, is not that an assessment upon and including the value of the mortgage? Is it not, in other words, counting, as unimpaired by the mortgage, the whole property on which the mortgage rests; and is it not a contrivance by which there is to be lifted from the shoulders of the mortgagee and placed on the shoulders of the mortgagor, the burden which the mortgagee should bear, and which the mortgagee of every other mortgagor throughout the State, does bear? And yet the learned counsel still murmurs about a "classification" for purposes of taxation, and will have it that the value of the mortgage is not taxed at all.

Resuming the thread of my argument, it cannot be said that land and rolling stock, when used for railway purposes, are "classified" alike; because, if used in any one county they are assessed by the local Assessor, with an appeal to the Board of County Supervisors, and allowed the same deduction bestowed on other property.

It appears, as we have seen, that the defendant owns divers tracts of land in different parts of the State. The Constitution of California declares that these tracts of land—not used for railroad purposes, but merely because they belong to a railroad company—shall be visited with full assessment, no matter how heavily they may be mortgaged. These lands are, as much as the roadbed, within the words of Section 1, Article XIII—"except as to railroads and other quasi public corporations," etc.

All manner of property so owned, no matter where situated or how used. I cannot refrain from repeating, must be exceptionally assessed and taxed. Thus it is manifest that no class or species of property, and no property distinguished by its use or locality, has been selected from the mass of taxable property, and subjected to a special rule; but all the property of certain owners, because of its ownership, has been withdrawn from the rule applicable to just such property, and exposed to ex parte assessment at an invidious rate. What becomes of the maxim often found in the judgments of the Court, that assessments and taxation must be uniform and equal, at least as regards subjects of the same class? And here I beg to read a passage from the opinion of Mr. Justice Miller in the Railroad Tax Cases. (92 U. S., 612.) These cases passed off upon two grounds—certainly as much upon one as the other of the two. The bills were in equity, to restrain the collection of a tax. Says the learned Justice, speaking for the Court:

“Even if this were not so, a bill in equity will not lie to restrain the collection of a tax.”

The case arose in Illinois, where there is a State Board of Equalization, which, by the way, is not one of our complaints; there is no complaint here, as I have said, that there must be one and the same tribunal for all assessments. Our contention is that there must be a tribunal—some tribunal before which—some forum in which we may have “due process of law” and “equal protection of the laws.”

The opinion proceeds:

“There can be no doubt that all the classes named in this clause, including peddlers, showmen, innkeepers, ferries, express, insurance, and telegraph companies, are taken out of the general rule of uniformity prescribed by the first clause, and the only limitations as to them is that of uniformity as to the class upon which the law shall operate; that is, innkeepers may be taxed by one, ferries by another, railroads by another, provided that the rule as to innkeepers be uniform as to all innkeepers, the rule as to ferries uniform as to all ferries, and the rule as to railroad companies be uniform as to all railroad companies. As we have seen no evidence that the rule by which railroad property is taxed is not uniform in its action on all the railroad companies in Illinois, we can perceive no opposition to the Constitution of the State in that rule.”

This is one point on which your honors will be compelled to pass in this case. Instead of the provisions here applying to all railroad companies, certain railroad companies have been selected, viz., those who operate a road in more than one county. They are the persons proscribed, alone proscribed, and proscribed as to all their property. The answer avers, although it was not necessary so to aver in order to raise the question, that there are other railroads, many of them in California operated in not more than one county—operated in a single county. This project of vindictive taxation does not touch them at all; they are left with the general mass of taxpayers upon whom no special pains and penalties are inflicted. But with ingenious description, as a cunning mode of identification, with words employed for that purpose as certainly as if they had put into the Constitution the name and style of these three or four corporations, these craftsmen select them, and say to them, and to them only: “You shall be assessed without notice, without hearing, without due process of law, and assessed on no day certain. When the assessment is made up, it shall be like the laws of the Medes and Persians, final and conclusive. The assessment shall be at a valuation special and peculiar to you. It shall represent the actual value (whatever that may mean) of all your property, and it shall represent that value undiminished, even in the estimation of a hair, by liens and mortgages upon it, although they may equal its entire value. And this is the rule, not for all railroads, but for some, such as you, and for nobody else, which this wonderfully contrived organic law, the offspring of commotion, metes out."

And I stand here to vex the ears of your honors by arguing whether such flagrant wrongs is, in legal constitutional contemplation, lawful classification of property for purposes of taxation.

Again, by the Constitution of California, mortgagor and the mortgagee are made tenants in common of the taxable estate; and each is made liable for his share, and only for his share of taxation. That is the essence of the general tax scheme. The mortgagor and mortgagee are tenants in common, each of his proportionate interest in the taxable estate. Yet, the defendant as co-tenant is compelled to pay the tax of the whole estate, although everybody, except him and his companion victims, is to pay only a just aliquot part. Drop the fact of the defendant being a corporation or aggregation of citizens, and put the case between individuals. Suppose it was provided that mortgagor and mortgagee should each bear his proportion, unless one was a lawyer or a doctor or a married woman, and the other not; and in that case the lawyer or doctor or married woman would pay the whole; would not such a contrivance be on all fours with this case as it is? If it be said that the fact or accident of a mortgagor being a quasi public corporation exposes him to be specially visited, why may it not be said that the fact that a mortgagor is a Swedenborgian or a spiritualist or an infidel, exposes him in the same way?

It cannot be doubted in the case at bar that a personal judgment beyond the lien on the property must follow the assessment. I have already referred to the complaint and to the statute on which the action stands. The whole purpose is to make certain persons as such an exception to all other mortgagors.

Even the half-born statute—the bill which miscarried, and which, in a case we have heard cited from the "Pacific Coast Law Journal," was assumed by the Court to have passed and become a law, although it never did—even this so called statute is a mere juggle, as your honors will see by looking to the brief—the very instructive brief of Judge Sanderson, at page 15. It was devised to mask the ugly features of this curious tax scheme. It stuck to the original design, however, and would have given no real relief. Yet it pretended to provide a mode of contesting the action of the State Board. Its effect was as follows: "Any person feeling aggrieved" might, upon payment of the tax, bring an action, and show the "illegality of such tax," or that the property "was assessed for more than its actual value." Is not the sham of such a provision transparent? "The illegality of such tax!" What does that mean? Surely it does not mean the assessment, which is the matter to be reached. It means that if a tax has been laid which in general, in and of itself, is illegal, "any person feeling aggrieved" may prove the illegality. Nothing could be more remote from the ground of complaint here. What else does it permit "the person feeling aggrieved" to do? To show that the property "was assessed for more than its actual value." That is to say, if the State Board has done the very thing commanded by the Constitution—has assessed actual value, regardless of liens and deductions—then the "person feeling aggrieved" has no remedy or relief. But if the Board has done something beside executing the vengeful judgment of the Constitution, for that something else relief may be asked. Were this bill to become a law, or had it been a law when the assessment complained of was made, under its operation the defendant could not take one step toward challenging or testing the exaction to which, by the Constitution, he was doomed.

Thus, with or without such a statute, we must face the mandate of California's Constitution. The scheme there formulated is on all fours with the provisions existing in most of the States that a taxpayer may offset his debt against his assessment for personal property, with an addition excluding certain selected or unpopular or unfashionable taxpayers. Your honors have witnessed such attempts. You saw the attempt made against holders of shares in national banks, and you straightway arrested the attempt.

An Act of Congress permitted States to tax national bank shares, as the law permits them to tax other property, that is fairly and equally with other like property. States sought to assess these shares at rates above other similar property. States sought also to withhold from owners of bank shares the right of deduction given in respect of other property. You annulled the whole proceeding. Why?

Because such discrimination is unlawful. An Act of Congress so virtually said, and in so saying only declared the general law.

But does a congressional declaration make the case stronger than one which the whole body of the law, with its immemorial and fundamental principles, cries out against?

In People vs. Weaver, 100 U. S., 539, you put the case of two persons, side by side, one having his money invested in bank shares, and the other in different shares—one permitted to deduct his debts, and the other denied the same right. You put the case as one offensive to the law and not to be tolerated. That very case is now before you; aggravated, seriously aggravated, as we shall see in a moment.

In California, one individual or corporation owns land or other property incumbered for half its value. He pays taxes on one half, and only on one half. Another corporation owns the adjoining land or the same species of property, and it, too, is incumbered for half its value, and the owner pays taxes on both halves. One is taxed twice as much as the other. The next day the property is sold to another individual or corporation, subject to the mortgage, and the next year the same property, by merely changing hands, has become entitled to relief from half its tax. The defendant owns one of the tracts of land spoken of, this year. It is burdened by a mortgage. He is assessed and taxed upon it regardless of the mortgage. Tomorrow he sells it to an individual or a corporation not thus proscribed, subject to the mortgage; and when next the property comes to be assessed, it is not only assessed by a different tribunal, under different methods and rules, but the mortgage, and the whole of it, is deducted, and the property liberated from the portion of the tax, merely because it has changed owners. And this is "a classification of property for taxation!" Two farms lie side by side, or two dwelling houses stand side by side in California. They are of exactly equal value. Both are mortgaged for half the purchase money. One belongs to a railroad company. The other belongs to a mining company. One is assessed at its actual value, regardless of the mortgage. The other is assessed for only half as much.

The two owners exchange properties; and because they have exchanged, the property which yesterday was half exempt, to-day is wholly subject to assessment; and the property which yesterday was all assessable, to-day is half exempt.

Is this "classification," or quasi classification—persecution or quasi persecution—"equal protection," or quasi protection?

Is not the wrong, as I said a moment ago, an aggravation of the abuse attempted in the case of national bank shares? Is it not a more flagrant assault on law and right? In the instance of the bank shares, the discrimination would stick to the property, no matter in whose hands, or however often transferred. Whereas here, the assessment is smart money inflicted on particular persons.

If the defendant owns shares in a national bank, paid for only in part, subject to a "contract, or other obligation by which a debt is secured," these shares are assessable at their "actual value," regardless of the outstanding claim. But let the title to the shares be made over to an insurance, or a manufacturing, or a turnpike company, and ipso facto their assessable liability is reduced by the amount of the claim.

Turn the subject around and look at it in another light. The defendant as mortgagee holds a mortgage against somebody else. If held by an individual, the Constitution of California would permit him to preserve his security. Should the owner of the mortgaged property fail to pay his taxes, any holder of the mortgage except a "railroad or other quasi public corporation," could protect the property and prevent a tax sale by paying the tax, and it would "thereby become a part of the debt so secured," that is, part of the mortgage debt. But the defendant and his like, are excepted out of the operation and benefit of the whole clause, of which such permission to the holder of a mortgage is an integral part.

Whether debtor or creditor, whether mortgagor or mortgagee, the defendant is "between the devil and the deep sea."

Whichever way a "quasi public corporation" turns in California, in the words of Junius it is "clipped by the long scissors of the law"—perhaps the rendering now should be "classified" by the long scissors of the law.

Can your honors listen to these recitals, and doubt that vengeance brooded over the conception and the birth of such a Constitution?

Can your honors deal more humanely with such acts, even when done by an American State, than to rank them among "the brutalities of progress?"

They were done by a Court. A convention which frames an organic law is a Court—a high Court of justice: and justice is depicted as a stony statue, with blinded eyes, with an arm unmoved by a throb of feeling, holding unshaken the even scales!

And these vengeful edicts were made in the name of anti-monopoly, equality, and right!

It has been often so. Vice in the name of virtue—rascality in the name of reform—demagogism in the name of patriotism—persecution in the name of justice—cruelty in the name of humanity—chaos in the name of order.

It was in the name of humanity, that a seeming majority flooded France with blood: and in the name of religion, that they would have dethroned the monarch of the skies.

Somewhere in one of these briefs it is written that the author has searched from the time of King John for so flagrant an instance of discriminating and arbitrary taxation within the pale of the common law, and that the example before us leads all the rest.

Be this as it may, for enterprise and ingenuity, for rude, yet cunning severity, for irreverence for law, for disdain of obstacles, appearances, and traditions, and for contempt of vested rights, it seems safe to say, that carried away by excitement, California has in form sanctioned provisions without parallel in the Constitutions of North American States, made by white men for white men, in our time.

I now put aside the modes and the hardships of this tax scheme, leaving to my distinguished associates the rest which should be said of its denial of due process, and its refusal of equal protection of the law.

But the record displays another objection, not less grave than those which it has been my effort to state. To argue this objection, would require in abler hands more time than even the liberal allowance my associates have insisted on making for me. To hear it briefly stated, however, before he begins, is the right of my learned adversary who is about to follow me.

The assessment required by the Constitution of California, and by her statutes, and the assessment in fact made, includes the whole franchise of the defendant.

Inherent, inwrought, and indivisible, in this single and general assessment—blended indistinguishably with all the other values which enter into it, is not only the franchise originally acquired from the State, but also every faculty, attribute, and franchise derived from the United States. The defendant, if not a creature of the General Government, long ago became by adoption one of its permanent agencies and instrumentalities. As such agency and instrument, it had imposed upon it by Acts of Congress various perpetual conditions and obligations adapted to securing and preserving its existence and efficiency forever, not only as part of one uniform, continuous, transcontinental line of railway, but as a postal and military road.

The road, in fact, built, was constructed by direction of Congress, and with the aid and under the auspices of the United States. The laws of California gave no right to construct such a road; and the Acts of Congress were the sole authority. The time within which the road should be completed, was prescribed by Congress; and it was provided that should the defendant fail of the completion within the time, the United States should proceed, through other agencies, to complete it. Rules and regulations for the construction and use of the road, were prescribed by Congress; and these regulations included not only the location, gauge, and character of the road, but the subject of fares, charges, and tolls, for carrying passengers and freight. As part of its action to stimulate and insure the construction and maintenance of a national highway, Congress endowed the defendant with various benefits, advantages, faculties, franchises, and valuable rights; and reserved to itself—not to California or to any of the other States, or Territories soon to be States, through which the road runs—power, having regard to the rights of such company, to add to, alter, amend, or repeal the Act which conferred the right to build and maintain the road. The purpose of all this, was and was declared to be, to promote the public interest and welfare, and to secure to the United States at all times, but particularly in time of war, the use of such a highway for postal, military, naval, and other purposes. In the Acts of Congress, under which the road of the defendant was built, under which it exists, and is hereafter to exist, are penalties and forfeitures for default in the trust and agency thus created.

To this legislation, to this history, to this great and enduring transaction between the General Government and the defendant, the State of California, by solemn Act of her Legislature, assented; at the same time, in like manner, consenting in advance to any other terms, conditions, or relations which might grow up between the defendant and the United States; and “confirming to and vesting in the said company, its successors or assigns, all the rights, privileges, franchises, power, and authority conferred upon, granted to, or vested in said company by the said Act of Congress, and any Act of Congress which may be hereafter enacted.” (Statutes of California, 1869, p. 883.) Whether this assent of California makes the case stronger than it would be without it, need not be argued now.

The defendant accepted all these terms, conditions, obligations, and trusts: entered upon them, executed them; and, in the consenting presence of the State of California, by great outlay of labor, energy, risk, and money, acquired vested rights; and became amenable to the national sovereignty, as its agency, its instrumentality, if not its creature.

Whether in virtue of all these events of law and of fact, the defendant became technically a national corporation; or whether it became endowed with a dual existence—an existence by the laws of California, and also an existence by the laws of the United States (as this Court said (1 Black. 286) in the case of a corporation existing by the laws of Indiana and also by the laws of Ohio, might occur), is a question rather curious than substantial, as regards the dominion which the Constitution of California attempts to assert.

Be the defendant the offspring, or only the adopted child of the National Government, practically and legally the same considerations deny the right of a State to step in and seize, appropriate, or control, the estate or endowment derived from the United States.

The power to tax, is the power to seize, appropriate, and control; therefore it is a power which may be used to destroy.

An Act of Congress speaking of one of these postal and military railroads brought into being for national purposes, declares: "No act of the company, nor any law of any State or Territory, shall impede, delay, or prevent the said company from performing its obligations to the United States." (16 Statutes U. S. 573.)

But before this Act, without this Act, without any Act of Congress, by virtue of the Constitution of the United States ex proprio vigore, it was and is not within the power of a State to tax the organs or agencies or instrumentalities or enginery of the General Government, whether created or selected. The reported cases which establish this position are too famous and familiar to need reference except to the pages at which they are found.

McCullough vs. Maryland, 4 Wheaton, 316.

Osborn vs. Bank of U. S., 9 Wheaton, 738.

Western vs. Charleston, 2 Peters, 449.

Dobbin's Case, 16 Peters, 435.

Western U. Telegraph Co. vs. Texas, 105 U. S., 460.

The counsel in opening for the plaintiff, referred generally to these authorities, as instances in which the Court has said that State taxation is unlawful if it destroys or impedes the operation of government agencies. I think I repeat him correctly; and if so, his exposition of the principle affirmed is radically erroneous. The Court never confined its denial of the right of the State to lay taxes on national agencies, to instances of taxes which destroyed or impeded. On the contrary, said the Court through Marshal, Chief Justice, "the power to tax involves the power to destroy, the power to destroy may defeat and render useless the power to create." Once concede the power to the State, and it may be used to impede, or even to destroy; and therefore the idea is repugnant to the Constitution that the supremacy of the General Government, and its faculties, are subject to the action of the States, or beholden to their forbearance. That is the argument and doctrine of the cases cited.

Does it not apply exactly to this case?

Could any form or application of the taxing power more certainly or vitally visit this national instrumentality?

Would any species of taxation, carried to a given extent, more certainly tend to impede its operations and destroy its efficiency and existence?

Would any kind or form of taxation be so pointed and inimical as this, unless, perhaps, that species of tax forbidden by the commercial or "vagrant" clause of the Constitution?

A tax on passengers or freight, destined to points beyond the State, or coming from points beyond the State, irrespective of the relations of the road as a Government agent, would, as your honors have held, be void as a tax on foreign or interstate commerce. A direct tax on traffic being thus impossible, can the Court suggest any sort of taxation which would reach the vitals of the defendant more surely than that here attempted?

Would a license tax such as Ohio undertook to impose on the Bank of the United States, in the case of Osborn, be more destructive?

Would a tax by way of a stamp required to be put on bills of lading or shipping bills, such as Maryland attempted to require of the Bank of the United States, in the case of McCullough, be more vital?

How can the faculties of a railway company, its right to be, and to act, and do business, be taxed, unless they are taxed by the assessment of its franchise? We shall not hear this question answered.

The case of Captain Dobbin, above cited, is doubly instructive. The learned counsel seems to doubt whether any one or anything can really and effectually become a government instrumentality by adoption. He seems to incline to think that the only thorough, authentic, untaxable government agency, is one specially, originally, and exclusively created by the United States. This distinction certainly deserves attention.

Captain Dobbin, at the Erie station on Lake Erie, commanded a revenue cutter, and

"Moved the monarch of her peopled deck."

He was an officer in the revenue marine; he was employed and paid by the United States. His business was to make his cutter walk the waters of Lake Erie, and see that nobody with a rowboat or a sloop should bring a keg of brandy or a barrel of whisky or beer into "the States" without coming by the way of a Custom House and having the duties laid upon it.

Pennsylvania had a statute taxing "all offices and posts of profit," and this statute looked wistfully at Captain Dobbin because he had a "post." Pennsylvania asked the Captain for a tax on his salary, and he declined to pay it. The report says he contested the tax on the ground that he was an officer of the United States. The State Court said he must pay, and he came and asked this Court whether he must pay. What did this Court say? Why, it went with Captain Dobbin, and authorized him to say, much as the Connecticut constable said when threatened with arrest, "Take care, stand off; don't touch me. If you touch me the whole commonwealth will shake!"

Now, Captain Dobbin was not created by Congress. He was not a corporation sole. As to him, there was no reserved power in Congress to repeal, amend, etc. Before he became an office holder he seems to have belonged wholly to the State of Pennsylvania. The original purpose of his creation seems to have been that he might support the Constitution of Pennsylvania, and support himself. In fact, it was probably for the latter purpose that he entered the service of the United States, and lent a helping hand to collecting the revenue. At all events, the Government took him as it found him, and adopted him as one of its instrumentalities to execute one of the powers of the Constitution.

Now, at the time Captain Dobbin had his day in Court, our learned adversaries were not here to say that the immunity invoked had nothing to do with the case, because the Captain, not having been created by Congress, could not be invested with the exemptions and attributes of governmental agencies; and, furthermore, to say that because the tax was a mere trifle, and did not destroy him or his salary, or stop his cutter, no fault could be found with it. There seems to have been a hot struggle, however, and the Court, with the lights then before it, overthrew all the reasons assigned in justification of the tax. It drew around this single agent the inviolable circle of the "supreme law of the land."

Here is the language of the Court:

"Taxation is a sacred right, essential to the existence of government and the incident of sovereignty. The right of legislation is co-extensive with the incident to attach it upon the persons and property within the jurisdiction of a State, but in our system there are limitations upon that right. There is a concurrent right of legislation in the State and the United States, except as both are restrained by the Constitution of the United States. Both are restrained upon this subject by express prohibitions in the Constitution, and the States by such as are necessarily implied when the exercise of a right by a State conflicts with the perfect execution of another sovereign power delegated to the United States. That occurs when taxation by a State acts upon the instruments, emoluments, and persons which the United States may use and employ as necessary and proper means to execute their sovereign power. * * * In our view, it presents a case of as strong interference as was presented by the tax imposed by Maryland, in the case of McCulloch (4 Wheaton, 316,) and the tax of the City Council of Charleston, in Weston's case (2 Peters, 449), in both of which it was decided by this Court that a State cannot lay a tax upon the constitutional means employed by the Government of the Union to execute its constitutional powers." (429.)

As the Government found and took Captain Dobbin, so it found and took the defendant, and made it "the constitutional means" to "execute its constitutional powers."

As Judge Story so variously illustrated (Commentaries, §§ 1137, 1138, 1139), instead of building a ship, or a post coach, the Government buys or hires one; instead of building a post road, it adopts a road already built; instead of erecting a Post Office, or Mint, or Custom House, it rents one.

In all of these cases there is less of creation, as distinguished from adoption, than in the case at bar.

Upon what theory did Congress proceed in enacting Mr. Webster's Crimes Act in 1825? It inflicts exceptional and enormous punishments for assaults upon the most subordinate agents employed to carry or handle the mails, and for interferences with them.

The only excuse for such punishments which modern jurisprudence could accept is that they are safeguards thrown around the instrumentalities of the Government. The driver of a stage, the boy riding a mule with his saddle bags carrying letters, the clerk in a rented Post Office—all are enrouded with special protection, as so many representatives of the sovereignty of the nation.

Contrast with these petty examples the multiplied and enduring relations and trusts deposited by the Government with the defendant, and the complex consequences and interests involved.

Yet the learned counsel argues that California is the ultimate sovereign arbiter in the case. He declares that when twenty-nine years more shall have elapsed—because twenty-one of the fifty years named in the articles of incorporation filed in California by the germ of the present corporation have gone already—that when twenty-nine years shall have rolled away, the hour will strike when this national organization will expire and dissolve. Then, of course, according to the argument, my friend here, the Attorney-General of California, with half the zeal of to-day, will proceed by quo warranto to take away the remains of animation, and if need be will have a receiver appointed to distribute belongings which came, as far as they came from public grant, chiefly from the United States, to be forever used in its service and behalf.

In twenty-nine years, at all events, by this theory, these most powerful external agencies of the Government must shrivel like a parched scroll. But whether so much grace shall be permitted, depends on the omnipotent majority in California—a majority of those who come out to vote, and are supposed to speak not only for themselves, but for those, no matter how many, who stay at home. Should the majority make up its mind, or its will, that such length of life is not good for “railroads operated in more than one county,” and repeal the general railroad Act of 1861—the Act under which the defendant first organized—then the counsel is compelled to argue that on any day the Legislature of the State may take away the franchise and existence of the defendant.

Thus a continuous line of road, of uniform gauge, traversing several States and Territories, instituted and established by the United States as a national highway, and post road and telegraph line, and a military and naval road in time of war, subject always as to rules of fare and freight to the United States, indebted, as the Central Pacific—a like organization in all substantial respects—is, to the United States in vast sums of money payable out of long future earnings and services, and chartered by the United States to continue perpetually, has, we are told now, only a precarious existence, dependent on the will and pleasure of the Legislature of one distant State, among the most meager in population of all the States.

Can your honors accept such a conclusion? You must accept it as the inevitable logic on which this assessment stands.

The Constitution of California does not flinch from the argument. One of its articles ordains that the Legislature may create a commission armed with rigorous, nay, absolute visitatorial powers, authorized to cut down ad libitum the fares and freights of these national roads, and fix them when and as they please. The Legislature has proceeded under this license.

There is the expression of the twin power; this claim of control, together with the claim of the right to tax, makes up the dual pretension of absolute State sovereignty.

Put the two powers together, and you have the united power to despoil and to starve—the power to forbid earnings, and to strip the corporation of property already acquired.

Does such power endanger the occupation and business of these beings? Can it be used to destroy, “impede, delay, or prevent the said company from performing its obligations to the United States?”

Is this the lame and impotent conclusion of a great passage in the legislative, political, and material history of the country—a passage which recounts the masterful achievement of constructing iron ways, for vast trains carrying armies, munitions of war, peoples, and merchandise, traversing trackless deserts and measureless mountains, to a distant sea?

Is this the ignominious destiny of an achievement which summoned to its aid the highest statesmanship and enterprise of our time?

Thompson vs. Railroad (19 Wallace, 579); Railroad Co. vs. Peniston (18 Wallace, 5) do not countenance the doctrine now advanced against us.

There the tax was not on franchise or faculty; it was only on tangible property, segregated from the franchise.

In the latter case, the Court says the liability to taxation does not hinge on the question whether the agency or instrumentality was or was not originally created by the United States. However created, if adopted by the United States as an instrument of governmental powers, its faculties and existence cannot be taxed by a State. In the former case, the Court says:

"Taxation of the agency is taxation of the means; taxation of the property of the agent is not always or generally taxation of the means."

The same distinction is reaffirmed in the case of Western U. Tel. Co. vs. Texas, already referred to.

I conclude by submitting the positions we hold touching the two questions with which I began.

First—The provisions of California's Constitution and the proceedings under them, do deprive the defendant and its shareholders of property "without due process of law," and do "deny them the equal protection of the laws."

Second—A State may not tax a Federal agency, its faculties, trade, and occupation, its right to be and to act. Whatever may be the power of a State to tax the "tangible property" of the defendant, the franchise acquired from the United States is beyond State control.

Argument of Mr. George F. Edmunds, of Counsel for Defendant in Error.

MR. EDMUNDS said: In the little I have to say, may it please your honors, I shall not follow the particular order of my brief, but, in the short time I have, allude to some of the leading topics drawn in question, as they may happen to occur, and I begin where my learned brother (Attorney-General Hart) left off, as freshest in the minds of the Court as to the scope and effect of this Illinois case of Ducat and the other case referred to about the foreign corporations. Your honors have held (and I think you can still hold, under the fourteenth amendment of the Constitution of the United States, if that really means anything at all, which seems to begin to be doubtful in the minds of counsel), that a State has a right to regulate the terms upon which it will permit a foreign corporation to carry on its functions of insuring, or whatever it may be, in a State, and that, as a ground of permitting it to do so, it may say that it shall pay all its income into the Treasury of the State, or do or submit to any other thing. Such a corporation would, of course, be an eleemosynary one, as the only object in going into business under such requirements would be for the benefit of the State; and I think it only necessary to state what appears to my humble comprehension as the obvious distinction between dealing with property as property, whoever may own it, within the State, and dealing with the exercise of corporate powers and faculties of the corporation of one State when they undertake to exert those powers and faculties in another State, which the State of their creation has no power to give them, or any qualified right to do, and which depend entirely on the policy of the State where they are to be practically a corporation without incorporation by its Legislature. I think I can dismiss that with this simple observation.

Now, I will speak for one moment about what is necessary, if anything is necessary in taxation, in the way of notice. My learned brothers have insisted that your honors have decided over and over again, but particularly in the case of McMillen, reading one single line out of the opinion of Mr. Justice Miller, and in the Illinois Tax Cases, reading two or three lines, that, whether under State Constitutions or the National Constitution, it is entirely competent for the sovereign authority, whatever that may be, to levy a tax upon any part of its citizens, one or more, or all, and collect it and pay it into the Treasury without giving that citizen any opportunity to contest the question of the constitutional validity of that tax or the constitutional or lawful regularity of the proceeding, in order to give equality of burdens and valuation, and so forth. I deny the assertion. I have studied with such care as I might the opinions of Mr. Justice Miller in these cases, and of which I am bound to say, if the Court will permit me, and with the modesty that becomes a member of the bar, that I entirely agree with him. You decided in the case of McMillen that it was competent for the State of Louisiana to impose a license tax upon innkeepers, merchants, etc., as a license tax. The statute did not provide that the person to be taxed should be called before any Board to try in advance the question whether he was that description of person at all; and the tax having been imposed and he having refused to pay it, the Tax Collector, in the ordinary execution of the provisions of law that exist everywhere for the collection of taxes, in a summary way proceeded to levy upon his property: and he brought a suit and insisted that he had no opportunity to try the question before the assessing officer, the executor of the law, as to whether he was a grocery man or a rum seller, or whatever it was in that case, and that he was thus deprived of his property without "due process of law." But the Court said he was not entitled to any notice; that the tax could be imposed upon such occupations, and that if he were that description of person, the law had said that he should pay that kind of a tax. Now, if he were that description of person, if he had all the notice in the world, he could not have changed the result; he could not have got the taxing officer to reduce his license fee from $10 to $5, because the law said that if he were an innkeeper, etc., he must pay $10. The real point was, and that is the only point you have decided, that he was not entitled to be informed in advance, and have a right to go before the assessor and prove that he was not that description of person. If he was that description of person, the law fixed how much he should pay, and everybody else like him. Suppose he was not, and he had brought the same suit (I will not say that your honors would have jurisdiction of it), but suppose he was not an innkeeper, etc., and brought a suit when the collector of taxes levied upon his property, it would be an easy case to decide; that the legislative power had given no authority to its taxing officers to tax him at all; he was not that description of person, and so they had no jurisdiction.

When you come to the other class of cases in Illinois it is equally easy to agree to the whole doctrine of the Court in the cases, and leave it to stand where, with entire confidence we believe it does. The statutes of Illinois did not undertake to make any distinction in regard to the amount of tax or deduction in respect to property of any kind of given values. They did not undertake to say that the property of the railroads involved in that controversy should be taxed at a greater valuation, or without deductions allowed as to other values, or at a greater rate (for that is exactly the same thing) than the property of other citizens. They undertook to say no such thing. The system of taxation that the State of Illinois adopted when it looked to property as property, provided for absolute equality according to value. When it touched faculty as faculty, the exertion of corporate powers or of individual powers, or occupations, if you please, as occupations and faculties, it provided for equality as to them; and so my learned friends have attempted to torture the suitable and appropriate language of one of the Judges of this Court in pronouncing the opinion addressed to the case (and it is usually supposed that an opinion is better addressed to the case in hand than to any other possible case that may arise) into the authority of a decision of this Court, that where the taxing officer is called upon by the law to exert the faculty of judgment, and is to hear, try, and determine something that the citizen has an interest in, that the citizen in such proceeding is entitled to no notice. That is an entire misapprehension of every one of these opinions; no such opinion exists. But I do not feel justified in enlarging upon that topic. I think it enough to call your honor's attention exactly to what these cases were, and to the entire distinction between that sort of thing and this.

Now I will come, if your honors please, to consider (and it seems to be important to do so from the stress which has been laid upon it) whether the fourteenth amendment of the Constitution of the United States was really designed to make the Constitution of the United States, and so relatively and reciprocally to make the Constitutions and powers of the several States, something different to what they were before. If, as the effect of my learned friend's argument is, the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States left the relations of the States to the National Government and their powers, precisely where they were before, then it would seem to have been somewhat idle and inofficious, as the will-makers would say, to make any fourteenth amendment to the Constitution at all. I have always labored under the impression (I may be mistaken) that when a nation composed of States as this is, and composed of people as this is, through great trouble and infinite discussion endeavors to make an amendment to its fundamental law, that it is presumed to have intended to make that fundamental law something more or something less, or different to what the fundamental law was before. I think we can assume that. If I am right about that, then we are bound to suppose that the fourteenth amendment of the Constitution does have an effective purpose according to the fair and plain meaning of its language. If, by force of it, as an honest eye reads it, a State is forbidden to do what a State before might have done, so be it. If, by force of it, a State is permitted to do what before it might not have done, so be it. But my learned friends say the tumult, the exigency, the infinite stress of affairs that led to the adoption of the fourteenth amendment, was the setting free of four million people who had not been considered by the law as citizens, scarcely as persons at all, and to protect them; and therefore the Constitution must be read in the light of saying all the time that this applies solely to the rights of people of the African race who, before that time, had been in slavery. What sort of logic is that? What sort of statesmanship would it have been for the makers of this fundamental law? The fact is true that what led, chiefly, to this thing was the result of this great struggle. What led to the adoption of Magna Charta, if I may use the word adoption (which is not exactly appropriate), was not the denial of equal rights by the Crown and his Court and his star chamber to the simple subject. By no means. It was the fact that the great lords and barons had found that the claims upon them for feudatory and other services were in excess of what they thought the ancient habits of the kingdom had been, and they resisted and resented, and they compelled the king to grant this charter. And the English historians tell us (all undoubtedly familiar to your honors) that that being, as this was in our case, the great leading and sole moving cause to these provisions that are embodied in the Magna Charta—purely the question between the barons and the king in regard to their relations—the barons thought it wise, in order to get the common people to stand by them in the struggle that they thought they might have with the king, to put in a few words with regard to common rights; that justice should not be sold or delayed, and that no man should be deprived of his life, liberty, or property, without due process of law. But would my learned friends stand in the high court of Great Britain and say that it does not apply to the common subject; that it was the barons, who were aggrieved at that time, and who were making that warfare and endeavoring to accomplish these reforms, and therefore it is only the barons who shall not be deprived of life, liberty, and property, without due process of law? But here they claim it is only the colored men whom the protection of nationality is to be applied under this amendment.

It does not appear to me, if your honors please, that we need to take much time in discussing a question of that kind. There is nothing more familiar to us in the history of human affairs than that the simplest grievance applied to one man, of an outrage by legislative or executive power unduly and tyrannically exercised, is the moving and sole cause that leads the legislative power of that people to make a general law that shall not only secure cases of precisely that kind, but every other species of justice and equity that can possibly be imagined to be related to it. The infinite distress and woe to which the colored people were subject did not move the pity and attention of Congress because these people had black skins; it moved Congress because they were men, and, therefore, moving because they were men, it said that every man should have equal rights and due process of law, and that no State (as they might have done before, so far as the United States was concerned) should deprive them of that, and that you and Congress and the Executive, the sovereigns of national power, should have the authority to see that it was not done. That was the fourteenth amendment. And in addition to what my learned brother said yesterday, if your honors will take the published printed history (for what he read was official history, though not printed)—if you will take the two resolutions of the House of Representatives proposing these amendments to the Constitution—one No. 51, in the session of 1865-66, and the other, No. 127, which is now the fourteenth amendment—and see how the House of Representatives, day after day and time after time, struggled to use universal and comprehensive language, and having thought they had accomplished it, sent House Resolution No. 51 to the Senate, and how the Senate, day in and day out, by discussion, looking at every aspect of these affairs, finally failed to pass that altogether; and then how the House of Representatives, again beginning with the formulation of House Resolution No. 127, went through with it, as my learned friend has shown yesterday; and how, when it came to the Senate, amendment after amendment, proposition after proposition, covering the whole circle of possible contingencies and phraseologies, and all that, were publicly presented by Senators, and printed, and are in printed records you can get in a moment, you will not fail to know that this fourteenth amendment was intended to mean all that to the eye it appears to mean. There is no word in it that did not undergo the completest scrutiny. There is no word in it that was not scanned, and intended to mean the full and beneficial thing that it seems to mean. There was no discussion omitted; there was no conceivable posture of affairs to the people who had it in hand that by this broad and catholic provision for universal security, resting upon citizenship as it regarded political rights, and resting upon humanity as it regarded private rights, should not be made forever secure—secure, not according to the passion of Vermont, or Rhode Island, or of California, depending upon their local tribunals for its efficient exercise--but secure as the right of a Roman was secure, in every province and in every place, and secure by the judicial power, the legislative power, and the executive power of the whole body of the States and the whole body of the people.

Therefore I say with some confidence, that we are not to escape meeting this question by endeavoring to squeeze out of this fourteenth amendment its life and its spirit, and its letter too, and to say that it shall be applied to one class or race or character of people or persons or of property, but that it stands and means the same to all, to be vindicated here, that it would stand and mean if it were in the State of Vermont and to be vindicated there by her tribunals.

Now let us suppose, then, that the provisions of this fourteenth amendment so far as they touch this matter of citizenship and private rights (I leave out the political part of it) were in the Constitution of the State of California; and suppose that the Legislature of the State of California, with that Constitution declaring that no man should be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law, and declaring that there should be no denial of the equal protection of the laws to any person within the jurisdiction of that State—the Legislature of the State of California meets and passes as a law a taxation scheme in precisely the language that the present Constitution of the State of California adopts in regard to this taxation—I should be glad, if I could, to put my learned brothers under a cross-examination; I should be glad to have them tell me if they think that such taxation under such a State Constitution could be supported, unless they can make out, as they have struggled to do (which is another question), that this taxation after all is not unequal. If it be not unequal we have nothing to say, that is the end of our case. But if it be unequal, as I will assume for the present consideration I am advancing, is it possible to conceive that a State Court anywhere, with these provisions in its Constitution, and with these provisions in the Constitution of the State of California in its law, would say that there was equal protection of the laws to each one of its citizens, residents, and inhabitants; that there was the “due process of law” not dependent on valuations; that some of its citizens are entitled to have notice, and others not, or if none of them have notice, that the arbitrary will of the taxing officers in one or two counties, or in equalizing Boards of the whole State, was to determine how much was to be paid as to each particular piece of property upon its value? Because in such case there would be no distinction between also saying that they might just as well, in plain terms, be given the authority to say what each person should pay by name. If he pays by property, the value of the property being the basis, and he has no opportunity to be heard anywhere in regard to whether the valuation they are putting upon it is a just and true one, and the decision of that question is to be left to their quasi judicial determination and is to be a final one, then he cannot ever be heard. He cannot contest it in a Court, because, when it is presented to the Court and it is shown (as it is in some of these cases) that your honors have decided where the valuation was really unequal, that the man had the opportunity to be heard, you cannot help it; that the judgment of the taxing officers for such purpose is final and conclusive; the Court cannot review it. If the statutes of Vermont say that all horses in the State of Vermont shall be put in at their actual value (as they do), and the Assessors say my horse is worth only $100 and the horse of my neighbor is worth $10,000, there is no resisting the payment of that tax, and when you appeal to the Supreme Court of the State of Vermont they say the law has created a tribunal which was authorized to adjudge the value of these horses, and the law of Vermont provides that in arranging the value of these horses you and your neighbor shall have a right to present your views and arguments in order that there may be a true and relative value ascertained, and, so, equal rights. If these taxing officers have failed in their duty and have made a mistake, we cannot help it, that is clear enough.

Now, when you apply this to the State of California, here is a taxation upon value. It is not a taxation like the Louisiana case on the faculty of being a saloon keeper, or a rum seller, or the faculty of being a railroad. But the Constitution says that everything shall be taxed upon value. It is then said that this State Board of Equalization shall fix this value. It makes no provision as a Constitution (and naturally might not—a detailed provision) for giving any opportunity in any such proceedings for the owner of that property to be heard—of that particular kind of property—as to its value. Now, your honors have never yet decided such a case. With all respect to my learned friend, when I asked where that case was, he was so much pressed for time—I do not mean that he did not think there was such a case, far from it; but I have searched a good deal, and I have never found such a case as that. So that I insist upon it, may it please your honors, a provision of the Constitution of the State of California, as it stands, which declares that its taxing officers may assess values without any notice or opportunity for the owner of that property to be heard, is not a bit better than if the Constitution or the law of California had said that they might assess persons—I do not mean per head even—but might assess persons just such sums, man by man, and name by name, as they should think is fit to impose according to their judgment of what the persons had better pay. Of course, that is only a statement of the proposition the other way. Would anybody stand up and maintain that such a proposition could be upheld? I do not believe he would; and yet that is exactly this thing.

Now, let me take up another topic, because I am sorry (although I presume your honors are not) that the convenience of your honors and your other duties did not allow you to give us all the time that reasonably and fairly we might have thought it desirable—

ATTORNEY-GENERAL HART here handed Mr. Edmunds the authority he had previously referred to, which Mr. Edmunds read as follows: "It has been said that the power of taxation for the purposes of the commonwealth is a part of all governmental sovereignty, and is inseparable from it. It is for the Legislature to decide what persons and property shall be reached by the exercise of this function, and in what proportions and by what process and instrumentalities taxes shall be assessed and collected. The authority extends over all persons and property within the sphere of its territorial jurisdiction. When called into activity there can be no limit to the degree of its exercise except what is found in the wisdom of the law-making power, and the operation of those conservative principles which lie at the foundation of all free government." St. Louis vs. Ferry Co., 11 Wall., 429.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL HART: That is the proposition I advanced.

MR. EDMUNDS: Then I certainly misunderstood you. I give everything that is said there my respectful, but, as my time is limited, my brief adhesion.

Now, let us come to another topic, whether taxation is one of these faculties and functions of a sovereign State that is to be expected out of the other prohibitions against tyranny and injustice, of the Constitution of the United States. That is very stoutly contended for by our learned friends, so that they would make the Constitution read that "no person shall be deprived of his property without due process of law except it be under the form of taxation;" and that "no person shall be denied the equal protection of the law except it be under the form of taxation." That would be a charming spectacle to present to a civilized people, would it not? And do not my learned brothers know (I know they know, for all history is open before them) that nine tenths of the tyrannies which have produced revolutions and seditions and discontents and overthrown Governments in the history of the world have been the tyrannies of taxation in some form? And yet in the nineteenth century they would have you read this apparently unmistakable language of the Constitution of the United States (if it has anything at all to do with the matter), and say that by implication, not by language, it excepts and leaves to the States the power to exercise tyranny without due process of law as to taxation, and the power to exercise tyranny in spite of equal protection of the laws as to taxation. I do not think it does it, may it please your honors.

My friend has said, with great stress and with great truth, that taxation is a sovereign power. I agree to that. Every power of a State, of a government of every kind, is a sovereign power. It is impossible to conceive the idea of a State, in its widest or its narrowest sense, without imputing to it sovereign power. That is what a State is, and it is the only quality, if you go back to the very bottom of it, that makes a State; it is the foundation and expression of sovereign power. He did not get away, therefore, from the question, by saying that taxation cannot be made equal by national restriction upon State rights with the consent of the States (as, of course, this thing is by the consent of the States, whatever it means), because taxation is a sovereign power. The administration of justice is a sovereign power, too, without which taxation could not be carried on at all; without which taxes could not be collected; without which they could not be enforced. The administration of justice is a sovereign power in respect of every right, of every being that may have access to the Courts at all, and it is an essential and the first attribute of sovereignty to administer justice. And yet the old Constitution of the United States denied to the States of this Union the power to administer justice in certain cases. They cannot touch an ambassador, a minister, or a consul. That is reserved for the National Government. They cannot violate the obligations of a contract; they cannot emit bills of credit, and so on and so on; I need not waste my time to go over the enumeration.

Where, then, do we find ourselves in considering this attempt to persuade your honors that whatever else the Constitution of the United States may mean, as it is found in these condensed and crystallized words of denial and prohibition—that whatever else it may mean, it does not mean to relieve either race, or sex, or age, or nativity, or occupation from tyranny in regard to the exactions that the State may impose upon the persons or the property of its people to be turned into what may be supposed to be the common treasury. And your honors must state it, if you say that this judgment is to be reversed upon the ground that taxation is not touched by them, although all other rights are.

A tax, my learned friends say, as in this case, is a proceeding in rem, and, therefore, although the Constitution of the United States commands that no State shall deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, or deny to any person the equal protection of laws, it may still proceed as in rem upon the corpus, the property, and do what it likes. Would my good friends have the kindness to tell your honors what exactly they mean by such a proposition as that?

ATTORNEY-GENERAL HART: We never made it. We said that, so far as property was concerned, the right of taxation and right of assessment was the same; and it being a tax upon the property there is no inequality.

MR. EDMUNDS: That is another of the sweet paraphrases that come around to the same proposition. What is property, I should like to know? That book [indicating a book from the library] is property, because the United States, a sovereign power within certain limits, has dominion over it—legitimate dominion. You separate that dominion from that book, and do not transfer that dominion to somebody else, and it is not property; it is a thing only, having no relation to anything else, excepting in the natural order that paper is a thing that may have relation to the fiber out of which it is made, and so on. Therefore, I say it is impossible to conceive of the idea of property without you conceive in the same moment of time, and inseparable from it, the idea of some being we recognize as existing in this world, either natural or artificial, which has dominion over it. That is all there is in property. Therefore, the notion of my friend's endeavoring to separate this inequality from the person who has to pay his $2,000 or $3,000 a mile, or $2,000 or $3,000 a hundred acres on his land, more than his neighbor does—the idea that you are going to maintain that on the ground that the tax laws look to the thing and not to the man who owns it, appears to me will hardly bear very thorough investigation. It is because this is property that these people are now endeavoring before you to protect it; it is because it is property that we invoke the Constitution of the United States against the Constitution of the State of California, which is taking it away from us against the provisions of the Constitution. If it had not been our property, and had not the whole question been how it operates upon the person who owns property, there would have been no occasion for us to trouble this or any other Court. I think we may dismiss that.

Now, I come to say only a word as to classification—for my learned brother, Mr. Sanderson, is so much more familiar with this thing than I am that I must give him all the time I may. Our friends say that this is merely a classification, and that the Courts have held that you may classify property. I admit it; I maintain it. But I say, bringing it down to the very last point on which they endeavor to hang, that this is a classification of property in two counties. I leave out now the question whether a railroad, because it is a railroad, is to be despoiled of its property, or whether it is a person; it is a classification of all kinds of railroad property that is in two counties, and that may be compelled to bear a heavier burden in the hands of its owners than railroad property in one county; not as a faculty or a function, bear in mind; not as income to be derived from it; not as the power to take tolls and operate, but as property, a thing of value, and in no other way. Very well; now, if you can make that classification as to a railroad, I would say for the purpose of this present point, you of course can classify as to private citizens in the same way, and the State of California, therefore, by its Constitution (supposing now that the fourteenth amendment is really in force in the United States and really means equality as it says), could say that any citizen who owned farming lands in two counties, so that these lands were contiguous just as the railroad land is, that any man who owned a farm in two counties, a line running through the middle of it, should pay double taxes to the man who only owned one farm in one county. What do you think of that?

ATTORNEY-GENERAL HART: That is not our proposition; there is nothing like that in this case.

MR. EDMUNDS: You do not think that is so; neither do I. Now, we have a railroad. Supposing this railroad had a farm, as I suppose it might, for Congress has given it a good deal of land and it might better be devoted to farming probably than anything else—supposing a railroad, bank, insurance company, or church corporation, has a piece of land that extends across the border line of the county, as I suppose very many people have there (in my State I know many people who have it), can the Legislature of the State of California, or its Constitution, or any other power in that State, say that the property, as property of any one of these people which lies across the border line of these two counties, should pay double, and all the property in the rest of this county should pay a single rate of taxation? My friend could not claim that. But if it is a railroad, not a franchise, exerted over greater lengths of line, etc., but the value of the land, and the iron, and the ties, as a thing to be estimated, it is to be doubly taxed if it crosses the line of a county. My friend, of course, would be obliged to establish that, maintain that, or otherwise I would be obliged to stop at once, as having no adversary.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL HART: No, we do not.

MR. EDMUNDS: Then my mission is about accomplished; that is exactly what this is. The Constitution of the State of California declares, as it regards the point under consideration, that the property of every one in that State shall be taxed as property and on its value. Then it makes the exception; the property of a railroad which is operated in more than one county shall be taxed at double its value. Of course it does not say "double," but anything that is unequal. I use the word "double" to make my phrase as short as possible. How does that stand? That is what it says. And I repeat, because here is the whole distinction between the great class of cases that my friends have cited, and to every one of which I fully agree, when you apply the language of the opinion to the case the Court had before it. But you can find no case anywhere where the taxing power has undertaken to exert itself unequally upon the value of things, and has successfully undertaken it; and very few where they have undertaken it at all, and none where they have successfully undertaken to put a different rate or summation of value on these things as respect localities.

It is perfectly true that purely local taxation in some way may be unequal as to locality. A city or town may tax a piece of property four or five times as much as like property is taxed in another town or city. That is plain enough; everybody admits that, and admits it constantly. That is done with due process of law and consistently with equal rights. So that if I am right in supposing that there is a Constitution in the State of California which provides that railroad property operated in more than one county shall bear a heavier tax than railroad property or any other property in one county; if I am right in supposing that that is the case here, then it would seem that my learned brothers and I do not disagree in thinking that it cannot be upheld. Assuming that this is a case of Federal jurisdiction, and that is where we are, I repeat (and your honors will excuse me for it, for to my mind it clears the whole question) that the fault into which my learned brother has fallen in discussing this case, is that he did not attend to the distinction, which is plain on the face of this Constitution, and the laws in all these cases, between the taxation of franchises, of occupations, and of callings, upon grounds of equality, as to them; and the taxation of values, which is this case, upon grounds of equality as to them. This is on the face of it, in form, in effect, in substance, and consequence a taxation upon the value of a piece of property owned by a citizen of California. And the State of California has said that because that citizen has associated with him other citizens under a corporate association (or for some other reason, I care not what), that that citizen as to the value of his property shall pay a greater and a different rate upon it than his fellow-citizen. That is the proposition.

If you can maintain that, you can maintain anything. If it is within the sovereign power of a State (supposing the fourteenth amendment applies to it at all, as I assume to be proved) to make a differential rate upon values as values, on account of the nature of property, then all the security under every State Constitution, as it is in Vermont and almost every other State Constitution now, that taxation must be equal, is entirely gone. Because, if you once concede the point that you may classify different rates upon the values of things, or may put up your values on different principles, as values by deductions or otherwise—which is the same thing stated in another way—then there is no check upon the exercise of arbitrary power. The mob or commune that can get possession of the State Legislature for one term may despoil every one of the citizens whom it chooses to despoil, and the liberty and the security of the Constitution of the United States, secured through painful exertion and great consideration, crystallized in unmistakable language—historic indeed, and beneficent as it is historic, securing national intrinsic rights everywhere and to everybody—will turn out to be an utter sham and delusion.

I should have been glad if your honors had given time to discuss some of the other topics of the case, but I must leave them to the better discussion of my brother Sanderson.

Arguments of S. W. Sanderson, Esq., Counsel for Defendant.

MR. SANDERSON said:

May it please the Court, before commencing my argument, I desire to make one or two observations in relation to certain misconceptions of counsel in the very able and forcible arguments which have been made upon the other side. Counsel have put us in the position of maintaining propositions which we do not maintain. We have been misunderstood or misrepresented. It has been assumed upon the other side, first, that we maintain the proposition that this question of "due process of law" imports into the taxing system of the State judicial proceedings or methods in the matter of making assessments or ascertaining the value of property for the purposes of taxation. We maintain no such doctrine. On the contrary, we admit that "due process of law" does not require a resort to judicial proceedings in the matter of assessments; that taxes may be levied and collected in a summary manner by administrative Boards and officers without the intervention of any of those proceedings which are appropriate, and which in the administration of justice are generally employed by the Courts. All we claim on that head is this: that at some stage of the proceedings, between the commencement and the time at which the assessment becomes final, the taxpayer shall have notice, or an opportunity to be heard as to the value of his property, before the Assessor, or before some other officer or Board appointed by law.

Again, we have been placed in the position of claiming that it is an indispensable feature in tax laws that a Board of Equalization should be provided, before which taxpayers may go for the purpose of having their assessments as made by the Assessor reviewed. We have contended for no such proposition. Our position on that head is this: that if the State creates a Board of Equalization for a portion of its taxpayers, and enables them to have a review before such Board of the action of the Assessor, then we say it is the duty of the State also to furnish a Board of Equalization for all other taxpayers.

It is also stated upon the other side that we claim that the fourteenth amendment to the Federal Constitution prohibits the States from passing any laws, except such as shall act equally and uniformly upon all persons and upon all things in the State. We make no such claim. Our position upon that point is, that the fourteenth amendment requires that State legislation shall operate equally and uniformly upon all persons and upon all things upon which it is designed to operate at all; that is to say, upon all persons and all things which stand in the same category, or stand in the same relation to the law.

For example, a law in relations to bishops, and affecting bishops only, is a general law; and if it operates upon bishops only, and yet operates equally upon them all, there can be no objection to it on the score of validity. We only hold in this respect, that tax laws shall operate equally and uniformly upon the property which is taxed, and upon the owners of such property; not that they shall operate universally upon all persons or upon all kinds of property. We do not claim that it is not within the power of the States to select certain kinds or classes of property for taxation, and exempt from taxation all other property. All we claim is that when a State has selected property for the purpose of taxation, it must employ the same system, mode, and method in ascertaining the value of all such property, and must impose upon all of it, without discrimination, the same burden or rate of taxation. This much in explanation of the propositions for which we contend.

May it please the Court, there is a preliminary question presented by the record in this case which so far has not been considered by counsel, and to which it is necessary to call the attention of the Court for a few moments. The question is whether a certain apparent statute of the State of California is law or is not law. If your honors will turn to page 12 of my brief, you will find there quoted Section 3664 of the Political Code of the State of California. On page 14, a little below the middle of the page, you will find a bracket, the next word being "respectively." The validity of the remainder of that section, from the bracket on, is challenged by us. The history of this bill is this: In 1880 the Legislature passed an Act—

THE CHIEF JUSTICE: Is all before that bracket good and valid?

MR. SANDERSON: Yes, sir.

THE CHIEF JUSTICE: It is only this part after the bracket that has been disputed?

MR. SANDERSON: Yes, sir. It may seem strange that we should question the validity of a portion of the Act and not the whole, for it would seem that if a portion of the Act was invalid the whole would be; that I am about to explain. In 1880 an Act was passed amending certain enumerated sections of the Political Code and adding two new sections. The Constitution of California requires that the title to a bill shall state the subject; that the bill shall have but one object, and that such object shall be expressed in its title. Now, it did not appear clearly in the title to this bill to what subject these two new sections related, nor to what Code they were to be added, and therefore it was considered doubtful whether the title of the bill satisfied the calls of the Constitution in that respect. The question was mooted whether this legislation was valid legislation or not; and hence, at the next session of the Legislature, it was proposed to amend the title of the Act so as to make it conform to the requirements of the Constitution. A bill was introduced in the Assembly—a verbatim copy of the Act of 1880, with the exception of the title—which was amended so as to express the subject of these two new sections and the Code to which they were to be annexed. It passed the Assembly in that form and was transmitted to the Senate. The Senate amended Section 3664 by adding that portion of the section which, in my brief, is inclosed in brackets. It was then returned to the Assembly for their concurrence. Upon a call of the ayes and noes, it received only forty votes in the affirmative, but the Speaker declared that it was carried.

Now, your honors will see that the first part of the bill of 1881 consists of previous legislation. After the passage of the bill of 1881, the Supreme Court held that there was no defect in the title to the bill of 1880, and therefore that such previous legislation was valid.

THE CHIEF JUSTICE: Did the Governor approve the original bill?

MR. SANDERSON: Yes, sir; he approved the original and also approved this. But if this whole bill be regarded as unconstitutional, still the old law has been decided to be constitutional by the Supreme Court, and it is therefore only the validity of that portion included in brackets which comes to this Court for consideration.

The Constitution of the State of California requires that every bill before it shall become a law, shall be read three times, shall be passed upon a call of the ayes and noes, and shall not become a law unless it receives a concurrence of a majority of all the members elected to each house. The Constitution fixes the number of members of the Senate at forty, and the number of members of the Assembly at eighty. Therefore, in order to pass a bill through the Assembly, it is necessary that it should receive the concurrence of forty-one members, if eighty members have been elected. The Journals and statutes show that the Assembly was full; that there were eighty members. The certified copy, which I have introduced, of the written Journal shows that the measure received only forty votes, being one less than a constitutional majority.

THE CHIEF JUSTICE: What was the extract which you have put into your original brief taken from?

MR. SANDERSON: That was taken from the printed Journal.

THE CHIEF JUSTICE: And your claim now is that the printed Journal differed from the written Journal?

MR. SANDERSON: Yes; the printed Journal differed in this: the count, as given in both the printed and written Journal, is thirty-nine, and is erroneous. A count of the names in the printed Journal shows forty-one, which is enough to pass the bill. In the written Journal a count of the names shows forty. That is one more than the count, as there stated, shows, but not enough to pass the bill.

MR. JUSTICE GRAY: Is there any provision in the Constitution as to reviewing that matter by the Courts, or any decision by the Supreme Court as to how far that is matter of judicial investigation?

MR. SANDERSON: There has been no decision by the Court on that subject. Our Constitution is young yet, and this question has not been before them, or at least has not been decided, so far as I am advised.

MR. JUSTICE GRAY: And there was no such provision in your former Constitution?

MR. SANDERSON: There was no such provision in the old Constitution. The new Constitution and the Codes provide that Journals shall be kept of the proceedings of the Legislature, in which shall be entered minutes of transactions as they occur, and that they shall be read each morning by the Secretary, and approved and signed by the presiding officers—the Speaker of the Assembly or the President of the Senate, as the case may be. The Code of Civil Procedure provides that these Journals shall be competent evidence to prove the transactions of the Legislature. They are evidence of a better character and of a higher grade than the printed statutes. Therefore, there can be no question but what the Constitution and the legislation of the State of California in relation to this subject was intended to provide additional safeguards in respect to the passage of bills which had not be provided in the old Constitution. The history of legislative bodies in this country shows that bad measures sometimes become laws through vicious practices and methods. Measures have been allowed to pass by the mere vote of a majority of a quorum. Hence, to obviate this mischief, real or supposed, these provisions of the new Constitution were inserted; and the only question is, can the Courts go behind the printed statutes and behind the enrolled bills deposited in the office of the Secretary of State, for the purpose of ascertaining whether a law has been enacted in the manner and by the vote required by the Constitution? There is no question about the fact that a bill which does not receive the constitutional majority cannot become a law. The only question is, may you look into the Journals for the purpose of ascertaining what did and what did not become a law?

I will not spend any time on that question. This provision of our Constitution was borrowed from the Constitution of the State of Illinois. The decisions in that State are numerous and conclusively with us on that subject. They are cited in my brief. There are also two decisions by this Court to the same effect—both, I think, by Mr. Justice Miller—in which he holds, substantially, that it is the duty of the Courts to find and declare the common law, and that it is no less their duty to find and declare the written or statutory law. Therefore, it is their duty, in investigating that question, to examine all competent testimony—made so by legislation—for the purpose of ascertaining and determining whether a law has passed a legislative body in conformity with constitutional requirements. These cases are also cited in my brief. It has been held everywhere—where similar provisions exist—that this may be done. The authorities cited upon the other side, from the State of California, were rendered under the old Constitution, which, as already stated, contained no provisions similar to those which are found in the new Constitution. Those authorities are, therefore, not in point. It has been held in States where such constitutional provisions do not exist, that you cannot go behind the enrolled bills; but where these provisions do exist, it has been universally held that you may go behind the enrolled bills and read the Journals.

MR. JUSTICE BRADLEY: You are aware of the case in New Jersey, I suppose?

MR. SANDERSON: I do not remember the case.

MR. JUSTICE BRADLEY: I contended very strenuously, as you do, that the Journal should decide the case, but the Court of Appeals reversed me.

MR. SANDERSON: Are there any such constitutional provisions in New Jersey as we have here?

MR. JUSTICE BRADLEY: Exactly the same.

MR. SANDERSON: Then I think your honor was right, and the Court of Appeals was wrong. The question as to the validity of this part of Section 3664 becomes important when you come to consider the question whether the taxing system of the State of California affords the defendant an opportunity to be heard at some stage of the proceedings, because it is in that portion of Section 3664 that the proceedings are authorized upon which the other side, in the Court below, chiefly relied for the purpose of showing that an opportunity to be heard is given.

It is claimed by the counsel upon the other side that we are not within the guaranties of the fourteenth amendment, first, because we are not a "person;" second, because we are not a colored person; and third, because the laws of which we complain are not the laws referred to in that amendment.

The proposition, may it please the Court, that corporations are not included in the word "person," as used in that amendment, is at least a startling one. I have been to the trouble of collecting some facts in relation to the number of corporations in the country and the amount and value of their assets or property. Of course it was a difficult matter to ascertain fully and with entire satisfaction, but from the returns which I was able to reach, I found that the insurance companies of this country number not less than sixteen hundred, and that their aggregate assets are not less than $99,000,000. There are more than five thousand mining corporations, the value of whose claims and other property it is impossible to state.

There are more than two thousand national banks, with assets valued at more than $2,000,000,000. There are doubtless a large number of other bank corporations which are not national, and whose assets, or their value, I have no means of ascertaining.

There are in the United States and Territories not less than fifteen hundred railroad corporations, operating not less than one hundred and ten thousand miles of railroads, with property and assets of not less than $6,000,000,000.

In addition to these business and trading corporations, there are scattered throughout the length and breadth of the country, in every town, village, and city, educational, religious, eleemosynary, and sanitary corporations without number, with property of a value which we have no means of knowing. Now, it may be that all these corporations and all these stockholders are without the protection of the fourteenth amendment; but, if it be so, there should be some surer foundation for such a conclusion than the emasculating construction of the word "person." If we look to the literature of the law, from time immemorial down to the present time, we find that corporations are spoken of and treated as legal persons. We find that Mr. Blackstone, in his work upon the "Rights of Persons," devotes a chapter to corporations, and states that persons are divided into classes—natural and artificial. That natural persons are such as God has made us, and artificial persons are such as the law has made them.

Chancellor Kent does the same. He gives a chapter to corporations in his work on the "Rights of Persons."

Nowhere has it ever been asserted that, in the matter of the acquisition, possession, and enjoyment of property, a corporation was not a person within the meaning of any law, notwithstanding the word "corporation" was not employed.

Very little attention has been paid, if the Court please, to the authorities upon this subject. I desire to refer your honors to some of the authorities upon the question, which, I think, are conclusive. In the time of Henry the Eighth, a statute was passed which imposed the burden of building and repairing bridges upon the inhabitants of the town, city, or county in which they were situated. Lord Coke, in commenting on that statute, held that corporations were embraced within it, and that a corporation was, within the purview and meaning of that statute, an inhabitant of the town or county. Chief Justice Marshall had occasion to refer to this in the first case before this Court involving the question as to what is the legal status of a corporation. Before that, however, in Rex vs. Gardner, Chief Justice

Mansfield had decided that a corporation was an "occupier," within the meaning of a statute in regard to certain poor rates which were not assessed against the occupant of the land, because there was no occupant—the land belonging to a corporation. He (Mansfield) held that a corporation was an "occupier" within the meaning of that law. The comment of Coke and the decision of Mansfield came before this Court in the case of the United States vs. Deveaux, in 5 Cranch, 61. The question was whether a corporation was a citizen of the United States within the meaning of the constitutional provision which confers jurisdiction upon the Federal Courts over controversies between citizens of different States; and it was contended that a corporation could not be regarded, in any sense, as a citizen, and that this Court had no jurisdiction over a controversy between a corporation and the citizens of another State. Chief Justice Marshall, however, swept the cobweb from his path and looked behind the shadow at the substance, and there he found natural persons, though a corporation, having the rights of natural persons, which they were endeavoring to assert in their behalf; and he held that these persons were not to be deprived of their rights as citizens of the United States because they had organized themselves into a corporation, and that they were "persons" within the meaning of that clause of the Federal Constitution.

The same question came up again in the reverse form. An attempt was made to bring the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company into the Circuit Court of the United States, and that corporation pleaded to the jurisdiction of the Court upon the ground that it was not a person, but was a corporation, and, therefore, was not bound to answer in the Federal Courts. Mr. Justice Grier disposed of that question in a very summary manner. He said:

"A corporation, it is said, is an artificial person, a mere legal entity, invisible and intangible."

Then he goes on and argues the question upon that head, and he winds up with this language:

"But these important faculties, conferred on them by State legislation, for their own convenience, cannot be wielded to deprive others of acknowledged rights. It is not reasonable that those who deal with such persons should be deprived of a valuable privilege by a syllogism, or rather sophism, which deals subtly with words and names, without regard to things or persons they are used to represent."

It is a little singular, if true, that if a corporation, under the laws of England, can be "an inhabitant," "an occupier," can be a person, an individual, and an inhabitant under the laws of some of our own States, and cease to be either when we come to consider the question whether they are "persons" under the fourteenth amendment. If they are "persons" under one clause of this Constitution, they must be "persons," also, under other clauses of the Constitution, which deal with the same or cognate subjects. Wherever their rights are affected, wherever their property is affected, they are persons, as was held by Mr. Justice Story in the next case to which I shall refer. The case of the United States vs. Amedy (11 Wheaton, 392) was a criminal prosecution under a law which made it a felony for any person to destroy a vessel upon the high seas with the intent to injure the underwriter. The underwriter in that case was a corporation—the Boston Insurance Company. No mention was made in the statutes of a corporation. The language was: "Shall burn or destroy any ship or vessel, of which he is owner in part or in whole, or in anywise direct or procure the same to be done, with intent or design to prejudice any person or persons that hath underwritten or shall underwrite," etc.

The question was whether this Boston Insurance Company being a corporation was a "person" within the meaning of that statute. Mr. Justice Story, in delivering the opinion of the Court, among other things, said:

"If there had been any settled course of decision on this subject in criminal cases, we should certainly, in a prosecution of this nature, yield to such a construction of that Act, but there is no such course of decisions. The mischief intended to be reached by the statute is the same whether it respects private or corporate persons. That corporations are in law for civil purposes deemed persons is unquestionable."

Mark the last sentence—"That corporations are in law for civil purposes deemed persons is unquestionable." Take another case that occurred in those times when there was no difficulty in holding that a corporation was a person, when it had occasion to invoke the general principles of law for the purpose of protecting its property. We find in 8 Wheaton another case which arose under the treaty of peace between the United States and Great Britain, the sixth article of which provided: "That there should be no future confiscation made nor any prosecution commenced against any person or persons for or by reason of the part which he or they may have taken in the war, and that no person should, on that account, suffer any future loss or damage either in his person, liberty, or property."

The word "person" is used here and such pronouns as are employed in designating natural persons. The case showed that an English corporation before the war had owned land in the State of Vermont, that the State of Vermont had confiscated that land and granted it to the town of New Haven. The English corporation interposed, and sought the protection of this sixth article of the treaty, and its rights were contested upon the ground that it was not a "person" within the meaning of that treaty; that the treaty did not refer to corporations; that the word "person" was used in connection with pronouns which indicated a natural person, and could have no application, grammatically, to an artificial person. The Court rejected that kind of logic, and held that a corporation in England was a "person" within the meaning of that treaty, because the corporation was within the reason and philosophy of that portion of the treaty, in that it owned property, and the purpose of the treaty was to protect that property against confiscation; and that it stood, so far as the merits of the question were concerned, in precisely the same relation to the treaty in which a natural person stood, and was therefore entitled to the same consideration and protection.

The authorities upon this subject are so numerous that it seems like a waste of time to refer to them. I defy the gentlemen upon the other side to produce a single case in which it has been held that a corporation, in respect to the possession and enjoyment of its property, whenever it seeks to enforce its rights, or whenever the law seeks to impose upon it any burdens or obligations, is not regarded as a person, whether the word "corporation" occurs in the law or not.

Take the case of The People vs. Utica Insurance Company (15 Johnson, 508). There the Supreme Court of New York held that a statute restraining any person from doing certain acts applied as well to corporations or bodies politic, although not mentioned.

In the case of The Planters' Bank vs. Andrews (8 Porter, 404), it was held that a corporation was a person within the meaning of the attachment laws of Alabama, although corporations were not named.

In The State vs. Nashville University (4 Humphreys, 166), it was held that a corporation fell within the meaning of the word "person" in a statute which directed the Land Office to be opened for the reception of entries by all and every person or persons.

This Court, in the Sinking Fund Cases, has made no distinction between persons and corporations, but has placed them in the same category. Mr. Chief Justice Waite, in delivering the opinion of the Court in those cases, says:

"The United States cannot, any more than a State, interfere with private rights except for legitimate governmental purposes. They are not included within the constitutional prohibition, which prevents States from passing laws impairing the obligation of contracts; but, equally with the States, they are prohibited from depriving persons or corporations of property without due process of law."

In this clause, as to "due process of law," wherever it occurs, only the word "person" is used; the word "corporation" is not used. Nowhere in the books, nowhere in Magna Charta, nowhere in any State Constitution, nowhere in the Constitution of the United States, do you find the word "corporation" in the clause in relation to due process of law. And yet no one has ever pretended until now that it does not protect artificial as well as natural persons. The research of counsel upon the other side has failed to find a case in which any distinction has been made, in this respect, between corporations and natural persons. This failure is significant.

If the Court please, there are some authorities upon this question directly in point, some of which are opposed to the position which we take, and others in favor of it. And first on the list is a case decided in Louisiana, in the Circuit Court of the United States, by his honor Mr. Justice Woods. That was a case in which the City of New Orleans had, by ordinance, imposed a tax upon foreign insurance companies doing business in that city to double the amount of that which the ordinance imposed upon domestic insurance corporations. A corporation organized under the laws of the State of New York, engaged in the insurance business in New Orleans, contested the validity of that ordinance under the fourteenth amendment, claiming that it was a "person" within the meaning of that amendment; and that was the only question which was considered by the Court. Mr. Justice Woods, in delivering the opinion in that case, said, among other things:

"The word 'person' occurs three times in the first section, in the following connections: 'All persons born or naturalized in the United States;' * * * 'nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property,' etc.; 'nor' shall any State 'deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.' The complainants claim that this last clause applies to corporations—artificial persons."

Now attend to the reasoning of the learned Judge:

"Only natural persons can be born or naturalized; only natural persons can be deprived of life or liberty; so that it is clear that artificial persons are excluded from the provisions of the first two clauses just quoted. If we adopt the construction claimed by complainants, we must hold that the word 'person,' where it occurs the third time in this section, has a wider and more comprehensive meaning than in the other clauses of the section where it occurs. This would be a construction for which we find no warrant in the rules of interpretation. The plain and evident meaning of the section is, that the persons to whom the equal protection of the law is secured, are persons born or naturalized or endowed with life and liberty, and consequently natural and not artificial persons."

Now, with all due respect to the learned Judge who delivered the opinion in that case, I think his reasoning is subject to the criticism of Mr. Justice Grier in answering a similar objection in the case of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, where he said that persons were not to be deprived of their constitutional rights by a syllogism or sophism which deals cunningly with words to the disregard of names and things.

The reasoning of the learned Judge is this:

"Persons are born or naturalized, corporations are not born or naturalized, ergo corporations are not persons."

Now, this is a syllogism, and syllogistic reasoning is unsafe reasoning when we come to ascertain the meaning of the words contained in a statute or Constitution. It is as apt to lead to erroneous conclusions as a reference to grammatical rules for the same purpose, or even more so. Now let us test the virtue of this syllogism by applying it to a case with which we are all familiar. According to Moses' account of the matter, Adam and Eve were not born or naturalized; they were created. Vary the syllogism of the learned Judge, and apply it to their case. Corporations are not born or naturalized, but created; Adam and Eve were not born or naturalized, but created; therefore Adam and Eve were corporations. Such logic is not safe logic for the purpose of ascertaining the meaning of language as used in a statute or in a Constitution. The Judge says that corporations are not born. It is true that in a literal technical sense they are not, and yet in a legal and figurative sense they are. Bentham says: "Laws and property are born and must die together. Before there were laws there was no property; take away the laws and property ceases."

MR. JUSTICE BRADLEY: Do you contend that that first clause of the amendment relates to artificial persons?

MR. SANDERSON: I am not done with that language yet. The confusion, or whatever it may be called, thrown into this amendment in the first clause, is due to the fact that an amendment was tacked on to it which the committee did not report.

MR. JUSTICE BRADLEY: I thought you were arguing that, although the word person was used, it might to some extent be applied to corporations.

MR. SANDERSON: Yes, it may. If I understand your honor, I think that the construction of the word "person" that the learned Judge gives, where it occurs in the last two clauses, claiming that it is the same in meaning as the word "person" found in the first, is all wrong, for the reason that the word "person" used in the first clause is accompanied by the associate words "born or naturalized," which are a limitation upon the word "person" as there used, and confines its meaning to those who are born and who are naturalized; while the word "person" in the last two clauses is not associated with any qualifying words at all, but is used in its generic sense, and embraces all persons of all classes. The word "person" in the last two clauses is broader and more comprehensive than the word "person" contained in the first clause. As suggested by my associate, Mr. Edmunds, an examination of the Journal will show that this first clause in relation to citizenship was a political clause, which was not in the amendment at the time it was reported to the House, but was added in the Senate, and has no connection with and was not intended to have any control over the subsequent parts.

MR. JUSTICE BRADLEY: I understand there was a great controversy about citizenship—whether they belonged to the State or the United States.

MR. SANDERSON: Yes, sir; that question was considered by Mr. Justice Miller, in the Slaughter-house Cases.

MR. JUSTICE BRADLEY: And the amendment was intended to settle the question?

MR. EDMUNDS: Yes; but it was a political consideration that the Senate suggested to the House after the main body of private rights had been disposed of in the House of Representatives.

MR. SANDERSON: To continue my remarks upon the Louisiana case. The reasoning in that case interpolates words—adds words to the language of the fourteenth amendment which were not employed by the statesmen who framed it. According to the reasoning in that case, the first section—if the meaning attributed to it be fully expressed in words—would read thus:

“All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside; * * * nor shall any State deprive any person (born or naturalized in the United States) of life, liberty, or property without due process of law; nor deny to any person (born or naturalized in the United States) within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.”

To thus interpolate words is not sanctioned by any rule of construction. To thus interpolate words is to make laws and not to construe them. No Court can lawfully do this. Jus dicere non jus dare is the measure of judicial power. You may declare the law, but you cannot make it. Had Congress intended the meaning which the learned Judge has given to the word “person” they would have prefixed to it the word “such,” so that these clauses would have read as follows:

“Nor shall any State deprive any (such) person, etc.; nor deny to any (such) person,” etc.

And the fact that no such qualifying word or words were used conclusively shows that no such limitation upon the meaning of the word “person” was intended.

There are two other cases in which the same conclusion was reached. One was decided by the Supreme Court of California, and the other by a Judge of a Circuit Court of the State of Illinois. The former gave no reasons for the faith that was in them, but blindly followed the Louisiana case. The Illinois Judge adopted the reasoning, substantially, of Mr. Justice Woods.

In opposition to the doctrine announced in these cases there have been several decisions by the Federal Judges on the Pacific Coast, and by United States Circuit Judge Drummond, of Illinois, in which it has been held that corporations are as much entitled to protection under the fourteenth amendment as natural persons. These decisions are cited in my brief. I have no time for comment. There is also a case by the Supreme Court of Illinois, in which it is held that no distinction can be made between corporations and natural persons in the presence of constitutional guaranties. This case is not cited in my brief. It is reported in 76 Illinois Reports, at page 447. I trust your honors will read it.

These decisions we must presume were perfectly familiar to the statesmen who framed the fourteenth amendment. They were familiar with the fact that the word “person” included corporations, and if any layman in either House of Congress had moved to amend by adding the word “corporation” in addition to the word “person,” every lawyer in the House would have told him that it was entirely unnecessary. If he had moved to amend by adding “any other association, firm, copartnership, or joint stock company,” they would have told him that the word “person” in connection with civil rights always includes corporations and other legal associations. I think you can find no case in the books to the contrary. Suppose that certain negroes down in South Carolina, having acquired means sufficient, should conclude to build a theater or some other place of amusement, and should build it. We all agree, I think, that the fourteenth amendment protects the negro against State action, if it does not the white man. Now, suppose that these persons, after having built their theater, should come to the conclusion that it would be advantageous for them to take on the form of a corporation for carrying on their business, and should organize themselves into a corporation, so that you would have in fact a colored corporation instead of colored natural persons; would such a corporation be within the protection of the fourteenth amendment? Could the State of South Carolina despoil them of their theater upon the ground that they were a corporation, while they could not be despoiled of their theater so long as they remained in their capacities as natural persons? It cannot be that a great constitutional provision of this character can be rendered inoperative simply by a change in the legal attitude which the parties may assume. If the Constitution would protect such property from State action, while its owners were individuals or natural persons, it must necessarily do the same thing when they take on the form of a corporation, or else this constitutional amendment fails to accomplish in part one of the great purposes which all concede was intended to be subserved by its adoption, namely: protection for the negro race.

A short time before this case came up in California an item appeared in the newspapers which illustrates the absurdity of holding that a corporation is not included within the word "person" as used in this amendment. A certain firm doing a large and extensive business, which they had been conducting for several years, concluded that it would be more convenient to organize themselves into a corporation to carry on precisely the same kind of business. They formed a corporation, and they published in the newspapers the fact that they had formed a corporation, and that the corporation would continue the business as before, and that the interest of each member would be the same in the corporation as it had been in the firm. Now, take that case. While they remained in their capacities as natural persons, no one pretends that they were not within the protection of the fourteenth amendment, if that amendment applies at all to white people. But the moment they laid aside their natural capacity and assumed that of a corporation, according to the logic of our friends upon the other side, they forfeited all their rights under the fourteenth amendment. Thereafter there was no restraint upon the State in respect to them, though prior to that time there had been. By this simple transmutation of private persons into a corporation, the meaning, force, and effect of this constitutional provision, if counsel upon the other side be correct, was entirely changed and reversed.

Another consideration, may it please the Court. Corporations are composed of natural persons. They pay in their money; the assets of the corporation are furnished by themselves. The whole property is contributed by themselves. The corporation is the mere representative or agent of its stockholders. During the life of the corporation its stockholders are entitled to share in its earnings, if there be any, in the way of dividends. Upon the dissolution of the corporation they are entitled to share in the surplus fund, after the payment of creditors, if there be any. Now, this interest which the stockholder has in the property, and assets of the corporation, is property. It has a commercial, exchangeable value. It is transferred from person to person by the transfer of certificates representing shares. It is property. If a man dies it descends to his personal representative for the purpose of administration, and if there be any left after administration it goes to his heirs; and it is in view of these legal conditions that the Courts hold that stockholders' bills may be entertained for the purpose of protecting the stockholder against the mal-administration of the Directors. Is it to be presumed that property of this character was not intended to be protected by the clause in relation to due process of law as much as any other property belonging to a natural person? I, as a natural person, own certain species of property. The Federal Constitution protects that from the unjust legislation of the State. I also own an undivided interest in the assets of a corporation, which is also property. That property, the learned gentleman upon the other side informs us, the fourteenth amendment will not protect against confiscation on the part of the State. Can it be possible that the fourteenth amendment can be so construed as to lead to these contradictory and absurd results? Can it be that it was not intended to protect all kinds and descriptions of property belonging to natural persons, whether it be that which is under his own absolute control or that to which the title is invested in some third party as trustee to hold for his benefit? Can a mere difference in circumstances and condition between the first and second kinds of property referred to create a difference in rule in the constitutional law of the country? I most respectfully submit that it does not; and, therefore, for the purpose of carrying out the command and behest of the Federal Constitution, you are required to do what? The command is that no State shall deny to any person the equal protection of the laws; no State shall deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, except by due process of law—all property—any property which he holds in his own right, in his own name, or in the name of another; the word is “property,” the broad generic term which covers and includes everything which man may acquire, possess, and enjoy—all property. The language is, no State shall deprive any person of life, liberty, or property—that is to say, any property—except by due process of law.

Now, if that is what it means, then, in order to protect the interests of the stockholder in the assets of the corporation, you must protect the corporation. To accomplish the principal purpose you must subserve the minor. You cannot, because a man has deposited his property in the hands of another, hold it subject to confiscation by a State in the presence of such a provision of the Federal Constitution.

It is next said, may it please your honors, that this provision of the Federal Constitution does not apply to white men; that it was intended to apply only to the negro race. It is very clear, if we look back over the history of the past twenty years, that this country has done a great deal for the negro race. It has stricken the fetters from their ankles and their hands, and it has endowed them with a second manhood. It has made them free men; it has endowed them with the rights of citizenship, political and civil, and it has placed them on a par and equality with the white man. But that is none too much; we do not complain of that. We only say that something should now be done for the poor white man. We ask that he may be lifted up and put upon a level with the negro. We ask that this fourteenth amendment be so construed as to concede to the white man equal rights under the Constitution of the United States with the black man. Our claim is for universal equality before the law. We claim that we should have no privileged classes; that we should all stand, as regards the law, upon the same broad and level platform. And yet my friends upon the other side, by their construction of this amendment, would create a privileged class. They have demonstrated, if they have demonstrated anything, that the negro race of America is a privileged class; that it stands higher upon the plane of legal rights than the white man; that whenever his rights are invaded he finds a shield and a protection in the fourteenth amendment to the Federal Constitution; but whenever a white man's rights are invaded, whenever he is outraged by unjust State legislation, we are told by the eloquent gentlemen on the other side that there is no shield for him to be found in the fourteenth amendment; that the white man is without protection in cases where the black man is protected; in other words, that the white man is not the equal of the black man. The construction which they put on these clauses of the fourteenth amendment leads us inevitably to that conclusion.

I have been to the trouble of gathering a few statistics upon this subject, for the purpose of illustrating what the consequence of this doctrine would be should it receive the sanction of this Court. On page 52 of my brief you will find some information which I have gathered from the census returns of 1870, and also from the census returns of 1880. In 1870 the negro population in Louisiana was three hundred and sixty-four thousand two hundred and ten, and the white population three hundred and sixty-two thousand and sixty-five; the excess of blacks over whites was over two thousand. In 1880 the black population of the same State was four hundred and eighty-three thousand seven hundred and ninety-four, and the white population four hundred and fifty-five thousand and seven; an excess of blacks over whites of twenty-eight thousand seven hundred and eighty-seven. In Mississippi the black population in 1870 was four hundred and forty-four thousand two hundred and one, while the white population was only three hundred and eighty-two thousand eight hundred and ninety-six, making an excess of blacks over whites of sixty-one thousand three hundred and five. In the same State in 1880 the black population was six hundred and fifty thousand three hundred and thirty-seven, and the white population four hundred and seventy-nine thousand three hundred and seventy-one; an excess of blacks over whites of one hundred and seventy thousand nine hundred and sixty-six. In the State of South Carolina the black population in 1870 numbered four hundred and fifteen thousand eight hundred and fourteen, while the white population in the same State was only two hundred and eighty-nine thousand six hundred and sixty-seven; an excess of blacks of one hundred and twenty-six thousand one hundred and forty-seven. In the same State in 1880 the black population numbered six hundred and four thousand two hundred and seventy-five, while the white population numbered only three hundred and ninety-one thousand two hundred and twenty-four; an excess of blacks of two hundred and thirteen thousand and fifty-one.

I refer, if the Court please, to these statistics for the purpose of giving point to my illustration, which I propose to present for the purpose of showing that this constitutional provision was not intended to be limited in its scope and provision to the negro race alone.

MR. JUSTICE MILLER: As we decided in the Slaughter-house Cases (although the argument was the other way), we say: "And so, if other rights are assailed by the States which properly and necessarily fall within the protection of these articles, that protection will apply, though the party interested may not be of African descent."

MR. SANDERSON: I am glad to know that, your honor.

MR. JUSTICE MILLER: I do not know that anybody in this Court—I have never heard it said in this Court or by any Judge of it—that these articles were supposed to be limited to the negro race.

MR. SANDERSON: But there is a notion out among the people, and our friends on the other side have cited several cases, for the purpose of showing that it was the intention of this Court to give to this provision of the Constitution as restricted and limited application as possible.

MR. JUSTICE MILLER: The purport of the general discussion in the Slaughter-house Cases on this subject was nothing more than the common declaration that when you come to construe any Act of Congress, any statute, any Constitution, any legislative decree, you must consider the thing, the evil which was to be remedied, in order to understand fairly what the purpose of the remedial Act was.

MR. SANDERSON: We agree perfectly; and I am not going to urge that there is anything contained in the Slaughter-house Cases which admits of a different construction than your honor now puts upon it. But I must confess that there has been an impression that the Slaughter-house Cases narrowed the provisions of the first clause, and also the provisions of the two latter clauses—their scope, as one would naturally understand them from reading their words.

But, as I was about to show when your honor interrupted me, the Slaughter-house Cases do not justify such an impression. Your honor says, at page 72: "We do not say that no one else but the negro can share in this protection. * * * And so, if other rights are assailed by the States which properly and necessarily fall within the protection of these articles, that protection will apply, though the party interested may not be of African descent." I am very glad to have any doubt which has existed in the minds of the profession in regard to the purport and meaning of that decision cleared up by an authoritative opinion, given in this public manner. I understand, then, that we may consider, for the purposes of this case, so far as your honor is concerned, that the color line has disappeared from American jurisprudence; that there are not two Constitutions in this country—one for the black man and one for the white man—and that the white man is at last on an equality with the negro. But, nevertheless, in view of the fact that there are some Judges on the bench who were not here at the time the Slaughter-house Cases were considered, and who may, so far as I know, entertain the idea that there are some clauses of this amendment which confine its operation to the negro race, I do not propose to discontinue my argument on this point. Let us reverse the conditions presented by Mr. Justice Miller in the Slaughter-house Cases, in reference to the condition of the negroes at the South, and the character of the legislation which had been enacted against them for the purpose of testing whether this constitutional restriction was intended to be confined exclusively to them or not. I say, suppose in those three States—Mississippi, Louisiana, and South Carolina—where the negro population preponderated over the white, the negroes had possessed the requisite intelligence and nerve to organize themselves into a political party, and had elected their own men to office; had filled the halls of legislation and the halls of justice with persons of their own race; suppose they had enacted laws prohibiting white persons from residing in the towns, except in the capacity of menial servants, requiring them to reside upon the soil and till it, but denying to them the right to purchase it, or own it; had denied to them the right to testify in cases in Courts of justice where negroes were a party; had, by the failure to pass sufficient or to provide for the efficient administration of the laws, allowed the beating down of white men by negroes, as is represented to have been done to negroes by white men in the Slaughter-house Cases. Now, suppose these poor whites had come to this Court, claiming protection against such legislation; suppose they had come to this Court and invoked for their protection against such outrages the provisions of the fourteenth amendment to the Federal Constitution. Would this Court have closed its doors in their faces? Would it have said to them: "The fourteenth amendment was intended to prohibit white men from enacting such legislation against black men, but it was not intended to prohibit black men from enacting such legislation against white men?" I do not think the Court would have so answered; I am now more satisfied than ever that it would not. I am glad to know that we have not, in this country, two Constitutions—one for the black man and one for the white man. I am glad to know, in advance, that the color line is about to disappear from legislative and judicial history in this country, and that all of us, white as well as black, are to stand side by side upon the broad platform of universal equality in the presence of the law of the land.

But it is also said that we are not entitled to the benefits of this provision of the fourteenth amendment, because the laws of which we complain are not within the operation of the fourteenth amendment; are not the laws to which the fourteenth amendment refers. In other words, it was not intended by the fourteenth amendment to vest the judiciary of the United States with the power of reviewing the revenue laws of the States to ascertain their purpose, or to ascertain whether they were consistent with the Constitution of the United States or not. Where is there a warrant or authority for such an assertion? You do not find it in the language, it is not there; "nor shall any State deny to any person equal protection"—of what? "of the laws" against crime; with the respect to the enjoyment of property; in relation to proceedings in Courts of justice; laws relating to conveyancing, and the thousand and one subjects of which laws treat? Not at all. "No State shall deny to any person the equal protection of the laws"—all laws—any law by which a State may deny to any person equal protection with some other person. Now, the subject-matter of the law is a matter of the utmost indifference. It is not that against which the Constitution of the United States is to provide protection. No matter what the subject may be, it is as to the law itself—no matter what it relates to. That law must operate equally. Each person must find who comes in contact with it, equal protection at its hands, no matter in what department of the law it may be found.

MR. SANDERSON: Then I will submit only one or two more suggestions, for the purpose of showing that tax laws are within the operation of that amendment. We have already agreed that the negro is within the meaning of that amendment, and now we have all agreed that the white man is within the meaning of that amendment. Therefore, we have made some progress. Therefore, I will suppose, if there should be anybody who still adheres to the color line theory, that South Carolina should pass laws imposing a capitation tax upon persons within its jurisdiction, say a capitation tax of $5 upon negroes and $2 50 upon white men, would my friends upon the other side, who say that the negro is shielded and protected by the fourteenth amendment, say that law is not within it because it was a law made in the exercise of the taxing power? I think not. Suppose they should pass a law by which the property of white men, when sold for taxes, should be sold subject to redemption at any time within one year. Suppose that they should provide that in the case of black men the property so sold should be sold absolutely, and not be subject to redemption at all. Would that be a case within the fourteenth amendment? Yet that would be a law in relation to taxation. Why, it is hardly necessary, may it please the Court, to illustrate this matter further. Tax laws are the very laws of all others which are within the operation of the fourteenth amendment. It is by the exercise of the taxing power that oppression and tyranny has been visited upon peoples and countries from the earliest ages down to the present time. It is the one element of despotism and tyranny yet left in every government of republican forms.

MR. JUSTICE BRADLEY: In former times, and I think at present in some States, it was customary to impose special taxes on objects. On a mill, it was $10 on every mill in the State, and on every carding machine, and so on. Various articles were specially taxed. In New Jersey they were called specialties, and like all other property so assessed, valued at a valuation and taxed pro rata. And at present I presume that railroad property and railroads are in some States taxed specially so much, perhaps, on their income as a commutation of all other taxation. Now, do you contend—do your principles require you to contend—that a State has lost its power of thus taxing different species of property in special lines?

MR. SANDERSON: Not at all.

MR. JUSTICE BRADLEY: That has not been particularly dwelt upon, and I did not know but what you did.

MR. SANDERSON: Not at all. We admit to the fullest legal extent the power of a State to classify property for the purpose of taxation. We have never contended for anything else, and if there is anything in this case which puts us in that attitude before the Court, it has come from counsel on the other side in misapprehending our views. We do not deny the power of the State to classify property for the purpose of taxation, but we do deny that the State of California has exercised that power, except to a very limited extent, by exempting growing crops and exempting credits equal to the amount of debts. It has made no classification whatever of the property, but it has declared, on the contrary, that all property shall be taxed according to its value.

MR. JUSTICE BRADLEY: That is their Constitution, but I am looking at the fourteenth amendment.

MR. SANDERSON: The fourteenth amendment simply requires equality; that the law should bear equally upon all persons and things upon which it bears at all: that is our position. You may cast the burdens of taxation upon one species of property to the exclusion of another; such a law affords equal protection to all upon whom it operates. To illustrate: Suppose the State should levy a specific tax of 25 cents upon the cows of A and 50 cents upon the cows of B. The power of selecting a cow for the purpose of taxation and levying a tax upon it we admit. What we deny is that you can levy a tax of 25 cents on the cows of A, and at the same time levy a tax of 50 cents on the cows of B; and the fourteenth amendment, in declaring that no State shall deny to any person the equal protection of the laws, means that. It means that wherever the law touches different individuals, wherever such individuals stand in the same relation to the law, where the conditions and the circumstances are the same, the rule of law shall also be the same. In the example which your honor just cited of taxation in New Jersey, you do not tax the mill of A so much, and the mill of B so much more, and so on.

MR. JUSTICE BRADLEY: No; but it might be taxed higher than other property of the same character.

MR. SANDERSON: We hold that when an ad valorem system of taxation is adopted, or a specific system (you can tax by either process), you cannot impose a greater rate upon the property of A than upon the property of B of the same kind; nor can you adopt one mode of valuation in the one case not resorted to in the other, if the result be the laying of a greater burden upon one person than another in respect to the same kind of property. Such legislation, we say, is prohibited by the fourteenth amendment.

MR. JUSTICE BRADLEY: In other words, when the tax becomes personal in an invidious sense.

MR. SANDERSON: Yes; it is then a discrimination, not between different kinds of property, but between different owners of the same kind of property. To illustrate: This case shows that the defendant in error is the owner of about eight million acres of land granted by the United States to enable it to construct its road. It was granted each alternate section to the number of ten on each side of the road per mile. Now the even sections are owned by natural persons. We will assume that a natural person has put a mortgage on his to one half its value. We will assume that the mortgage of the railroad company is also one half of its value. Now, these lands are of identical quality and quantity and value. They are the same in all respects; you cannot distinguish one from the other. I will assume, for the purposes of my illustration, that it is the same, and that you cannot distinguish one from the other on the score of value. Now, if in ascertaining the value of his land, the natural person is allowed to deduct the face value of the mortgage upon it and to be assessed for the remainder only, and the defendant is denied a deduction, and made to pay taxes upon the full value of its land, without regard to the mortgage, then, I say, it is not a discrimination between different kinds of property; the property is identically the same—I say it is a discrimination between different owners of the same kind of property.

MR. JUSTICE HARLAN: You therefore deny the right of the State to tax the land of the individual citizen without allowing him to deduct the mortgage, and at the same time allow the railroad owning similar land to deduct the mortgage.

MR. SANDERSON: Of course I do; that is simply reversing the question, if I understand it. It results not in a discrimination between different kinds of property for the purpose of taxation, but in a discrimination between different owners of the same kind of property. There has been some confusion of ideas brought into this case, arising from the fact that counsel on the other side are all the time talking about railroad property, and speaking of it as property mentioned in the fourth section of the thirteenth article of the Constitution of the State. Now, railroad property is not referred to at all except when you come to the question of assessment. It says, "except as to property," not as to railroads, but as to the property of railroad and other quasi public corporations. It is not an exception as to railroads only—they alone are not taken out of the general rule and set apart by themselves—but property of every kind and description. It is the property of railroad and other quasi public corporations that is taken out of the operation of the general rule. Now, what are quasi public corporations? There are other than railroad corporations which come within the operations of this rule—toll-bridge companies, ferry companies, steamship and hotel companies, corporations engaged in any kind of business which, under the Granger Cases, is affected by a public use—elevator business, for instance. Take an elevator erected in Chicago—

MR. JUSTICE HARLAN: How about telegraph companies in California; are they not public corporations?

MR. SANDERSON: They are.

MR. JUSTICE BRADLEY: I regret to interrupt you, but it might throw light on a question which has arisen in my mind. What objection have you to these corporations being taxed to the full value of the property, with the permission or privilege of charging the incumbrance or mortgage? Railroad companies and other large corporations, if they should put a mortgage on their property and issue innumerable bonds, it would be hard to find those bonds to tax; whereas, in case of private individuals and their bonds and mortgages, it is easy to tax property by itself and the bond and mortgage by itself. The bond and mortgage is recorded, but railroad bonds are scattered all over the world. Now, as a mode of getting at the tax on the whole property, what is the serious objection to charging it all to the railroad, and permitting them to charge against the bondholders the amount which would be due from them on the tax; or is not that done in this law or in this Constitution?

MR. SANDERSON: No, sir; and that is just what is the matter. If we were allowed, I do not know but what we might be willing to serve as a tax-gatherer, although I do not know that the Government has any power to impose upon us that duty. But the difficulty here is that this mortgage on the property represents an undivided interest in it for the purposes of taxation.

MR. JUSTICE BRADLEY: That is in private property.

MR. SANDERSON: But of course we claim that the rule should be extended to quasi public property. Each has an interest in the land. The mortgagor and the mortgagee are tenants in common.

MR. JUSTICE BRADLEY: I understand that.

MR. SANDERSON: Now, in the case of natural persons, each interest is taxed to each tenant, but in the case of quasi public corporations there is no such division or deduction made. There is no pretense of assessing the mortgage against the mortgagee, as in the other case. If there were there might be no objection to the companies collecting the tax and paying it over, and therefore no valid objection to the law.

MR. JUSTICE BRADLEY: The Constitution is put in the brief in piecemeals—in fragments—and I have not seen the whole of it. Is there no provision allowing the railroad company or other quasi public corporation to charge against the incumbrancer the tax?

MR. SANDERSON: No, sir; none whatever. There is in the case of natural persons. In the case of a railroad company or other quasi public corporation no such question could arise, for the obvious reason that the mortgage is not taken into account at all; it is ignored as a false quantity in measuring the liability of a railroad or other quasi public company under the taxing system.

It has been suggested—and I call the attention of the Court to it in my brief—that we have, in support of our view in relation to this question of whether tax laws are within the operation of the fourteenth amendment, a legislative construction on the part of Congress in the reenactment of the civil rights bill after the fourteenth amendment was adopted. In this reenactment Congress inserted “taxes,” “licenses,” “burdens,” and “exactions” of every kind and description, although they were not in the civil rights bill originally, and probably were omitted for the very reason for which counsel contend upon the other side, that State tax laws were not then within the operation of the Federal Constitution. Had the bill originally contained this provision as to taxes, etc., it doubtless would have been unconstitutional; but upon the adoption of the fourteenth amendment such a provision became constitutional in the judgment of Congress, and that body, in reenacting the bill, industriously inserted this provision in relation to taxes, licenses, burdens, and penalties of every kind, and thus gave to the fourteenth amendment a legislative construction.

The admonition of the Chief Justice that the time allowed me is about to expire, compels me to pass, in silence, several questions involved in this case—as to whether the Constitution and laws of California discriminate between quasi public corporations on the one hand, and natural persons and corporations not quasi public on the other hand; as to whether the system of taxation in California can be considered as a classification of property for the purpose of taxation; as to whether such system can be sustained as valid on the ground that in adopting it the State was in the exercise of the power to alter and amend general laws in relation to corporations: as to whether the guaranty of due process requires notice and an opportunity to be heard in the exercise of the taxing power of the States, and as to what is meant by the equal protection of the laws guaranteed to every person by the fourteenth amendment. I regret that I am denied, by the lapse of time, an opportunity to discuss these most important questions. Fortunately my associates left nothing to be said upon these points. They are pretty fully discussed in my brief, which I hope your honors will read.

In closing what little I have been allowed to say as to the construction of the fourteenth amendment, I take the liberty of adding that I have always believed, and, in opposition to the able arguments of my learned friends upon the other side, I still believe, that by these two clauses of the fourteenth amendment the principles of Magna Charta and of the Declaration of American Independence have been incorporated into our National Constitution, as a just and wholesome restriction upon the power of the States. I believe that the clause in relation to due process means the same as it means in Magna Charta—the same as it means in every State Constitution—the same as it means in the fifth amendment to the Federal Constitution, except that there it is a restriction upon national power, while in the fourteenth amendment it is a restriction upon State power. I believe that the clause in relation to equal protection means the same thing as the plain and simple yet sublime words found in our Declaration of Independence: "All men are created equal." Not equal in physical or mental power; not equal in fortune or social position; but equal before the law. I do not believe that the two clauses in relation to due process, found, one in the fifth and the other in the fourteenth amendment of the Federal Constitution, mean the one more or less than the other. I do not believe that, like the witches in Macbeth, they

"Palter with us in a double sense—
Keep the word of promise to the ear
And break it to the hope."

As they speak the same language, so, in my belief, they declare the same intent. I believe that these two clauses were the one stone lacking to complete the edifice. I believe them to be the crowning glory of the Federal Constitution, and I regret that there is any disposition in any quarter to dim their luster or fritter away their substance by a narrow and emasculating construction of their language.

I pass to the last question presented by the record, and that is as to whether the franchise of the defendant is taxable under State laws or not, or whether it is protected from State taxation by the supremacy clause of the Constitution of the United States. That is the provision of the Constitution to which we appeal for the purpose of showing that this franchise—the right to be, the right to exist, the right to maintain and operate this road—is beyond the reach of the taxing power of the State of California.

THE CHIEF JUSTICE: The State of California incorporated the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, did it not?

MR. SANDERSON: Yes, sir.

THE CHIEF JUSTICE: And by Act of Congress there has been some additional franchises or grants?

MR. SANDERSON: Yes, sir.

THE CHIEF JUSTICE: It is in the same condition that the Central Pacific was?

MR. SANDERSON: Yes, sir. This corporation was originally organized under the laws of the State of California for the purpose of building a road from the Bay of San Francisco down the coast of California to San Diego, and thence eastward to connect with a road to be constructed from the Valley of the Mississippi to the Pacific Ocean. At what particular point the road would cross the eastern boundary of the State could only be conjectured. Hence the company fixed no point for the southeastern terminus of its road. Congress passed an Act authorizing the company to connect with the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad at a point on the eastern boundary of the State of California, where that road should cross, and thence build a road by the most eligible route to the City of San Francisco.

I will state here, because I do not want to be misunderstood, that I do not claim that it is necessary to establish the proposition that we are a national corporation in order to secure the exemption which we claim. While I propose to establish that fact if I can, yet it is not indispensable, because the franchise of a State corporation becomes exempt from State taxation, as we claim, whenever such corporation has been selected by the United States to serve the Government in the capacity of an agent, or means of carrying into execution certain governmental powers of Congress.

But it makes a clearer cut case, if I establish the proposition that this corporation is not a mere local State corporation endowed with a life for fifty years only, but a national corporation, selected by the Government of the United States, adopted by the Government of the United States, for the purpose of constructing, maintaining, and operating a post and military road for all time, and to that end endowed with immortality.

It is not necessary in creating a corporation, that there should be any express grant of corporate powers. If the words "erect," "establish," "create," etc., are not employed, it makes no difference. It requires no magic words, no set or formal phrase, to erect a body of men into a corporation. It may be done by implication. It may be done as summarily as in the days of chivalry the honor of knighthood was conferred—"Kneel down and rise up, Sir Knight." All that it is necessary for the Legislature to do is to confer some right or some grant on a body of men by a collective name which cannot be enjoyed except by the exercise of corporate faculties, and that alone, by implication, endows the association with corporate powers, endows them with immortality, and with all the other powers which may be necessary to carry out the purpose of the grant. If the king makes a grant of land to the "Men of Islington" without words of succession, they become a corporation, for otherwise the grant would fail.

I do not contend that in thus adopting a State corporation it is necessary to sever its connection with the State. It is not necessary to sever it. A corporation may have a dual existence; it may be Janus-faced—one face turned toward the State, and the other toward the United States. We are citizens of the United States and of the State in which we reside. So corporations may be corporations of the United States as well as corporations of the State in which they reside or have their principal place of business. What has this Court said in support of the proposition that one sovereign may adopt a corporation created by another sovereign? In 2 Black will be found a case where a railroad corporation created under the laws of Indiana proposed to extend its road to Cincinnati, Ohio, and to that end applied to the Legislature of Ohio for a grant of corporate powers and privileges to enable it to cross the border line, and penetrate Ohio to Cincinnati. The Legislature of Ohio, intending to grant them all the powers that were requisite in order to accomplish that purpose, undertook to pass, and did pass, substantially, the same charter—the same law under which they were incorporated in Indiana. Very well; what was the result of that? Was this corporation thereafter a mere corporation of the State of Indiana, or did it, without losing its character as a corporation of the State of Indiana, become also a corporation of the State of Ohio, and entitled to enjoy the franchises and powers conferred upon it by that State? The question came up before this Court in 2 Black. The corporation brought a suit in its capacity as an Ohio corporation against certain citizens of the State of Indiana. They interposed a plea to the jurisdiction of the Court, claiming that the corporation was a citizen of the State of Indiana, and, therefore, could not sue the citizen of Indiana in a Federal Court. Answering to the plea, this Court said in substance:

“This body of men have a dual or double existence, and they are a corporation within the State of Indiana, under the laws of Indiana. They are also a corporation of the State of Ohio, under the laws of the State of Ohio. But they cannot maintain their action, because it is a joint action on the part of both corporations, and, therefore, they must seek their remedy in State and not in Federal Courts.”

Now, if the State of Ohio could thus adopt a corporation of the State of Indiana, why may not the United States adopt a corporation of any State of the Union, and put it to its uses in carrying into execution laws constitutionally enacted by Congress for the purpose of carrying into effect the powers of the Federal Government? Why not? Is there any impediment in the way? That is precisely what was done in the Central Pacific case. Now, what was the condition of that case? The Government proposed to establish a post and military road by which the Mississippi Valley should be connected with the Pacific Ocean. It was in time of war. Armies were marching through the republic. Blows were being struck at the vitals of the nation, and it was important that this road should be constructed “on time,” to use a railroad phrase. What did they do? They created a corporation at this end of the line—none being here—offering their services to construct and operate and maintain the road. Over at the other end was a little State corporation organized originally for the purpose of building a railroad from Sacramento to the eastern boundary of the State of California, a distance of about one hundred miles. It was an insignificant corporation, but it was headed by men of energy, zeal, and determination. Instead of creating a corporation at that end of the road for the purpose of building it, what did Congress do? They found a corporation organized under the laws of California, standing ready and willing to be selected by the Government of the United States as its agent, and they selected it. In creating the Union Pacific they endowed it with immortality. They annexed certain conditions to the construction and management of the road; required it to be built of a certain gauge, and to be operated as one continuous line. They authorized it and other companies to consolidate. They conferred upon it divers powers, such as are usually conferred upon corporations; and finally provided that all the grants of the Union Pacific should inure to the benefit of the Central Pacific upon their complying with the conditions of the Act. The Central Pacific was authorized to do what? To build a road from Sacramento to the summit of the Sierra Nevada Mountains? No. But to build a road from San Francisco east until it met the Union Pacific, building west. In other words, it was authorized to cross the boundary line between the State of California and the Territory of Nevada; authorized to pass through Nevada into Utah, there to connect with the Union Pacific at Ogden. It was authorized to build a road in its own State, where it had no authority to build under its charter. It was authorized to build a road in the territory of the United States, where it had no authority to build a road under its charter. It was required to build and maintain a road for all time, although it can exist only fifty years under the laws of California. It was authorized to build and maintain a link in a post and military road, created and established by the Congress of the United States, in the exercise of the powers of the Government of the United States over the subjects of commerce and war. Now, will the gentlemen answer me who it is, and who it was, that granted the franchise which the Central Pacific Railroad Company is exercising? If they exist as a corporation in Nevada to-day, they do not so exist by virtue of their organization under the laws of the State of California. If they exist as a corporation in Utah, it is not by virtue of the laws of California. They exist there, if at all, by virtue of their charter from Congress in 1862; that is their only charter; their only authority; the only thing to which they can appeal for protection, in case their rights be invaded.

Now, suppose the State of Nevada should come to the conclusion that it would be better for that State to put a stop to the Central Pacific Railroad. Suppose its Legislature should instruct its Attorney-General to institute proceedings by quo warranto for the purpose of testing the right of the Central Pacific Railroad Company to use the franchise it is using in the State of Nevada. Suppose the State Courts of Nevada should come to the conclusion that the corporation is a mere State corporation; that it has no powers or existence outside of the State of California; should come to the conclusion that it is without a charter or authority to exist or exercise franchises in that State, and should declare it to be an usurper, and should enjoin it forever from exercising any of the powers conferred upon it by the Act of Congress. Suppose that to be done to-morrow; what would the Central Pacific Railroad Company say in reply? Would they appeal to their California charter? No! No! California never has—never can—confer upon them the power to exist and operate a road in Nevada or Utah. To what, then, would they appeal? To the Act of Congress of 1862, and to that alone. That is their shield, and the only shield that can afford them any protection against such action. Could they not continue to operate the road, notwithstanding such a judgment by a Court of the State of Nevada? Is this Court willing to admit that the State of Nevada has the power, under the conditions stated, to destroy—not retard, embarrass, delay, burden—but actually destroy and prevent the operation of the laws by which Congress has sought to carry into execution some of the well understood and acknowledged powers of the Federal Government? I imagine, if such a case should ever occur, it would result in establishing the proposition that the Government of the United States may select State corporations, as well as natural persons, and constitute them their agents for the purpose of carrying into effect the lawful orders of the Government of the United States in the exercise of constitutional powers.

THE CHIEF JUSTICE: Your time has expired.

MR. SANDERSON: I want about five minutes more to call attention to what this Court has said upon this question away back in the time of the United States Bank, an institution created on the same principle that the Union Pacific Railroad was created, except for banking purposes. Of the $37,000,000 capital of that bank, only $7,000,000 was contributed by the United States. That bank was created for the purpose of carrying into execution certain measures in relation to finance; to assist in transmitting money north and south, east and west. It was a mere financial agent, insignificant in comparison with the objects sought by the construction of railroads across this continent, by which a pathway over hill, mountain, and dale is made for the commerce of the world. Now, what did Maryland do in relation to that bank? It imposed a trifling tax on paper which that bank required for the purpose of printing its bills. Chief Justice Marshall said—not because it prevented the bank from carrying out the purpose of Congress, but simply because it tended to that end—the existence of such a power in the States would be destruction to the supremacy of the United States. That the power to tax the means employed by which to carry into execution the constitutional powers of the National Government was a power by which such means could be destroyed, and therefore such a power could not be recognized as existing in the States.

What did Ohio do? It levied a license tax upon the operation of the branch banks in that State—precisely what is being done by the City of Los Angeles in regard to this railroad, making it pay a license tax on every locomotive and car passing through that city. It was a tax on the operations or business of the bank. What said this Court? It said, in effect: If you can tax it 1 per cent you can tax it 200 per cent, and thus make it impossible for it to carry on the business for which it was created. Therefore, we cannot recognize the existence of such a power; it is suicidal, it is fatal to the supremacy of the Government of the United States, and it cannot be tolerated or recognized at all; not because Congress has said so, but because the people of the United States have said the Constitution of the United States shall be the supreme law of the land, any law or ordinance of any State to the contrary notwithstanding—the supreme law, in the presence of which all the States must stand uncovered.

In regard to the railroad cases, in which you have decided that the tangible, visible property of a railroad corporation does not fall within the rule of the cases which I have cited, I have to say that in the last of them you have expressly decided that a tax on tangible property is not a tax upon the right of a company to exist, the right or franchise of the company to do and transact the business for which it was created. By implication you hold that, had the tax been laid on these franchises, it would have come within the rule announced in the United States Bank cases and other cases cited in my brief. By implication as strong and conclusive as positive affirmation, you have admitted that, if it (the tax) be a tax on the franchise—the power of the company to exist and transact business as a corporation—it is within the reason of the rule announced in McCulloch's case, and therefore invalid. We rely upon this implication.

One word in relation to an error into which, in my judgment, this Court has fallen in respect to the power of Congress in respect to the taxation of Federal agencies by the States. Chief Justice Chase, in the first railroad tax case, said: "In the absence of any legislation by Congress prohibiting the taxing of this road or permitting it to be taxed," etc. Here for the first time it is suggested by this Court that it is in the power of Congress to control this question of the taxation of agencies provided by the Government for carrying into execution its powers; that Congress has the power to permit the States to tax them or to prohibit the States from taxing them. I deny that Chief Justice Marshall ever conceded for a moment that the Federal Congress had any power on this subject; it was held to be a purely constitutional question, and that the Constitution of the United States interposed between its agents and the hostile action of the States the shield of its supremacy. I deny the power of Congress to yield and resign to the States the supremacy of the United States. If the States are debarred from taxing a given thing, it is by virtue of the Constitution of the United States, and not by virtue of any Act of Congress. If they are allowed to tax a given thing, it is because they are not forbidden by the Constitution of the United States, and not because they are not forbidden by Congress.

SACRAMENTO, February 23, 1889.

E. BLACK RYAN.

Called and sworn.

MR. CROSS: What is your relation to the Central and Southern Railroad Companies? Answer—I am tax agent for them.

Q. How long have you been their tax agent? A. Since 1872.

Q. As such tax agent, have you become familiar with their tax matters? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you access to their books? A. Yes, sir.

Q. State whether or not you have made a tabulated statement of the amount of taxes paid by the respective companies since 1879? A. I have.

Q. Please present it. A. [Witness produces paper.] I have it here.

Q. Please read the summaries of it to the committee; the summary for each year, of all the roads owned and controlled by the Central and Southern Pacific Railroad Companies, beginning with the year 1880.

MR. JOHNSON: I would suggest that it be introduced in evidence, with our privilege to answer it.

MR. CROSS: It is only eight items.

THE WITNESS: There is a recapitulation.

Q. Yes; not what is on this paper; the recapitulation showing the amount of taxes paid for each year? A. Yes, sir; it is a very long list.

Q. Read the Central Pacific list, and then we will file the whole? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In the year 1880, how much taxes were paid in this State by the Central Pacific Railroad Company? A. I have got the footings; I have got three columns.

Q. Read that? A. First in 1880—

Q. That is paid to the State, is it? A. On the assessment made by the State Board; the taxes paid on the assessment made by the State Board.

Q. Read it? A. In 1880, $153,077 60; in 1881, $163,338 21; in 1882, $163,951 06; in 1883, $166,119 10; in 1884, $169,685; in 1888, $218,312 76.

Q. Now, have you the amounts paid to the several counties on such property as they were taxed by the local Board? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Read that? A. In 1880, $58,912 31; also for 1880, $28,987 55. For 1881, $59,818 78; also, $28,892 27. For 1882, $58,622 51; also, $25,444 95. For 1883, $65,653 93; also, $26,596 46. For 1884, $57,740 21; also, $29,970 69. For 1885, $58,350 23; also, $28,601 95. For 1886, $48,942 74; also, $27,447 78. For 1887, $51,223 93; also, $27,835 27. For 1888, $45,882 86; also, $29,063 81. That makes a total of $1,788,474 96 for the Central Pacific Railroad Company.

Q. Paid in eight years? A. Yes, sir; paid in eight years.

Q. Have you upon this same paper, and in the same form, the tabulated statement of the amount of taxes paid on each of the other roads controlled by the Central and Southern Pacific Railroad Companies? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in that tabulated statement? A. Yes, sir.

Q. We desire to file that. What is the total aggregate of taxes paid in that eight years by roads owned or controlled by the Central and Southern Pacific Railroad Companies?

MR. DIBBLE: How will that go in the record if we find it that way?

THE WITNESS: I have not got it segregated. It won't take a long while for the committee to do it.

MR. CROSS: Let me look at that statement. A. I will state to the committee that in verification of this there are vouchers on file in the Secretary's office.

Q. What is the total amount of taxes paid by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company in eight years? A. The Southern Pacific Company paid in those eight years $1,143,302 17.

Q. What amount has been paid by the California Pacific Railroad Company? A. $150,519 03.

Q. By the San Pablo and Tulare Railroad? A. $50,248 30.

Q. By the Northern Railway? A. 143,926 27.

Q. Now, then, by the Southern Pacific Branch Railroad? A. That has only been for two years.

Q. That has been in existence for two years? A. Yes, sir; $17,958 85.

Q. The Stockton and Tulare Railroad? A. That is only one year.

Q. That is as long as they have controlled that property? A. Yes, sir; only a part of a year. $2,094 42.

Q. What have you next? A. The San Pablo and Tulare Extension. That is about a year old. $2,170 10.

Q. What is the next road? A. The Los Angeles and Independence. $18,152 43.

Q. How much did you say that was? A. $18,152 43.

Q. Now the Los Angeles and San Diego Railroad? A. $48,073 16.

Q. The Monterey Railroad? A. $24,793 19.

Q. The Berkeley Branch Railroad? A. $3,285 01.

Q. That is one year? A. No, sir; that is for several years; but it is a very short line.

Q. The Santa Rosa and Carquinez Railroad? A. $1,115 32.

Q. The Long Beach? A. $233 10.

Q. The others are small? A. Long Beach and San Pedro. $316 21. Shingle Springs and Placerville—that is less than a year—$1,045 50.

Q. What is the San José and Almaden? A. $1,106 60.

Q. These are the amounts paid by these companies since the adoption of the new Constitution? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have not added them? A. No, sir.

MR. DIBBLE: What is the sum total? A. I have not added them up. I have got the sum total here, but not in such a manner that I can show—that I can call it off. The total amount paid in one year, for instance the year 1880, I cannot state without adding the three columns together.

Q. Well, what is the sum total? A. $5,876,261 74.

Q. That is in eight years? A. That is in eight years. But to the South Pacific Coast Railroad Company, which has been owned and controlled by the Southern Pacific Company only two years, there was paid by their predecessors the sum of about $87,000.

THE CHAIRMAN: Does this include the State and county taxes? A. Yes, sir.

MR. DIBBLE: Does this include taxes upon real estate owned by the company as well as the roads properly? A. It includes everything owned by the companies.

Q. The real estate that is not connected with the road, bonded land from the United States? A. I will state that prior to 1880 there were a great many thousands of acres of land that were paid on; but that has been reduced each year until 1888, when there were several counties that have not an acre in them. During last year, and year before, and part of the previous year, the Southern Pacific Company came near selling out their entire public lands.

MR. SEAWELL: Does this include the Market Street Railroad? A. No, sir.

Q. Does it include the Hotel Del Monte? A. No, sir; the Hotel Del Monte belongs to the Pacific Improvement Company.

MR. DIBBLE: It does not include the street railroads in San Francisco? A. It includes the property of the steam railroads and not the street railroads.

MR. SALOMON: Does it include all the lands? A. Yes, sir; the subsidy lands, what is left of it, owned by the company—the Central Pacific and Southern Pacific Companies. That cuts a small figure, comparatively.

MR. CROSS: Now, Mr. Ryan, do you know anything about the mortgages on these properties of the Southern and Central Pacific Railroad Companies? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Tell the committee what the mortgages are, and what they have been since 1879. That is the time when the new method of taxation was adopted. A. I would state that the average amount of bonded indebtedness, say for ten years, on one thousand two hundred and fifty miles of the Central Pacific Railroad is $57,000,000.

MR. DIBBLE: How much? A. $57,000,000.

MR. CROSS: How much of that mileage is in this State?

MR. DIBBLE: Right here, what has been the average assessment on all the property of the companies? A. The Central Pacific first? The Central Pacific in 1883 was assessed for $18,000,000; then in 1884, $24,000,000.

MR. CROSS: Do those assessments include the assessments made by the local Boards or only the State Board? A. Only the assessments made by the State Board.

Q. Yes, sir. A. 1885, $22,000,000; 1886, $30,000,000; 1887, $18,000,000; 1888, $15,000,000.

Q. Now, taking the mileage as one thousand two hundred and fifty miles, how many miles of that, which you speak of as covered by the Government loan, how much of that mileage is in the State of California? A. Out of one thousand two hundred and fifty miles, say take six hundred and twenty miles as the average.

Q. What was it in 1880? A. Six hundred and two.

Q. What was it in 1888? A. Seven hundred and forty-seven.

Q. Yes, sir. The average, you say, would be six hundred and twenty? A. Yes, sir; that average would be too low for California. I have made an average of six hundred and twenty miles.

Q. Well, that would be a correct average? A. Yes, sir; on the basis of six hundred and twenty miles it would be an average.

Q. The increase has almost all been made in the last two years? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much mortgage would then be pro rated to the State of California? A. On the basis of six hundred and twenty miles, it would be $27,752,000.

Q. So that if railroad properties were subject to the same rule of deduction of mortgages and liens as other property, that amount should be deducted from the assessment, and the balance would then be assessed to the railroad company, would it? A. Yes, sir.

MR. CROSS: Now, I will turn this witness over to the committee in just one moment. There is a statement here which appears in Controller Dunn's report for 1888.

MR. DUNN: One moment.

MR. LEZINSKY: I desire to state to the committee that if statements are in order now, we will never get to this testimony.

MR. ANDERSON: I understand we are here to investigate certain charges that have been preferred against some parties or attorneys interested in the railroad tax cases. Now, we are here to investigate that. I don't think we ought to take testimony on anything else, only what bears on those particular charges. As far as I am concerned, I don't think we ought to investigate these charges; for even if we find them true, I don't know what we are going to do about it. If there is any officer of the State who has not done his duty his bondsmen are liable. We are here to investigate those charges, and I think that is what we ought to investigate to the exclusion of everything else. As far as the railroad tax bill that has been introduced, that has already left this committee. We have reported back on that bill. A majority of this committee reported that it do not pass; a minority reported that it do pass. I am free to state how I feel about it; I am opposed to the bill on constitutional grounds. I don't believe it is an advisable measure. I don't care whether the railroad company has paid every dollar of taxes to the State or not, or whether they owe the State or not; that has nothing to do with this bill. The bill is a general bill. It applies to all corporations as well as railroad companies. The question for us to decide is, is it constitutional, and if it is constitutional, is it advisable? We have already decided on that. It is now in the hands of the House. What do we want to go into the matter any further for? As far as the railroad taxes are concerned, whether they are or are not paid, that is a matter of record. We cannot go back of this record. We are here to investigate these charges that have been preferred, and I am willing to go on and investigate them. Even admitting that the charges are true, all we can do is to recommend that the Attorney-General commence suit against somebody, and I presume that the Attorney-General has power to do that without our recommendation. I don't believe this thing ought to last the entire session.

MR. DIBBLE: There seems to be some misunderstanding about the scope of this resolution. The resolution is as follows: "Whereas, grave questions are at issue; and whereas, John P. Dunn, Controller of the State, at the joint meeting of the Senate and Assembly Judiciary Committees, on Friday, February eighth, urged that the subject of railroad taxes be investigated by the said committee; therefore resolved, that the Judiciary Committee be authorized to investigate said question fully and to report to the Assembly the result of such investigation, with such recommendations as they shall think proper; and for the purpose of said investigation, the said committee be authorized to send for persons and papers," and so forth, and so forth.

MR. SALOMON: I was of the opinion the same as Mr. Anderson, but thinking over the matter, I remember that there was a clause in there authorizing the committee to investigate the whole subject. I would like to ask Mr. Ryan a question. I have heard it stated that for three years the railroad company has paid no taxes whatever; no taxes at all for the years 1883, 1884, 1885.

MR. DUNN: The years 1885, 1886, and 1887.

MR. SALOMON: I would like to ask Mr. Ryan how that is. If they have paid any taxes, and if not, why? A. They have paid taxes.

Q. Have they paid anything on the franchise, railroad bed, rails, and rolling stock; have they paid anything for the year 1885? A. No, sir; not on the State Board assessment.

Q. For 1886? A. No, sir.

Q. Anything for 1887? A. No, sir.

Q. How much did they pay in 1883? A. $166,119 10.

Q. Do you know why the taxes in 1885, 1886, and 1887 were not paid? A. As I understand it, on account of being in litigation, and to abide the result of that litigation.

Q. Do you know anything about that litigation? A. Yes, sir; incidentally.

Q. Well, the cases of 1885; the case that went up from the Circuit Court to the Supreme Court of the United States; what taxes did that include; the case in which it has been charged that the record— A. That was 1881 and 1882.

MR. HYDE: That was 1883.

MR. SALOMON: The tax for which the tender of $300,000 was made? A. Made by Colonel Creed Haymond in Court?

Q. Yes, sir. A. I can't state the exact year.

Q. What has become of that money? A. I presume it was refused, and it is in the treasury of the Central Pacific or the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. Do you know to whom the tender was made?

MR. LEZINSKY: Did you make the tender? A. I did not.

Q. Then you are not competent to testify to it. A. I was about to remark the same thing.

MR. DUNN: As I understood Colonel Haymond, he said the tender had been made to the Attorney-General, or to my attorney, Mr. Delmas.

MR. LEZINSKY: Who was the Attorney-General?

MR. DUNN: Mr. Marshall. I think the record will show the difference between the tender in 1883 and 1884. There was no order of Court that the money should be paid over. In the other cases there was an order of Court that the money should be paid into the State Treasury.

MR. SALOMON: Wasn't the tender made to your representative?

MR. DUNN: No, sir.

MR. HYDE: Mr. Haymond made the statement Saturday that he took the money into Court. I think that this whole proceeding is uncalled for at this time. If it is the intention to continue this case to the end of the session, let us go on as we are doing. If it is intended by the committee to do something else, I move we dismiss this line of proceeding and take up the proper business of this meeting.

MR. DIBBLE: Were you subpoenaed, Mr. Ryan? A. No, sir; I was told there was a subpoena out for me.

MR. HYDE: I move that the committee go right now to the charges made by Mr. Dunn, regarding the falsification of the records made in the Circuit Court; that will take us all of this night.

MR. JOHNSON: Do you know what per cent was paid on the fences, railroad bed, rails, and rolling stock for 1884? A. I think 60 per cent.

Q. 50; wasn't it? A. 60; I think.

Q. 60 for 1883? A. I think 60 for 1883.

Q. How much for 1884? A. I think 60.

MR. CROSS: My understanding of this was—there is an averment in regard to the taxes on the railroad property—the railroad company claims that the method of assessment does not do justice to them, and the officers of the State claim that it does. This is an investigation of that question.

MR. DIBBLE: I suppose Mr. Dunn has a tabulated statement?

MR. CROSS: His records don't show it at all. All those properties in the different counties so covered by these mortgages—the Controller's reports show that last year there was assessed to the mortgagee $145,000,000; and that the total value of real estate subject to mortgage was $184,000,000; showing that of all the property mortgaged more than three quarters of the taxes were assessed to the mortgagees, and less than one fourth to the owners of the legal title. I don't say it is a fault. All I claim is that if that is good law for other land owners, it is good law for the Central Pacific Railroad Company.

MR. DUNN: Didn't you vote for that article?

MR. CROSS: Yes, sir; and at the time I supposed I knew what I was doing; but I found out since that I made a mistake.

MR. DIBBLE: Is there any other question to ask this witness?

MR. LEZINSKY: In the year 1886, when the answer was filed in the cases involving the taxes of 1885, you swore to that answer, did you not? Did you swear to the answer? [Showing paper to the witness.] A. You have not read it, sir.

Q. It was sworn to before you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, you appeared, Mr. Ryan, when the assessment for that year was made?

MR. DIBBLE: You administered the oath to somebody? A. It was sworn to before me as a Notary Public by E. H. Miller, Jr.

MR. LEZINSKY: When the assessment for that year was made, did you appear before the State Board of Equalization? A. For every year from 1881 to 1888, inclusive, I have appeared before them every year.

Q. Did you furnish them with a statement for each of those years; did you furnish the State Board of Equalization with a statement of the assessments by the local Assessors; of the assessments made upon fences and steamboats belonging to these various corporations? A. No, sir.

Q. As to steamers, did you, or did you for any of those years? A. The steamers were furnished under their proper heads, under the forms adopted by the State Board of Equalization, showing other property assessable by the local Assessors.

Q. And in that was the value placed upon the steamers? A. Because it was required by the form.

MR. CROSS: Required by the statutes, too.

MR. LEZINSKY: Allow me to examine the witness. Do you know whether or not there was any discussion in the Board of Equalization when the assessments were made for the years 1883 and 1884, as to whether or not the value of the steamers should be included in the assessments made for those years upon the property of the railroad corporations? A. In all my experience as tax agent—

MR. CROSS: I object to that question, because the statute adopted March 9, 1883, specifically provided that that thing should be done. A. In all of my experience as tax agent I have never been admitted into the State Board of Equalization rooms during the time when they were making any assessments of the companies operated and controlled by the Central Pacific Company.

MR. DIBBLE: The question was whether there was any discussion? A. You asked me at the time the assessment was made.

MR. LEZINSKY: During the time the matter was under consideration?

MR. DUNN: Pardon me. During the time you appeared before the Board, representing these companies? A. I have no recollection now of any discussion relative to the steamers; if I heard it at the time, it has escaped my memory since.

MR. LEZINSKY: You are afflicted with that common failing so general with railroad officials.

MR. DIBBLE: Please omit those kind of remarks.

MR. DUNN: Now, do you remember the Supreme Court of this State, in June, 1883, that they determined that the steamers should be assessed by the local Assessors? A. I know that, sir.

Q. You know that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Secondly, when the State Board of Equalization required you to make a value placed upon the steamers, of course you complied with the request? A. Yes, sir. As I understand it, Mr. Dunn, the form under the statute requires it, from the fact that it is necessary for the Board to be acquainted with the amount of property assessed in this State by the local Assessors, so as to make the deduction from the total value of roadbed and rolling stock, and get your proper value of the plant.

MR. DUNN: Yes; that is entirely correct.

MR. DIBBLE: Does any member of the committee desire to ask any question of this witness?

MR. CROSS: I will ask permission of Mr. Ryan to file this tabulated statement, so that the members of the committee can have access to it.

MR. DIBBLE: Do you state that this is correct?

THE WITNESS: Yes; I state that it is correct.

MR. DIBBLE: The stenographer will file this as an exhibit handed in by this witness.

MR. DUNN: Now, in your tabulated statement of the total amount of taxes paid, that includes State, county, and municipal, road district, and school district, and all taxes paid by the company under all forms? A. It is all set forth in detail as to what the character of the taxes are.

Q. It covers everything? A. It covers everything; yes, sir.

MR. CROSS: Now, in the statement made by Mr. Dunn lately before the joint committee, there was some question there as to whether the railroad had, at the time stated, paid the taxes to San Mateo County. Mr. Dunn stated that he had received a dispatch that the taxes had been paid, but he didn't believe they were entered as paid of that date. In full explanation of that matter we present two documents, signed by Rhodes & Barstow, showing that the moneys were paid on the date the dispatch was signed, and here is the original receipt signed by the attorneys, that being the ordinary case where the attorneys receive the money, and then here is the receipt of Mr. Barstow at a subsequent date, showing that the money was paid to the attorney of the State before the dispatch was sent.

MR. DIBBLE: Do you offer this through Mr. Ryan? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you acquainted, of your own knowledge, with the contents of these documents? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you state them to be true? A. Yes, sir, to the best of my knowledge and belief. I did not handle the moneys, but here are the signatures of these parties. The San Mateo County taxes for 1881-82 were paid twice; and here are the vouchers from the Secretaries themselves showing that fact.

MR. HYDE: Are those original papers? A. Yes, sir.

MR. DIBBLE: Let them be filed and marked by the stenographer.

MR. CROSS: We will ask permission to withdraw them in the future.

MR. DIBBLE: Let them be left in charge of the stenographer until copies are made, and the vouchers will then be returned to you. A. Very well. Here is the agreement between the County of San Mateo, through its Board of Supervisors, with the Central Pacific Railroad, wherein they state they have received for the year 1881 amounts making a total of $14,846; in which they agree to pay one portion of it back.

MR. DIBBLE: That is introduced in evidence and will be returned to you when copies are made.

C. E. WILCOXON.

Called and sworn.

MR. LEZINSKY: You were a member of the State Board of Equalization, and Chairman of that Board since 1883, and have been ever since? Answer—Yes, sir.

Q. Now, during the proceedings of the Board of Equalization, while the matter of taxation of the various railroad corporations of this State was under consideration, was there any discussion in the Board as to the assessments to be made upon steamers belonging to these corporations; that is, when the taxes for the year 1883-84 were under consideration, and that was after the decision of the Supreme Court of this State wherein the Supreme Court had decided that the steamers should be assessed by the local Assessors, and were not subject to taxation by the State Board of Equalization? A. Yes, sir; it was discussed before the Board. We had no right to assess them.

Q. And in making the assessment did the Board designedly and willfully exclude from assessment the value of any steamers which belonged to these corporations? A. Yes, sir; we excluded everything of the kind, under the decision of the Supreme Court of this State the June before.

Q. Now, as to the valuation, as to the assessment concerning fences, during those years? A. There never was a foot of fences assessed. I asked Mr. Ryan, myself, in August, 1883. I said: "Mr. Ryan, are you assessed with any fences?" "No, sir," he says, "we are not." I says: "Why not?" He says: "We don't own them; we don't own the fences." I says: "Who does own the fences?" He says: "The ranchers own them." I said: "Who built those fences?" He says: "The railroad." I said: "The law compels you to build fences." He said: "Yes." I said: "For what purpose; isn't it for the purpose of protecting the road from stock?" Mr. Ryan said: "Certainly." I remember I asked him if the main reason was not for the purpose of preventing stock from trespassing upon the road and throwing the cars off the track; and he said he guessed I was right. It was publicly brought before the Board. Mr. Markley and the Secretary, and all the members, I believe, were present.

MR. JOHNSON: The decision was rendered in June, 1883—the sixth of June—in the case of the City of San Francisco against the State Board of Equalization. How long after that did you sit as an assessing Board? A. In August following.

Q. Then he knew what this decision was that steamers were not to be assessed? A. Yes, sir; Mr. Markley and Mr. Maslin were down there at the time.

Q. And you say for 1883 neither steamers nor fences were assessed? A. No, sir; not as much as a skiff, let alone a steamer.

MR. LEZINSKY: And in making the assessment at that time the findings in what is known as the Santa Clara case had been prepared and filed? A. I couldn't say what case it was, but it was a case tried in June.

Q. I am not referring to the case tried in the Circuit Court, what is known as the Santa Clara case. The Court had adopted findings in which it found that the value of the fences had been included in the valuation by the old Board.

MR. JOHNSON: Haven't you the findings?

MR. LEZINSKY: Yes, sir. I simply desire to call his attention to it, and ask whether or not there was any discussion in the Board, as to whether or not, on account of the fact having been found, the Board should put itself on record as not including fences in its assessment? A. Yes, sir; we had that matter before the Board, and I talked with Mr. Gilsey, I remember distinctly, at Shasta. I asked the Assessor if he didn't assess the fences, and he said that we had assessed them, and I told him no; that the law laid down what we should assess.

MR. JOHNSON: Have the steamers or fences been assessed by the State Board of Equalization since 1882? A. No, sir.

Q. They have not been? A. No, sir; they have not been.

MR. LEZINSKY: Not only they have not been assessed, but the Board willfully and designedly excluded them from the assessment? A. Under the law we took the ground that we had no right to assess them, and we left them out designedly.

Q. That is, it was not overlooked, but you put yourselves—the Board put itself—on record as not including any such matter in the assessments? A. Yes, sir.

MR. CROSS: When do you claim, Mr. Lezinsky, that the Court decided there was something wrong about the fences being in there? Do you claim that happened in 1883?

MR. LEZINSKY: Yes, sir; not the Supreme Court of the United States, but the Circuit Court of the United States, sitting in the Santa Clara case.

Q. Doesn't the record of your office show whether the fences were included in the assessment or not? A. It don't show anything in that except five items: the franchise, the roadway, the rails, and rolling stock, and roadbed. The whole records show there was nothing of the kind assessed.

Q. You couldn't tell from the record whether the fence was assessed or not? A. We didn't include it in the value of the property. If you look at the last assessment—they state in the last assessment: "steamers, walls, or fences not included in this assessment."

MR. DIBBLE: You say there was an answer of that kind made?

MR. SALOMON: What did the assessment include? A. I can't answer.

Q. Wasn't it under discussion when you were speaking about the assessment in the Board—what they considered the assessment to be for—what part of it—was that not under discussion? A. I do not know but what it was. I don't know that it was ever put to a vote.

MR. LEZINSKY: In examining you was trying to get at the date when this discussion was had. Were the fences mentioned in your discussion in placing your valuation upon the railroad property? A. We talked that matter over and decided we had no right to assess the fences, and we never bothered about it any more.

Q. Wasn't it stated in these meetings of the Board that these fences were considered a part of the roadbed? A. It was stated that they were no part of the roadbed. There was not a dollar of it in the value of the roadbed. I took the width of the road, and the number of miles, and we would soon settle how many acres there were. I valued the acres for the purpose for which they were intended, and then we would ascertain about what it cost to grade the road, the number of tons of iron or of steel it took per mile, and the number of kegs of nails or knuckles, and everything of that kind; put it all down, and then figured up the cost.

MR. JOHNSON: In making your assessment—the State Board of Equalization—you entered on your books what you assessed; you don't enter what you don't assess, do you? A. No, sir.

Q. You just simply enter what you do assess? A. Yes, sir; we enter nothing we don't assess.

MR. JOHNSON: Certainly.

MR. CROSS: You simply enter what pertains to the roadway as a roadway? A. Yes, sir.

MR. LEZINSKY: In making this assessment, when you arrived at these valuations—in making the computation, which was a computation to arrive at these assessments—was there ever any valuation placed upon any Federal franchise, or the valuation of any Federal franchise included in the amounts which were the amounts fixed upon as the valuation of these roads? A. I always so understood it, until 1888, that we assessed the franchise.

Q. I ask you as to the Federal franchise? A. I don't know. I don't recollect of that matter of being before the Board; some of the balance of the members may remember it.

MR. DIBBLE: Your statement is that they always did assess franchises up to this last year? A. Yes, sir; up to the last year.

MR. LEZINSKY: Did you assess one or more for each road? A. I don't think they assessed but one.

Q. Was that understood to be the State franchise or the Federal franchise? A. I could not answer that question.

Q. In the case of the Northern Railway Company, the San Pablo and Tulare Railway Company, and the California Pacific, they only had, they only could, under any construction, have a franchise from the State, because they had nothing to do with the United States whatever, so that in those cases the only franchises they held were State franchises. Isn't that a fact? And those were the only franchises that could be taken into consideration? A. As far as I am concerned I took the franchise on all the roads.

Q. If there was only one franchise considered, was their decision that by that franchise it was intended to assess the Federal franchise or the State franchise? A. I don't know anything about that.

MR. HALL: Several of the roads had no Federal franchise? A. I don't recollect of ever taking any more than one franchise in any one road.

MR. LEZINSKY: There was not more than one franchise taken for any one road? A. That is all.

MR. CROSS: Do you know anything about this law that where a corporation having a Federal franchise or State franchise is lawfully consolidated with another road not having a Federal franchise that the Federal franchise then becomes applicable to both the roads? A. No, sir; I don't know anything about that.

Q. Has the Board ever paid any attention to this decision that held that where, by the statute of the State, one road is exempt from taxation and that road is lawfully consolidated with another not exempt from taxation that then the law applies to both roads? A. I don't recollect.

Q. Isn't this the fact about the assessment of these roads from year to year, that you require each company to send in a statement stating the total receipts and the total expenditures, according to the statutory provisions? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then haven't you pursued about this course: you would fix the net profits of the road, then you would say that as a basis for taxes the company should be allowed such a profit, and you would divide the entire profit by the profit you were willing to allow on one dollar, and the result was the basis for assessment purposes? A. I don't think I figured it that way.

Q. Hasn't that been the usual method? A. I can't answer for the balance.

Q. Did you ever, as a Board, place a separate valuation upon any item of the property of railroad corporations? A. I did, in making my calculations?

Q. Did anything of the kind ever appear in the minutes of the Board? A. No, sir.

Q. So that as far as the Board's action is concerned, there was no assessment put on any particular kind of property; it was simply an assessment upon the value of the entire property? A. As I say, I figured the roadway.

Q. I asked what the Board did, as a Board? A. I cannot answer for Mr. Markley or Mr. Dunn, or any other member.

Q. Your proceedings were recorded? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And those records will show all the votes taken in the Board? A. Yes, sir; they will show how every man voted.

Q. It shows the official action of the Board? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, then, is there anything on your records, as the official acts of the Board, to show whether you did or did not assess steamboats or fences? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is there to show it? A. Last August it shows that; but that is the first time we ever put it down.

Q. That is the first time you ever found out the difficulty? A. About steamers? No, sir; we never assess steamers, because, as I said here at the time, I considered we were under that decision of the Supreme Court; I don't know whether it was the Supreme Court or the Circuit Court.

MR. LEZINSKY: The State of California? A. They decided we had no right to assess the boats.

MR. CROSS: Did the State Board issue any instructions to the local Boards about assessing? A. Yes, sir; I guess they did.

Q. Did the State Board ever instruct the local Boards to assess the ferryboats of the Central and Southern Pacific Company, or ever instruct the local Boards to assess the fences along the lines of any of those roads? A. I don't know we ever put it in black and white.

Q. Did you ever instruct them? A. Yes, sir.

Q. By what means? A. By talking to them.

Q. You have sent out from year to year a circular of instructions? A. Yes, sir; I think so.

Q. In this circular has there ever been any instruction as to the assessing of steamers, or ferryboats, or fences? A. Mr. Maslin can tell more about it than I can.

MR. DUNN: In sending our statement relative to assessment, did we ever tell the Assessors to assess goats and hogs, or anything of that kind? A. No, sir.

Q. Did we ever go into details in any of these matters? A. No, sir.

MR. CROSS: Haven't you sent out instructions about the way to assess live stock? A. No, sir; not by our Board.

Q. Well, there was by the previous Board? A. I don't know anything about that.

Q. Has the State Board anything to do with the assessing of goats and hogs? A. No, sir.

Q. With the matter of railroad taxes they did have something to do directly? A. About the railroad taxes?

Q. About the railroad taxes they had something to do? A. Do you mean the local Assessors?

Q. I am speaking about the subject of railroad taxes and the State Board. A. By the State Board?

Q. Yes, sir. A. Well, I just told you that we did.

L. C. MOREHOUSE.

Called and sworn.

MR. LEZINSKY: Mr. Morehouse, you have been since 1883—since January, 1883—a member of the State Board of Equalization, have you not, sir? Answer—Yes, sir.

Q. Now, I will ask you whether or not, in the matter of making up an assessment for the railroad corporations of this State, when that matter was under consideration, after the decision by the Supreme Court of this State in 1883, that steamboats belonging to these corporations were not matters or property subject to taxation by the State Board of Equalization, there was any discussion in the Board as to whether or not in making up the assessments for those companies the steamboats should be included in those assessments? A. No, sir; it didn't require any. There was some talk about it, but it did not require any discussion.

Q. Why was it there was no discussion required? A. Because it had been found that it was decided by the Courts that they were not assessable.

Q. Did the Board include in the assessment which it made the value of the steamers? A. No, sir.

Q. In making up their assessment? A. I say no in one way—any more than what value they would have had to the railroad. They were separately assessed. They might add to the value of the road.

Q. Did you include the value of the steamers any more than you would include the value of a block of ground in San Francisco? A. No, sir; not any more than the value it would lend to the other property.

MR. DIBBLE: Did you, in assessing the value of the line of road, the roadbed, and so forth, take into consideration the value of these steamers? A. I speak for myself, now, not for the Board; that I took into consideration its ability to earn money and its connections in all respects, of course.

Q. Did you add in your mind to the value of the road, the value of these steamers as applied to the road? A. No, sir; not specifically.

MR. HYDE: Did the Board? A. I think not, sir.

MR. LEZINSKY: What you have reference to is the value you would place upon the franchise? A. In arriving at its value all those things go to the correct value.

Q. That would come in particularly under the head of franchise? A. It might in one man's mind, and in another it might not be that way. Technically it might possibly be correct.

Q. Now, didn't the Board always require a statement of the value of the steamers by the local Assessors? A. From the companies?

Q. Yes, sir. A. From the local Assessors?

Q. Yes, sir. A. Yes, sir.

Q. Didn't the Board deduct then in its computation the value of these steamers? A. That would be a very hard question to answer. Mr. Dunn might figure in one way and I might figure in another. When we got done with the figuring we generally valued the road at what we considered it worth. I guess you can't mention any proposition that we didn't figure upon. I wish to state that you could not trim us down to any particular line of figuring to arrive at a value. I say that for myself and for the entire Board.

MR. DUNN: The Central Pacific Railroad Company was worth $20,000,000; we said the local Assessors have assessed a portion of this probably, which it is their duty to assess, for $4,000,000. Providing we were intending to assess the entire road for $20,000,000, we would say, "Here is $4,000,000 been assessed by the local Assessors," and then we would assess it for $16,000,000.

Q. Providing you had intended to assess it at $20,000,000 and you found there was $4,000,000 assessed by the local Assessors, what then would be your assessment? A. We always talked those things over. We talked over the matter of what the property was assessed for throughout the State. In a case of that kind, as you say, we would have assessed it for $16,000,000.

MR. JOHNSON: Did the Board know, since you have been a member of it, that it was illegal to assess fences? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you, as a Board, assess steamboats and fences? A. As steamboats and fences, no.

MR. DIBBLE: How did you arrive at the mileage, the assessment per mile: by taking the total valuation and deducting the assessment in the counties and then deducting the total valuation from the number of miles? A. No, sir; it would not be any use for one man to value a horse because he weighed twelve hundred pounds. I might sit down with a pencil and figure in that way, and Mr. Dunn might figure in another way. We took all the evidence we could get hold of, and from all the information we could get together, knowing what they were assessed by the local Assessors, and what the income was from the road, and what the prospects were in the future, we placed a value upon the road as a whole, but we assessed it in accordance with the language of the Constitution. We assessed the franchise, the road, the roadbed, the rails, and the rolling stock.

Q. How did you segregate those items? A. We didn't segregate them, under instructions. We wanted to do it, but we were instructed by the Attorney-General and associate counsel not to do it. If there was any fence included in the franchise it was assessed. If there was any fence in the roadway it was assessed. If that language includes fences it was assessed. But we didn't intend to assess fences as fences, or steamers as steamers. We followed the language of the Constitution in assessing the property strictly, and assessed those five things distinctly.

MR. LEZINSKY: In making your computation of the—of a mile of road, did you include the value of the fences as a part of that mile of road? A. No, sir.

Q. Added to the other? A. No, sir.

MR. DIBBLE: Did you include the fences in your assessment of the total value of the road? A. No, sir; not more than—if the road was run through a good country, with good land on each side, and a good five-board fence, the Board, of course, took it into consideration as being worth more.

Q. If the night before the assessment the steamers had been blown up, would that have made any difference in the value of the road? A. I think it would have had some effect, perhaps, on the earning capacity of the road; it might affect the value of the road.

MR. SALOMON: Supposing the road were not fenced at all, would it be considered of less value? A. Unless it was carried to an extent that it greatly decreased the value of the road. I think we should and did intend to use all the judgment we had in the matter; taking the whole property and assessing it for what it was worth.

MR. LEZINSKY: Now you have made the statement, and it is true, is it not, that when you made this assessment you had before you the assessments made by the local Assessors? A. In most cases, yes, sir. For that year we did; for the year previous, and I guess generally, we had them for every year.

Q. And your design was, and your act was, in making up these assessments to exclude from the assessment you made, or from any computation you should make, and to deduct such an amount from the total value as would equal the amount of property assessed by the local Assessors? A. I don't know that I can say yes to that question. You might figure it out that way. We considered their property was worth so much. We knew how much their land was assessed for; we knew what the steamers were assessed for, and the roundhouses, and so forth. We knew that went to make a grand total for the railroad, and while we didn't sit down and deliberately deduct that in all cases, it did cut a figure in the value of the road.

Q. Did you take into consideration the value of the steamers any more than you did the value of the roundhouses or the value of other property of that character? A. I should not judge so.

MR. CROSS: Under the law you required a statement every year of the gross earnings of the road in this State? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And also of the cost of operating the same? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now was that one element in enabling you to determine the value of the property? A. Sometimes I thought yes, and other times I thought no. It was a very difficult thing to get at. We figured it in all sorts of ways. We have sat up nights and figured it, and we have figured over Sundays and every other time.

Q. You tried to take a very broad view of the subject? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In assessing any property which is productive its productiveness is one of the determining elements of its value? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Your Board considered that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did the statement of the amounts earned by the respective companies include the amounts received from carrying passengers on their ferryboats? A. I believe that there was no separate return made for ferry service. I believe it was gross.

Q. Tickets are bought in San Francisco to go to New York? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, then, just as far as steamboat earnings entered into the profits of that road, in just so far they had their proportionate share of the effect in determining the value of the property? A. Yes, sir; not as steamers; we didn't specifically assess those steamers.

Q. Had the Board any knowledge as to the proportion of profit which the whole road made out of the ferryboats? A. Yes, sir; they often talked of it. I don't think you can mention any phase of that subject which was not talked over and discussed.

Q. Do you remember about what the annual profits of the system of road was? A. No, sir; I don't know.

Q. Have you any idea of what proportion— A. No, sir; I was ready to forget it at the end of the talk. We stuck to it very closely for about sixty days.

Q. Have you any idea of what proportion of the profits of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company were derived from its ferryboats? A. Well, I have a personal knowledge of some of these matters, living right there.

Q. And you take these matters into consideration as a member of the Board? A. Yes, sir, necessarily; I couldn't help it.

Q. What was your idea as to the proportion or amount of profits derived from the ferryboats? A. I couldn't tell you anything about that. I know I believed it to be a very important factor.

Q. Don't you know that it has amounted to from one quarter to one eighth of the entire profits of the system? A. I do not.

Q. In so far as the receipts from the ferries or profits from the ferries go to make up the profits of the road, in so far it becomes an element in determining their value as far as the question of property enters into the determination of value? A. The same as its connection with the Union Pacific, sir; anything that added to the value of the property—of course if you cut it off at the two ends—if you cut it off at Oakland, it would have had an effect, in my mind.

Q. So that these steamers did become an element in determining the value of the road as a whole? A. Necessarily; and they could not be excluded. But specifically, as steamers, we knew we did not assess them.

MR. LEZINSKY: I think that you don't express yourself, Mr. Morehouse, as you want to. Isn't it this— A. I am willing enough.

Q. Isn't it this: that you didn't include the value, or take into consideration the value of the fences, but you did take into consideration the increased advantage to the road? A. I think that is it.

Q. Having a ferry system at the other end of it by which it could get to San Francisco? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Whether those steamers were worth $1 or whether they were worth $100,000, made no difference? A. It was their ability to earn money.

Q. It made no difference as long as they were able to transfer passengers? A. No, sir.

Q. And you didn't take into consideration at all the value of the steamers, but simply that at the other end of the road there was a ferry system? A. Yes, sir.

MR. CROSS: Would the State Board of Equalization have assessed this property at the same price if it had been entirely without fences, the entire length? A. I think the fence matter cut a very small figure.

Q. About as small as the fences? A. Yes, sir; because I knew as a matter of fact that there are miles and miles that are not fenced at all; a large proportion of it.

MR. CROSS: Mr. Maslin is very familiar with this subject, and if he desires to ask any questions, I wish he would.

MR. DIBBLE: There is no objection to his asking any question he desires.

THE WITNESS: Mr. Maslin suggests to me a matter that we spoke about. The question was that if the steamers blew up would that make any difference in the assessment. It would not make any difference in the assessment for that year; but it would make a difference in the assessment for the next year. My answer should have been to that effect.

MR. HYDE: I want to ask you if you didn't make this correction of your testimony after talking to some outside person? A. Mr. Maslin, the Secretary of our Board, suggested it to me. I think he is right.

MR. SALOMON: You mean to say if there were no steamers running there it would reduce the value of the road? A. Yes, sir; because they had had the use of them.

Q. Each steamer cuts some figure in determining the value of the road? A. Yes, sir; the same as any other connection of the road.

CHARLES GILDEA.

Called and sworn.

MR. LEZINSKY: From January, 1883, you have been a member of the State Board of Equalization, have you not? Answer—Up to what time?

Q. Up to 1887? A. Yes, sir.

Q. From January 1, 1883, to January 1, 1887? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Or from January, 1883, to January, 1887? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Whatever the exact date might have been? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now I will ask you, referring to the Board of which you were a member, while the matter of the assessment of the railroad corporations of this State for taxes for the years 1883, 1884, 1885, and 1886 were under consideration, but particularly the years 1883 and 1885, was there any discussion in the Board about deducting from the value of the assessment, or as to including in the value of the assessment, the steamers owned by these incorporations? A. As to including—

Q. Whether it should be included in your assessment or whether it should be deducted from the total value of your assessment? A. There was no question about including it.

Q. Wasn't there a question about deducting it; as to the fences and steamboats? A. As to the fences, I don't think so. There was a question about deducting—if I understand your question correctly there was no conception in the mind of any member of the Board that fences or steamboats could be assessed by the Board, and I think every member of the Board was clear upon that subject.

Q. And it was the design of the Board, so far as you knew, in making up the assessment to not take into consideration the value of any steamboats or any fences which these railroad corporations owned? Is that true? A. The only way in which we took into consideration the value of steamboats was in ascertaining how much the Assessor of the county in which those steamboats were, assessed the steamboats at; how much he assessed the roundhouses at; how much he assessed the local property, which each local Assessor had a right to assess. And we gathered that as far as it was possible for us to do, and deducted it from the total value of the road, as we deemed it; because they had been assessed already by the local Assessors and could not be again assessed by us.

MR. CROSS: Mr. Gildea, did the earnings of the road have anything to do with the value that you assessed upon the property? A. Undoubtedly, sir.

Q. That would be a proper element for an Assessor always to consider? A. Yes, sir; I think so. That is providing it is earning.

Q. Providing it is in an earning condition? A. Yes, sir; that is one of the necessary elements.

Q. Land which is being cultivated, you would take into consideration its earning capacity or productive capacity in assessing its value? A. It is not all the elements; it is one of the elements.

Q. I ask you whether or not you took that into consideration? A. Undoubtedly, sir.

Q. Did the earnings which were taken into consideration by the Board, as one of the elements of value, include the earnings of the ferryboats? A. I assume so, sir. I assumed, as I heard you reading the statements. It seems that that statement given by the railroad, under oath—I assumed that that statement was a correct statement of the earnings of the road, made to the Board each year; and of course that included what the steamboats earned, but I don't see how it was possible to segregate those earnings from the earnings of the road.

Q. No: because a ticket is sold from a point including the ferry and rail?
 A. Yes, sir; including both services. I don't think the company itself could segregate it.

Q. So that as far as the question of earnings entered into the question of value, whatever the steamboats earned were taken into consideration?

A. Yes, sir; the total earnings were taken into consideration.

Q. Had the Board any information, or had you any information, as to whether the ferries were a profitable part of the carrying trade of the railroad? A. I have just answered that we had no information as to—

Q. As to the exact amount? A. The amount the ferries earned—that is, the ferries themselves. I question if the company can determine that itself. They could determine the cost of the ferries and the service to Oakland or New York, but it would be an estimate. We had no knowledge of it.

Q. As a member of the Board you knew, I suppose, that there are large numbers of passengers carried over the ferries, a much larger number carried over the ferries and over the country adjacent than over the rest of the system? A. As an individual I have an idea of that kind.

Q. And your individual knowledge would be available to you as a member of the Board? A. Yes, sir.

Q. If you didn't use that good judgment and knowledge which you had as an individual you would not be doing yourself justice? A. No, sir.

MR. STORKE: I did not understand what the witness meant in reference to the earnings. Did you or did you not assess the railroad for what you considered its actual cash value? A. Assessors always assume to do that.

Q. In determining that actual cash value of this railroad did you include the earnings of the ferryboats? A. I have just stated—

Q. [Interrupting]: That as an element in arriving at your conclusion, did you include the earnings of the ferryboats? A. Yes, sir; undoubtedly, as I told you. I made that statement positively; and that was deducted from the total earnings, so that the Board did not assess, or could not assess, or had no idea of assessing them—and so far as the fences are concerned, I am very sure of that.

Q. In other words the Board did deduct from the assessment the supposed earnings of the steamboats? A. They got each year, as near as they possibly could, from the local Assessors, the total assessment placed upon the railroad property, which went to constitute the earnings of the road; whether it was steamboat earnings, roundhouses, or anything else, that the local Assessors had the right to assess. As I heard Mr. Morehouse testify, some members of the Board had one way of making out their rate of value, and other members had another way. But I think the total earnings of the road was largely an element that entered into the valuation of the road.

MR. JOHNSON: In assessing the road—what you call the assessing of the road—did you not include five things, namely, the franchise, the roadbed, the roadway, the rails, and the rolling stock? A. Yes, sir; as I understand it, there is nothing assessed excepting what is on the assessment roll; and the idea of getting parol testimony, or outside testimony, as to what is assessed, either by Courts or by this committee is, as I understand it, simply a waste of time.

Q. That is the suggestion I made. A. Yes, sir; and there is nothing else that can be assessed or a tax collected upon it without—I beg your pardon; I did not intend to obtrude my own views on the committee.

MR. CROSS: Now, Mr. Lezinsky has put this question: "Didn't you every year deduct from the assessment by the State Board what the local Boards had assessed?" Then he called attention to the assessment in 1883. In 1882 had the local Boards assessed the ferryboats? A. I am under the impression that there was a question of jurisdiction which was determined in 1883.

Q. In 1882? A. I desire to say another thing. Of course I don't know what the members of the Board determined in 1882, I was not then a member.

Q. Mr. Lezinsky has asked you this question: "Didn't you each year deduct from the assessment of the State Board everything that had been assessed by the County Boards, while you were a member, in 1883?" A. Yes, sir.

Q. In 1883 did you have before you returns showing that in 1882 steamboats had been assessed by the County Assessors, or Boards? Isn't it the fact that up to that time they had always been assessed by the State Board? Up to the time of the decision of the Supreme Court hadn't they been assessed by the State Board? [To Mr. Maslin]: Isn't that so, Mr. Maslin?

THE WITNESS: Mr. Maslin knows that matter much better than I do; so far as 1882 and 1883 are concerned.

Q. Everything that had been assessed by the local Boards in 1882, you didn't deduct for as assessed in 1883? A. The assessment of this State is made on the first Monday of March, at twelve o'clock, noon. The Assessors of the counties get through with the assessment roll on the first Monday in August—on the first Monday in July.

MR. STORKE: The County Supervisors begin to sit on the first Monday in July? A. I was endeavoring to answer Mr. Cross' question. Then the Board of Equalization of the county takes the assessment roll and goes through it until the fourth Monday in July. Now, then, all that is done before the State Board of Equalization sits as a Board to assess the railroad. And the assessment of the year, of that year, we calculate as far as we possibly can upon the property from the various information we have at hand.

Q. Can you say, or have you any recollection, that in your sitting of 1883, you had any reports or information that any local Board had assessed any ferryboats of the Central Pacific or Southern Pacific Companies? A. I could not, of my own recollection, now say. I have not been on the Board for two years. I have not consulted the records for two years, and I could not, of my personal knowledge, say.

JOHN P. DUNN.

MR. LEZINSKY: From January, 1883, up to the present time, you have been a member of the State Board of Equalization? Answer—Yes, sir; an ex officio member.

Q. Now I will ask you whether or not, when the matter of the assessment of the railroad corporations of this State was a matter of consideration before that Board for taxes for the year 1883-84, there was any discussion in the Board, or any action by the Board, as to the method of computation, and as to whether or not the value of the steamers owned by these companies should be included or deducted in the amount arrived at as the basis of assessment? A. Well, in answer to the question, I will say that when the Board met in August, 1883, they had before them the decision of the Supreme Court of this State that steamers were assessable by the local Assessors and not by the State Board of Equalization, and of course we did not include the steamers in our assessment. As to the ences I remember distinctly, because I made the suggestion myself. A portion of the time during the time of the trial of the Santa Clara case I was in the Circuit Court at San Francisco, and I remember that Mr. Maslin, the Clerk of the Board, and Mr. Markley, discussed the matter with myself—at least I heard them—the findings in that case—some certain testimony that was given by two members of the Board, the Board in existence in 1881-82, that fences were assessed. And I said: "Don't let us not alone not assess fences, but let us purposely talk about it and determine it."

Q. And that was done? A. I know that I talked about it; I made that suggestion myself. My idea for it was this, that the records of the State Board of Equalization at no time showed that fences were assessed, and it was a surprise to us to find that it was possible to get testimony from anybody who had been a member of the Board to show that they had included in the right of way the fences. Such testimony was given by two of the old members, that they had included in the valuation of the roadway $200 for fences.

Q. At the time of making these assessments you had before you the assessments made by the local Assessors for every year of property owned by the railroad company, which was for roundhouses and other property, depots, and so forth. Did or did not those assessments, or reports of assessments, by the local Assessors, include the assessment upon the steamers owned by these corporations? A. My recollection is that we received these statements of the valuation of this property by the local Assessors, in a majority of cases, from the railroad companies themselves, or from their tax agent, Mr. Ryan, or from somebody that would be requested to send it; that is my recollection.

Q. And you deducted from what you considered the total value of the road, or the total value of all their property, the amount that had been assessed to them by the local Assessors in making their assessment, did you not? A. Yes, sir. I asked the question of Mr. Morehouse, if we determined to place a valuation of $20,000,000 on the railroad property—I think their property is worth that—and I then said that if the local Assessors had assessed them for $4,000,000 I would vote to assess them for $16,000,000, because $4,000,000 had already been assessed.

Q. It was discussed and understood that if you arrived at $20,000,000 as being the value of the road, that you didn't take into consideration as an element of that the value of the fences along the line of the road? A. As I say to you, I made the suggestion myself, and not alone was it talked about once, but it was talked about twenty times—about the findings in the Santa Clara case, showing that the fences were assessed. I made the suggestion because that testimony was in my mind, and I wanted to have it fixed that not alone did we not assess them, but that we had talked about it.

Q. And determined to exclude them in any valuation that you arrived at whatever? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Cross: Were you a member of the State Board of Equalization? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you present whenever they met? A. I was there in 1883, 1884, 1885, 1886, and 1887. I think I was absent at the time the valuation was placed on the roads last year, but I think I was here when the matter came up for a second consideration.

Q. Was there any resolution or any official action ever taken by the Board by which it appeared that the fences were assessed? A. Not that I am aware of. That the fences were assessed—

Q. Yes, sir? A. Not that I am aware of.

Q. Was there any official action ever taken by the Board by which it appeared that the steamboats were assessed? A. Not any more than we would determine that we didn't assess the building on Fourth and Townsend Streets.

Q. Was it determined any more than that that you did not assess them? A. No, sir; no more than that.

Q. Did the Board ever, in its minutes, enter separately the values of any property of the company, or did it aggregate them all in one aggregation? A. It aggregated them since 1883, since I have been a member, in one sum.

Q. By the statute? A. By the Constitution.

Q. That is the way the assessing would appear by the records? A. Yes, sir; that is the way we did assess them.

Q. Now, then, as to whether they did or did not assess the fences or steamers, your judgment turns upon the point that you talked the matter over with individual members, that it ought not to be done, and they concurred in your views as far as you were able to ascertain them? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did the earnings of these various roads enter into the determination—did it in any degree enter into the determination—of what they should be assessed at? A. It did sometimes, in my mind, and sometimes there were other elements.

Q. Did that enter into it as one of the elements? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is, in assessing the different roads in the State, if you found one road was not paying expenses you would not assess that as high as another road of the same length that was paying a handsome dividend? A. No, sir.

Q. Did the earnings of the road, or the profits of the road which you so took into consideration, include the earnings and profits of the ferryboats? A. It included the earnings of the ferryboats, and the roundhouses, and all the property that went in to make up this valuation.

Q. Does a roundhouse earn anything? A. No; we didn't find in the findings that the roundhouses were assessed. They go to the business of the road; they are a part of the property.

Q. Does a ferryboat earn anything? A. It is a part of the property.

Q. Does it earn anything? A. It is a part of the property. It wouldn't earn anything if it stopped at the Oakland Mole—

Q. [Interrupting]: And the earnings of the road would have been very much diminished if there had been no ferryboat there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. All those things entered into the question of earnings and profits? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the earnings and profits entered into the determination of the assessment valuation? A. They did, to some extent.

Q. They did enter into it? A. Yes, sir; to some extent.

MR. JOHNSON: I will ask you whether or not you were ever subpoenaed before the Circuit Court of the United States, in any of these pending tax cases? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know of any member of the Board of Equalization that was ever before the Circuit Court? A. Since 1883?

Q. Yes, sir? A. No, sir.

MR. DIBBLE: Have any of the cases been tried since 1883? A. Yes, sir.

Q. These were all submitted on testimony taken prior to that time? A. Yes, sir.

MR. JOHNSON: How then did they arrive at these findings in these cases? A. So far as I know they arrived at the findings by offering in evidence the testimony taken in the Santa Clara case, that showed that the fences were assessed.

Q. How was that done? A. By stipulation, as I understand it.

Q. Who made these stipulations? A. I believe they were made by Mr. Marshall and by Mr. Harvey Brown, in most instances.

E. W. MASLIN.

Called and sworn.

MR. CROSS: I would like to state that the railroad tax cases were decided in the Circuit Court in September, 1882.

MR. DIBBLE: You are the Secretary of the State Board of Equalization? Answer—Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been Secretary of the Board? A. Since its inception.

MR. CROSS: Do I understand you to claim, General Johnson, that the Circuit Court passed upon the question of the fact of the fences being in the assessment?

MR. JOHNSON: Yes, sir; these findings, which include fences and steamers, in 1883, 1884, and 1885.

MR. CROSS: The fence question had not been decided at that time?

MR. JOHNSON: No, sir; the fence question was not decided until 1886.

MR. CROSS: And yet these gentlemen seem to be testifying that they did not assess fences, and the decision did not come until 1886.

MR. LEZINSKY: No, sir; that is not so.

Q. When the matter of assessment for 1883, 1884, and 1885, and so forth, was under consideration by the Board, was there any discussion as to whether or not the value of the steamers or fences should be considered; what was done about that matter? A. If you will permit me, I would like to make a statement a little anterior to that, so as to bring it up to what this present Board acted upon. They are a little confused about what are called the ferries. At some meeting of the Board of Equalization Mr. Black Ryan stated that the ferries which carried the passengers from the foot of Market Street across was a private corporation. That the question was as to the earnings of the Central Pacific Railroad, and it was claimed that those earnings were ferry earnings, and not therefore a part of the railroad earnings. That was an important statement. The railroad company made a report to the State Board of Equalization in 1882, in which it described the Central Pacific Railroad Company as running to the foot of the ferry slip with the steamers Thoroughfare and Transit, which are freight boats alone, thence across the waters of the Bay of San Francisco with the steamers Transit and Thoroughfare to the end of the mole at Oakland wharf. Those are the steamers which entered into the discussions about which steamers were assessed. The State Board of Equalization, in assessing those steamers in 1882, did not consider the passenger ferry steamers, and they have never entered into the computation of the State Board of Equalization from that time to this. And that is the description on the record. Now, I was the author of the Act of 1883, and the word "steamers" was put in that because the railroad company, through Mr. Ryan, or through their returns, assented to the assessment of the Transit and Thoroughfare. Then we heard—Mr. Markley and myself heard the discussion in the Circuit Court in reference to the fences. In 1883, the Supreme Court of this State having decided that steamers were not a part of our duty to assess, the Board, as Mr. Dunn correctly said, determined that the fences or the steamers neither should enter into the computation of the value of the road. I have no distinct recollection that we had a discussion as to it after that, because it was assumed, until the present Board came in, that it was so understood. And since that time it has been assumed by myself and by the Board that steamers were not to be assessed, or fences. This year we made a record of it, previous years we never did.

MR. LEZINSKY: This year they paid their taxes? A. No.

Q. Why did you make the record of it this year when you didn't make it in other years? A. On account of some new light thrown by litigation as to the unity of different portions of the road. In 1881 we assessed the rolling stock separately; then under the advise of Mr. Marshall and his associates we assessed it as a unit. The question came up whether the franchise might be illegal, and as we didn't want to incorporate the franchise in the unit assessment—

MR. DUNN [Interrupting]: Wasn't the reason, so far as you remember, that we put in the record of this year that we did not assess fences and steamers, largely due to the fact that in the face of what we had done in the previous years, the stipulation put in the record made up in the Circuit Court showed that we did those things? A. As stated by you, that you wanted it done in order to meet just such a future question.

MR. LEZINSKY: The proceedings for the year 1883-84, however, in arriving at the valuation, were exactly the same as what the proceedings were by which the assessment was arrived at last year; is that not so? A. Well, that was a different Board.

Q. I know; but I mean the method pursued was about the same? A. Yes, sir; the method is something like this, if you will allow me to tell it to you, I can clear up some little difficulties about the returns of the Assessors of their property. The Board very kindly permitted me to make up such orders and such forms as we desired from the railroad. I took Poor's Manual and I found out, comparing the net earnings of the railroad, what we think are the net earnings of each road. About three or four years ago, thinking that it would be of use to the Board, I put on the back records which the Assessors made to the Board a statement of the valuation of the property of all the railroads which they assessed. Now, when the Board meets, those questions and those facts are presented to them. They are open to their inspection, and each member of the Board takes those facts and looks them over, analyzes them, digests them in his mind, and when we meet, one member of the Board says: "I move that the Central Pacific Railroad Company be assessed at a certain sum;" another member says: "I amend that by moving that it be assessed at another sum." And so motions are put until we have agreed, by a majority of the vote, that the assessment shall be a certain sum.

MR. DIBBLE: A round sum? A. Yes, sir; a round sum.

Q. For the entire mileage? A. Yes, sir; for the franchise, roadbed, roadway, and rolling stock and rails. Now then, as to the apportionment, that is a clearly clerical matter, which I do. The law says that a particular sum shall be apportioned to each county in the same proportion that the miles in the county bears to the total mileage. So it is purely clerical; therefore, if Mr. Ryan says that San Francisco has ten miles we accept that and give her ten six hundred and twentieths of the total assessment. As a matter of fact San Francisco might have only two miles, but as we have no means of engineering it, we give her ten miles.

MR. CROSS: The map of the roadway filed in different counties, as required by law, would show the mileage? A. No, sir; because they are continually extending their road.

Q. They have to file a map whenever they extend it in each county? A. I suppose so: but now can I tell by a map whether there was two miles or ten. There was quite a contest between Fresno and Tulare, when there was only about two or three hundred yards difference: and yet we had to correct it.

Q. And yet before they build their road they have to file the map? A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that if Mr. Ryan made any misstatements the record will show them? A. Yes, sir: he makes them under oath. It is one of those things we assume they are telling the truth about. There is nothing to be gained or lost in stating the mileage.

MR. DIBBLE: They have been assessed in a sum total? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it does not make any difference whether they are assessed one way or the other? A. No, sir.

MR. JOHNSON: Have you ever been subpoenaed as a witness before the United States Circuit Court since 1883 in the railroad tax cases? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In what year? A. My impression is that I was subpoenaed in the summer of 1883.

Q. Were you a witness there? A. I was.

Q. Did you testify? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you testify in any other year? A. No, sir.

Q. Were you subpoenaed in any other year? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What year? A. My impression is that it was the same year; no, it must have been in 1882. I was subpoenaed to go to Tulare County before Judge Cross.

Q. I am asking you since the commencement of 1883? A. No, sir: that was the only time.

Q. Only once? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you give in your testimony in the case? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you furnish a statement at any time as to whether the fences were assessed or whether the steamers were assessed? A. Not at that time.

MR. DIBBLE: At anytime subsequent to that time? A. Yes, sir.

MR. JOHNSON: What year was that? A. My recollection is a little indistinct. I was informed by some one, whom I can't say, that the bill of exceptions, or cases to be taken to the Supreme Court, were to be taken up on an affidavit of mine as to the assessment on the steamers and fences. I heard that, and somebody asked me if I had made the statement. On one occasion Mr. Fred. Marshall presented an affidavit to me, which was too precise to suit me, in respect to the fences. I was sure about the steamers but not about the fences.

Q. Sure, how? A. I was sure that the Board had not assessed steamers, but the assessment about fences was not so distinct in my mind as to enable me to swear on this particular occasion that they had not assessed the fences. I wanted to be a little more certain as to the statement. I took his affidavit and his statement and prepared one and gave it to him.

Q. What was the purport of that? A. The purport of it was that the Board had not assessed steamers.

Q. That was for the taxes of what year? A. That I cannot say. It was intended to affect the minds of the attorneys on both sides in making up their bills of exceptions before the Supreme Court.

Q. You were down in San Francisco in 1882? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Of course the taxes of 1882 were not sued for until 1883? A. No, sir.

Q. You say you were down there in 1883: then you must have been there for the taxes of 1882? A. Yes, sir; it was when Mr. Marshall and Mr. Delmas and Rhodes & Barstow were the attorneys before Judge Field.

Q. This written statement that you have made must have been made in 1884 for the taxes of 1883? A. It must have been a year or two subsequent to that.

Q. If the record was here to refresh your memory——

MR. DIBBLE [Interrupting]: Have you got that statement of Mr. Maslin's?

MR. CROSS: It is after this portion of the findings which is covered by red ink.

THE WITNESS: I don't understand what you mean.

Q. It seems that the bill of exceptions as originally presented, contained quite an extensive finding about the fences. A question arose as to whether that finding was correct or not. Now the attorneys said that Mr. Maslin, the Secretary of the Board, had attended to these matters, and had watched them very closely, and he would expect Mr. Maslin to state in regard to that and present it to Judge Sawyer. Then this document of which you speak was drawn by agreement of the attorneys of the respective parties, and presented to Judge Sawyer, and on that he modified the findings? A. I don't know what was done with it.

Q. Did you understand at the time that was the purpose? A. No, sir; I didn't understand that he was going to make the finding on my affidavit. Really, I was not very clear what he was going to do. I supposed that the Central Pacific Railroad attorneys believed that we had assessed steamers, and Mr. Haymond said that if Mr. Maslin would testify or make an affidavit that the steamers were not assessed he would be governed by that. That was my understanding.

Q. And that affidavit was furnished with the purpose of determining, or to be used for the purpose of determining what should go into that finding? A. I don't know, sir.

Q. It was about that time that we settled those findings? A. Well, you see I don't charge my mind as to what Mr. Dunn does. I simply remember the occurrence, that they presented the affidavit to me, and I stated that it was not clear enough, and that I would write one myself.

Q. You don't recall now, if you ever knew, what the affidavit was to be used for? A. It was to be used for that purpose.

MR. DIBBLE: Why not call the attorneys? Mr. Brown was on one side and Mr. Marshall on the other.

MR. CROSS: I am informed that this matter was determined between Mr. Brown and Mr. Marshall.

MR. DUNN: The affidavit is not to be found in the papers.

MR. CROSS: It is stated by Mr. Baggett that it was rather in the form of a letter, and not in that of an affidavit. Mr. Baggett stated that it was a letter from Mr. Maslin.

MR. JOHNSON: I wish to refresh his memory, and ask him if he, in the tax of 1883—— A. [Interrupting] I said it was between a year and a half or two years after I testified, after 1883.

Q. After you testified in 1882—you testified in 1882 in the first place? A. In the Circuit Court I testified in 1883.

Q. See if that statement was not made about that time? [Showing paper.] A. I think it was subsequent to that; I can't say when it was exactly.

Q. Was it in pursuance of that stipulation? A. I don't know, sir; I never saw that stipulation.

MR. DIBBLE: The findings were in 1884; it must have been about that time? A. I can't state why it was done; I know they wanted me to make it, and I made it.

D. M. DELMAS.

Called and sworn.

MR. LEZINSKY: You, as the attorney for the Controller and attorney for the State, instituted or commenced the actions which are known as the tax cases, in the years 1883-4, did you not? Answer—I instituted a great many suits; I don't know whether those were included or not; the records will show.

Q. Here is the case of the Central Pacific Railroad Company? A. I don't know whether I commenced that or not.

Q. The complaint filed by W. T. Baggett and James A. Waymire, as the attorneys for the plaintiff; and thereafter there was a substitution of attorneys made.

MR. CROSS: You don't claim that Mr. Delmas commenced that?

MR. LEZINSKY: Mr. Delmas didn't commence the suit.

MR. HYDE: The record is the best evidence of that.

MR. LEZINSKY: Now, you were afterward substituted—after the institution of the cases—you were substituted as attorney for the Controller, in place of the attorneys who had instituted these actions.

MR. CROSS: What date is that?

MR. LEZINSKY: April 28, 1884. A. My recollection is, sir, that those suits, now that you refresh my mind, were commenced by the parties that you have named. The paper that you have shown me a moment ago recalls to my mind that after those suits were commenced, Mr. Dunn, as Controller, appointed me as his attorney in those cases. Whether the Court recognized that appointment and substituted me or not, I don't now recall. The records would show that, however

MR. CROSS: At any rate you proceeded in the cases? A. I don't think so.

MR. LEZINSKY: That is true of the cases of 1883. The cases of 1884 were instituted by yourself, were they not?

MR. CROSS: Do you mean the cases commenced in 1884?

MR. LEZINSKY: The cases of the railroad tax suits of 1884; what are known as the taxes of 1884.

MR. CROSS: You mean the taxes levied in 1884?

MR. LEZINSKY: Yes, sir.

THE WITNESS: This complaint which you hand me is filed February 26, 1885, and is doubtless for the taxes of 1884.

Q. And this suit was commenced by yourself? A. It so appears of record, sir.

Q. Now, after the institution of these suits the question arose between yourself and Mr. Marshall, the Attorney-General of the State, as to whether or not the control of the cases was in your hands or whether it was in the hands of the Attorney-General? A. Yes, sir.

MR. DUNN: Didn't the question come up in this form: as to whether the Controller had a right to substitute. Mr. Marshall objected to my right to substitute, and named Messrs. Waymire and Baggett, and the question came up as to whether you had a right to continue in the case? A. Yes, sir.

MR. LEZINSKY: Was there any determination of that question by the Circuit Court of California? A. The Circuit Court held, all along, that the Attorney-General was the master in those cases, and that he had the control of them, and could do what he pleased, which he did.

Q. Now, did you ever sign any stipulation concerning the testimony in these cases? A. No.

Q. Was ever any such stipulation presented to you? A. No.

Q. Were you ever consulted concerning the control of these cases? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever see the findings which were filed in these cases before they were signed and filed? A. No.

Q. Do you know what the reason for that was? A. No.

Q. Have you an opinion as to what the reason of that was? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you state it? A. My private opinion?

Q. Your private opinion. Was it that, so far as the railroad companies were concerned, they did not recognize you as being an attorney authorized to take any proceedings in connection with these cases? A. The Court did not recognize me as such.

Q. The Court did not recognize you as such? A. No, sir.

Q. And the Court had so declared itself? A. The Court declared that the Attorney-General was the representative of the State in those cases, and that he had the controlling power. I had no authority to do anything in the cases except by his leave and consent.

MR. DIBBLE: Did you take any part in the cases after the trial of the Santa Clara County case? A. None, whatever. In fact as I understand it, they were never tried.

Q. Well, judgment was entered? A. Yes, sir.

MR. LEZINSKY: In certain of these records it appears that a certain order which had been made and entered in the case on the seventeenth of December, 1885, recited that the proceedings—that the order was made on motion of the attorneys for the plaintiff. Did you make a motion to the Court that that order be amended, so that it should be properly stated that it was on motion of the Attorney-General, and that you had no connection with the motion whatever? A. What was the order, sir?

MR. CROSS: You might show it to the witness.

THE WITNESS: What was the order or judgment which purported to be made on my motion? My recollection of that matter, now that you mention it, is that there was a judgment entered, which upon its face recited that it was made on motion of attorneys for plaintiff. That is my recollection of it. The attorneys for the plaintiff at that time were the Attorney-General and myself.

MR. DIBBLE: Was that recital correct? A. It was not true; it was a false recital.

Q. Was it afterwards corrected? A. I think it was.

MR. CROSS: You wanted it to appear that you were in no manner responsible for those proceedings? A. I opposed the proceedings as far as I could.

MR. DUNN: Is it your recollection that it was amended? A. It was amended in one case, and in another case denied. The denial being, as I recollect it, that the motion was made after the term had lapsed. I was not aware—I didn't see any of these papers. They were all gotten up and filed in my absence, and it was by mere accident that it was called to my attention that these judgments recited that they had been entered on motion of the attorneys, which included myself. I at once filed an affidavit in the Circuit Court, or perhaps several affidavits, stating the fact that the record to that extent was incorrect.

MR. CROSS: That could not affect the result of the case in any way; it was a personal matter—that you didn't want it to appear in the matter? A. That was the object.

MR. JOHNSON: The taxes for what year was that? A. I don't recollect.

MR. LEZINSKY: It was 1884.

THE WITNESS: The record was corrected in some cases, and in some it was denied, on the ground, as I recall it, that the term having lapsed the Court had no further power over its record.

MR. CROSS: That the Court could not amend its order after the term had expired in which the order was made. A. Precisely; in one or some cases the Court did. It was not a clerical error, because Mr. Haymond, representing the railroad, intended that notwithstanding the fact was that I did not concur in that motion, but opposed it, yet by a construction of law the Attorney-General having control of the case, he acted for all the attorneys, and controlled them all, whether they were willing or not.

Q. Did you ever know of a case before where it appeared in the record that any of the attorneys' names were dropped from the proceedings taken by the attorney who had control of that side of the case? A. I am not aware of any.

Q. Isn't it customary for the proceedings to take such course as the attorney who has control indicates, provided that the Court indorses his action? A. It is unquestionably a customary mode of procedure. But my opposition to this whole business of stipulation in the case, and of taking part payments, and of having judgment entered for a portion of the taxes, was so well known by all parties, that I deemed it unfair that the record should state that I concurred in those proceedings. The record would have been clearly veracious, if it had said, as it does not, that the motion was made by the Attorney-General.

Q. Is it customary to enter in the record the disagreements of counsel? A. I know nothing of such a custom.

Q. Did you ever hear of such a custom? A. I don't know anything about it.

Q. This is the only case that you know about it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it is customary for the attorney having the control of the case, if he chooses to do so, to conduct that side of the case? A. I don't know anything about the custom. In this case it was recognized that the proper course was to recite the truth. I never knew of attorneys disagreeing in any case.

MR. DIBBLE: They sometimes disagree and separate? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I see in this memorandum for judgment, they say that it shall be paid over to Mr. Marshall, one of the attorneys? A. One of the attorneys; yes, sir. They were very careful who they should pay the money to.

MR. JOHNSON: Had you anything to do with the making up of the records of 1883, 1884, and 1885, except simply filing the complaint for 1884, and afterwards you were superseded by the Attorney-General, Mr. Marshall? A. Nothing further.

Q. Then these records for 1883, 1884, and 1885 were made by the Attorney-General and the attorneys for the railroad? A. By whomsoever they were made, they were made up without the slightest participation, or slightest concurrence as to what was done, on my part. On the contrary I opposed the whole proceeding. I was opposed to all stipulations by which the State stipulated away what I considered its rights.

MR. CROSS: You argued some of the railroad tax cases before the Supreme Court at Washington? A. I argued the Santa Clara case.

Q. In that case wasn't there the same question argued—about the effect of fences being included or not included? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you make any statement to the Supreme Court as to whether or not the assessment of the right of way didn't include fences? A. My argument, sir, was printed. Have you a copy of it?

Q. I am simply asking you? A. The argument will best speak for itself.

Q. Have you a copy of it here? A. Not here.

Q. [To General Johnson]: Have you a copy of it, General Johnson?

MR. JOHNSON: Not here.

MR. CROSS: I am advised, I don't know how correctly, that the report is in the United States Supreme Reports, as appearing in the one hundred and eighteenth volume, which we have tried to find, and all copies seem to be absent from the State Library: that the reports of the case indicate there that he took the ground that the fences were included in the assessment. If it is so reported, is it correct? A. It is perfectly correct.

Q. I would like you to state that matter as far as you can.

MR. DIBBLE: Here is the record. Our attention was called to it in the Circuit Court-room the other day. This is the matter referred to by Mr. Haymond in speaking to our committee the other day.

THE WITNESS: In 1883 there came up for trial before the Circuit Court—Judge Field and Judge Sawyer—a number of these tax cases. There were a large number of attorneys—six or eight, possibly more. It was agreed that one case out of the number should be tried, fully tried: and it was agreed that one counsel should have the management of that case. I tried that and made the argument of it. At a meeting held by the various attorneys it was determined that the Santa Clara case should be that case, and that I should try that case and argue it. On the trial of that case—

MR. CROSS [Interrupting]: Let me ask you one thing right there: Was there any understanding that the determination of that case should have anything to do with the determination of other cases? A. No, sir. It was to be tried, and then the other cases. All evidence in that case was to be applied to the other cases, so far as applicable.

Q. It should be considered as taken in all the cases? A. The different assessment rolls applicable to each county, that is, the apportionment of assessment, should be put in each case.

Q. The evidence taken in that case should be considered as taken in each of the other cases, so far as applicable? A. Yes, sir.

MR. DIBBLE: That appears to have been subsequently stipulated in the other cases? A. In the trials of 1883.

Q. In the subsequent cases that were submitted upon stipulation? A. All those cases were in point of fact tried. What I mean to say is that the Santa Clara case was the case in which the whole evidence was to be given, and then in all the other cases merely those matters were to be put in evidence which differentiated them from the Santa Clara case; but they were all tried.

Q. So much evidence in the Santa Clara case as was applicable to the other cases was to be considered in the other cases? A. Yes, sir.

MR. CROSS: Which was a correct procedure? A. Yes, sir.

MR. DUNN: As far as the assessments made for 1883? A. Yes, sir; some cases were for 1881 and some for 1882. Cases were selected. Now, in the Santa Clara case, the railroad company called as witnesses two members of the Board of Equalization; if I recollect rightly, they were Mr. Drew and Mr. Dutton. These gentlemen stated under oath, or one of them did state positively, and the other not quite so positively, that in making up the assessment the roadway or roadbed—

MR. CROSS: Of the roadway? A. They had included the value of fences at the rate of $300 per mile. When the cases were tried and argued, the question came up of settling the findings. The railroad company proposed a finding—

MR. CROSS: Was there evidence contradicting that evidence? A. None, sir.

Q. Then so far as the evidence went, that finding was supported by evidence? A. Yes, sir; if the evidence was admissible.

Q. And there was no conflicting evidence? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it was based upon evidence, as we lawyers say? A. Yes, sir, if it was competent evidence; the railroad attorneys' proposed findings including that and many other things. Those findings were fully discussed. They were submitted to the various attorneys, who proposed amendments, and the settlement of those covered a period of several days, or perhaps weeks.

Q. Do you think that taking the——

MR. HYDE [Interrupting]: Why don't you let him make the statement of it?

MR. DIBBLE: Proceed, Mr. Delmas. A. As I have stated, the cases were as fully tried as the ability of counsel on both sides could try them. Findings were proposed by the railroad attorneys before the decision was announced by Judge Field. Those findings were submitted to the various attorneys for the people or for the various counties. Numerous amendments were proposed and those amendments were submitted to Judge Sawyer, to whom the power of settling the findings was delegated by Judge Field. Repeated interviews at his chambers were had, and finally the findings were settled by him as they appear now of record. In those findings there was a finding in accordance with the testimony of those two members of the Board of Equalization, to the effect and in substance that in making up the valuation of the roadway the Board of Equalization had taken into consideration the value of the fences along the road at the rate of $300 a mile. That then became a part of the record, and became a topic of argument in the Supreme Court of the United States. The attorneys for the railroad, Judge Sanderson—I think neither Mr. Edmunds nor Mr. Evarts adverted to that point—but Mr. Sanderson sustained the judgment of the Court below in favor of the defendant, on the ground that the whole assessment was void on account of having included in the valuation of the roadbed these fences.

MR. CROSS: Without segregating them? A. Without segregating them? Not without segregating them; on the ground that they were not subject to assessment, and should not enter into the value of the roadbed. Of course, it became the duty of Judge Rhodes, the Attorney-General, and myself, to defend this finding to the best of our ability, which I think we did do. This argument, which you speak of, related to that point. I contended then, as I have always contended, and as I contend now, with all due respect to the Supreme Court of the United States, that the fences are a part of the roadway, just as much as—and I used the illustration, I believe—that if the railroad company had sold its road—its railroad from San Francisco to San José—it would have been a strange proceeding to have seen it taking its fences away. If it had sold its mole at Oakland, the piles and planks on top of them, it would have been a strange proceeding to have seen it taking away the railing on the sides.

MR. LEZINSKY: I should like to explain a matter to you, and then you may explain just exactly what you mean. Mr. Haymond, in his statement, took this argument which is reported in this report, and said that it was a statement made by you, that not only for the years 1881-82, but for every year subsequent to that time up to the time that decision was rendered, or rather that that argument was made in the Supreme Court, that the State Board of Equalization had included fences, or the value of fences, in making up the assessment for the railroad corporations. A. You say that he so stated?

Q. Yes, sir; he so stated. A. Well, what of it?

Q. Now, I ask you whether or not you had any knowledge whether they had included the value of fences in assessments subsequent to 1882? A. What had I to do in arguing a case that was tried in 1883, and the record was made up, with what may have been subsequently done by the Board. It could not possibly have affected that case.

MR. DUNN: They tried to convey the impression to this committee that you were the attorney in those matters, and that undoubtedly you had advised the Controller of the State and Board of Equalization to assess fences.

MR. CROSS: Nothing of that kind appears in the letter.

THE WITNESS: I have a very distinct recollection of having a conversation with you, and I think it took place in the presence of all, or of the principal attorneys that figured in the trial of the Santa Clara case—the Attorney-General, Mr. Marshall, Mr. Terry, Judge Rhodes, Mr. Lesser, Judge Waymire, Mr. Baggett, and possibly some others, in which we were informed that the State Board of Equalization requested us to state our views as to the proper manner of assessing these railroads. The principal point of information sought being whether they should assess the franchise separate, the roadway separate, or whether the whole thing should be assessed as a unit. My recollection is that we gave the Board a written opinion signed by all of us, in which we stated to them that it was our opinion that the road should be assessed as a unit. And in that connection the question came up as to these fences, and my recollection is that it was stated at that time that since the railroad company had made a point of that, it was better not to include them in the roll.

MR. DUNN: I know you stated that to me, not once, but half a dozen times. A. Not because I didn't consider that they were not a part of the road: I did think so, and shall so long as I live. But as a matter of precaution, to avoid that little insignificant point mingling itself with these great constitutional questions, we advised that the fences be not included. That is, I advised that; I am speaking for myself.

MR. JOHNSON: Instead, therefore, of making a stipulation in the Santa Clara case, you introduced your witnesses and made the best showing you could, and then due precaution was taken in respect to the settlement of the findings, by proposing findings or objecting to the findings proposed by the railroad people, and in this way the findings were settled after careful consideration? A. Most careful and deliberate consideration. I remember that Judge Field came repeatedly into Judge Sawyer's chambers which adjoined his own, and was impatient that the findings had not yet been settled. Because there was a great deal of discussion; every finding underwent a minute and careful consideration, and was settled after the most careful consideration.

MR. CROSS: Mr. Delmas, do you know of any finding in that case which we are talking about which was not supported by evidence? A. I do not, sir; that is, if the evidence—if it was competent to admit the evidence of an officer of the action of the Board in making an assessment by parol—which we denied.

Q. The Court ruled on that matter? A. Yes, sir; adversely to us.

Q. The Court ruled it was admissible? A. Yes, sir; the Court ruled it was admissible, and that evidence being in, the finding was supported by evidence.

Q. The evidence was all one way on that point? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can a finding upon evidence, which is all one way, and supported by the evidence introduced in the case upon that matter, be properly characterized as a false and fraudulent finding? A. No, sir.

MR. LEZINSKY: This has reference only to the case of 1882? A. Certainly.

Q. Now, as to the findings of the cases of 1883, 1884, and 1885. You are not making any statement concerning whether the findings in those cases are false or fraudulent or not? A. I have no knowledge of any findings, except those in the Santa Clara case and the cases we tried at that time. The other findings I had nothing to do with whatever.

Q. And you know nothing concerning the evidence? A. No, sir.

MR. DIBBLE: Mr. Delmas did not participate in the preparation of these judgments? A. In none of them except what was called the Santa Clara case.

MR. DIBBLE: Hence, he is not bound or does not intend to give any opinion as to whether they were correct or not? A. No, sir.

MR. DUNN: Did you ever receive any notice that at any time any action was being taken in these matters; that action was to be taken by the Attorney-General on certain dates; what he proposed to do; that he proposed to settle the findings? A. No, sir; not as to the settlement of the findings. I did receive notice from the Attorney-General on one or more occasions to be present in Court on such a day, that such a thing would be done, and I remember the first one of those notices was when the proposition of the railroad attorneys to pay 50 or 60 per cent—60 per cent, if I recollect right—of the taxes was accepted by the Attorney-General. I was notified as your attorney to be present in Court on that day. I went into Court and protested, as far as I could, and perhaps beyond the strict bounds of prudence, against the proceeding; but, of course, I had no power to control the case. The Attorney-General had made up his mind to accept that amount.

Q. You never had an opportunity to look at this stipulation? A. I never concurred in any stipulation, and never concurred in any of these proceedings, or in any of these judgments.

Q. You had no knowledge of them at all? A. No, sir; no knowledge of them at all.

MR. HYDE: Does it appear of record for whom Mr. Delmas appeared?

MR. DIBBLE: You brought the suits for the Controller.

MR. JOHNSON: In 1885, for the tax of 1884? A. I appeared in obedience to a request of Mr. Dunn.

Q. In what manner did you appear in these cases?

MR. HYDE: I mean here to-night. Let it appear to-night for whom he appears as a witness. It makes a great deal of difference. An admission by the defendant's witness is an admission by the defendant.

MR. DIBBLE: Mr. Delmas was subpoenaed by the Chairman of this committee, Mr. Seawell.

MR. HYDE: As a witness for the Controller?

MR. CROSS: As a witness in the case.

Q. The Circuit Court having determined that the Attorney-General had control of these cases, if you had signed a stipulation to do or not to do certain things, it would have had no force? A. No, sir; not the slightest.

Q. And therefore the attorneys of the Central Pacific Railroad could have accomplished nothing by having you sign or refuse to sign a stipulation under that ruling, and were obliged to go to Mr. Marshall to execute all stipulations? A. Yes, sir. I desire to read to your committee the order that was entered in the case, in which the Court did correct its record, and it read in these words: "This case, heretofore argued and submitted to the Court for consideration, a decision upon the motion to amend the record herein having been duly considered, it is ordered that said motion be and the same is hereby granted; and it is further ordered that the order made and entered herein on the seventeenth day of September, A. D. 1885, be amended by striking out the words 'on motion of attorneys for plaintiff' and inserting therefor 'on motion of Hon. E. C. Marshall, Attorney-General,' recognized by the Court as controlling the case on behalf of the plaintiff."

MR. DIBBLE: That distinctly shows that the whole case, the whole proceedings, were taken without the knowledge or consent of Mr. Delmas? A. The date of that order is the eleventh of January, 1886, correcting the record of the seventeenth day of December, 1885.

Q. That was upon the taxes of 1884? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there any other motion to correct the record? A. No, sir.

Q. The Attorney-General made no effort to correct it? A. No, sir; it was not likely that he would attempt to correct it.

Q. The Legislature passed an Act to authorize the Attorney-General to employ counsel, and the question was whether the Court would recognize the Attorney-General. The United States Circuit Court held that it would recognize the Attorney-General, as against the provisions of the State statute authorizing the Controller to employ counsel? A. Yes, sir.

E. W. MASLIN.

Recalled.

THE WITNESS: I testified that in 1883 I listened to the testimony in the case, before the Circuit Court, wherein the question of fences was involved. Mr. Cross, interrupting me, I believe said that this decision was rendered in 1882, and had no reference to fences. The case I testified to was the case of Santa Clara County against the railroad company, which was rendered in 1883. The case Mr. Cross referred to was the San Mateo case, decided in 1882.

MR. CROSS: The case in which you testified is the case which Mr. Delmas argued in the Supreme Court? A. Yes, sir.

P. P. CHAMBERLAIN.

Called and sworn.

MR. LEZINSKY: I want to prove by this witness that a statement is not, and let him explain what was done in the matter.

MR. CROSS: What is it; something that appears in the transcript?

MR. LEZINSKY: No, sir. Now, a statement is made here that the taxes which were due to the County of San Mateo for the year 1882, by the Central Pacific Railroad Company—1881-2—had been paid to the County of San Mateo twice. That is, that the sum of fourteen thousand and odd dollars had been paid by the Central Pacific Railroad Company into the Treasury of that county.

MR. CROSS: No; that is not the statement.

MR. LEZINSKY: That is the statement made by Mr. Ryan, that those taxes had been paid twice.

MR. CROSS: Not that they were paid into the Treasury twice; one payment was made to the attorneys of the county, Rhodes & Barstow.

MR. LEZINSKY: Did that go into the Treasury?

MR. CROSS: It was paid to the attorneys.

MR. LEZINSKY: And then the railroad company again paid it into the Treasury?

MR. CROSS: I don't know about that. We claim a payment to the attorneys of the plaintiff is a payment.

MR. RYAN: The second time it was paid to the Board of Supervisors.

MR. DIBBLE: First to the attorneys in the case, and afterwards to the Supervisors?

MR. CROSS: Two distinct payments.

MR. LEZINSKY: There were two checks drawn for it?

MR. RYAN: I have the vouchers there.

MR. LEZINSKY: One is a voucher from the attorneys and one from the Treasurer.

MR. DIBBLE: What do you know about the payment of these checks to San Mateo County?

THE WITNESS: All I know is of the last payment, I think it was in December, 1885. They paid in the sum of seven thousand and odd dollars.

Q. Paid to you? A. Paid to the County Auditor, as Tax Collector.

Q. Received by you as County Treasurer? A. Yes sir; from the Auditor.

MR. DUNN: You received the coin? A. Yes, sir.

MR. LEZINSKY: When did you receive the coin? A. I think it was in December, 1885.

Q. Was there any money at that time on deposit in the Treasury to the credit of these corporations, or this corporation? A. No, sir; not any record of it.

MR. DIBBLE: Was there, as a fact? A. Yes, sir; as a fact there was.

MR. LEZINSKY: Was that money withdrawn? A. It never was withdrawn; it was paid in to the county as a loan. That is the way it appears on the Treasurer's books. I was not Treasurer at that time. That was paid in 1882.

Q. In 1882 there was paid into the Treasury the amount of $7,247 62, as a loan? A. Yes, sir; I think that is the amount.

Q. Now, then, when do you claim that $7,613 30 was paid in? In 1885? A. I think so; yes, sir.

Q. Was this money that was then on deposit as a loan, or this money that was loaned, used towards making this payment? A. No, sir.

Q. Who received this amount of $7,613 30; who received this amount? A. I received it.

Q. Who was the person who received it as a county officer? A. The Treasurer had it the last time; it was first paid in to the Auditor, as he was the Tax Collector.

Q. Did you get the coin into your hands? A. Yes, sir; I got the coin into my hands.

Q. Who gave you the coin? A. It came from the Auditor.

MR. HALL: I don't see the particular materiality of this.

MR. DUNN: Mr. Chairman, pardon me. Mr. Chamberlain made an affidavit in 1885, and upon that affidavit I made a statement that nothing but the face of the tax was paid to San Mateo County in the case of 1881-82.

THE WITNESS: Have you got that affidavit?

MR. DUNN: Yes, sir.

A. Don't that say my books show that?

MR. DUNN: We propose to show that that case was dismissed from the United States Supreme Court at the telegraphic request of these gentlemen, and that was requested by Mr. Creed Haymond, of San Francisco, by telegraph. Now, Mr. Haymond says that the tax, penalty, interest, costs, and attorneys' fees were paid. We propose to show that that statement is not correct, and that it was a trick played upon the United States Supreme Court. Whether we can show that or not, will be determined by this witness.

MR. DIBBLE: Let me see if I understand Mr. Chamberlain's statement. When did you go into the office of Treasurer? A. January 1, 1883.

Q. You found on deposit there, as a loan, a certain sum of money? A. No, sir; I did not. I found that record on my books, but it was put into the fund and used by the county.

Q. Your books show that a certain amount of money had been received as a loan from the railroad? A. No; not from the railroad. It shows that it was received from A. Green, who was one of the Board of Supervisors.

Q. Does it show whom he received it from? A. Yes, sir; he got it from Rhodes & Barstow.

Q. They were the attorneys for the county? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know where they got it? A. They got it from the railroad company.

Q. Then, as a fact, the railroad company had paid to the attorneys for the county this sum of money? A. $7,613 30.

Q. What further amount of money was paid to you after you became Treasurer? A. That was supposed to be the balance due of interest at five per cent, and for all costs, and so forth.

MR. HYDE: For taxes up to what time? A. Taxes of 1880-81.

MR. DIBBLE: When did you receive this balance of the payment? A. In December.

Q. What time in December? A. I think it was the sixteenth.

Q. What was the balance paid to you? A. Something over $7,000.

Q. Was that the complete amount of taxes due for 1880-81? A. I don't know about that, because I am not the Tax Collector.

Q. Did you so understand it? A. Yes, sir; that is what I understood, and that is what the Auditor, who received the books as they came from the Tax Collector—that is the amount he said was due.

MR. HYDE: When was that money paid in by Mr. Green, as a loan to the county? A. In 1882.

MR. DIBBLE: When do your books show it was received from Mr. Green, the Supervisor? A. In 1882.

Q. What time in 1882? A. December third, I think.

Q. That was about a month before you went into office? A. Yes, sir; more than that.

Q. Well, you went into office in January—

MR. CROSS: In 1880 the officers went in, in March.

MR. DIBBLE: This was in 1882.

THE WITNESS: It was about a month before I went in.

Q. When was this case dismissed in San Mateo County?

MR. DUNN: About January, 1886.

MR. STORKE: Does that money still stand as a loan—that first payment—on your books? A. There has never been any change made.

MR. DUNN: Here is the certificate of the Auditor: "I, George Barker, County Auditor, do hereby certify that the Central Pacific Railroad, for taxes, has this day made a settlement with me for State and county taxes." Mark the distinction between State and county taxes, $7,642 62, the exact sum which was purported to have been paid to Mr. Green in 1882. It could not have been the face of the tax for 1881-82, for that was not the sum. The railroad people paid too much if they paid that. This is dated the eleventh of December, 1885. It was upon that date that I understand the telegram was sent by you yourself and Mr. Barker to the Clerk of the Supreme Court at Washington, that the tax, penalty, interest, costs, and attorneys' fees were all paid? A. Yes, sir.

MR. DUNN: Two days following this date I went down to Redwood City to make an investigation in the matter. I called upon the Auditor, and I said: "Mr. Barker, I would like to see your books; I want to see if the railroad people have paid any taxes here recently." He said: "I have no such record on my books." I said: "Is that possible?" And I said: "Won't you come down to the Treasurer's office with me?" We went in, and he introduced me to you, and I said to you: "Mr. Chamberlain, I would like to see your books." You said: "What do you want to see?" I said: "I want to see a payment of taxes made recently by the railroad company to this county." You said: "That tax has not been paid officially, but I have it in my safe." I said: "Do you receive money into the County Treasury unofficially? Do you not require a certificate from the Auditor of the county before you receive any money?" I think your answer was that that, of course, was the rule, but this money was paid in and you found it in your safe. Two days afterwards, or on the sixteenth of the same month, I went down again to San Mateo County, to Redwood City, and there was a gentleman, a lawyer from Judge Rhodes' office, with me.

MR. CROSS: Who was that?

MR. DUNN: That was Mr. Lawler. And I then again asked to see your books, and as I recall it, the only thing that your books showed at that time was this purported loan to Mr. Green—money paid by Rhodes & Barstow. Now, I ask you, how was it that Mr. Barker could date a certificate on the eleventh day of December, as having received money, when his books have no record of it, and your books have no record of it?

MR. DIBBLE: What year was that?

MR. DUNN: 1885. The date I now speak about was the eleventh of December.

THE WITNESS: He had received the money, and I suppose he could have telegraphed that he had received it.

Q. If the railroad company had paid the tax, penalty, interest, costs, and attorneys' fees, how is it that yourself and Mr. Barker have made a sworn statement to our office time and again since then, and you have never included any of that additional money in your report? A. Anything that has been paid to me since I have been Treasurer has been reported to you; the others I don't know anything about.

Q. I ask you if you have ever reported since your own term of office—since this money was in controversy—if you have ever reported to our office any money relative to this matter except this $7,247 62? A. I think not, sir. That was the only money I ever received.

Q. That was the only money you ever received? A. Yes, sir; that was the only money I ever received since I was Treasurer. I was not Treasurer when this money that you speak of was paid.

Q. You say that was a loan? A. That is what the books show.

Q. And your books still show it is a loan? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you come here and make a statement that that was a payment of this tax. If it was a payment of this tax, why has not the State of California received its share of it? A. I can't tell you.

Q. Why have you and the Auditor of the county made sworn statements to us every three months of the amount of money you have received and this sum has never been paid into the Treasury? A. I can't say. If I have received it—everything I have received I have accounted for.

MR. STORKE: It evidently shows that there is money in San Mateo County that belongs to the State.

MR. DIBBLE: This seems to be the statement of this witness, that at the time he took his office in January, 1883, he found upon the record in the books of that office the statement showing that a certain amount of money—$7,900—had been received from a Mr. Green, who was one of the Board of Supervisors. This money appears to have been paid by Rhodes & Barstow, who were the attorneys of the county in collecting these taxes. Here appears to be the receipt of Rhodes & Barstow for that money, they having received it from the railroad company. This witness stated that after he became Treasurer he received $7,600, and that amount he has accounted for.

MR. STORKE: He has not accounted to the State for its share.

MR. DIBBLE: This is a year afterwards.

MR. HALL: I would like to ask if this money is still in the safe, or if it has been used?

THE WITNESS: It has been used; it was turned into the general fund.

Q. When? A. When it was received.

Q. Before you went into office? A. Yes, sir.

Q. It took the same course as any other moneys turned in? A. No; not the same course as any other moneys turned in. Money that comes in from taxes is put in and goes to its proper place in the different funds. This money came in and was all put in the general fund.

MR. DUNN: Did you ever see the agreement that was made between Rhodes & Barstow and the railroad attorneys in this matter? A. No, sir.

MR. CROSS: It is not an agreement, it is a receipt.

MR. DUNN: The agreement was to this effect: That this sum of money given to Rhodes & Barstow was for the face of the tax, not alone for this year, but for the years 1881-82; and that agreement was to this effect: That this money was to be loaned to San Mateo County until the final determination by the Supreme Court of the United States of this railroad tax case. When that matter was to be determined, the money was to be a gift to San Mateo County. If it was against the railroad company, that money was to be considered a payment on account. Now, you say this money was received in December, 1882? A. December, 1882.

Q. December, 1882. Now, when the next settlement was made by the County Treasurer of San Mateo County, who settled up the taxes in that quarter, January, 1883; did you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then why wasn't this money reported then? A. I don't know why.

MR. DUNN: Well, I say to the committee here, that I propose to go down to San Mateo County, and make an investigation of this matter.

Q. I understand this money was deposited there as a loan? A. It was paid in as a loan, into the county fund as a loan, to be used by the county the same as they would use any other money.

MR. LEZINSKY: It was never paid in then as a payment of taxes? A. No, sir; the records do not so show.

MR. DIBBLE: Was all the money that was received by you accounted for? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is there any question about the money received by Mr. Chamberlain being accounted for?

MR. DUNN: I think that this payment made by Messrs. Rhodes & Barstow to Mr. Green is not properly accounted for. A receipt in the first place was given by Rhodes & Barstow to the railroad company; then this money was afterwards turned over to a member of the Board of Supervisors. After I went down to San Mateo County I sent a telegram to Judge Rhodes that there was not anything on the record of the books of the Auditor or Treasurer that I could find that showed the payment of a single dollar of taxes. Now I think that a day or two after I was down there—

THE WITNESS [Interrupting]: I showed you this loan.

MR. DUNN: Certainly; but there was no payment—nothing on your books to show that there was the payment of a single cent of taxes. My impression is, that after I went down there, and this matter was discussed in the newspapers, that action was taken by the Board, and that this money was transferred from that loan to the credit of this tax, because the face of the tax is in both cases identical.

THE WITNESS: The whole amount of the two payments amounted to $15,585. That will be accounted for, and you can put my experts on the books; you will find that amount in the Treasury.

MR. DUNN: Let me ask you, wasn't that $15,000 to cover the taxes of 1880-81 and 1881-82? A. Yes, sir; and the interest and costs.

Q. They are for both years? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then the total amount of money you have received in the County Treasury in connection with the railroad taxes has been $15,000? A. Yes, sir.

Q. The total amount you have received in that connection has been $15,000? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then you ought to have received $21,000 to make your statement good, because the face of the tax for both years amounts to the amount you now state? A. I think that Rhodes & Barstow retained in their hands, when they paid over this money to Green, some $4,000. That would amount to over $20,000. After it was settled the Board of Supervisors sued the attorneys, and I think they got $600.

MR. HYDE: You knew, Mr. Dunn, that he had this loan of $7,000?

THE WITNESS: I told him that the other money was there. I think the money was paid in on a Saturday and you were down there on a Monday.

MR. HYDE: Mr. Dunn, when you knew that he had this loan of $7,000 there, what notice did you take of that yourself as Controller of the State?

MR. DUNN: I took no notice except this, that when I went back to San Francisco I made that statement to Mr. Barstow, and my recollection is that that was the first time that any money had been paid to Rhodes & Barstow in connection with this case.

Q. You knew that that was a payment by the railroad company indirectly?

MR. DUNN: I saw the written agreement to that effect, that when the suit was decided the money was to be a gift to the county, if the suit was in favor of the railroad; if it was decided against the railroad it would be a payment on account. Here is the receipt: "Received, San Francisco, September 6, 1882, of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, the sum of $4,752 37, and the sum of $475, attorneys' fees, all to be credited upon any judgment that may be obtained by the plaintiff in the above entitled action, in case judgment shall be rendered in said action in favor of said defendant"—it was a judgment to be rendered—"in favor of said defendant, then said sum of money, less our fees agreed to be paid by said county, shall be paid into the Treasury of said County of San Mateo, as a donation by said defendant in lieu of taxes for the fiscal year 1880-81, declared invalid; but in the event that a law shall hereafter pass providing for a reassessment of property in the complaint in the said action in the said county for said fiscal year, then said sum of money is to be treated as a payment on account of taxes for said fiscal year. Rhodes & Barstow, attorneys for said County of San Mateo for said year."

MR. STORKE: That is a receipt for the first money paid?

MR. DUNN: Yes, sir; this is for the taxes of 1880-81. This tax is a tax matter of 1881-82.

MR. CROSS: Mr. Chamberlain, do you know that the tax for 1881-82 was paid?

MR. RYAN: This is for two years; a part of that belongs in here.

MR. DUNN: "Received, San Francisco, September 6, 1882, of the Southern Pacific Railroad, the sum of $7,247 63, and the sum of $724 76, attorneys' fees, all to be credited upon any judgment that may be obtained by the plaintiff in the above entitled action; in case judgment shall be rendered in said action in favor of said defendant then said sum of money, less our fees agreed to be paid by said county, shall be paid into the Treasury of said County of San Mateo as a donation by said defendant, in lieu of taxes for the fiscal year of 1881-82 declared invalid; but in the event that a law shall be hereafter passed," etc. Now just add these two amounts: $7,247 63 and $4,752 37. Now then add to it again $7,613 30. That makes a total of $19,613 10.

MR. CROSS: Here is the receipt which makes the total amount we claim. You will find another receipt here.

MR. LEZINSKY: That is not a receipt; that is the telegram from the clerk.

MR. CROSS: The amount is seven thousand nine hundred and odd dollars.

MR. DIBBLE: $4,752 37 and $475 24; $7,247 63 and $724 76.

MR. CROSS: How much does that add up?

MR. DIBBLE: $13,200.

MR. DUNN: I understand Senator Cross to say that $13,200 is the total amount that has been paid in donations.

MR. CROSS: It is not donation; the receipt shows what it was. The receipts show there is this much money paid. If judgment is rendered against the railroad company, this is a payment on account; if judgment is rendered in favor of the railroad company, this is donated to San Mateo County, unless the taxes shall be reassessed, and if it is then it shall be a credit on such reassessment. Mr. Dunn claimed that you could not receive that money; that the money had to come through him on account of this law, and that Rhodes & Barstow, having received the money, delivered it to the Board of Supervisors to be turned into the county; that the Auditor refused to receive it, under the instructions of Mr. Dunn; but that it was taken and put into the safe, and because of the order that he could not receive it, it was entered on the books in that form.

THE WITNESS: The fact is that the railroad company would not pay taxes, and, having commenced the suit against them, the railroad company paid in some $13,000 to Rhodes and Barstow. So that the county could have the use of it, and that it should not lay in the hands of the attorneys, Rhodes & Barstow loaned to Green this $7,900, and Green turned it into the Treasury through the Auditor. It was turned into the general fund and used as other moneys. Then this other payment was made, in 1885, of $7,600.

MR. CROSS: Whatever your irregularities were, if they were irregularities, were irregularities between the attorneys and the officers of the county, were they? A. I think so.

Q. The amount of the original tax was something like $12,000, and they paid attorneys' fees, penalties, interest, and cost up to $21,000? A. Yes, sir.

MR. DUNN: Here is the record showing this payment: December fourth, A. F. Green loaned by Board of Supervisors, $8,971 47; now, in addition to that, you claim to have received $7,613 30. Out of this $8,971 47 you said there was a payment of attorneys' fees. Now, this certificate, which was dated December 11, 1885, shows the payment of the first tax of $7,-247 62: where is the $21,000?

MR. CROSS: The balance is charged to Rhodes & Barstow.

THE WITNESS: $4,000 on the receipt there.

MR. STORKE: They withheld it? A. Yes, sir.

MR. DUNN: Where is any record showing any payment of taxes beyond this sum of money here?

THE WITNESS: There is no record.

MR. DUNN: Where is the record to show a single dollar of interest?

MR. CROSS: The trouble is between the county and its attorneys and its bookkeeper. Under the law at that time you received money from the county; you didn't receive it from the railroad company, as the law was at that time.

MR. LEZINSKY: This man says that this $7,947 41 went into the general fund, and was used in the county. Now, if they paid up that entire tax, principal, interest, penalty, and costs, they should have paid in some $13,-000. It does not show that they have paid it; because the State would have been entitled to its proportion of its entire amount. I say that the railroad company never paid it, because the railroad company made a donation to the County of San Mateo, and the State cannot come against the County of San Mateo for moneys paid to the County of San Mateo as a donation. It was not paid as a tax; it was paid as a donation to the county.

MR. DUNN: I want to see the record of the payment of this $7,613 in addition to this.

MR. CROSS: Those are matters entirely between the county and the State.

MR. DUNN: I beg your pardon. I want to see the record on his books showing the payment of that amount.

MR. DIBBLE: I think we had better bring this matter to a close. It seems to have resolved itself into a dispute between county officers.

[Further hearing continued until Monday evening, February 25, 1889.]

WHEREAS, There is now pending in the Supreme Court of the United States an action in which the County of San Mateo is plaintiff in error, and the Southern Pacific Railroad is defendant in error; and, whereas, the defendant in error, on the sixth day of September, 1882, paid to Rhodes & Barstow, attorneys for plaintiff in error, on account of the cause of action stated in the complaint, the sum of $7,247 63, and the further sum of $724 76, attorneys' fees: and, whereas, the said action and the proceedings therein were of a friendly nature, entered into in good faith, to determine the validity of the constitutional provisions of the State of California, relating to the taxation of railroad property, and, whereas, when said case was argued and submitted to the Supreme Court of the United States, various parties, for reasons of their own, misrepresented the said action and the relation of the parties thereto: and, whereas, it is believed by the parties that the purposes for which said action was instituted have, by such misrepresentations, been defeated: and, whereas, it was always understood that, whatever might be the result of said action, the said Southern Pacific Railroad Company should pay the amount claimed, and thus show its good faith therein: and, whereas, the Supervisors of said county have determined that it is impolitic to make any further expenditures in said actions, and have authorized a committee of their Board to settle and finally adjust the same;

It is hereby agreed between the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, defendant in error in said action, and the said committee of the Board of Supervisors, acting for the County of San Mateo, that the said Southern Pacific Railroad Company shall pay into the Treasury of said county, on account of the cause of action stated in the complaint, the sum of $7,613 30 in addition to the sum paid to said Rhodes & Barstow; the same being sufficient to more than pay the full amount claimed for tax penalties, attorneys' fees and interest, as shown by the complaint in said action, and by the assessment roll on file in said county.

It is further understood and agreed that when the amount is finally settled between the county and Rhodes & Barstow, an account shall be stated, based upon said complaint and on the assessment roll, of the principal, interest, delinquency, and attorneys' fees, and also of the payment made to Rhodes & Barstow; and that the payment in excess of the true amount due shall be returned to the said Southern Pacific Railroad Company, it being the intention of the parties that the whole tax, interest, and attorneys' fees shall be paid, and then the remainder of the payment be returned to the said Southern Pacific Railroad Company.

In testimony whereof the parties hereunto have signed this agreement in duplicate, this eleventh day of December, 1885.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY.

By CREED HAYMOND, General Counsel.

W. H. LAWRENCE,

A. F. GREEN.

JOHN MULLEN,

Committee of Board of Supervisors of San Mateo County.

I hereby certify that in pursuance of the foregoing agreement the said Southern Pacific Railroad Company, on the eleventh day of December, 1885, paid into the Treasury of the County of San Mateo, for the uses and purposes mentioned in said agreement, the sum of $7,613 30, in United States gold coin. I further certify that the County of San Mateo has had the use of the money in said agreement referred to as having been paid to Rhodes & Barstow since the sixth day of September, 1882; and that the said sums more than pay off and discharge the principal, penalties, attorneys' fees, costs, interest, and all other things claimed in the complaint referred to in the foregoing agreement.

Witness my hand and the seal of the County of San Mateo, this eleventh day of December, 1885.

GEORGE BARKER,

County Auditor.

Whereas, there is now pending in the Supreme Court of the United States an action in which the County of San Mateo is plaintiff in error, and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company is defendant in error; and whereas, the defendant in error, on the sixth day of September, 1882, paid to Rhodes & Barstow, attorneys for plaintiff in error, on account of the cause of action stated in the complaint, the sum of $7,247 63, and the further sum of $724 76 attorneys' fees; and, whereas, the said action and the proceedings therein were of a friendly nature, entered into in good faith, to determine the validity of the constitutional provisions of the State of California, relating to the taxation of railroad property; and, whereas, when said case was argued and submitted to the Supreme Court of the United States, various parties, for reasons of their own, misrepresented the said action and the relation of the parties thereto: and, whereas, it is believed by the parties that the purposes for which said action was instituted and by such misrepresentations been defeated; whereas, it was always understood that whatever might be the result of said action, the said Southern Pacific Railroad Company would pay the amount claimed, and thus show its good faith therein; and, whereas, the Supervisors of said county have determined that it is impolitic to make any further expenditures in said actions, and have authorized a committee of their Board to settle and finally adjust the same.

It is hereby agreed between the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, defendant in error in said action, and the said committee of the Board of Supervisors acting for the County of San Mateo, that the said Southern Pacific Railroad Company shall pay into the Treasury of said county on account of the cause of action stated in the complaint the sum of $7,613 30 in addition to the sum paid to said Rhodes & Barstow, the same being sufficient to more than pay the full amount claimed for taxes, penalties, attorneys' fees, and interest, as shown by the complaint in said action and by the assessment roll on file in said county.

It is further understood and agreed that when the account is finally settled between the county and Rhodes & Barstow, an account shall be stated, based upon said complaint and on the assessment roll, of the principal, interest, delinquency, and attorneys' fees, and also of the payment made by Rhodes & Barstow, and the payment in excess of the true amount due shall be returned to the said Southern Pacific Railroad Company, it being the intention of the parties that the whole tax, interest, and attorneys' fees shall be paid, and the remainder of the payment be returned to the said Southern Pacific Railroad Company.

In testimony whereof the parties hereunto signed this agreement in duplicate this eleventh day of December, 1885.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY,
By CREED HAYMOND, General Counsel.

WM. H. LAWRENCE,
A. F. GREEN,
JOHN MULLEN,

Committee of the Board of Supervisors of San Mateo County.

I hereby certify that in pursuance of the foregoing agreement the said Southern Pacific Railroad Company, on the eleventh day of December, 1885, paid into the Treasury of the County of San Mateo, for the uses and purposes mentioned in said agreement, the sum of $7,613 30 in United States gold coin.

I further certify that the County of San Mateo has had the use of the money, in said agreement referred to as having been paid to Rhodes & Barstow, since the sixth day of September, 1882; and that the said sums more than pay off and discharge the principal, penalties, attorneys' fees, costs, interest, and all other things claimed in the complaint referred to in the foregoing agreement.

Witness my hand and the seal of the County of San Mateo this eleventh day of December, 1885.

MONDAY, February 25, 1889.

LORENZO SAWYER.

Called and sworn.

MR. JOHNSON: Judge, you are Circuit Judge of the Ninth District?
 Answer—For the Ninth Circuit.

Q. For the District of California? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been in that capacity, Judge? A. A little over twenty years. My name went in on the sixth of December, 1869.

Q. I will ask you, Judge, whether or not the findings were signed and judgment rendered before you in the tax cases of 1883, 1884, and 1885? A. They were; yes, sir.

Q. More particularly with reference to the tax cases of 1884. Just let me see the record, there, please. There has been some question about some findings that were signed in the tax cases of 1884; that is, for the taxes of 1884. I wish you would please look at these findings. This is a case against the Central Pacific Railroad Company; and give us your opinion whether or not the pasters there appear to be the same pasters on these findings; whether these pasters were on at the time you signed the findings or not? A. I guess you have got the wrong package.

Q. I asked for 1884?

MR. DUNN: Here it is. That is 1883. Here is 1884.

THE WITNESS: There is another one I have looked at particularly. I have not any doubt of it.

MR. JOHNSON: You think that these pasters were on? A. Yes, sir. I will tell you how it came about. There were a great many of those cases. We had to print portions of the findings to suit the different cases.

Q. And there were references also to other cases. These are the original papers? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Just state whether, in your opinion, all these pasters were on at that time? A. I haven't any doubt about it.

Q. They were all on? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who were the attorneys for the people? A. Mr. Marshall and Mr. Baggett.

Q. And for the defendant? A. I think Mr. Creed Haymond.

Q. And in the tax cases of 1883, who were the attorneys? A. 1883; well, I am not certain whether Hart was Attorney-General or not then; the papers will show. Whoever was Attorney-General appeared.

Q. Was there any evidence introduced in the tax cases of 1883, 1884, and 1885; any of them? A. That last batch?

Q. Sir? A. That last batch I decided all together.

Q. Yes, sir. A. There was a stipulation filed in Court. No, sir; there were none of them actually tried. It was regarded as a mere formal matter. There was a stipulation there that those cases be submitted on the evidence in certain other cases which were then on appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States.

MR. DUNN: The Santa Clara case? A. Yes, sir; the stipulation is there very likely. This is the state of affairs at that time which you want to understand in order to appreciate things. You want to look at it from the standpoint at that time. There were several cases, about half a dozen that had been thoroughly tried from the beginning, right straight through, and every point litigated, in which Judge Field and myself sat. And there were about half a dozen of those; I think they were selected in so far as to present all the points. They were on appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States. They covered the whole ground; covered every possible point there was. A great many points they possibly care nothing about except as a makeweight.

MR. JOHNSON: Here is the transcript of the record of the tax cases of 1884. There is the stipulation you refer to? [Showing.] A. Yes, sir; that is probably the stipulation. Well, now then, the railroad company wanted to pay what they admitted to be due on this last batch, that is, 1884.

Q. There is another batch, 1885? A. Well, along there somewhere; they wanted to pay a certain amount of taxes, but under protest, nevertheless; but they were willing to pay so much only. But, then, there was a stipulation that those cases, that all the cases, should abide the result of those that were on appeal. And they were simply to pay—to put it in a position so that the Attorney-General could receive the money and the company could pay it over, and then if there was anything besides that, such as penalties and interest, and all that sort of thing, they could adjust them upon a decision of the Supreme Court in those cases that were up on appeal. Nobody supposed for a moment that any of these others would have occasion to go to the Supreme Court of the United States. They were put in a shape to get the money.

Q. The reason the tax cases of 1884 showed that steamers and fences were assessed was because of a stipulation? A. Yes, sir; they submitted them on a prior case; because the finding was in those cases. I have no doubt they supposed—they hadn't the slightest idea these cases would come before the Courts here. They supposed they would be settled and disposed of by the cases pending in the Supreme Court. Nobody was more chagrined than I was that after we had taken all the trouble we did, that the Supreme Court should turn it off on a point that we didn't care anything about. In the meantime the subsequent cases were decided. When the cases came up they put in no evidence, but submitted it on the testimony in the prior case, with the reservation in some cases that if they chose they might put in the affidavit of the Clerk of the Board of Equalization.

Q. That was the case of 1883? A. That was the last tax case. They might put in that if they chose to do it.

Q. The clerk never appeared before you? A. No, sir; and never filed those affidavits. I suppose they thought it was not necessary. They were submitted on the testimony of those cases referred to in the stipulation; and I directed the attorneys of the plaintiff to draw up the findings, and they did. There were a good many of them, and it took some time to do it. When they came with the findings I turned them over to General Marshall and Mr. Baggett, to examine and see if they were correct or not. And this one came back to me; this one of them came back to me. There is a pencil mark there; I think it is in Mr. Baggett's handwriting—they objected to these because there was no evidence supporting it. There was evidence, there was this stipulation, and the finding in all those cases—you will look and see in the findings there—this finding is copied from those cases. This here, you see, has adopted that; that is too discursive. It went over a great deal of ground that the testimony did not cover. You see here again, that I struck that all out, and appended that which covered the testimony in the prior cases. There is one which I struck out without substituting anything.

Q. In the decision of the Supreme Court of last year in these tax cases, that decision goes off on the ground that either fences, steamers, or Federal franchises, some one or other of those constituents entered into this and invalidated the entire assessment? A. Yes; that first one went off on the assessment of fences. That is what surprised me. Now, the first case went off on that. Now, the second case went off mainly on the fact that the franchise granted by the United States, which is by far the most valuable part of the franchise, is included in the assessment. That is a much broader ground, and it is much more important than the fences. Neither party cared anything about them, except that it might help them to win the cause if they failed in anything else. In the last case it went off on the assessment of the franchise.

Q. On the steamers also? A. In one or two cases it did. But, now, I don't think my understanding is that the plaintiff's counsel did not make those points in the Supreme Court. But the Supreme Court decided the case on the franchise mainly, and then referred to some of them. The same point was found as in the former one, of the fences and steamers. Really, they put their decision on the franchise derived from the Government of the United States.

Q. Now, here is the steamboat case: "By the Constitution of California two modes of assessment for taxation are prescribed; one, by a State Board of Equalization; the other, by county Boards and local Assessors. All property is directed to be assessed in the county, city, town, etc., in which it is situated, except as follows, to wit: The franchise, roadway, roadbed, rails, and rolling stock of any railroad operated in more than one county are to be assessed by the State Board and apportioned to the several counties, and so forth. By an Act of the Legislature of California (Section 3665 of the Political Code) the State Board is required to include in their assessment steamers engaged in transporting passengers and freights across waters which divide a railroad. This Act was held by the Supreme Court of California, in San Francisco vs. Central Pacific Railroad Company (63 Cal. 469), to be contrary to the Constitution, and steamboats were held to be assessable by the county Board, and not by the State Board. This Court, following that decision and that of Santa Clara vs. Southern Pacific Railroad Company (118 U. S. 394), in regard to the assessment of fences, holds that the assessment of the steamers of a railroad company by the State Board is in violation of the Constitution of the State of California and void, and being inseparably blended with the other property assessed, it makes the whole assessment void." A. Now, that is one point; but the main point was the assessment of the franchise. I think they are mistaken about there being steamers assessed there; I think they are mistaken about that. There were half a dozen cases went up; fences did not appear in all of them. I have looked at some of them. The fences are not in and the steamers are not in. I don't remember that there is any finding we made where the steamers were assessed as steamers.

Q. Except the general finding that all property included in Section 3665 should be assessed: "The State Board of Equalization must meet at the State Capitol on the first Monday in August, and continue in open session from day to day, Sundays excepted, until the third Monday in August. At such meeting the Board must assess the franchise, roadway, roadbed, rails, and rolling stock of all railroads operated in more than one county. Assessment must be made to the corporation, person, or association of persons owning the same, and must be made upon the entire railway within the State, and must include the right of way, bridges, culverts, wharves, and moles upon which the track is laid, and all steamers which are engaged in transporting passengers, freights, and passenger and freight cars, across waters which divide the road. The depots, shops, stations, and buildings, erected upon the space covered by the right of way, are assessed by the Assessor of the county wherein they are situate. Within ten days after the third Monday in August, the Board must apportion the total assessment of the franchise, roadway, roadbed, rails, and rolling stock of each railway, to the counties or cities and counties in which such railway is located, in proportion to the number of miles of railway laid in such counties and cities and counties." A. My attention might not have been drawn to it. This is the fact, as the testimony in those first cases showed, and you will find it there, and you may find it in some one or two of these recent cases. The testimony showed in regard—I think it was the Southern Pacific Railroad—that in assessing, they assessed the space of four miles between the wharf in San Francisco and the wharf in Oakland as four miles of railroad; not assessing the steamers as steamers, but assessing it as four miles of railroad.

Q. That was the case of the Southern Pacific? A. Yes, sir.

Q. The tax case of 1884? A. No; I am now speaking of the first case. Now some one of these cases, of the later cases, referred to that as the testimony in that case, and necessarily the same findings followed.

Q. That is the reason you found the way you did, because other cases were referred to? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Look at the case of The People vs. The Southern Pacific Railroad, the case of 1884? A. They assessed that as road. They didn't mention steamers. Then there was an effort to prove about the Solano in some of these cases; that these steamers were assessed; that was struck out; that four miles from Oakland to San Francisco was found in these earlier cases to be assessed; and some one of these later cases referred to the stipulation in those cases.

MR. COOMBS: You say that the testimony showed that the steamers were assessed; what was the nature of the testimony; was it documentary? A. I think they had the Board of Equalization before us; I think so.

Q. Did you have their books? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And found from the testimony of the Board that they had made the assessment? A. I think so; that is my recollection. It is five years ago, and I have not looked over this matter at all.

MR. DAMRON: That was before the tax case of 1883? A. Yes, sir; the distance of four miles from the wharf at the end of the road, the Bay in San Francisco, across the Bay of San Francisco to the wharf of said defendants' road at Oakland Mole, Alameda County, over which freight is carried by the said railroad, was assessed to the said defendant as four miles of said road, at the same amount as any other portion of said road.

Q. Now if there had been a stipulation that steamers or fences were not assessed for any of those years, as a matter of course the finding would have conformed to that agreement? A. Yes, sir.

Q. But it was owing to the stipulation? A. Now, in these last cases the stipulation referred to some of these cases. And this one case was submitted on the testimony in those cases; and then there was a provision added that they might file an affidavit of the Clerk of the Board of Equalization as to whether they did in fact in those years assess them or not. Those affidavits were never filed; at least I never saw them. The new finding went off on the prior case.

Q. Did all these cases that went to the Supreme Court of the United States have a finding that the Federal franchise had been assessed?

MR. JOHNSON: Oh, no.

MR. SEAWELL: Some of them didn't involve a Federal franchise.

MR. DIBBLE: There was a fundamental franchise question in all the cases, under the fourteenth amendment.

THE WITNESS: Each finding was adapted to each particular road.

MR. DUNN: Do you know in whose handwriting this is? "Said assessment included all property and kinds of property mentioned in Section 3665 of the Political Code of California," etc. [Showing.] A. I don't know whose handwriting that is, but I think it came to me with that in it, and there was no objection to the finding.

Q. Do you recollect of any objection to that finding in any of the other cases? A. No, sir; I don't recollect any objection to any findings, except those about the fences and steamboats. That, I am satisfied, was in there when it came to me, and in there when it went to the other parties.

MR. DIBBLE: There was a gentleman here the other night, and I want to ask the committee if any member of the committee knows who he was or is? He was a tall gentleman. He made a remark to me the other evening and I didn't at the time think of the significance of it. We were speaking of Harvey Brown being here, and he said Harvey Brown couldn't tell me anything about it, because he had prepared the findings himself. I spoke to Harvey Brown, and he said he did not prepare the findings. Mr. Haymond was in Europe at the time. Brown says he didn't prepare the findings. They had some outside attorney.

MR. SEAWELL: It was Governor Johnson.

MR. DIBBLE: Then we must have him here.

MR. JOHNSON: The records in these tax cases consist of the complaint, the demurrer, if any, the answer, the findings, and the judgment? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Anything else? That is the record, is it? A. Some of them have got the stipulation and the petition to remove.

Q. That makes up the record in those cases? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in 1885—you stated your recollection as to the attorneys in 1884. In 1883 and 1885 were they pretty much the same attorneys? A. I think they were; I don't remember when Mr. Marshall came in. It seems to me Mr. Hart was in.

Q. Mr. Marshall was in in 1883, 1884, and 1885? A. He came in in January, 1884.

MR. COOMBS: He was elected in 1882.

THE WITNESS: Nobody ever supposed that any of these cases would ever go to the Supreme Court. Perhaps they were not as acute in looking out for those things as they otherwise would have been. It may be they did not contest them quite as sharply as they would if they had been the original case. But allow me to express my opinion; I think those gentlemen acted in entire good faith. I saw nothing to indicate anything to the contrary. I think they contested every point.

MR. DUNN: Now, when the Santa Clara case was tried, there was some oral testimony to show that fences had been assessed, and yourself and Judge Field found that fences had been assessed? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Our Supreme Court decided in June, 1883, about the time the Santa Clara case was tried and determined, that the State Board had no authority to assess fences; that they should be assessed by local Assessors. Of course, the Board, of which I have been a member since 1883, have not assessed those things? A. I don't remember ever seeing it in the Supreme Court until I saw it referred to in our Supreme Court decisions.

Q. We were especially careful to avoid the assessing of steamers, and while there was no decision of the Supreme Court, we thought it was certainly policy for us to avoid assessing fences when you gentlemen decided that they should not be assessed? A. That was either overlooked in the stipulation—we made a proviso that they might file those affidavits; they were never filed.

Q. The agreement in this stipulation was that the evidence of the Board of Equalization should be taken as to whether fences had been assessed, and as to whether steamboats had been assessed: and, of course, that affidavit was never filed, and, consequently, you had no evidence as to these particular assessments? A. No, sir; it went back to the testimony of the prior case.

Q. This distance across the bay, the records of the Board of Equalization will show that the Board assessed four miles in San Francisco, down to the water, and then we jumped across the water and commenced again at the Oakland Mole. If you notice the finding, that four miles contained in the Southern Pacific: it does not cross over at all? A. That was an oversight.

Q. The Southern Pacific for 1884; the finding shows that there we assessed four miles on the Southern Pacific road—it was intended to apply to the Central Pacific? A. That was an oversight.

Q. Of course that was intended to be in the Central Pacific? A. Yes, sir; I know we had to change some findings from one to the other; where we got a finding pasted on to the wrong one we had to change it. This is very likely the same kind of a mistake. In those numerous cases mistakes of that kind will sometimes occur.

MR. COOMBS: How many cases were pending at that time? A. Fifty or sixty; all the counties in the State. I know in one place we had to transfer the finding from one to another; it got stuck on to the wrong one.

Q. Some of those were branch lines and some belonged to the regular system? A. Yes, sir.

MR. JOHNSON: Since, therefore, the tax case of 1882, there has been no evidence in your Court upon which stipulations were based, except prior stipulations? A. No, sir.

MR. DUNN: The decision in case of California and Northern Railway Company shows that the point that the Supreme Court decided upon was that the steamers were blended in the assessment? A. That must have been under the general provision; that didn't attract my attention. Probably they didn't notice it either.

MR. JOHNSON: There was no objection raised? A. Probably they didn't notice it.

Q. Of course you wouldn't object to it? A. My attention was not attracted to it, that it would cover it. I saw no specific testimony in the case.

MR. DUNN: The point I desire to impress upon the committee is this: that there certainly could not have been any Federal franchise in the California Pacific or the Northern Railway; there were no fences in there. Consequently the Supreme Court would have been compelled to determine this question as to whether our system of assessment was in violation of the law or not. But it went off on some other question.

THE WITNESS: Look at your record. Just take this conglomerated mass and turn to your record, and you will find there were no steamers in that.

MR. DUNN: You will find in all these cases there were steamers. A. Then that probably was an oversight.

Q. There it is, you see; this is the California Pacific. A. It never occurred to me before that we included it. There was no objection made to it.

Q. Do you remember the fact as to whether there was not a stipulation made at the time those cases were before the Court, which did not contain the question of Federal franchise, that if the other cases which didn't go to the Supreme Court of the United States should be reversed upon points not involved in those cases, that then the State might take advantage of that and try those cases? A. I don't believe I ever saw any stipulation of that kind. That would be an after consideration. I don't believe I ever saw such a stipulation.

Q. There are differences between these roads; some involved Federal franchises, and some did not. In case Federal franchises were not involved there was an agreement to that effect; that then these other cases might be opened with new findings? A. That would not come before me in the trial of these cases. Now, if you hadn't called my attention to that, I should never have thought that included steamboats.

Q. That is the general finding? A. Yes, sir.

MR. JOHNSON: Section 3665, as amended in 1883, speaks of excepting steamboats; but then it is described as property in Section 3665, and this general finding is that the property described in Section 3665 was assessed, excepting depots, shops, and so forth. A. That was in general terms.

Q. If there had been a special finding, your attention would have been called to it? A. Yes, sir.

MR. DUNN: Here is that decision, Judge? [Showing decision.] A. They got that in under the general clause; that never attracted my attention before.

Q. There was no objection urged before you? A. No, sir; very likely it escaped their attention just as it did mine. That is the one that has got this written; it did not attract my attention. And, in fact, as I said before, perhaps we would have been more astute if we supposed it would ever come before us again at all. The question was before the Supreme Court, and we never expected these cases to come up before us again. Certainly nobody was more chagrined in reference to the matter than I was.

MR. DUNN: That is one of the objections we have had to the decision in the California Pacific Railroad case. We would have had a decision in that, if that case had not gone off on that point.

MR. DAMRON: The Supreme Court did decide the case of The People of the State of California vs. The Central Pacific Railroad Company upon the Federal franchise question.

MR. DUNN: It is one of the points.

MR. DAMRON: Another one was the fences, etc. Now then, the stipulation was intended to cover that point, so that if the Supreme Court did reverse it upon questions not in that first case, that the other cases might be taken to the Supreme Court, after having special findings made. Were judgments ever entered in the cases?

MR. SEAWELL: The Federal franchise was the only question of principle.

THE WITNESS: I don't remember that I have ever seen that stipulation before, and I don't know as I could decide that before the question was brought up before me, and considered. If you were to bring the case up, and we tried them, I would hear them; but I am not prepared to say now as to that matter.

MR. DAMRON: Would these other cases, I don't know the titles of them—the California Pacific and the Northern—were they brought in the Circuit Court?

MR. DUNN: Yes, sir.

THE WITNESS: There were some findings I struck out.

MR. COOMBS: What is the status of those cases now? A. Judgment for defendant, I believe. There is one—that must have been one of the old cases—there must have been testimony to establish that finding in there somewhere. There must have been testimony to establish that finding.

MR. DUNN: I presume that would be the record of the Board of Equalization as to the description of the property? A. That must have gone off on the testimony of one of those first cases.

MR. DUNN: I think so, because the records were never presented in these cases. A. It went off on the stipulation in one of these early cases. Here are some of these last words that I struck out. [Showing.]

Q. About the fences and the steamboats? A. Yes, sir.

Q. But still they are contained in that general provision? A. Yes, sir; you see that escaped my notice; my attention was not attracted to it.

MR. JOHNSON: The section was probably not read to you at all. A. Very likely the attorneys overlooked it in some way; and, especially, as I say, they never expected in these cases that it would be a matter of any consequence. Of course they would not be as astute as they would in trying the original case.

MR. JOHNSON: In appealing a case, or suing out a writ of error, there is nothing but sending up the transcript? A. Yes, sir; in all of these last cases it went up, these findings were not in it, but the franchise I suppose was. I don't think the decision met the point as to the steamers or fences.

MR. DUNN: The case of 1885, my recollection is that in one of the cases it did contain a provision that the steamboats were stricken out at the suggestion of the defendant, and I think that is the only case. A. Yes, sir.

Q. Except this one case? A. Yes, sir; my attention had not been attracted to that before this morning, in any of those cases. My attention was not attracted to that, and I presume the attention of the attorneys was not. They were not as astute as they might have been.

EVENING SESSION.

HARVEY BROWN.

Called and sworn.

MR. LEZINSKY: Judge Brown, were you the attorney of record for the various railroad companies in what are known as the tax cases; were you not? Answer—In a large number; yes, sir.

Q. You were the attorney of record in the cases particularly for the taxes of 1883-4? A. I presume so.

Q. Well, I will show you the papers in those cases. These are the papers in the case of The People against The Central Pacific Railroad Company, in the case known as No. 3263. A. Mr. Foulds appears to have been the attorney of record.

Q. He signed the answer, but you signed the stipulation upon which these cases were submitted to the Court? A. It appears to have been signed by—that is Mr. Haymond's handwriting.

Q. Do you know anything concerning the findings? A. What is the date of that stipulation, if you please?

Q. October 21, 1884. Do you know anything concerning the findings in this case? A. No, sir; I don't know anything about it. It is something I had nothing to do with; in getting up the findings.

Q. You simply know nothing concerning the findings in that case? A. No, sir.

Q. Here is the record of the case.

MR. CROSS: What case is that?

MR. LEZINSKY: Three hundred and sixty-two.

MR. CROSS: Isn't that one of the State cases?

MR. LEZINSKY: All the cases we treat with in this case are State cases.

MR. CROSS: You mean to say that those you are going to ask about to-night are State cases?

MR. LEZINSKY: I mean to say, all these cases we are treating here, are State cases.

MR. SEAWELL: That may be, so far as the examination is concerned, but I don't know that we are restricted to them.

MR. CROSS: Those Santa Clara and San Mateo cases were county cases.

MR. LEZINSKY: The record here is all of State cases.

MR. SEAWELL: That is right.

MR. LEZINSKY: Now this is the case for the taxes for 1884 against the Central Pacific Railroad Company? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were the attorney of record in that case? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you signed the stipulation? A. Yes, sir.

MR. CROSS: What is the number of that case?

MR. LEZINSKY: Three thousand six hundred and sixty-eight.

Q. And you signed the stipulation upon which this case purports to have been submitted? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now the seventh clause of this stipulation is that the case is hereby submitted to the Court for its findings and determination upon testimony offered by the defendant tending to prove the averments in Subdivisions 25 and 25 A of said answer, and upon testimony offered by said plaintiff tending to disprove the testimony in the said paragraph contained? A. Yes, sir; it so appears.

Q. Calling your attention to paragraphs 25 and 25 A of the answer; paragraph 25 of the answer is an allegation that the State Board of Equalization is making said pretended assessment of said roadway of said defendant, it willfully, etc.; and paragraph 25 A of said answer is a paragraph containing the allegation that the State Board of Equalization included in the assessment the value of steamboats? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, I will ask you whether or not any testimony at all upon those points was offered before the Court? A. I don't know, sir. I was not in Court at the time that case was tried or disposed of.

Q. Do you know that the case was ever tried? A. I don't know anything about it, except I understood there were a lot of cases that were submitted in the same way, on stipulation; and whether testimony was taken or not I don't know. I was not there at the trial. I can tell you in a word what I know, if you will allow me. There were a lot of cases; I don't know what year—

MR. DIBBLE [Interrupting]: Where there is not any dispute of fact as to this matter I don't see the use of taking up the time of the committee. Really, there isn't any dispute here. It was fully explained by Judge Sawyer here this morning, and there isn't any dispute between anybody that judgments were entered in these cases by stipulation; that they were submitted upon testimony taken in the Santa Clara case. Nobody pretends that any evidence was taken in any of these cases, except upon those three cases.

MR. JOHNSON: I understood it was submitted upon stipulation that the evidence taken in the other cases should be admitted in this.

MR. LEZINSKY: This is simply preliminary to the question that I will ask Mr. Brown.

MR. SEAWELL: I understand that no one claims that the cases were actually tried; they were submitted on testimony and stipulation taken in other cases? A. They were submitted upon testimony taken in the case in which I participated in the trial of. There were the San Mateo cases, and other cases; they were tried at great length in the Circuit Court, and I participated in those trials from the first to the last, and participated in preparing the findings in those cases. In reference to those other cases which were submitted on stipulation, or stipulation and some testimony, I don't know anything about them, for I was not in Court at the time; although I am the attorney of record; and some papers I signed in person and some papers were signed by other parties, as any lawyer in the department had a right to sign my name.

MR. CROSS: Mr. Lezinsky, was this one of the cases that Mr. Delmas testified to the other evening?

MR. LEZINSKY: Mr. Cross, I don't know really whether that was; I don't know really whether any such stipulation was made. I have no knowledge that any such stipulation was made.

MR. CROSS: Mr. Delmas stated that there were a number of cases which were tried, and then it was stipulated that the evidence taken in that case should be considered as taken in all those cases, so far as applicable to those cases. Do you understand that this is one of those cases?

MR. LEZINSKY: This is a subsequent case. Mr. Delmas had nothing to do with these cases; he testified to that.

Q. Certainly when you signed this stipulation you knew what its objects were? A. I suppose I glanced it over. Of course, if I sign a thing in person I look it over to see what it is at the time.

Q. Now, concerning the seventh clause of this stipulation, what was the intention of that clause of the stipulation? A. Well, sir, that is more than I can tell you, what the intention was. I will read it and see if I can glean it from the stipulation itself: "And upon testimony offered by plaintiff tending to disprove the averments in said paragraphs contained."

Q. I might suggest to you, Judge, wasn't the object or the intention of that clause of the stipulation, that testimony of this character that was contained in this other case which was mentioned should not be applicable to this case, but that testimony upon these points should be offered in these cases? A. Well, I think that would be capable of two constructions, perhaps; that would be one construction, perhaps, to place upon it. I have not read the stipulation to ascertain the full bearing of it. I should suppose that if that referred to testimony offered in this case that it must have been offered at this time, else it would have been "by testimony to be offered by defendant." That does not appear to be the case. It is "by testimony offered by the defendant," and back here it relates to testimony in cases already determined. I don't know who is the author of that stipulation; I don't know, and therefore can't determine what was in the mind of the party who offered it. But it seems to me that if testimony was to be offered it would so state, but it does not appear.

MR. CROSS: I should think that would be determined by the committee, by what the record says. I don't understand this method of changing the record by calling witnesses as to its purport.

MR. LEZINSKY: I would like to ask you whether or not you know who prepared the findings that are a part of that record? A. I don't know, sir. I know I didn't, that is very certain.

Q. You don't know who did? A. Undoubtedly it was prepared in the office, there, by some one in the employ of the company. There is no doubt about that, because the findings, as I understand it, were in favor of the defendant.

MR. LEZINSKY: Yes, sir.

MR. CROSS: Is it a practice in the United States Circuit Court for the Judge to order the party in whose favor the decision is, to prepare the findings? A. I so understand it, sir. At all events, in the cases we tried at such length, we prepared the findings; and there was a great deal of labor in doing so. The findings were submitted to the Court, and then objections were raised, and other findings were submitted, and finally the whole thing was submitted to the Court for determination. There was a vast amount of work attached to the matter of findings, and there were a great many objections raised to them, and it was some time before they were finally settled.

MR. LEZINSKY: Those were the cases of 1881-82? A. As I told you, I don't know what year they were; but they were the only cases that I know of that were tried at length in the Circuit Court. The Santa Clara case was one of them.

Q. They were all cases by the various counties against the railroad company? A. I think there were one or two cases—I think Judge Terry had brought one or two cases in the name of the State; the People on behalf of Fresno County.

Q. Well, now, you say you don't know who prepared these findings? A. I don't know; I didn't.

Q. Do you know who presented them to Judge Sawyer to be signed? A. That I don't know; I did not.

Q. Do you think that fact is capable of being ascertained in your office? A. Well, I should think so; it was somebody either in the office or somebody in the employ of the committee who prepared those findings and submitted them to the Court; but who it was I don't know.

Q. Then further than signing the stipulation, you had no further connection with the matter personally? A. No further personal connection with the matter. I cannot recollect that I had any further connection with it beyond the stipulation.

Q. And you yourself were not the author of the stipulation? A. No, sir.

MR. CROSS: I don't know that handwriting. Do you know that handwriting, Mr. Lezinsky?

MR. LEZINSKY: No, sir.

THE WITNESS: I can tell you that handwriting on that page [showing]. That is the handwriting of Mr. Cammett, a copyist in the office.

Q. The rest is printed? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is simply the formal beginning of the findings? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whose handwriting that is in? I now call your attention to the finding, which is a portion of Finding 15? A. A portion of Finding 15.

Q. And is in these words: "Said assessment included all property and all kinds of property in Section 3665 of the Political Code, as amended March 9, 1883, excepting depots, stations, shops, and buildings erected upon space covered by the right of way, which last mentioned property was assessed, as provided in said section, by the local Assessors." A. That looks like the handwriting of James P. Brown, a clerk in the department and a son of mine; it looks like his handwriting, and I think it is.

Q. Did he have the matter of these findings in charge as principal? A. I presume he did. In fact he was more conversant with this class of litigation than anybody in the office.

MR. CROSS: Judge, referring to these findings, you are familiar with the practice in the Circuit Court and other Courts? A. Somewhat; yes, sir.

Q. Who generally prepares and presents findings? A. The winning party does. That has always been my experience in the matter.

Q. The attorneys for the winning party do? A. Yes, sir; that has been my experience.

Q. And the railroad party having won this case, it was the ordinary procedure for the attorneys for the company to prepare and present findings? A. Yes, sir; to prepare and present findings for the Court's approval.

Q. Were those findings signed just as presented, or were they altered? A. I don't know; I know the Court altered our findings in the case. I was present and saw them altered very materially.

Q. And these findings show upon their face that large numbers of them have been cut out, and interlined, and changed? A. Yes, sir.

Q. There is nothing unusual, then, in the practice; there is nothing unusual in this particular case from the ordinary practice of the Court in the fact that the attorneys for the winning party presented the findings? A. Not at all; it is the common practice, as I understand the practice.

MR. LEZINSKY: Nobody has ever disputed that statement; it has been reiterated and reiterated by every one connected with this matter. A. The party winning presents his findings to the Court.

Q. It is the practice in the State Courts as well? A. The opposite counsel suggests such amendments as he sees proper, and then the Court determines between them.

Q. Upon the hearing the Court determines what the findings shall be? A. Yes, sir. I know in our case we had several hearings before the Court came to a conclusion. It took a great deal of time to prepare the findings, and there was a great deal of labor attached to it, before a final conclusion.

Q. They were discussed before the Judge by the attorneys of the respective parties as to what the findings ought to be under the evidence and the record in the case? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Those cases you refer to now are cases for the years prior to this case? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Your statement is not at all connected with this case? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know anything at all about it? A. No, sir.

Q. You don't know anything about them at all? A. No, sir.

MR. CROSS: You simply know what the practice was? A. Yes, sir.

GEORGE A. JOHNSON.

MR. LEZINSKY: General, there has been some statements made here to the effect that there has been an effort on the part of the State authorities to delay or hinder the decision by the proper authorities, of the question of whether or not the State Constitution upon the question of taxation of railroad corporations is at variance with the fourteenth amendment of the Constitution of the United States. I will ask you what has been the position of yourself and your office upon that point? Answer—I came into office in January, 1887. During the year 1887, I caused to be made an application to the Supreme Court of the United States for the advancement of these cases; that is to say, the following cases: The People of the State of California vs. The Central Pacific Railroad Company, involving the taxes of 1885; The People of the State of California vs. The California Pacific Railroad Company, involving the taxes of 1883; The People of the State of California vs. The Central Pacific Railroad Company, involving the taxes of 1883; The People of the State of California vs. The Southern Pacific Railroad Company, involving the taxes of 1883; The People of the State of California vs. The Northern Railway, involving the taxes of 1883. The taxes of 1884 were not appealed when I came into office, and I simply appealed those cases; that is, I appealed one of the cases.

Q. When you said the taxes of 1884, didn't you mean the taxes of 1885?

The taxes of 1885 were not appealed when you went into office? A. I think they were; I can tell you in a moment. I think the taxes of 1885 were appealed. Yes; here is the bond, filed July 28, 1886. The taxes of 1885 were appealed; the taxes of 1883 were appealed; but the taxes of 1884 were not appealed, and I took an appeal in one of the cases—the case of The People vs. The Central Pacific Railroad Company, which is No. 1157 in the Supreme Court of the United States. It is numbered there No. 1157. But, as I was going to say, during the first year of my term I made an effort to get those cases advanced, and I succeeded in getting them advanced; so the application for advancement was heard at the October term, 1887. The motion was granted for advancement, and the case came up early in January, 1888. The reason I had that motion made and took part in conferring in respect to what should be set out in the motion—the reason I did so was to have this very constitutional case settled that I speak about. That is to say, the constitutional question, whether or not the provision of the Constitution of California which prevents the railroads from deducting their mortgages—whether that is constitutional under the Constitution of the United States? I wanted to get that question settled. In other words, I wanted to get the Federal question settled, and my idea in getting this case advanced was to get the Federal question settled, so as we would know whether the provisions in our Constitution were in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution of the United States or not. In other words, if they were not constitutional, that the matter might come up for this Legislature—this present Legislature, now in session—and that this Legislature might submit a proposition to the people to amend the Constitution, if it required any amendment. So far as my office is concerned, and I believe so far as Mr. Dunn's office is concerned, I believe our efforts have been systematic to get the cases advanced, in order to have these Federal questions settled. I will state how I handled the case: For instance, there were some cases in which the Controller appointed Mr. Delmas as the attorney, and the case came up before Judge Levy, and he sustained the demurrer to the complaint, and judgment followed on the demurrer; and then Mr. Delmas appealed to the Supreme Court of this State. I was not so particular about getting those cases advanced, because they were State cases set up in that demurrer. What I wanted to get settled was the Federal question. So I made every effort I could to get the cases at Washington advanced, so as to get these Federal questions settled, hoping that the record would be eliminated in said cases, and the Court might see its way clear to pass upon those Federal questions. But the sequel was that the Court held that they were State questions which were involved in these cases submitted to it. In other words, they held that these cases involved either a Federal franchise or the assessments of steamers or the assessment of fences by the State Board of Equalization. That being so, I don't suppose there could be any pretense on the part of any one that those cases gained in the Supreme Court of the United States. In other words, if the State Board of Equalization assessed franchises that would be fatal; if they assessed fences that would be fatal to the case; and if they assessed steamers that would be fatal to the case. All these cases which were before the Supreme Court, at which I appeared there at Washington, in all of them the findings showed either that a Federal franchise was assessed by the State Board of Equalization, or that steamers were assessed, or that fences were assessed. So, as a matter of course, we are bound to lose those cases; there was no alternative.

Q. In the cases of 1884, what was the condition of those cases when you took your office? A. The cases of 1884?

Q. Those were the cases which you say you appealed? A. I think in 1884—the cases of 1884 had been decided some eighteen months before I came into office. Let me see; here are the findings: September 25, 1885. I went into office January, 1887; that would be fifteen months. These findings in the cases of 1884—that is to say, these mutilated cases, where these pasters occurred—those findings had been in the records of that Court fifteen months.

Q. And the judgment roll had been made up for fifteen months? A. Yes, sir; I had nothing to do with the making up of the record. That is to say, the judgments were all entered in the cases of 1883-4-5 before I came into office—the judgments were entered and the findings were signed. I just simply appealed. As a matter of course, I had nothing to do with these judgments. There was a stipulation, though, that the decision of one case should carry with it the decision of the other cases.

MR. SEAWELL: In two or three cases there, General, there is a stipulation. Those cases don't involve a Federal franchise. There is a stipulation that if the facts in these cases differ from the others, that there may be new findings, and that the cases may be appealed.

Q. Well, I have found it out. As far as that is concerned, as far as the taxes of 1880 and 1883 are concerned, my impression is that all these records show this: That these findings include all property which is described—all property and kinds of property mentioned in Section 3665 of the Political Code of California. That being so, if those cases had that provision in them, in the findings, why, under the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, as I understand them, I don't think there is any doubt about them on the part of anybody. That language includes steamers, and that would be fatal to all the cases of 1883. In other words, I regard the taxes for 1883 as lost entirely, unless there is a reassessment; unless there is a reassessment by the Legislature to reassess the companies, I regard the taxes of 1883 as lost. I regard the taxes of 1884 as lost for this reason. Now, that case that was appealed was The People vs. The Central Road, The People vs. The Central Pacific Railroad. That case included—the findings included the Federal franchise, and included steamers. That is to say, included this language, that all property was included in the assessment by the State Board of Equalization, as described in Section 3665, except depots, stations, and such like. And it includes fences. So those three things being included, why, as a matter of course, that would be fatal to the entire case of 1884, because there would be the same point. As I take it, there would be the same case involved—the same questions involved in those cases of the Central Pacific, which was in all these other cases. And so therefore I maintain that the taxes of 1884 are lost. As far as the taxes of 1885 are concerned, the status of that seems to be something like this: The Supreme Court decided the case that was appealed; that is to say, The People vs. The Central Pacific, involving the taxes of 1885, they decided that adversely to the State, on the ground that there was a Federal franchise involved. But I am not sure that was the only point they decided that case upon, because if you will take the findings you will find this same language, too, as I recollect—if I am wrong I wish somebody would correct me—the language is, that the property assessed by the State Board of Equalization includes all the property mentioned in Section 3665.

MR. LEZINSKY: I don't think that is so. A. Is that not so?

MR. DAMRON: Yes; they decided on the ground of the franchise and on the ground of the steamers.

MR. SEAWELL: The case of the Northern Railway is where that stipulation comes in? A. Here is the finding. Here are the findings in this case, involving the taxes of 1885: The State Board of Equalization in making the said assessment pretended to assess to and against the defendant the full cash value of said railroad, roadbed, rails, rolling stock, and franchise, as described in Section 3665, without deducting therefrom the value of the mortgage, etc. But there is something else that is in the finding. This is Finding 21: Said assessment included all property and kinds of property mentioned in Section 3665 of the Political Code of the State of California, as amended March 9, 1883, excepting depots, stations, shops, and buildings erected upon the space covered by the right of way, which last mentioned property was assessed by local Assessors, and excepting steamboats. Mr. Marshall made the following stipulation: "It is hereby stipulated by the parties to the above entitled action that a trial by jury is hereby waived, and that said cause shall be submitted upon the assessment roll for the year 1885-86, in so far as it relates to the taxes claimed in the complaint herein, and upon the testimony heretofore taken and submitted in this Court in other actions against the same party and against the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, the San Pablo and Tulare Railroad Company, the Northern Railroad Company, and the California Pacific Railroad Company, which testimony shall be treated as given in this case, and as though all the facts related as well to the assessment and taxes for the year 1885-86 as though said year had been mentioned in said testimony, except the testimony relating to the taxation of fences, which, for the purposes of this case, and by the consent of the defendant, is omitted."

Q. Is that all of that stipulation? A. That is all of this particular stipulation, but there is another stipulation I found out afterwards—I found out within the last ten days.

MR. HYDE: That is the one we saw in the city. We saw the original. A. Yes, sir; I believe so. Mr. Dunn says he found this out first within the last ten days also. There is another stipulation besides this. Here is a stipulation of the Northern Railway Company. I believe they are all copies; there are several cases, you know; that is, they are all copies of one original. That is the stipulation: "Circuit Court of the United States, Ninth Circuit, District of California. The People of the State of California vs. The Northern Railway Company, and three other companies, No. 4015." That is, I suppose, the Northern Railway Company. "It is hereby stipulated that jury trials in the above entitled actions are hereby waived, and that said cases may be submitted to the Court upon the testimony referred to in the stipulation this day made and filed in the case of The People of the State of California vs. The Central Pacific Railroad Company, subject to the same terms and conditions. It is hereby further stipulated that special findings of fact in all of the above entitled actions are waived. It is hereby further stipulated and agreed that the said case of the People of the State of California vs. The Central Pacific Railroad Company shall, by the losing party, be taken to the Supreme Court of the United States, and that the decision of the said Court in said case shall be applicable to, and be treated by each party as the decision of said Court in the above entitled actions, it being the intention and desire of the parties hereto to save the expense of separate writs of error, and that all of the above entitled actions shall abide the final decision of said Supreme Court of the United States in the said case of The People of the State of California vs. The Central Pacific Railroad Company, provided that said decision shall be made upon points involved therein. And if not so made, then the judgments in any of the above cases in which the point is not involved shall be set aside and finding of fact therein shall be made. San Francisco, California, July 14, 1886. Creed Haymond, attorney for defendants. E. C. Marshall, Attorney-General and attorney for plaintiff. Filed July 15, 1886."

MR. DAMRON: Isn't that same stipulation a part of the record in the case referred to there? Isn't that same stipulation in the three cases referred to in that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Doesn't it appear in all those cases? A. Yes, sir.

Q. One of those cases was the case against the Central Pacific Railroad Company? A. Yes, sir.

Q. As a matter of fact that case was submitted upon facts involved in these cases? A. Yes, sir.

MR. SEAWELL: Your finding having been made in that case, it would not be covered—about the irregular assessment—that stipulation would not cover it? A. I say that is the question. Now I may make a motion to set aside these judgments in these other cases involving taxes in 1885; that would be for the Circuit Court of the United States to decide.

MR. DUNN: I think, Mr. Chairman, these other cases, the San Pablo and Tulare Railroad Company, the Northern Railway, and the California Pacific Railroad Company, I asked Mr. Haymond last Saturday morning if he would agree to set aside the judgment in these cases, and have them come before the United States Supreme Court with the record taken in them. A. What did he say to that?

MR. DUNN: My recollection is that he said he certainly would; and he turned to Mr. Storke and said: "You can make up the finding entirely in accordance with your own wishes, and I will agree to have the case go up on the record you make."

MR. DAMRON: My recollection is that while we were at San Francisco, the case of The People of the State of California vs. The Central Pacific Railroad Company, which was decided in the 127th U. S., contained a stipulation that if that case was decided by the Supreme Court of the United States upon any point or points not involved in these other three cases, that then the judgments which were entered in the other three cases in favor of the defendant, might be reopened, and special findings filed, and an appeal might be taken from those new findings to the Supreme Court of the United States, in which would be directly decided our right to assess under the Constitution. Now, I asked when that was done—I don't remember whether I got an answer to that question or not—when the case of the Central Pacific Company was decided. The imputation was made that the Attorney-General, who was acting at that time, was negligent at least in the discharge of his duty in prosecuting these cases; that diligence was not shown; not a due amount of diligence. A. Do you refer to cases in which judgment had been entered?

Q. The case in which he was the attorney for the State. I didn't understand there were any specific cases mentioned. A. What cases do you refer to?

Q. There is the case of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, which was decided in the 127th; and there was a stipulation there that in the event that case was decided upon questions not involved in these three cases, that then you might reopen the judgment in these three cases, and have special findings filed, from which there might be an appeal taken.

MR. CROSS: Three other cases?

MR. DAMRON: Yes; three other cases. As a matter of fact, the Supreme Court of the United States did decide that case upon points not involved in the other three cases.

MR. JOHNSON: I will give you the record. Where is 1039?

MR. DAMRON: The stipulation which you read a moment ago, is the one to which I refer. I understand that same stipulation is contained in all of those cases. A. That was the case that was appealed.

Q. This is a case that was decided before you came into office. A. Very well; how would we know anything about that stipulation?

Q. I understand it is a part of the record of the case which was decided against the People in the case of The People vs. The Central Pacific Railroad Company.

MR. LEZINSKY: It is not in the Central Pacific Railroad case.

MR. DAMRON: Were there not two Central Pacific Railroad cases?

MR. LEZINSKY: No, sir; There were three Central Pacific Railroad cases; one for the taxes of 1883, one for 1884, and one for 1885. Now, the record is in this shape—

MR. DAMRON: You read a stipulation a moment ago; what case did that refer to? A. That is in the three cases. Mr. Marshall made a stipulation, and the stipulation was filed in those three cases; but my attention was not called to it. These cases were not entered on my docket at all. I don't recollect Mr. Marshall ever mentioning anything about any stipulation or about any tax case at all. All he said the day I took possession of the office—he handed me these six cases, or five cases which were appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States.

MR. DAMRON: There were four cases; one against the Central Pacific Railroad Company, the others against three other roads, the Northern Railway Company, the San Pablo and Tulare Railroad Company, and the California Pacific Railroad Company, in which the fact was this question could not arise. In those three cases there was a stipulation filed that in the event the Central Pacific Railroad case should be reversed upon any question not involved in these three cases, that then the judgment in these three cases might be reopened and a special finding had, from which an appeal could be taken? A. The records of the Supreme Court there, as found in the papers on my docket, does not show anything. My attention was not called to it.

Q. I was desirous of ascertaining why, if this stipulation did exist, why an advantage of it was not taken? A. Simply because we had no notice. Mr. Dunn said he did not know anything about it until ten days ago. My docket does not show anything of the kind. If your contention is right these cases can be reopened.

MR. DAMRON: There is a stipulation in there that if this case is decided upon points not involved in these other cases, then they can be reopened.

MR. CROSS: Here is the fact: The Central Pacific Railroad has a Federal franchise; it has also connecting roads. The Central Pacific case was decided upon the point that the Federal franchise and ferryboats were included in one unit assessment. So that if one of those cases were taken up under this stipulation, then you would have a case there free of these questions. A. Then I am to understand that you are not opposed to setting it aside?

MR. CROSS: There are three cases in which the stipulation has been brought to your attention. The proper officers can proceed to have a case made up and taken to the United States Supreme Court, in which these questions, this Federal question and these questions of assessment of franchise and assessment of ferryboats cannot arise; because the San Pablo and Tulare and the Northern Railway has no steamboat, and has no franchise. A. If Mr. Haymond consents to it, it will save us the trouble of making a motion.

MR. CROSS: I understood some gentleman to state that he would. A.

He proposed to eliminate from these findings—have these findings only to show that these railroads were not allowed to deduct their mortgages, and to present that single constitutional question. I say I will certainly accept that proposition.

MR. DAMRON: It is not a question as to whether the attorneys for the railroad consent or not; the stipulation is in writing and is signed by the attorneys of both sides, and you, as Attorney-General of this State, can prepare findings and submit them to the Court, and then he can appeal from that. That is the only question that I am speaking about. If Mr. Marshall went out of office after the Central Pacific Railroad case was decided, then it might not be imputed against him as being a matter of negligence because he had not had these cases reopened? A. How am I to know anything about them unless I had notice? I say it is a question for the Supreme Court of the United States; unless these judgments are not set aside by consent I propose to make a motion. If we didn't know anything about the stipulation how could we proceed?

MR. DAMRON: I am not imputing any negligence to you or your office; I am simply stating what I consider the facts.

MR. DUNN: You never had any information from Mr. Marshall at all? There was nothing on your docket? A. I don't think Mr. Marshall ever said anything to me about any business in his office that I can recollect, except to hand me five records, and I can show you the very records he handed me. Those are the five records that were handed to me by Mr. Marshall. After hunting around for some time he found them. He said: "These are cases in the Supreme Court of the United States." He seemed to regard them as important, and I took charge of these transcripts.

Q. Did he call your attention to the other cases? A. No, sir; if he had I should have made a note of it; I should have taken it down with pen, and ink, and paper, and gone to work.

Q. Did he ever call your attention to these findings, any finding of 1883-84? A. No, sir.

Q. Did he ever complain of any finding of those years? A. No, sir.

Q. Did he ever offer you any assistance to direct the findings? A. No, sir.

Q. Your attention was never called; you had no docket, no information. Here were some fifteen or sixteen cases for the two years. One year I think there were six; and your attention was never called to this stipulation at all until after I came from San Francisco? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will say that anybody that would keep track of these stipulations and judgments would have a pretty merry chase? A. Yes, sir; and even that is quite a small feature in my office.

Q. When you spoke about appealing to the Supreme Court to advance the railroad tax cases that went up there, were you joined in that request by the attorneys for the railroad company? A. No, sir; I was not.

Q. Did they object to it? A. Mr. Wilson sent me a copy of a telegram that he said the Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court handed to him as coming from Mr. Creed Haymond. That telegram was against the advancement. If you desire that telegram I think I can get it.

MR. DUNN: I would like to have it filed with the committee.

MR. CROSS: Wasn't it this way: That a stipulation was presented, or offered to Mr. Haymond, stipulating that the case should be advanced, and Mr. Haymond's reply was that the Supreme Court did not permit or recognize a stipulation for the advancement of a case; that the only method of advancing a case in the Supreme Court of the United States was upon motion? A. How is that, sir?

Q. Isn't this the fact: That a stipulation was submitted to Mr. Haymond to be signed by him, which stipulation was a stipulation that the case be advanced: and that Mr. Haymond declined to sign that stipulation because the Supreme Court does not recognize the right of attorneys in that Court in cases to stipulate for an advancement of the case? A. Oh, no. I think I can get the telegram that was sent by Mr. Wilson; a copy of it.

Q. Was that all that was done, simply to ask Mr. Haymond to sign a stipulation for the advancement of the cause? A. I think I have the telegram home among my papers. If you give me time I will look for it.

Q. You are familiar with the practice of that Court to that extent, that they don't recognize any stipulation for the advancement of causes? A. Of course you have got to file a written motion, but a stipulation always helps it.

Q. Do they recognize a stipulation in such a case? A. That is not this kind of a case. This is where Mr. Haymond telegraphed to the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, and the Chief Justice handed the telegram to my associate attorney, and he took a copy of it and sent it to me. In it Mr. Haymond was opposing the advancement. It was a very different case. I recollect this: that Mr. Haymond was willing to advance one case, 1157, involving the tax of 1884. That is the case where pasters were pasted on the findings. Mr. Haymond was willing to advance that case.

MR. DUNN: That is the case where the Supreme Court of the United States went off on the point that the fences were assessed as well as the Federal franchise? A. Yes, sir; I can get the committee a copy of that telegram that I received from Mr. Wilson; I think it is at my office. Mr. Wilson was my associate there, at Washington, on behalf of the People.

MR. CROSS: That was the Washington Wilson, not the San Francisco Wilson? A. It is the Washington Wilson. In other words this is about my view of these cases, if you will just allow me for a few moments. Commencing first with the taxes for 1883; in the case of The People vs. The Central Pacific Railroad Company, judgment was rendered against the People, November 10, 1884; and in the case of The People vs. The Southern Pacific Railroad Company, judgment was rendered against the People the same day; and in the case of The People vs. The Northern Railway Company, judgment was rendered against the People the same day; and in the case of The People vs. The California Pacific Railroad Company, judgment was rendered against the People the same day. These cases were appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States on the twenty-eighth of July, 1886. The cases not appealed were The People vs. The San Pablo and Tulare Company, and the case of The People vs. The Stockton and Copperopolis Railroad Company.

MR. CROSS: Isn't there one more case right there? A. The Central Pacific case was brought by Baggett and Waymire, as attorneys, for Controller Dunn; the attorney for the defendant is J. E. Foulds; the answer is by him. Sanderson and Haymond, of counsel. On the transfer of the case to the United States Circuit Court, Mr. Marshall, the Attorney-General, signed with Waymire and Baggett the demurrer to the answer. The stipulation is signed by Foulds, Brown, and Haymond, attorneys for the defendant; and by Marshall, Baggett, and Waymire, attorneys for the plaintiff. It was stipulated in this case that the sworn statement of the Clerk of the State Board of Equalization should be conclusive upon the issue of fences and the distance across the Bay of San Francisco being included in the assessment.

The sixteenth finding says that the State Board of Equalization, in making the assessment, pretended to assess to and against the defendant the full cash value of said railroad, roadway, roadbed, rails, and rolling stock as prescribed in said Section 3665, etc.

Finding fifteen says that said assessment included all property and kinds of property mentioned in 3665—Section 3665 of the Political Code of California, as amended March 9, 1883—except depots, stations, shops, and buildings erected upon the space covered by the right of way; which last mentioned property was assessed as provided in said section by local Assessors.

This case is 1035, or as renumbered in the Supreme Court of the United States, No. 660.

The next case is the case of The People vs. The Southern Pacific Railroad Company, the same persons appearing, the same attorneys. And the sixteenth finding says: "Said assessment included all property and kinds of property mentioned in Section 3665 of the Political Code of California, as amended March 9, 1883, except depots, stations, shops, and buildings erected upon the space covered by the right of way, which last mentioned property was assessed, as provided in said section, by local Assessors."

Maslin's statement, if filed, was to be conclusive on the fence question; but it was not filed.

In the Supreme Court of the United States, Mr. Edmunds remarked upon that: "Why is not that certificate filed by Mr. Maslin?" Said I: "I will file it now, if you will give me leave." I have a statement under oath from Mr. Maslin. Mr. Edmunds did not seem to be willing to grant that: but Mr. Maslin's statement, if filed, was to be conclusive. In these findings there is nothing to show, I think, that Mr. Maslin's statement was ever filed; and the Supreme Court of the United States, inasmuch as Mr. Maslin's statement was not filed, very naturally found that other finding, that all property described in Section 3665 was assessed by the State Board of Equalization. They would very naturally come to that conclusion, there being nothing to show that Mr. Maslin's statement was filed.

Finding fourteen says: This is the case of The People vs. The Southern Pacific Railroad Company. This case shows that said assessment included all property or kinds of property mentioned in 3665, as amended March 9, 1883, excepting depots, stations, shops, and buildings erected upon the space covered by the right of way, which last mentioned property was assessed, as provided in said section, by the local Assessors.

The nineteenth finding is that the full value of all franchises was included. That is the effect of it. This case is 1336, or 631, in the Supreme Court of the United States.

The next case is The People vs. The Northern Railway Company. The same attorneys appeared.

The fifth finding is to the effect that said assessment included all property and kinds of property mentioned in Section 3665 of the Political Code of California, as amended March 9, 1883, except depots, stations, shops, and buildings erected upon the space covered by the right of way, which last mentioned property was assessed as provided by said section by local Assessors.

Maslin's statement sworn to, if filed, was to be conclusive as to the fences, but it was not filed.

This case is No. 1036, or, as renumbered, it is 662, in the Supreme Court of the United States.

The next case is the case of The People of the State of California. The same attorneys appeared.

The fifth finding says that said assessment included all property and kinds of property mentioned in Section 3665 of the Political Code of California, as amended March 9, 1883, except depots, stations, shops, and buildings erected upon the space covered by the right of way, which last mentioned property was assessed, as provided in said section, by local Assessors.

Maslin's statement was, if filed, to be conclusive, but it was not filed.

This case was numbered 1038, or as renumbered in the United States Supreme Court, 663.

And here I also desire to say—to ask this question: Why was not Mr. Maslin's statement also taken in the tax cases of 1884? I am talking about the tax cases of 1883. Why wasn't it provided that Mr. Maslin's statement should be made, should be given, should be filed, as to the fences and steamers in the cases of 1884?

This last case I have mentioned is the case against the California Pacific Railroad, No. 1038, and renumbered in the Supreme Court of the United States 663.

As far as the taxes for 1883 are concerned, I think under the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, which you can all read, that the following taxes were lost because steamers were included in that general finding: In the case of The People of the State of California vs. The California Pacific Railroad Company; The People of the State of California vs. The Northern Railway Company; The People of the State of California vs. The San Pablo and Tulare Railway Company; The People of the State of California vs. The Stockton and Copperopolis Railroad Company.

The other two cases are the cases against the Central Pacific Railroad Company and against the Southern Pacific Railroad Company; and in these two cases I don't attach any blame to Mr. Marshall, Mr. Baggett, or any one else. The Supreme Court of the State of California in June, 1883, decided that steamers should not be assessed; and yet the Supreme Court of the United States says that in these cases—in these cases the findings show that they were assessed. These were filed November 10, 1884; I believe it was 1884. These findings were filed November 10, 1884. Now this decision of the Supreme Court that steamers could not be assessed by the State Board of Equalization was made in 1883. It would be very remarkable if the State Board of Equalization, if sitting as an assessing body, should proceed two or three months afterward to assess them. They sit in August; it would be very remarkable if they, sitting as an assessing body, after the decision of the Supreme Court to the contrary, should assess these steamers, when the Supreme Court of the United States had decided the preceding June that they were not assessed. Why was not this finding eliminated? Why was not this finding, which appears to figure in all these cases so conspicuously, that the State Board of Equalization assessed all the property included in these findings, why wasn't this finding eliminated? Now this was done on stipulation, and yet I understand Mr. Baggett to say no evidence was introduced.

MR. DUNN: He said he had received a letter from Mr. Maslin, in which Mr. Maslin stated that the steamers had not been assessed. A special finding was stricken out for that reason.

MR. JOHNSON: Does he say that the letter was introduced in evidence?

MR. DUNN: No, sir; he simply received that letter.

MR. CROSS: Did he make any statement what he did?

MR. DAMRON: He stated that the stipulation of the Secretary of the Board of Examiners might be taken as conclusive evidence on the point, and he said that afterwards he got a letter from him; and they thought it was not necessary, and they put in the finding anyway.

MR. LEZINSKY: He said that letter was used in lieu of an affidavit.

MR. JOHNSON: If the case had not been advanced by the Supreme Court of the United States I don't suppose we would have heard anything of them till a year from this time. Instead of discussing this matter now I don't think we would have known what the decision was till a year from this time. By getting this case advanced, of course we gained a good deal of time.

MR. CROSS: On account of the calendar being so far behind? A. Yes, sir.

MR. DAMRON: Mr. Haymond said, down there at San Francisco, that there was a case now pending before the Supreme Court of this State? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that he was willing to insist upon an early hearing of one of these cases, or the case? Didn't he also say that he would abide by the decision of that case?

MR. DUNN: No, sir.

MR. DAMRON: That he would assist and insist upon an early hearing of the case before the Supreme Court of the United States, and would join Mr. Dunn in that regard? Could that be done and the decision obtained quicker than an appeal from one of these cases?

MR. JOHNSON: No, sir; I think not. And another thing: the issues are not made up in those cases at all.

MR. DUNN: Mr. Johnson made that statement, and I said: "Mr. Haymond, there are some cases in the Circuit Court"—I didn't know these findings you speak about in the California Pacific and Northern Railway Companies at that time—I said: "Why not take one case now in the Circuit Court of San Francisco?" and he says: "These cases are here before our own Supreme Court; why not have them decide it?" I said: "Will you be willing to abide by the decision of the Supreme Court of this State?" And he said: "No; we will appeal it to the United States Supreme Court."

MR. DAMRON: Then I am wrong. What I wanted to get at was, could it be decided quicker than it could be by taking up one of these other cases?

MR. LEZINSKY: No, sir. There is no answer in these cases, and in this other case it is all made up and the answer filed.

MR. JOHNSON: I would like to see the proposition of Mr. Haymond—what it was. It was taken down by the short-hand reporter.

MR. DUNN: Here is a communication from Mr. Haymond, and it is entirely different from the proposition as I understood what it was.

MR. CROSS: Is there any objection to the proposition of Mr. Haymond being read to the committee?

MR. LEZINSKY: I will read it. [Reading Mr. Haymond's letter to the committee.]

MR. JOHNSON: These are cases that stand on demurrer; the issues are not made up at all.

MR. CROSS: If that issue is raised, it can just as well be taken up by the Supreme Court on demurrer as it can for trial.

MR. JOHNSON: There are so many special questions involved.

MR. CROSS: There is a plain proposition here by Mr. Haymond. Take one of those cases now in the Supreme Court of the State, to have it advanced to a hearing at the very earliest date that the Attorney-General will agree to, and that when it has been so advanced, that he will stipulate to take and have it advanced to the Supreme Court of the United States, to be there heard under the ninety-day rule. Or, he says, that if the Attorney-General wants an oral argument that he will agree to have an oral argument. The Attorney-General says that the question is simply there on demurrer, but an appeal can be taken from a case on demurrer just as well as if it was on trial. He says if that is not satisfactory he is willing to have the judgment entered set aside and the case remanded to the Supreme Court; and that he is willing now to have those cases remanded, the judgment set aside, and the Attorney-General may select a case, and that when remanded he will proceed immediately to trial on that case; and that that case can then go up on the record, if you don't want to go up on the record of demurrer.

MR. JOHNSON: I have never taken those cases out of Mr. Delmas' hands. As far as these cases in the United States Circuit Court are concerned, if you will enter into a stipulation that these judgments for 1885 shall be set aside where the judgment don't involve Federal franchises, I will agree to it. He says he is willing to go to the Supreme Court on one question. I want to put that in writing in respect to this question that he is willing to go to the Supreme Court on.

MR. DAMRON: Here is a stipulation signed by Mr. Marshall and Mr. Haymond, to the effect that these other three cases, which don't have this question attached to them, may be set aside and new findings found. It requires but one thing, and that is to go to work and prepare the findings, submit them, get a decision, and then appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States.

MR. JOHNSON: I am not saying what I shall do; I am merely discussing Mr. Haymond's proposition. I am not in the habit of rushing at important business and signing stipulations in a great hurry. I presume that I can take my time, and I shall probably move on the works of the railroad in due course or have a movement made.

MR. DUNN: In answer to Mr. Cross, it seems to me in all fairness and in all candor, that there could not be a case made up that would settle this question of a violation of the fourteenth amendment of the United States Constitution better than the one suggested by Mr. Haymond in answering my question a week ago. I submit to every member of the committee if he did not turn to Mr. Storke, and if he did not say: "Mr. Storke, you can make up a case containing nothing but that question; you can make it up according to your own wishes or you can consult with anybody else, and I will agree to sign that stipulation and go before the United States Supreme Court." And then I spoke about the case in the Supreme Court and asked the question again; I said: "If our Supreme Court should decide against you, will you go to the Supreme Court of the United States?" And he said: "Yes, we will." Why, take up these cases now?

MR. JOHNSON: Well, I will agree to it.

MR. LEZINSKY: All of this matter is in violation of that matter that I understand is before this committee; taking up State cases or anything concerning the records of them. We are dealing now entirely with the decision in the Circuit Court.

Q. Now, General, concerning these cases in the year 1884, did you have any communication with Mr. Baggett concerning a correction of the record in those cases before you took the appeal in those cases? A. Yes, sir. I heard something about this mutilated record, and as a matter of course I knew the only way to find out anything about it would be to go to the attorney for the People, to the attorneys who were representing the People at that time. I didn't know where else to go, as I was not an officer at that time, so I wrote to Mr. Baggett that I would like for him to get up some affidavits; I would like to have his own and General Marshall's, and affidavits on that subject as to these pasters. I think he wrote back to me that he would assist in the matter. Mr. Baggett never to my recollection spoke to me about the matter first. I spoke to him for the purpose of employing him, expecting to pay him for his services; and I believe I did pay him for the services he rendered. So he said he wrote to Mr. Marshall, but I never heard that he got any answer. But in a conversation that I had with Mr. Baggett he stated that Judge Sawyer had said that he would go into Court and swear that those pasters were on those findings when he signed them. "Well," says I, "Mr. Baggett, if Judge Sawyer will swear to that there is no use of doing anything further about it, because this case is to be settled by Judge Sawyer. The Supreme Court of the United States is not to settle that. If Judge Sawyer will swear to that that ends the matter." So the Judge has come in and sworn that those pasters were on them when he signed the findings; and I was not surprised at all when he so swore, because in this conversation with Mr. Baggett I understood him to say so. So I took it as a fixed fact that those pasters were on at the time the findings were signed. Well, now, take the case of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, there are findings, three findings which were fatal to that case, No. 1157. One was the Federal franchise being assessed, that was fatal; another is that all the property was assessed, that would be fatal; another is that fences were assessed, that was fatal. There were three fatal things, either one would have been sufficient to defeat that case. These other cases could not involve anything else except those three findings. Therefore the decision in that case would settle the decisions of the other cases. So if you look over the tax cases of 1884, I think—that is my recollection, I won't speak positively—I think that you will find in all of those cases that general sweeping provision that the assessment by the State Board of Equalization included all property and kinds of property mentioned in Section 3665, as amended March 9, 1883; excepting depots, stations, buildings, and so forth. Of course that would include steamers, and so that kind of stipulation as a matter of course upon which the findings of those particular cases that I speak of were heard—I say that kind of a stipulation would defeat the recovery of those taxes of 1884 in all that kind of cases. That is my view as a lawyer. Of course I did the best I could under the circumstances in arguing to the Court to get away from this proposition. I saw its pertinence and I did the best I could. And, bye the bye, I will furnish the committee with a copy of my brief and argument. Mr. Haymond, on the other side, contended that that did include steamers. I will give the committee here a brief of my associate, and here is an oral argument of my own. Now as to the position that Mr. Haymond took. The finding in 1157 is that fences were included. He says here—this is his argument:

"The averment of the answer in case No. 660, is as follows: On the eighteenth day of August, 1883, the State Board of Equalization of the State of California, pretending to act under and by virtue of the powers conferred upon it by Section 10, of Article XIII, of the Constitution of the State of California, did make a pretended assessment, for the purpose of taxation, for the fiscal year of said State then next ensuing, upon the franchise, roadway, roadbed, rails, and rolling stock of said railroad against defendant.

"Said pretended assessment was not made separately upon the franchise, roadway, roadbed, rails, and rolling stock, or any properties of said railroad, but all of said property was blended together in making said assessment, which assessment was then and there so entered upon the minutes of said Board. Said assessment is the assessment upon which the several taxes mentioned in the complaint herein are based, and no other assessment than the aforesaid was ever made of said property, or any part thereof, for said fiscal year.

“Said assessment included all property and kinds of property mentioned in Section 3665 of the Political Code of California, as amended March 9, 1883, except depots, stations, shops, and buildings erected upon the space covered by the right of way, which last mentioned property was assessed, as provided in said section, by local Assessors.”

The findings in No. 660 are (page 39, folio 100) that the State Board of Equalization, under the authority of Section 10, Article XIII. of the State Constitution of California, and in the mode and manner prescribed by Section 3665 of the Political Code, made the assessment, and so forth.

A further finding in No. 660 (page 51, folios 138 and 139) is in the language of the averment of the answer above quoted.

The averments and findings in Nos. 661, 662, and 663 are the same. The averment in 664 is the same, and the finding is the same as the findings in No. 660, with this addition, “and except steamboats.” The finding in 1157 (page 4, folio 51) is that the value of fences was included. This finding disposes of that case.

The section in question provides that the Board must assess the franchise, roadway, roadbed, rails, and rolling stock of all railroads operated in more than one county; that the assessment must be made to the corporation, person, or association of persons owning the same, and must be made upon the entire railway within the State, and must include the right of way, bridges, culverts, wharves, and moles upon which the track is laid, and all steamers which are engaged in transporting passengers, freights, and passenger and freight cars across waters which divide the road. The depots, stations, shops, and buildings erected upon the space covered by the right of way are assessed by the Assessor of the county wherein they are situated.

We have now seen that the assessment in this case did include all of the property mentioned in this section, except depots, stations, shops, and buildings erected upon the space covered by the right of way and except steamboats.

It therefore included the entire railway within the State, and it included wharves and moles upon which the track is laid. The theory of the State Board of Equalization seems always to have been that it had jurisdiction over all railroad property, except depots, shops, stations, and buildings erected upon the space covered by the right of way. Mr. Delmas, who had virtually been the adviser of the State Board of Equalization for many years, said in his argument in the Santa Clara case (118 U. S., page 397):

“Fences built upon the line of the roadway are a part of the roadway as necessary to its protection, as much so as the railing of a bridge is part of a bridge, or the frame work of a tunnel is a part of the tunnel. Such has always been the understanding of the law in California, and the fences have always been assessed by the Board of Equalization.

“I have never been able to grasp the proposition that the fences are no part of the railroad which they inclose. If the defendant made a conveyance of its railroad from San Francisco to San José, would not the fences pass by the deed? Clearly as much so as a sale of my garden would convey the fence which incloses the garden.

“It is true that the steamers Transit and Thoroughfare with iron tracks laid upon their decks and used for transporting freight cars across the Bay of San Francisco from the rails on the east to the rails on the west side of the bay, are part of the Central Pacific Railroad. It is true that fences, if they do not belong to coterminous owners, are part of the railroad. It is also true that depots, stations, shops, and buildings erected upon the space covered by the right of way, are part of the railroad.

"All these things would pass by grant of the railroad; but the framers of the Constitution, for the purposes of taxation, separated railroad property, and gave to the State Board jurisdiction over the franchise, roadway, roadbed, rails, and rolling stock of all railroads operated in more than one county, and this jurisdiction was given by enumerating the things themselves.

"All other property belonging to the railroad company, whether part of its railroad or not, was left within the jurisdiction of the local authorities. It was this division of railroad property, and the vesting of jurisdiction in two tribunals to tax it, which made the tax so onerous.

"The State Board of Equalization, acting in conformity with the advice and belief of Mr. Delmas, included in its assessments everything except depots, stations, shops, and buildings erected upon the right of way. Local Assessors assessed in their respective counties all those parts of the railroad which were not included within the constitutional jurisdiction of the State Board of Equalization.

"After this decision the State Board excepted, as appears from the findings in this case, steamers, but still included the wharves and moles, which were the subjects of assessments by the local Assessors under the general laws.

"There is no doubt but under the decision of this Court and of the highest Court of California, that Section 3665 is unconstitutional, and that an assessment made in accordance with its provisions must be null and void.

"The Board in this case, according to the findings, assessed the franchise, the roadbed, the roadway, rails, and rolling stock. When it had assessed that property its power was exhausted; but it proceeded further and assessed the wharves and moles, and blended their valuations with the valuations which they had fixed upon other property.

"A wharf is defined by Webster to be a perpendicular bank or mound of timber or stone and earth, raised on the shore of a harbor, river, canal, or lake, or extending some distance into the water, for the convenience of lading or unlading ships or other vessels.

"A mole is defined by Webster as a mound or massive work formed of large stones laid in the sea, extended in a right line or an arc of a circle before a port, which it serves to defend from the violence of the waves, thus protecting ships in a harbor.

"Now, it is true that a railroad may be, and frequently in these days is, laid upon a mole, or for the convenience of lading and unlading ships, is laid upon a wharf. The rails, the roadbeds, and the roadway, notwithstanding the fact that they are laid upon moles or wharves, might be the subject of assessment by the State Board of Equalization, but these things are assessed when the assessment is made upon the roadbed, roadway, and rails.

"When the State Board of Equalization assessed the enumerated property, it had reached the end of its jurisdiction, and performed all the functions which the law conferred upon it. Wharves and moles, as such, though belonging to a railroad company, are subject to assessment by the local Assessors alone. The State Board of Equalization has no more jurisdiction, because they belong to a railroad company and are used in connection with the road, than it has over the shops, depots, and steamers, used as part of a road, or the fences built alongside of it.

"The vice of this assessment, and of every one made, rests upon the assumption of Mr. Delmas, followed by the State Board of Equalization, that because a thing would pass by grant as part of a railroad, it was subject to the jurisdiction of the Board. So tenacious has the Board been upon that subject, that, notwithstanding the decision of the Supreme Court of the State of California that steamers, though part and parcel of the railroad, were not the subject of assessment at their hands; notwithstanding this Court has decided that though fences may be part of a railroad, yet they are not subject to the jurisdiction of the Board, the Board has yielded only to the letter of these decisions, and has wantonly violated their spirit and disregarded the principle upon which they are founded.

"The principle of the Thoroughfare and Transit case, decided by the Supreme Court of California, controls here, and would be binding upon this Court, even though this Court were of a different opinion. No such difference, however, exists. Both tribunals are in harmony, and it would seem that the case at the bar and the other cases argued with it, are to end whenever the record is looked into.

"To these propositions counsel for the State make but two answers. First, they say that in these cases there is a general finding that the State Board assessed the franchise and roadbed, roadway, rails, and rolling stock, and that this general finding cannot be overcome by special findings which say that the Board included in that assessment all of the property included in Section 3665 of the Political Code.

"But when we turn to Section 3665 of the Political Code, we find the language to be entirely in accord with these findings. That section declares that the Board must assess the franchise, roadbed, roadway, rails, and rolling stock of all railroads operated in more than one county; that the assessment must be made to the corporation, person, or association of persons owning the same, and must be made upon the entire railway within the State, and must include the right of way, bridges, culverts, wharves, and moles upon which the track is laid, and all steamers which are engaged in transporting passengers, freights, and passenger and freight cars across waters which divide the road.

"As I have said, it would be seen that the assessment, in accordance with this statute, was made, as the findings say, upon the franchise, roadway, roadbed, rails, and rolling stock; but the State Board, following the directions of this statute, included in the valuations of the franchise, roadway, roadbed, rails, and rolling stock, as directed by the statute, the value of property over which it had no jurisdiction, and which, under the Constitution and laws of the State, was to be assessed and was assessed by local Assessors.

"This statute is clearly unconstitutional, and an assessment made in manner and form as directed by it is unconstitutional, because it includes within the valuation of the franchise, roadway, roadbed, rails, and rolling stock, the value of property which has already been assessed by the local Assessors."

MR. DAMRON: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask if the evidence has been concluded in the matter? As far as I am individually concerned, I think I can read Creed Haymond's argument at some future time.

MR. CROSS: General Johnson, did you ever ask Attorney-General Marshall to give you any information, which he refused to give? A. I don't think I ever had a half an hour's conversation with him in my life.

Q. Wasn't it, as a matter of courtesy, more your place to ask for information as to what had transpired while he was in office, than it was for him to volunteer it? A. No, I think not. The first time I came to Sacramento to take possession of this office—when I came here I found the office locked up and nobody in, and no porter. I could find no porter with the key. I stayed here one day and went down to the city on the ten o'clock train. I could not get into the office at all. It was my office; I was entitled to the office, but I could not get into it. Then I went to San Francisco, and of course as soon as I got into the office there was business for me to attend to. I think the first thing I did was to appear in some matter in Judge Maguire's Court. And when General Marshall came in, I don't think he introduced me to the Court as his successor at all. I was not going to ask him to do it. But I assumed the prerogatives of the office at once. I went to the office there at San Francisco, and I believe I found that office open. Mr. Marshall took a cigar—I think we both smoked—and I think he spoke about removing some pictures, that he would remove after awhile. I think there was a picture there of Gladstone, a very good one, too; he said after awhile he would remove it; and there were some other pictures. I told him that was all right, if my recollection serves me right. He spoke about some street case, where he made certain appointments. I told him it would not be my rule when my predecessors had made appointments, to remove anybody except for cause; that I didn't know of any cause for removing any of his appointees in street cases. Then he gave me the five records that I spoke of. I think that was all that was said that I can recollect about taxes or tax cases.

Q. Isn't it the custom that has been in vogue always, where one case is substituted for another, for the substituted attorney to ask for the information he may want? A. No; the way I look at that is this: There was nothing compelling Mr. Marshall to assume control of these tax cases. The law says the Controller shall appoint an attorney; the attorney did. But Mr. Marshall went into Court, and by virtue of the law that the Attorney-General has superintendence of the State business, the conduct of these cases was awarded to him. Just as soon as that was done it was his duty to put those cases on his docket for the acquaintance of the public and his successor; and whenever he made a stipulation, put that stipulation on; whenever there was a judgment to note the judgment was rendered; that would acquaint his successor with the status of the whole cases. The idea of keeping a record or docket in one of our public offices is for the benefit of his successors, so that they can look at his docket and see just exactly what cases he has to attend to.

Q. His docket was improperly kept? A. Yes, sir. There was such a mass of details that it would require a man a great while to master them.

Q. The difficulty to get up the Federal question, as I understand you, is this: that the United States Supreme Court will not decide a constitutional question, as we speak of it, if there are other questions which necessarily decide the case? A. Yes, sir.

MR. DAMRON: I think that is the history of all Supreme Courts.

MR. CROSS: They avoid difficulties whenever they can. So that you can not really accomplish anything with regard to determining the efficiency of our present method except by having the case stripped of everything except the question of conflict between our State Legislature and the fourteenth amendment of the United States Constitution. If we can get a case like that before the Supreme Court, then we can have the question decided as to whether our assessment is right or not? A. There is no trouble in getting any stipulation from me. I move for an advancement too. I am inclined to think that you have to make a motion to advance any case.

Q. In the United States Supreme Court a case can be submitted on briefs? A. We can get the case advanced: they advanced the other case for the same reason and I think they will advance this.

Q. If you desire another argument you will have to wait, but without it you could have your case advanced in ninety days. A. My associate has probably as much experience in the Supreme Court of the United States as any man there in Washington, and, perhaps, has the reputation. He regarded our procedure as the proper procedure.

Q. There is a simple rule directly on the matter of argument. A. That may be.

MR. DUNN: We don't want to take up any more time. We simply desire to file a statement, if the committee will allow us that privilege. Mr. Lezinsky will prepare it.

MR. CROSS: About Wednesday evening, we would like to have about half an hour to introduce a little more complete evidence, and a detailed statement showing the amount of taxes assessed. We propose to show before this committee, by the reports of the Controller and by mortgages on record in this State, that if the mortgages had been deducted from the properties, the real estate of the railroad, just as those against other real estate are deducted, that then the Southern and Central Pacific Railroad Companies have paid $1,000,000 more than they could be required to pay if they had been assessed just as other owners are assessed.

[Adjourned to Wednesday evening.]

MONDAY, March 4, 1889—Eight o'clock P. M.

MR. CROSS: I understand that Mr. Gildea desires to correct one item of his testimony previously given. Certainly, if that is his desire we have no objection.

MR. GILDEA: In connection with the testimony given, I examined it, and in an answer to a question by Mr. Cross as to whether the earnings of the ferries were taken into consideration by the Board of Equalization in making the assessment, I find that I made the answer that I assumed so. And in further pursuing that testimony I go on and state that I didn't see how it could be taken separately, and the question is asked and directly answered as to whether the earnings of the ferries were taken into consideration, and I still said "I think so," "I am quite certain of that." I thought at that time that the earnings of the ferries—that the ferries were a part of the Central Pacific Railroad. Each road or corporation running in two or more counties of the State are required to make a sworn statement of the total earnings, their total expenditures, their running expenses, and that shows their net earnings. I assumed that the ferries were a part of the road. I have since learned from what I deemed pretty good authority that the ferries are a private corporation; if this be true, and the ferries are not a part of the Central Pacific Railroad, then the answer was wrong. They were not taken into consideration in any manner by the Board. Nothing was taken into consideration by the Board except the sworn statement of the earnings of the road itself. And if the ferry earnings are not a part of the road, then it could not be taken into consideration by the Board at all. Of course if the ferry earnings are a part of the road, why, then, there was a mistake made; I am mistaken.

MR. CROSS: You understand that it was a requirement of the law that it was the earnings of the road or of the company? A. Each corporation is required to report to the Board their total earnings, the general condition of the road, the number of cars, the number of engines; and goes on to state precisely what they have got; their stocks, their bonds, and all that kind of thing; their gross earnings, their expenses.

MR. SEAWELL: Is that the way you ascertained the value of the franchise?

A. The way that I ascertained the value of the franchise is the difference between what the property is worth—that is, what the roadway, the roadbed, rails, and rolling stock, and the various other things—and what the business, what the company's earnings on the road, on the property, are.

Q. That is the way that you ascertained the value of the franchise? A. Yes, sir; for instance, you take a roadway a hundred miles long and not earning a dollar; they have steel rails and the same kind of service, but they have not the business. The road is not worth as much as a road in the same condition, with the same kind of service, that has a large business, and earning and in all probability is going to continue to earn for the next ten, fifteen, or twenty years, and increase its present dividend.

Q. Well, in ascertaining the value of the franchise of the Central Pacific Railroad, did you take the earnings and then deduct the tangible property from the earnings and assess the balance as the franchise? A. The franchise was not assessed by the Board of which I was a member, separately, during the term for which I was a member.

Q. It was not assessed separately? A. No, sir.

Q. Was it assessed at all? A. It was included in the general value of the road—the general property of the road. The roadway, roadbed, rails, rolling stock, and franchise were assessed, as for instance, the Central Pacific road, or the Southern Pacific road, or the Northern Railway, or the California Pacific—it simply was assessed as a road. There was no separate assessment. We did that in obedience to the instructions of the Attorney-General, who is the constitutional law officer of all the State officers, and required to give advice to us.

Q. You did, as a matter of fact, meet and assess then the line across the bay, didn't you? A. Which?

Q. Assess the boats across the bay; were they assessed in with the railroad? A. Not during our term; the boats were not assessed at any time.

Q. If you take the gross earnings, was that included in those earnings, to ascertain what the value of the franchise was? A. I just corrected my statement upon that point. The ferries, as I have been informed, are not included as a portion of the earnings.

MR. DIBBLE: How can they segregate the earnings of the ferries?

MR. CROSS: It is all one corporation, and operated as one corporation. You must have been misinformed, Mr. Gildea.

MR. DIBBLE: How in the world can they segregate the amount that would go to the ferries' company when they sell a ticket from San Francisco to Omaha? A. There is a large business of the ferries, Judge.

Q. Of course there is a large business of the ferries; and part and parcel of it is local, but there is a great deal that is not local? A. A portion is local, and that portion is included. Mr. Cross states that the ferries belong to the Central and Southern Pacific Companies.

MR. CROSS: The tickets they sell not only carry a man across the bay, across the ferry; but clear up into Oakland, or clear out into Fruitvale. A. I understand that; but it is not a portion of any particular road.

Q. They are used in connection with all roads? A. Yes, sir; and their earnings are not returned in the earnings of the Central Pacific or Southern Pacific, or any of the roads assessed by the Board.

Q. Who gave you that information? A. The Secretary of the Board.

Q. He is a very careful man? A. He is a very careful man, and I think he has it from experience which is reliable about that.

Q. Their official reports will show? A. Yes, sir; there is no question about that.

Q. You want to be correct about that? A. Yes, sir; I want to get my testimony right upon that point, and upon that matter alone.

MR. CROSS: I am indeed sorry that more members of the committee are not present, and I consider it rather strange, when so important a thing is before the committee, that the attorneys representing the other side, the Controller and the Attorney-General, do not even grace the committee room with their presence.

Now, I stated that on this evening I wished to introduce a little testimony, which would take but a brief time. I have had the matter put in the form of affidavits, which I can read in a few minutes, and which are directly to the point, and the affidavits I can make public records, such as any person can see, so that there is no danger and can be no question but that they are accurately correct.

The first is the affidavit of C. L. Lansing, who being duly sworn, deposes and says: "I am the Secretary of the Southern Pacific Company, and as such am custodian of the books and vouchers of said company aforesaid. That as said Secretary I have the means of knowing the amount of taxes paid by said company on railroad lines leased and operated by it from the year 1866 to 1888 inclusive."

There are two affidavits on this, one being made by Mr. Lansing, who had charge of this matter for the last three years, and the other by another party. "I further aver and declare, as deponent herein, that said Southern Pacific Company has paid for State and county taxes in the State of California during said time, the sum of $500,000 more than it should have paid, had the property on which taxes were so paid been assessed and taxed like the property of individuals, where deductions are made on account of mortgages. G. L. Lansing. And subscribed and sworn to."

Here is another affidavit: "J. L. Willcutt, being duly sworn, deposes and says: I am Secretary of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, and as such am custodian of the books and vouchers of said company aforesaid. That as such Secretary I have means of knowing the bonded indebtedness of said company, and through said vouchers have the means of knowing the amount of taxes paid by said company from 1880 to 1888; the average bonded indebtedness in the State of California has been during that time not less than the sum of $31,790,000. I further aver and declare as deponent herein that said Southern Pacific Railroad has paid for State and county taxes in the State of California during said time the sum of $750,000 more than it should have paid had the property of said company been assessed and taxed like the property of individuals, where deductions are made on account of mortgages. J. L. Willcutt. And subscribed and duly sworn to."

And here is another affidavit of E. H. Miller, Jr.: "E. H. Miller, Jr., being first duly sworn, deposes and says: I am the Secretary of the Central Pacific Railroad Company. I know the bonded indebtedness of said company, and through said vouchers have the means of knowing the amount of taxes paid by said company from the year 1880 to 1888. The average bonded indebtedness in the State of California has been during that time not less than the sum of $26,000,000. I further aver and declare as deponent herein, that the said Central Pacific Railroad Company has paid for taxes in the State of California during said time, the sum of $350,000 more than it should have paid, had the property of said company been assessed and taxed like the property of individuals, where deductions are made on account of mortgages. E. H. Miller, Jr., and verified before a Notary Public."

I will read one more affidavit, and that will close the evidence so far as I am concerned; and in this matter I am appearing for Mr. Haymond, who is the counselor of said company: "State of California, City and County of San Francisco, ss.—I, Creed Haymond, being first duly sworn, depose and say: That about the month of September, 1887, the Honorable Stephen M. White (now Lieutenant-Governor) came to me and represented that the Attorney-General desired him (White) to see me, and to state that the Attorney-General was anxious to have the question whether the Constitution of California, relating to the taxation of the property of railroad and other quasi public corporations, was in violation of the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution, determined by the Supreme Court of the United States, and wished to know whether I would sign a stipulation that the cases might be advanced for argument upon the calendar of the Supreme Court. I stated to Mr. White, that a stipulation to that effect would amount to nothing; that the Supreme Court would only advance the case upon statement of facts, showing that it was such a case as should be advanced, and not upon the mere stipulation of attorneys; or, in other words, that the Supreme Court of the United States would not permit the attorneys to arrange its calendar. I had just received, and had upon my table, the records upon the writs of error in the cases which the attorney desired to be advanced. I turned to the record, and showed Mr. White that under the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, already made, the question which the Attorney-General desired to have decided, would not, in all probability, be determined by the Court; that the cases would probably pass off on the questions of the taxation of the Federal franchise, or other informalities in the case. Mr. White, after examining the record, agreed with me upon this subject. I told him that I would be pleased to see the Attorney-General, and talk with him upon the subject. Subsequently, the Attorney-General called, and I went over the same matters with him. He either presented to me a written statement, or stated orally that he would make a motion to advance the cases, upon the ground that such a question was involved, and that the cases would turn upon it, and asked me to concur with him in that statement. I told him that I could not join in such a representation to the Supreme Court of the United States, because these were writs of error from the Circuit Court, and that the Supreme Court of the United States would have jurisdiction over the whole case, and could decide any question that the record raised, and had already determined that it would not decide a constitutional question, if there was any other point upon which the case could be determined. Had I joined with the Attorney-General in the representation, as requested, I believed, from my standpoint, that I would have been imposing upon the Court.

"I also stated to the Attorney-General that there were five cases pending in the Supreme Court of the State of California; that I would stipulate to take them up with him at any time the Court might determine, and bring them to a hearing. I said to him that these cases could be decided and taken up to the Supreme Court of the United States on writs of error, but that a case going to the Supreme Court of the United States from a State Court upon writ of error would only give the Court jurisdiction over Federal questions, and that it would not look into minor questions, such as whether fences had been assessed or not. I told him that we could probably get such cases before the Supreme Court of the United States as soon as the other cases, and get a decision on the Federal questions. He declined to join with me in such a stipulation, and advised me that he would apply, as he had the right to do, to advance the other cases. Having notice that the application would be made, I sent to the Clerk of the Supreme Court of the United States a telegram, of which the following is a copy:

“San Francisco, October 7, 1887. Clerk United States Supreme Court, Washington, D. C.: The Attorney-General of California advises me that he will move the Supreme Court of the United States to advance the railroad tax cases now upon its calendar. Five tax cases were tried in the Superior Court of San Francisco about the beginning of this year, and in each case judgment was rendered in favor of defendant, upon the ground that the statute of California, under which railroad taxes were assessed, was in violation of the State Constitution, and therefore void. These cases have been appealed to the Supreme Court of California, and will be heard at the January term of that Court. If the judgment of the lower Court is affirmed, it will finally dispose of all the tax cases pending in the Supreme Court of the United States. I suggested to the Attorney-General to state this fact in his petition to advance the cases, believing that the Supreme Court of the United States would not wish to pass upon that question when it was pending and about to be heard and determined by the highest Court of this State, it being a question as to the construction of the State Constitution, the determination of which, by the State Court, would be followed by the Supreme Court of the United States. The Attorney-General has said that he will not state this proposition to the Court in his petition to advance the cases, but has agreed that I may state the fact to the Court.

“The Attorney-General will be in Washington, and no doubt will agree that this statement is correct. Please be kind enough to submit this telegram to the Chief Justice, in order that the attention of the Court may be called to the fact. If, notwithstanding this, the cases are advanced, I would like to have them heard at the earliest moment possible.”

“I made the statement that the cases would be heard at the January term of the Supreme Court of California, because I then believed that upon my motion, and owing to the importance of the questions involved, the Supreme Court of California would advance them upon the calendar. I was disappointed in this, for the Attorney-General appeared in opposition to the motion and prevailed against me; hence, the cases have not been heard up to this date.

“During my statement before the Assembly Judiciary Committee a difference of opinion arose as to whether I had made a stipulation with the Attorney-General, Mr. Marshall, that the other cases, involving the taxes for the years 1880, 1881, and 1882, should abide the decisions in the San Bernardino case. Mr. Dunn thought that there was no stipulation. I knew, at the time, that there had been such an agreement, but whether it had ever been reduced to writing or not I did not know. I find in my letter book a press copy of such a stipulation, as follows:

“In the Circuit Court of the United States, District of California. County of San Bernardino vs. Southern Pacific Railroad Company. No. 2829. It is hereby stipulated and agreed by and between the parties to the above entitled action, and to the actions hereinafter referred to by number, and all recently determined by the Circuit Court of the United States, that the first mentioned actions shall abide by and be governed by the final determination of the Supreme Court of the United States in the above entitled action; and it is further stipulated that neither party will treat any of the judgments entered in said cases as consent judgments; that if necessary to avoid such treatment by the Supreme Court of the United States, the judgment in favor of the plaintiff in each of said actions may, on motion of the plaintiff, be set aside, and judgments in each of the said cases in that event shall be entered nunc pro tunc of the date of the present judgments in favor of the defendants, according to the original decision of the Court, and to have the same force and effect in all respects as if such judgments had been so entered at said time. The cases referred to and which are to abide the final decision aforesaid, are numbered on the calendar of the United States Circuit Court as follows: 2755, 3993, 2781, 2778, 3060, 3061, 2786, 2788, 3108, 2798, 2797, 3063, 2803, 3071, 2820, 2819, 2825, 2914, 2773, 2840, 2841, 3062, 2756, 3094, 2767, 2829, 3064, 2789, 2787, 3109, 2809, 2840, 2835, 2839, 3096, 3065, 3102, 3101, 3077, 2817, 2818, 2837, 3095, 3059, 2677, 2780, 3069, 3109, 3104, 3083, 2826, 2913, 2782, 2779, 3072, 3068, 2759, 3097, 2838, 3219, 3218, 2811. Dated March —, 1884. Creed Haymond, counsel for defendants, for all attorneys for defendants. E. C. Marshall, Attorney-General, State of California.

“The case intended to be referred to stands on the calendar as 2757, instead of 2829, and the latter number was entered by mistake. This stipulation is amended according to the original intention of inserting said number 2757. Creed Haymond, counsel for defendants. E. C. Marshall, Attorney-General for State of California.”

“No actions, to my knowledge, have been brought by the State of California to collect the taxes for the year 1887 upon the assessment by the State Board of Equalization. On the roll the Northern Railway, the San Pablo and Tulare, and the California Pacific Companies appear delinquent, and none of these cases involve the question of Federal franchise. If a suit is brought upon either or all of said cases, I will appear at once, and agree that the cases shall be tried at the earliest moment possible, and afford the State an opportunity to try in either of the cases the issue whether fences were or were not included in the assessment by the State Board of Equalization for the year 1887. I am willing to stipulate that said cases, if brought, shall not only be tried as speedily as possible, but after determinations by the Superior Court or Circuit Court, as the case may be, that the record may be prepared, and the cases hurried forward to the appellate Court for final determination with all possible speed. Creed Haymond. Subscribed and sworn to before me this twenty-eighth day of February, 1889. E. B. Ryan, Notary Public.”

I wish these affidavits to be filed by the committee and appear as a part of the evidence in the case.

Now, Mr. Chairman, unsatisfactory as you have already realized that it must be for me to argue this matter—this case—before so few of the committee, I still believe that wherever anything is right and once gets started, that it will roll until it reaches everybody that is interested.

Now, I will be very brief, because I know how much work there is for the Assembly to do, and how important a part the members of this committee perform. If any person, natural or artificial, believes himself unjustly dealt with in the matter of taxation, he has a right to go to the Courts and have the question of whether he has been properly assessed and taxed determined. If there is any one that has not that right, then he is denied the privileges of this government, which are accorded to everybody else.

When the Courts have decided that matter, we must either say that the Courts are right, or we must assume that we are better prepared to determine the matter at issue than are the Courts, which we have established for the purpose of determining that question.

Now, the great contention of these railroad companies as I understand them, from the very first of the trouble about these troublesome questions, has been that they had a right to be assessed upon the same basis as other people. That the same ratio upon which other people paid taxes was the ratio upon which they had a right to pay taxes also.

And that because the Constitution of the State provides that all people who own real estate in the State of California, when it comes to assessment time, may deduct the value of any mortgages upon the property, and be assessed only for the value of the balance of the property, and that because that right is denied to the owners of railroad properties, therefore that railroad properties are not assessed upon the same basis as are other people. Now, then, if they have such a contention, I do not care to argue to any man who will not immediately admit that if there are mortgages upon their properties, that they are not assessed upon the same ratio or basis as are other people. I have no time to waste upon a man who does not understand that and acknowledge that as a proper statement of the case.

Now, two members of the committee have come in since I read the evidence which I proposed to furnish here to-night. That evidence shows in the plainest, and clearest, and undoubtable terms, that the Central and Southern Pacific Railroad Companies in the State of California, have, since the adoption of the new Constitution, paid such an amount of taxes as that if their mortgages had been deducted, the same as other people's mortgages have been during all that time, from the assessed valuation of their property, they have paid more than $1,500,000 in excess of their share of taxes.

Now, I don't wish to characterize anybody improperly, but if that is a fact, and the evidence is here and uncontradicted, and every fact recited appears in the public records, because their mortgages are spread upon the records, and the amount for which they are assessed is spread upon the records, and the amount of taxes which they have paid is spread upon the records; and, I take it for granted, that if this is right for other land and real estate owners to have their mortgages deducted, then it is right for the railroad companies to have their mortgages deducted.

Now, what man knowing these facts—a man may not know these facts and form his opinion from that without them, but if he knows the facts and then makes up his opinion, his judgment corrected by knowledge, for judgment without knowledge of the facts never can be correct—what man, having these facts before him, can sit down as a legislator of the State of California, and, in good faith, say, "I will give my vote and my influence, after these people have paid $1,750,000 more than their share of taxes, I will give my voice and vote to levy a further tax upon them for that very same period in which they have paid such excess."

Now, I have something more to say. A tax which is not lawfully assessed and levied is in law no valid tax, and being no valid tax, never can be delinquent as a tax. There may be something spread upon the record which looks like an assessment and looks like a levy, but if it is not a valid act, then there can be no delinquency on those cases.

So that when the Controller of the State sends to the Assembly a report showing a certain amount of delinquency of tax due from these people, the Court has said they were due, and there has not been a suit brought since the new Constitution was adopted in any Court but that has been decided in favor of the defendants. Take the Court of Judge Levy, and Judge Levy was appointed a Judge by Governor Stoneman especially because he was known to be a man whose feelings were against the Central and Southern Pacific Railroad Companies. That was the main factor which entered into his appointment, and, yet, even he, when these methods of assessment and taxation were brought before him, had to decide that the methods were illegal and the assessment invalid. Every case which has gone to the Courts under these methods of attempting to proceed, in every case it has been decided that the methods are illegal and invalid methods. And how can a man, against the Superior Courts of the State, against the Supreme Court of the State, against the Circuit Court of the United States, against the United States Supreme Court, when they have all decided one way without a break in the whole line of decisions—what are you or I doing, standing up against all those Courts and saying that the Courts are mistaken.

Now, if the methods pursued are illegal and are invalid, what is there in a bill which simply provides that you will go at it and do the very same thing over by the very same methods? What can result from it? Only one thing can result, and that is another string of law suits to cost the State and the railroad companies a large sum of money, without anybody deriving any advantage or benefit from it.

Now, the evidence in these cases will show, and show beyond dispute, that the railroad company has been contending upon this line all the time.

Now, I want to call your attention to another thing. There has been for a long time in my party, the Democratic party, a disposition to cast censure upon the late Attorney-General Marshall; he has been publicly denounced; he has been privately denounced. A large portion of this investigation has been directed to the proposition of showing that Attorney-General Marshall signed some stipulations which he ought not to have signed; that these stipulations contained certain matters which they ought not to have contained.

Now, I take it that there is not a member of this committee who has not had some experience in tax cases. What is necessary in order to make a valid assessment of taxes, so that the man is bound to pay the taxes? You can't assess and levy taxes outside of the law. You must proceed in compliance with the law. What is the great fault that is found with Attorney-General Marshall and with Judge Sawyer as to the findings which were signed as the result of the stipulation signed by Mr. Marshall. It is this: That in the findings in those cases, was a finding that the Board of Equalization had assessed the properties named, and in accordance with the provisions of Section 3665 of the Political Code. Now, the Board of Equalization had no guide but that law. They had to go by that law; they were sworn to obey the law. If they did not obey the law, they were not acting within the law, and that is the law as laid down for them by the Legislature, in what I will denominate as the "Fileher bill." A bill which was approved and praised by the Controller of the State, and adopted largely at his suggestion. There were two things to do. Either the Court had to find that the Board of Equalization had complied with the provisions of that law in making the assessment, or it had to find that they did not comply with the provisions of that law as to how the assessments should be made. If the Court had found that they did not comply with the provisions of that law, then the assessment would have been void, because they didn't comply with the law. Is there any lawyer that does not know that? If the Court found that they did comply with the provisions of the law, then the question was not whether the Board of Equalization had done its duty and complied with the law, but whether the law which the Legislature had laid down for them to act by was a valid law. Now the finding which these gentlemen make so much fuss about, was that the State Board of Equalization had done just what that section of the Code required them to do: because the finding was made—because Judge Sawyer found it. If the Court had found that they did not comply with that section of the law, then there could not have been any tax, because the tax had not been levied according to law. So where would they have been if Attorney-General Marshall had not put that finding in there? They would have been levying an assessment and tax without authority of law at all. And yet these men find fault because this finding is in there, which was absolutely necessary to sustain the tax under any circumstances. If Judge Sawyer found, that in levying the assessment, that they had not complied with that section, he would have declared the tax invalid on account of that. There was the evidence before them that they had complied with the law, and so he found, and he had to so find. Now they blame Attorney-General Marshall for that. Now, to lawyers, I would say this—another man might not readily understand it—the Controller not being a lawyer might not understand it—when a great case is completed, and the lawyer who has conducted it, and won or lost it, looks back at the case, he is sure to see some place where he might have done better. So when Attorney-General Marshall did this work on behalf of the State, assisted by Judge Waymire, and Judge Baggett, and Mr. Delmas, when they have done their very best, and get through, and come to look back at it, they saw that there were vices, but the vices were not the vices of the Board of Equalization; they were the vices of the Court. They were not the vices of the Attorney-General. They were the vices of the statute and Constitution of the State. And the true contention for intelligent men to make with regard to this matter, men who think more of being statesmen than of being mere politicians—the true contention for such men is to amend the law until we have a valid law, and then try to collect the taxes; not to hoodwink and fool the people of this State by making them think that because we have voted for a bill to reassess taxes by a method which has been declared again and again invalid, that thereby we have performed a service for the State; for thereby we have not.

Now, a little more about these stipulations signed by Attorney-General Marshall. The Attorney-General finds fault because Mr. Marshall did not do better. Controller Dunn specially finds fault because Attorney-General Marshall did not do better, and claims that the Attorney-General of the State ought to have known better, and that he (Mr. Dunn), although not a lawyer, knows better.

Now, let me relate to you something that transpired not more than three days ago, that will show how just it is to cast this censure. There is not a lawyer here, I suppose, who does not know that when a suit is brought to recover taxes, and tried before a Court, there must be findings, which findings must cover a large number of points. First, there must be a finding that the tax was levied; next, there must be a finding that the tax was assessed; next, there must be a finding that it was properly entered in the books, that it was properly recorded here and properly done there, until the whole field of the levy and the assessment of the tax has been covered. Now, they find fault with Attorney-General Marshall for not having drawn a perfect stipulation in an entirely new class of cases. Now, Mr. Haymond having sent to this committee a communication that he would sign a stipulation by which a case would go to the Supreme Court upon these matters—tax matters—on Saturday a number of gentlemen of good standing—and I will name them—Mr. Ostrom, the Deputy Attorney-General of this State, Mr. Dunn (the State Controller), Mr. Storke, and Mr. Shanahan, without telling anybody their business, went quietly to San Francisco and took with them a stipulation in the railroad tax cases. They went to Mr. Haymond's office and presented it to him to sign. He looked at it and said: "I have signed all stipulations on behalf of the State which have been presented to me, and I will sign this one." And thereupon he signed it; and when he signed it he said: "Now, gentlemen, I have signed your stipulation, but on that stipulation you will lose the case." Now, what was the matter with this stipulation? Mr. Storke was one of these gentlemen; he handed it over to Mr. Storke. Now, what do you suppose these men—the present Attorney-General of the State, who finds fault with the past Attorney-General of the State; the Controller of the State, who finds fault with Attorney-General Marshall for having signed this other stipulation; Mr. Shanahan and Mr. Storke, good lawyers, I take it, members of this committee who are disposed to find fault with Attorney-General Marshall for having signed this stipulation; and Mr. Ostrom, the father, or godfather, at least, of this Bill No. 17. What do you suppose that stipulation contained, you lawyers? That stipulation was that the judgments and findings in three railroad tax cases in the United States Circuit Court should be set aside, and that when the judgments and findings had been set aside, that new findings should be made; and that the findings in those cases when so made, should be but one finding and that finding should be that the mortgages upon railroad property were not deducted in the assessment. Now, think of that, will you? For men who find fault because a past Attorney-General signed a stipulation which they find fault with, to go down there and show their wisdom. These men who want to cast motes out of other people's eyes, go down to Creed Haymond and sign a stipulation with him, which they take there prepared, and going secretly, telling nobody what they are going to do for fear that they will be found out, and when they have got through with what they have done, they have got a stipulation that the three cases shall be submitted to the Supreme Court of the United States upon a single finding, and that finding that the mortgages upon railroad property were not deducted in the assessment. The Attorney-General signed that on behalf of the State. These are the men who find fault with such a man as General Marshall, because before these tax cases had been litigated at all, he drew and signed a stipulation which, in the light of subsequent events, proves defective. First cast the beam out of your own eye before you try to take the mote out of your brother's eye. These men finding fault with the past Attorney-General because he signed a defective stipulation. Why, it would make a jackass laugh, if a jackass could know some law, to know of such people doing such things.

Now, gentlemen, I want to talk a little about the bill, and I want to preface what I say about the bill by calling your attention to some of the facts. This is a case of a mountain laboring and bringing forth a mouse.

Mr. Haymond then told these gentlemen what an utterly ridiculous thing they had done, and said, "Gentlemen, we want this question settled. We want it settled, so that there can be no question about it. It has been decided by the United States Supreme Court, but we want it so decided that everybody will be satisfied. When your session of the Legislature is over, come down here and I will sign a stipulation which will take a case to the United States Supreme Court and settle the matter." And I guess probably the Attorney-General, having got a little light, has sent some of his deputies down there to get a new stipulation signed; but whether it will be any better than the other I have no means of knowing. I want to talk now a little about this bill, and to preface those remarks I want to make a statement or two. A bill was presented by Mr. Ostrom in the Assembly, and by Senator Langford in the Senate, the two bills being identical, and the Assembly Bill being numbered 17—a perfect bill which was to make the railroad pay their taxes. It would not accomplish anything but that, but it would accomplish that. It was presented, and a joint meeting was called. They met and discussed the matter about two hours. What was the result of the discussion? The result of the discussion was that at the end of the discussion, after two hours, or probably a little more, they did what? Say that this bill is a good bill and we can enforce this bill? No, sir. They pulled that bill down, every part of it; they didn't leave a line of that bill. They made an entirely new one, and brought it in. And I say to you that if the Attorney-General and Controller, as little as the Controller knows about law, will sit down here and listen to any man who understands the subject of taxes talk about this bill two hours, they will pull down that bill, every line of it, and alter it again. I am not going to talk two hours about it. I am going to call your attention to some parts of the bill. Now, in the first place, let me call your attention to this fact.

MR. DIBBLE: What was done with that so called substitute; it has not been reported to the House? The report of the committee was adverse to Senate Bill No. 17. The minority report reported a substitute, so the question before the House will be what?

MR. CROSS: The adoption of the substitute as an amendment, as I understand the matter, without a doubt.

MR. DIBBLE: I don't know about that. If the majority of the committee had recommended the substitute, that would be the question before the House.

MR. SEAWELL: The evidence was taken on Bill 17, the committee declined to recommend it. The minority of the committee filed a minority report recommending the substitution of this bill.

MR. DIBBLE: Then the question before the committee will be, Shall the minority report be substituted for the report of the committee? The question will then come up in order to get this substitute before the House, the House must adopt the minority report.

MR. SEAWELL: Yes, sir; that is right.

MR. CROSS: Let me state what I should have stated with a little more accuracy. When the argument had been made upon Bill 17, the Attorney-General got up and said that the friends of the measure had concluded to present a substitute for Bill 17. The friends of the measure had concluded to present a substitute for 17: so that now, as I take it, those who are the friends of this kind of legislation bring this forward as their bill. Now, then, I want to call the attention of the committee to a few matters that make the proposed substitute utterly ridiculous in the eyes of a lawyer who has time to examine it. Now, upon what property is a tax levied, upon what property? The Code provides that the State tax is levied upon all the property of the State. The county tax is levied upon all the property of the county. That is what the taxes are levied upon. It is not levied upon the property assessed, it is levied upon all the property.

Now, let us take up this bill and just look at it. These levies were made in a particular year; there can't be any question but what the levies are all right. The State Board of Equalization, at a proper time, simply passed the resolution, or ordered that the State tax be fixed, which is the same thing as levying at such a rate. The State tax is fixed or levied at such a rate on all the property in the State; they don't say on all the property assessed, but on all the property in the State. The County Boards of Equalization, at the proper time, passed a resolution that they had levied upon all the property of the county and set a rate of taxation. Now, that is a levy made upon all the property; meanwhile assessing has been going on; some property has been assessed and some has not; some has been assessed too high and some has been assessed too low. But in every year a great deal of property escapes taxation, escapes assessment. The tax is levied upon all, but it is only assessed upon what the Assessor finds.

Now, let us see what this bill says upon that statement. I will not read the provisions of the Code, for I take it that you gentlemen are so familiar with it that when I call your attention to any particular point that we will agree on the facts.

“Section 1. Every tax, excepting poll tax, levied for the year 1882, which is invalid”—what is it that is invalid, the tax? There isn't any such a thing as an invalid tax; there may be an invalid assessment, but there isn't any such thing as an invalid tax—“which is invalid by reason of any error or irregularity in the assessment.” Now, what a bill that is. Any tax which is invalid by reason of an irregularity in the assessment. That is not what was the matter with these railroad taxes at all. It was not the tax that was invalid; it was not the levy that was invalid; it was the assessment that was invalid.

Now, what are you doing about this bill? You are passing a bill that an invalid tax shall be relieved. There has not been any such thing, and can't be any such thing. The thing that was invalid in all these railroad cases was the assessment. An assessment made in accordance with the findings prescribed by a law proved to be insufficient and invalid. But any tax which is invalid by reason of error in the assessment, or irregularity in the assessment, or in any other respect. Now, take this case, as I said before, the tax is levied upon all the property in the State, and all the property in each county. Now then, any such tax which is invalid by reason of error in the assessment or in any other respect—suppose there could be such a thing as an invalid tax. The bill then goes on to say that these taxes should be relieved. The duty of the Assessor in each county will be to go back to 1882 and make a research of every piece of property from that time to now, and if he finds any property which has escaped taxation, for any reason whatever, then he has got to go to work and assess that for $1,000, $2,000, $3,000, $4,000, $5,000, $6,000, or $7,000, according as the case may be. Now, you have got your Assessors a nice job. You pass this bill, and you go home with it in your hand, and your Assessor goes to work. This is a duty imposed upon your Assessor; he must do this thing. And when the Assessor brings you the bill and asks you how he is going to do it, are you going to tell him to go to your local banks and find out if there is anything in there that has escaped taxation for a series of years, and then find out who to assess it to? His duty is to assess it to the man originally levied for it.

MR. SEAWELL: Does that bill apply simply to personal property?

MR. CROSS: All property. It does not distinguish at all.

MR. SEAWELL: The Code says that the word property means real and personal property.

MR. CROSS: Yes, sir; that is a good answer.

Now, I will say that there is not a line or sentence in this bill which is not just as susceptible of biting criticism as are those that I have already read, but out of mercy to the committee, I don't propose to discuss them. I believe that the man that dictated this substitute, dictated that wonderful stipulation which was taken down to Creed Haymond, and which has covered them with endless glory. And there is not a thing in this bill which is as defective as that stipulation which was taken down there by the Deputy Attorney-General and the Controller.

Ask some of those gentlemen to show that stipulation to you, Mr. Chairman. I never have seen it. Ask some of those gentlemen to show it to you. Now I wish that I had time to make fun of this whole bill, but neither I nor you have.

Let me call attention next to the last section of the bill; a section which was a sort of addition, and which, when read, Mr. Storke said, "I will not vote for that bill with that provision in there." He said, "I will not vote for that bill with that provision in there." And yet I think that he feels as much ardor in the matter of trying to force these people to pay a large amount of taxes as anybody.

Now, the object of a law to the State, is what? To decide some question of right as between parties. It is always founded, or based, or called for by something that has been in dispute. Is there in the history of the world a statute which provides that after a case has been tried and decided, that the parties shall have a right to go back and make an entirely new case—a new cause of action—after the case has been decided? Is there such a thing known? Is there a man who would listen to such a proposition in regard to anything, except it was something about railroads? Is there a man in the world, a lawyer, who would listen to such a proposition as that? And yet here is this provision of this bill which does that exact thing. Until they make a new case up on facts arising entirely subsequent to the decision of the case. Let me say something about that that every lawyer will appreciate. Now, as is well known, a large number of the railroad tax cases are carried into the United States Circuit Court, and any of them can be carried there, and they are carried there as equity cases, to enjoin the attempted collection of taxes or something of that kind. Now, when they get into the United States Circuit Court, what rules control the trial of a case there? All of you had some—all of you have had some experience there. What is the law in the United States Circuit Court in equity cases? It is this: That the method of procedure shall be such as was provided and was in use in the Chancery Courts of England at the time of the adoption of the American Constitution or the independence of the American States, I don't know which. You can't change it; the statute of the State of California can't interfere with it or do anything about it. Those are rules established under the Constitution of the United States. You can't get away from them. What do you suppose the United States Circuit Court will say when a lawyer has the effrontery to stand up and say: "Judge, you have entered a decision in this case, but I want to read you a section of the provisions of the State laws of California." Suppose Judge Sawyer would say: "I am overcome by all this howl about this matter, and I am a goner." What do you suppose the Supreme Court of the United States would do then? What glory for a member of this Assembly or Senate to have passed such a measure, when the United States Supreme Court should have passed on it. What language of invective; what language of satire could be strong enough to picture what a man fit to sit upon the Supreme Bench would say about the State of California trying to pass a law, that when the United States Courts—when a verdict or decision had been rendered—that the case should be stopped until they made new cause of action? I want somebody to answer me that. And yet all this fuss and trouble is about decisions in the United States Courts. They don't come here and howl about decisions of the State Courts in San Francisco, under Judge Levy, or another of the State Courts. They howl about the United States Circuit Court and the United States Supreme Court. That is where all the mischief is done; and yet there is a provision of law under which they could not come nearer—any nearer to touching a tax case, than I could come now to kissing the brow of Mount Shasta.

Now, if these gentlemen, and I desire to be a gentleman in all these discussions, should verily believe that it is right to assess one class of people by deducting their mortgages, or one class of properties by deducting their mortgages, and assess another class of properties without deducting their mortgages, and distinguishing in that way between properties and property owners of their own State—to those gentlemen I desire to accord all of the courtesy and kind feeling which is due to their sense of what is right and just in such matters. And I desire to treat their views with the utmost consideration, and not say anything which could cause them to think that there could be any personal feeling getting into such a question as this.

Now, there comes another grave question. The Courts of this State and of the United States have done a great thing in one sense—they have declared this tax invalid. Now, after those decisions have been rendered, do you tell me after that that the Legislature can pass a law which abrogates those decisions? That, in effect, says the Courts have decided that these things are invalid, but over the decisions of the Courts we will validate them. No, sir; those things have been adjudicated and determined against the State, and have passed into a final judgment. There is not power enough in the world—I am speaking of political power—there is not power enough in the world to abrogate those judgments in fact or in effect.

Now, the vice—speaking of what this bill would like to do—not what by its terms it seems to do, or tries to do—the vice of this whole thing is this: That instead of getting at and amending the tax laws of all the taxes, you get in here and pass a bill that you will relevy taxes according to the methods existing, according to the methods now provided by law, which the Courts have decided to be invalid. Your bill is that you will go right ahead and relevy taxes in the same way. And now what more—to pile Ossa upon Pelion—when you have reassessed and relevied this tax, and you go to Court, and the jury renders a verdict that your assessment is invalid, and that your law is not good, then the law you will propose to make is that you will stop the case and do the same illegal thing over again. Now, the bill does not go far enough, if the bill is good. There should be another clause attached to it, that when the second relevy has been made by that same method, and the Court has found that those methods are invalid, or that the law under which the assessment was made is in conflict with the laws of the United States, that the Court shall again suspend judgment until they do the same thing over again. And then there should be another clause—another section of the same kind, added one after another, so as to reach the end of time; so that you will go right on reassessing or relevying taxes according to the same methods that the Courts have decided invalid.

That is the difference between demagogism and statesmanship. One fools the people and accomplishes nothing, and the other accomplishes everything, and claims no credit for it, except such merit as arises from doing a thing right and doing it well.

Now, gentlemen, I have got a suggestion to make. I once acted with the Judiciary Committee; was Chairman of it. I, like you, was for sixty days covered up with labor, covered with bills, covered up with my friends needing this and my enemies wanting that, until I was not able to do anything right and well, or as a man ought to accomplish anything; and if any man came to me to relieve me, and to try and help me, I was always thankful to him, if he acted honestly and sincerely. It was generally left to the clerk of my committee to make the reports. And I suppose in this committee there is not a member who has the time to make up and draw a careful report of this case. Now, in order to assist the members of this committee or the clerk, any one who wants to have the assistance of it, I have drawn a skeleton of a report which I desire to present to you, and if there is one thing which is not in strict accordance with the evidence in the case, if there is one thing in it on which there is a particle of evidence to the contrary, then fling away the whole business. But I will present it, and if you want to make any use of it, you are at liberty to do so, and if you do not, I have no fault to find.

This bill is based upon the theory that a resolution was passed to investigate the subject of railroad taxes in the State of California; that you have made the investigation under the resolution: and that you report what you have learned by the investigation. Now, then, I call your attention to this fact: That never but once in the history of all this litigation has the question been decided by any Court as to whether the Constitution of the State of California with regard to railroad taxation is in conflict with the fourteenth amendment of the Constitution of the United States. There has been but one decision on that point. That was the decision of Judges Sawyer and Field, and that decision was that the method of taxation of railroad taxes of the State of California is in conflict with the Constitution of the United States.

Now, I believe this, that under a stipulation which will be drawn and filed, and presented to the Attorney-General, that a case will be taken to the United States Supreme Court and that they will pass on that question, and that when they do pass upon it I don't see how any man can claim that there is not discrimination in the taxation of railroad properties from the method pursued in assessing other properties of the same kind.

Then what will be the result? Then the result will be that we will have no valid tax laws for railroad properties. We have known that for years. Here is a bill presented which is a farce. In fact, I don't know that I would be going too far if I would say that the last two letters of that word "farce" should be changed. There has not been a decision of any Court, Superior or Supreme Court of the State, or Circuit or Supreme Court of the United States, that, under the existing methods, these people can be compelled to pay one cent of the taxes. And all of this $3,750,000 that have been paid since the adoption of the new Constitution has been so much that they have given to the support of the institutions of the State, because I don't think that a man will pay a large amount of taxes unless he feels that the law requires him to do it. I don't think that there is a member of this committee that is so generous that if he is assessed in an amount that he thinks or considers is absolutely unfair, and the Courts decide is unjust, that he would after that turn around and pay the tax. But these railroads have done it. They have paid $3,750,000 into the counties and the State under those circumstances. Our tax system is a farce as to the taxation of railroad properties. We need a method of taxation, a perfect method, a method that will be fair and just, both to the people of the State and to the railroads.

We come here to the Legislature—one hundred and twenty of us—to sit sixty days, and are overworked all of that time. The members who could form such a bill have such an enormous amount of work on hand to accomplish that if they gave to the railroad tax bill three or four hours, they have given all the time that they could spare to it.

Now, what is the result? That when a bill is gotten up, it is like that bill that was adopted in 1883, which provided that steamboats should be assessed. Even when the Attorney-General and the Controller and Mr.

Maslin got together and formulated the best bill they could, they got a mice in it. The bill was passed just as they presented it. I moved to strike steamboats out of the bill, and they would not have it, because they said I was a railroad man. Mr. Gildea was watching the bill; the records show it. They would not have it because the Attorney-General and Mr. Maslin and the Controller wanted it there. The result is that when you come up here to the Legislature to form a bill on this subject, there isn't a set of men in the Legislature who can give to the matter sufficient time to get up a bill.

A measure ought to be formulated. That the Attorney-General and the Controller are incompetent is shown by the fact that they offered a bill, No. 17, and immediately offered a substitute. They themselves took the life of their own proposed legislative offspring or bantling or whatever you may call it.

Now, what should be done is this: Able men should be selected; they should be given adequate time to prepare a bill—a proper law; they should be paid for it by proper compensation.

There is not any law that can be presented at this session. This session is already in the throes of dissolution. When you hear men laughing and cracking jokes about bills, and taking up bills out of order, that means that dissolution is close at hand. There is no time in this session to formulate a bill and have it passed. Now, what could be decently expected of this session of the Legislature?

When the Attorney-General, and the Controller, and Mr. Maslin, and others of that kind, who are eager to compel the railroads to pay taxes; when men like that come in here, and present such a bill as No. 17 that will not bear two hours' talk, the matter should be given to somebody else to determine it—to attend to. There is material in this Legislature that if they had the time could formulate laws which would be valid tax laws upon this class of legislation. This Legislature ought to provide for it. My judgment of what should be done is that this Legislature should now, as quickly as possible, provide a bill for a commission, consisting of members of both houses, to formulate a bill to submit to the next Legislature. Because, mark you, there is not a bill before this Legislature to provide for the taxation of these properties. Mr. Hall's bill proposes a section which should be adopted, leaving franchises and steamboats out of Section 3665, so that the State Board of Equalization can go according to the law, and improve the method to that extent. But even then there will remain this constitutional question, and how to overcome that is a difficult question, and there is not one of us who would sit down and pretend to formulate a bill on that question, unless we had abundant time to examine the decisions of the Courts, and to consult the text-books and the decisions upon the constitutional tax laws, and all that kind of thing.

So I am going to suggest, and I hope there will be no impropriety in it, because the same matter would perhaps present itself to the committee—that this committee report to the Assembly a bill, which bill shall provide for the appointment of a committee or commission, if you will, to, during this time and the next session of the Legislature, revise the railroad laws of this State.

Now, there is not a man who has been on the State Board of Equalization, there is not a County Assessor in the State, and I don't believe there is a Tax Collector in the State, and I don't think there is one lawyer in the State, but will say as soon as he is asked that our revenue system needs revision, and that it will require men to make the revision who are prepared to spend the time and do it properly and do it well.

Now, I present this skeleton report, which you can do with whatever you will. [Reading report.]

Now, to conclude, I wish to thank this committee for the attention you have accorded me in this matter, and I am only sorry that so few of the members are here to-night.

WEDNESDAY, March 6, 1889.

MR. LEZINSKY: Mr. Chairmen, and members of the committee, the investigation now pending before the committee has shown that certain property of the railroad companies has escaped taxation through the assessments being declared invalid. On a former consideration of this matter, a statement was made by Mr. Dunn, the Controller of this State, that in the cases brought to recover the taxes of 1883 and 1884, that a decision had been rendered against the State upon findings which were false, and that such findings were the basis of the decision of these cases in the Supreme Court of the United States. Whether this statement is true or false has been the main matter of investigation before this committee. The records of the Circuit Court of the United States were brought before this committee, and it appears from such records that in the cases of 1883 and also in the cases of 1884, and in each of these cases, is the following finding: "Said assessment," referring to the assessment mentioned in the finding, "included all property and kinds of property mentioned in Section 3665 of the Political Code of California, as amended March 9, 1883, except depots, stations, shops, and buildings erected upon the space covered by the right of way, which last mentioned property was assessed, as provided in the said section, by local Assessors."

MR. DAMRON: What case is that?

MR. LEZINSKY: This case [referring to the decision in 127 U. S.] is the case—I am quoting from the decision in the case—the general finding was in all of the cases of 1883 and 1884, in every single one of them; and I am quoting that finding as set out in the decision of these cases in the 127th United States Reports. These cases were supposed to have been tried and submitted to the Court upon a stipulation concerning the testimony taken in the cases of 1881-1882, which had been actually tried, so far as the same was applicable to these cases. And upon certain points the stipulation stated that the cases were submitted upon testimony taken upon such points, and one clause of this stipulation is that as to certain paragraphs of the answer that the cases were submitted upon testimony offered by the defendant to prove those allegations of the answer, and upon testimony offered by the plaintiff to disprove those allegations of the answer. And these paragraphs of the answer are the allegations which allege that the State Board of Equalization did willfully and designedly include in their assessment the values of the steamers and the values of the fences. Judge Sawyer testified that there had been no trial whatever of these cases, and that no testimony of any character had been produced or submitted to him; that there had been no trial of any of the tax cases, or testimony taken or submitted or produced in any of the tax cases since the trial of the case of the County of Santa Clara against the Central Pacific Railroad Company, which involved the taxes for 1881-1882. Mr. Baggett testified that he was one of the counsel purporting to represent the interests of the State, and that the contention was made that the testimony upon the question of fences and steamers in the case of 1881-82, would not cover or apply to the actions brought for taxes for 1883-84; and that it was by reason of such contention that the special findings upon those facts which had been made, a part of the findings of the defendant were stricken out, as appears by the red ink alterations of these findings. Nevertheless, a general finding which covered the allegation of the answer as to steamers, did remain a part of the findings. And upon this finding the cases were decided against the State in the Supreme Court of the United States.

MR. DAMRON: That is a fact?

MR. LEZINSKY: Yes, sir; that is a fact. Upon that general finding these cases were decided against the State. Now, there was also one other point involved in certain cases upon which the decision also went, but this was a point which was decided in all of the cases, which it was stated was applicable to all of the cases, and upon that the decision rested. And, therefore, I submit to this committee that the testimony produced before the committee has proved beyond question that the allegation of the answer and the finding of the Court are absolutely and unqualifiedly false. Shortly before the assessment for taxes for the year 1883 was made by the State Board of Equalization, a decision was rendered by the Supreme Court of the State of California, wherein it was decided that steamers belonging to the railroad companies should be assessed by the local Assessors, and not by the State Board of Equalization. And the members of the State Board of Equalization, Messrs. Gildea, Morehouse, Wilcoxon, and Dunn, uniformly testified that at the time of the making of the assessment for that year, they being cognizant of the decision of the Supreme Court on that point, discussed the matter and did willfully and designedly not include in their assessment the values of any steamers or any steamer whatsoever.

MR. DAMRON: When was that decision of the Supreme Court of this State?

MR. LEZINSKY: In June, 1883, and this assessment was not made until August, 1883. Mr. Maslin, who was the Clerk of the Board at the same time testified to the same effect, and also that he made an affidavit to that effect; it was made under oath and handed by him to Mr. Fayette Marshall, the then Deputy Attorney-General. Concerning this finding, Judge Sawyer testified that he was not aware of its presence in the findings and that it had escaped his notice. Mr. Baggett, one of the representatives of the State, admits that there were no facts to support this finding—no evidence to support this finding; which, we submit, is a statement that the same is false. Mr. Marshall, the then Attorney-General, although sent for, has not dared to appear before this committee, to be confronted by his gross negligence and heinous blunder. And since there is no proof before the committee, showing him to have been a knowing party to any fraud against the State, I shall make no graver accusation concerning his actions.

MR. DAMRON: Who notified him to appear?

MR. SEAWELL: He was served with a subpoena. He sent a telegram and also the certificate of Dr. McNulty to me, stating that he was not in a physical condition to come.

MR. LEZINSKY: As grave as this matter appears, if he had any explanation to make of this matter, he would certainly have appeared and made that explanation. No explanation of this fraud upon the State has ever been attempted to be made by the attorneys or employés of the railroads connected with this case, or by those who had the charge of the preparation and signing of these findings. And why? Because none could be made. Therefore I conclude and assert that the fact concerning this finding is as follows: The railroad companies, the defendants in these cases, knowingly, willfully, and designedly, perpetrated a fraud upon the people of the State. This fraud was permitted to be successful through the negligence of Mr. Marshall, the then Attorney-General, and his representatives. And the ultimate object of this fraud is but too well seen in the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, when the cases came up there on appeal. Such decision is contained in 127 United States Reports, and is found on pages 26 to 35, and, so far as touching upon this point, is as follows:

“It was also alleged in defense that the Board of Equalization included in the assessments a valuation of rights, franchises, and property, which they had no authority to assess; as, for example, franchises granted to the companies by the United States, and ferryboats, fences, and other property subject to be assessed by the local county Boards; and that the assessments were for aggregate amounts, not showing on their face what part of the valuation represented the property illegally included therein; thus rendering the entire assessment in each case void. It was on this latter ground that the judgments for the defendants in the former cases were affirmed. If these defenses, or either of them, are supported by the facts, it is unnecessary for us to decide the question raised under the fourteenth amendment of the Constitution. The questions arising under that amendment are so numerous and embarrassing, and require such careful scrutiny and consideration, that great caution is required in meeting and disposing of them. By proceeding step by step, and only deciding what it is necessary to decide, light will gradually open upon the whole subject, and lead the way to a satisfactory solution of the problems that belong to it. We prefer not to anticipate these problems when they are not necessarily involved.

“The ground on which it is alleged that the assessments in question were made to include property which the State Board had no authority to assess is to be found in Article XIII, Sections, 9 and 10 of the State Constitution. Those sections are as follows:

“SEC. 9. A State Board of Equalization, consisting of one member from each congressional district in this State, shall be elected by the qualified electors of their respective districts at the general election to be held in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine, whose terms of office, after those first elected, shall be four years, whose duty it shall be to equalize the valuation of the taxable property of the several counties in the State for the purposes of taxation. The Controller of the State shall be ex officio a member of the Board. The Boards of Supervisors of the several counties of the State shall constitute Boards of Equalization for their respective counties, whose duty it shall be to equalize the valuation of the taxable property in the county for the purpose of taxation; provided, such State and County Boards of Equalization are hereby authorized and empowered, under such rules of notice as the County Boards may prescribe as to the county assessments, and under such rules of notice as the State Board may prescribe as to the action of the State Board, to increase or lower the entire assessment roll, or any assessment contained therein, so as to equalize the assessment of the property contained in said assessment roll, and make the assessment conform to the true value in money of the property contained in said roll.

“SEC. 10. All property, except as hereinafter in this section provided, shall be assessed in the county, city, city and county, town, township, or district in which it is situated, in the manner prescribed by law. The franchise, roadway, roadbed, rails, and rolling stock of all railroads operated in more than one county in the State shall be assessed by the State Board of Equalization at their actual value, and the same shall be apportioned to the counties, cities and counties, cities, towns, townships, and districts in which such railroads are located, in proportion to the number of miles of railway laid in such counties, cities and counties, cities, towns, townships, and districts.”

MR. DUNN: Wouldn't it be well for you to call the attention of the committee especially to the fact that in the case of the California Pacific Railroad, and also in the case of the Northern Railway, no steamers were assessed?

MR. LEZINSKY: I will do that.

MR. DUNN: That was the last decision.

MR. LEZINSKY: We will show what these decisions proceed upon, and how they decide the matter. It says:

“The last section shows explicitly that, in regard to a railroad, the State Board has power to assess only five things: the franchise, roadway, roadbed, rails, and rolling stock; the County Boards are authorized to assess all the rest of the property. If the State Board includes in its assessment any more of the railroad property than it is authorized to do, the assessment will be pro tanto illegal and void. If the unlawful part can be separated from that which is lawful, the former may be declared void, and the latter may stand; but if the different parts, lawful and unlawful, are blended together in one indivisible assessment, it makes the entire assessment illegal. This is so well settled that it needs no citation of authorities farther than to refer to the opinion of the Court in the former cases. (118 U. S.) In the present assessments all parts of the property are blended together and are inseparable. If it be true, therefore, that property not authorized to be included in the assessments is included therein, the assessments must be declared void.

“The Legislature of California, in passing laws for carrying out the principles and methods of taxation laid down in the Constitution, has deviated from its words, and has adopted some provisions which would seem to be a departure from it. As the State Board of Equalization in making the assessments in question undertook to follow the law, it will be necessary to examine it. By Section 3628 of the Political Code, as amended in 1880, it was provided as follows: ‘The franchise, roadway, roadbed, rails, and rolling stock of all railroads operated in more than one county in this State shall be assessed by the State Board of Equalization, as hereinafter provided for. Other franchises, if granted by the authorities of a county, city, or city and county, must be assessed in the county, city, or city and county within which they were granted; if granted by any other authority, they must be assessed in the county in which the corporations, firms, or persons owning or holding them have their principal place of business. All other taxable property shall be assessed in the county, city, city and county, town, township, or district in which it is situated. The Assessor must, between the first Mondays of March and July in each year, ascertain the names of all taxable inhabitants, and all property in his county subject to taxation, except such as is required to be assessed by the State Board of Equalization, and must assess such property to the person by whom it was owned or claimed, or in whose possession or control it was at twelve o'clock of the first Monday next preceding.’

roads operated in more than one county. Assessment must be made to the corporation, person, or association of persons owning the same, and must be made upon the entire railway within the State, and must include the right of way, bridges, culverts, wharves, and moles upon which the track is laid, and all steamers which are engaged in transporting passengers, freights, and passenger and freight cars across waters which divide the road. The depots, stations, shops, and buildings erected upon the space covered by the right of way, are assessed by the Assessor of the county wherein they are situate. Within ten days after the third Monday in August, the Board must apportion the total assessment of the franchise, roadway, roadbed, rails, and rolling stock of each railway, to the counties, or cities and counties, in which such railway is located, in proportion to the number of miles of railway laid in such counties, and cities and counties.'

"Here, it will be perceived that the Legislature undertakes to define what things are and what are not comprised within the five categories of railroad property assessable by the State Board, and declares that they include not only the entire railway within the State, the right of way, bridges and culverts, but also 'the wharves and moles upon which the track is laid, and all steamers which are engaged in transporting passengers, and passenger and freight cars across waters which divide the road.' This is clearly an enlargement of the terms of the Constitution. Steamers, at least, are not, and have been held by the Supreme Court of California not to be, embraced in the five categories.

"Now, one of the grounds of defense, set up by the Central Pacific Railroad Company in Nos. 660 and 1157, by the Northern Railway Company in No. 662, and by the California Pacific Railroad Company in No. 663, is, that the value of their steam ferryboats was blended by the State Board of Equalization with the other values contained in the assessments. The Central Pacific Company, in its answers (and the others contained similar averments), says: 'The western terminus of the said railroad of defendant is in the City of San Francisco, on the west side of the Bay of San Francisco. The distance across said bay is five miles, and the whole thereof is part of the navigable waters of said bay. The cars of the company are transported from the end of the railroad track of said road on the eastern side of said bay to the end of the railroad track on the western side of said bay, on steam ferryboats belonging to the defendant, built, owned, and constructed for that purpose, and are of great value. For more than four years past the defendant has been the owner of two steam ferryboats, one of the tonnage of one thousand five hundred and sixty-six tons, and one of the tonnage of one thousand and twelve tons; and during the whole of that time has used said boats for the purposes aforesaid. Said boats now are, and for more than four years last past have been, of a class which by law are required to be registered; and now are, and for more than four years last past have been, duly registered and enrolled in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California. The State Board of Equalization, in making said pretended assessment of the said roadway, roadbed, rails, and rolling stock, did willfully and designedly include in the valuation thereof, the value of said boats; and the value of said boats is blended in said pretended assessment with the value of said roadway, roadbed, rails, and rolling stock; and there is no means by which said value can be separated from the valuation placed by said Board upon said roadway, roadbed, rails, and rolling stock, or either of them.'"

So as to bring the case entirely within the decision of the Santa Clara case, this allegation is sustained by the Court below in its findings of the facts in the cases referred to in all of the cases. The Court says further:

"The finding in 660, and substantially the same in the other cases, is as follows: That on the eighteenth day of August, 1883, the State Board of Equalization of the State of California, pretending to act under and by virtue of the powers conferred upon it by Section 10 of Article XIII of the Constitution of the State of California, did make a pretended assessment for the purposes of taxation for the fiscal year of said State then next ensuing, upon the franchise, roadway, roadbed, rails, and rolling stock of said railroad against defendant. Said pretended assessment was not made separately upon the franchise, roadway, roadbed, rails, and rolling stock, or any properties of said railroad, but all of said property was blended together in making said assessment, which assessment was then and there so entered upon the minutes of said Board. Said assessment is the assessment upon which the several taxes mentioned in the complaint herein are based, and no other assessment than the aforesaid was ever made of said property or any part thereof for said fiscal year. Said assessment included all property and kinds of property mentioned in Section 3665 of the Political Code of California, as amended March 9, 1884, except depots, stations, shops, and buildings erected upon the space covered by the right of way, which last mentioned property was assessed, as provided in said section, by local Assessors.

"This is a clear affirmation of the allegation of the answer. section 3665 of the Political Code, as amended March 9, 1883, requires the State Board of Equalization to include in their assessment of railroad property 'all steamers which are engaged in transporting passengers, freights, and passenger and freight cars across waters which divide the road.' It is a matter of public notoriety, as much so as the existence of the railroad itself, or that of the Sierra Nevada, or any other geographical feature on the route, that the railroad companies, in the cases referred to, have steam ferryboats engaged in the transportation of passengers across the Bay of San Francisco and the Straits of Carquinez; and that without such means of transportation those waters could not be crossed.

"The question whether steamers and ferryboats should be included in the property assessed by the State Board of Equalization, or in that assessed by the County Board, was distinctly raised in the case of San Francisco vs. Central Pacific Railroad Company, 63 Cal. 467, 469, and decided in favor of the County Board. That was an action brought by the City and County of San Francisco against the company to recover taxes imposed upon it by virtue of an assessment made by the County Board upon the same ferryboats now assessed by the State Board. The Supreme Court of California decided against the company. Its findings of facts was as follows. namely: 'That the defendant is a corporation existing under the law of the United States, and of this State; owner of a line of railroad known as the Central Pacific Railroad, extending from a point in the City of San Francisco to Ogden, in the Territory of Utah; that the length of said road in the City and County of San Francisco is four miles from a point within said city to the eastern shore of the southern arm of the Bay of San Francisco; that from said point on the eastern shore to a point on the western shore of said bay, where the railway of defendant again commences, is about twelve miles; that across said bay no line of railroad has been constructed; and freight and passengers carried upon said road are taken across said bay upon steam ferryboats; that upon the decks of said vessels are laid railroad tracks, etc.'

"After giving judgment for the plaintiff upon these facts, the Court says: 'The sole question presented for decision herein is whether the steamers Thoroughfare and Transit, mentioned in the above findings, are to be assessed by the City and County of San Francisco or by the State Board of Equalization. The property to be assessed by the Board is defined in the tenth section of Article XIII of the Constitution of 1879. It is the franchise, roadway, roadbed, rails, and rolling stock of all railroads operated in more than one county in the State. All property other than the above mentioned is to be assessed by the local Assessors. Are the steamers above named embraced within the category of property named in the section above referred to? The relation of such steamers to the Central Pacific Railroad Company is set forth in the findings.' The Court then proceeds to show that the ferryboats cannot be included in either of the five categories mentioned in the Constitution, namely, in either the franchise, roadway, roadbed, rails, or rolling stock; and concludes as follows: 'We are of the opinion that the assessment of the steamers above mentioned pertain to the local Assessor, and was properly made by the Assessor of the City and County of San Francisco.' The decision was made in June, 1883, and is a construction of the Constitution of California. It follows that the Act of March 9, 1883, as reproduced in Section 3665 of the Political Code, departs from the constitutional provision; and that the assessments in following the Act are also unconstitutional and void."

That is the very case that the gentlemen of the State Board of Equalization had in mind and were cognizant of when they made this assessment and willfully left out the steamers.

MR. DAMRON: It was in June, 1883?

MR. LEZINSKY: Yes, sir; June, 1883. This decision was made in June, 1883, and is a construction of the Constitution of the State of California.

The Court further says: "It follows that the Act of March 9, 1883, as reproduced in Section 3665 of the Political Code, departs from the constitutional provision; and that the assessments in following the Act are also unconstitutional and void."

Still, as a matter of fact, the assessment did not follow the Act, but the Constitution.

The Court further says: "In No. 1157, one of the cases against the Central Pacific Railroad Company—being for the taxes of the year 1884—the Court finds that the State Board of Equalization, in making the assessment, did knowingly and designedly include in the valuation of the roadway, the value of fences erected upon the line between said roadway and the land of coterminous proprietors. This brings that case precisely within the decision made in the former cases reported in 118th United States Reports."

And the testimony proves—the testimony of the members of the State Board of Equalization—proves as conclusively as can be, and as directly as can be, that they did not include in the assessment for any of these years the value of any fences or steamboats. And those findings are the very findings which on the inspection of the record appear in pasters attached to these findings.

Now, the opinion then proceeds and says: "Another defense set up by the Central Pacific Railroad Company in the three cases against it, namely, Nos. 660, 664, and 1157, and by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company in No. 661, is that the State Board of Equalization included in their assessments in said cases the value of the franchises conferred upon said companies by the United States, which, it is contended, is repugnant to the Constitution and laws of the United States, and therefore void. Thus, in No. 660 the Central Pacific Railroad Company, in its answer, after reciting the various Acts of Congress conferring franchises and privileges and imposing duties upon the company, avers that it is a Federal corporation, and holds its corporate powers and franchises under the Government of the United States, and that the said Government has never given to the State of California the right to lay any tax upon the franchise, existence, or operations of the company. Similar averments are made in other cases, 664, 1157, and 661. The Court finds in each of these cases that the assessment made by the State Board of Equalization included the full value of all franchise and corporate powers held and exercised by the defendant. The first question, then, is, whether the defendants in these cases held any franchises granted to them by the Government of the United States. Of this there can hardly be a doubt.

"The Central Pacific Railroad Company was constituted by the consolidation of two State corporations of California, but derived many of its franchises and privileges from the Government of the United States. The findings of the Court below on this subject are as follows, to wit:

"That on the twenty-eighth day of June, 1861, a corporation was formed and organized, under the laws of the State of California, under the corporate name of the Central Pacific Railroad Company of California. Said corporation was formed for the purpose of constructing, owning, and operating a line of railroad and telegraph, commencing at the City of Sacramento, in said State, and running thence through the Counties of Sacramento, Placer, Sierra, and Nevada, to the eastern boundary of said State, in the expectation that its proposed railroad would, when constructed, constitute part of a line of railroad extending from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, which line it was then supposed was about to be constructed under the legislative supervision and authority of the Government of the United States, and which line of railroad was afterward so constructed.

"That on or about the first day of July, 1862, the Government of the United States undertook to construct or to be caused to be constructed a line of railroad from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to that end, Congress passed an Act entitled 'An Act to aid in the construction of a railroad from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes.' 12 Stat. 489, c. 120."

And then it goes on to decide this franchise case—this question concerning the Federal franchise.

Now, in conclusion, this decision reads as follows: "It follows that in each one of the cases now before us the assessment made by the State Board of Equalization included the value of the franchises or property which the Board was prohibited by the Constitution of the State or of the United States from including therein; and that these values are so blended with the other items of which the assessments are composed that they can not be separated therefrom. The assessments are therefore void. This renders it unnecessary to express any opinion on the application of the fourteenth amendment, as the result would not be different, whatever view we might take on that subject."

That was that it was either a franchise or property. In the cases against the Northern Railway Company and the California Pacific Company there was no question of the franchise, so they were decided solely upon that point of steamers. That there was included property in the assessment by the State Board of Equalization which was prohibited from being included by the Constitution of the State, as there was nothing concerning the Constitution of the United States involved in the cases.

MR. SEAWELL: That is the case in which two points are touched upon?

MR. DUNN: Three points: fences, steamboats, and franchises.

MR. LEZINSKY: The Court in its opinion said that as this finding was in there, which was the finding that steamers had been assessed, they disposed of the case upon that point, and, therefore, it is not necessary to decide the constitutional question. This is a fact. There is the decision which speaks for itself. This is the California Pacific Railroad Company, and the Northern Railway Company. There are some twelve cases decided here together. California vs. The Central Pacific Railroad Company; California vs. The Southern Pacific Railroad Company; California vs. The Northern Railway Company; and California vs. The California Pacific Railroad Company.

MR. DUNN: Now one of the grounds of defense set up by the Central Pacific Railroad Company in Nos. 660 and 1157; by the Northern Railway Company in No. 662; and by the California Pacific Railroad Company in No. 663, is, that the value of their steam ferryboats was blended by the State Board of Equalization with the other values contained in the assessments.

MR. LEZINSKY: Now, commenting on the argument of Mr. Cross, here, upon Monday night, concerning this finding, that it was a necessary part of these findings because it was a finding that the State Board of Equalization had acted in the manner required by the statute.

MR. SEAWELL: Well, it was a necessary finding to show the regular assessment.

MR. LEZINSKY: But not in that way. It was not necessary to say that they had included in their assessment all property and kinds of property mentioned in Section 3665. It should have been that they had followed out Section 3665 so far as it was not in variance with the Constitution of the State. That is what the Board of Equalization did. They followed Section 3665 so far as it was not at variance with the Constitution of the State, but Mr. Cross says that the only way that that thing can be expressed was to have stated a falsehood, and to have said that they included in their assessment all property and kinds of property mentioned in that section. I say that that is not true. They could have expressed it as I suggested, and it must not have been expressed in this way that Mr. Cross would have you believe was the proper way to express it.

MR. SEAWELL: Well, if he had excepted steamboats, would that have made it all right?

MR. LEZINSKY: There were moles, and culverts, and other things, that would have always raised the same question. And the fact was that the State Board of Equalization, in making that assessment, followed the Constitution, and followed Section 3665 only so far as it was in accordance with the Constitution.

MR. DAMRON: I would like to ask this question, and that is whether there was any record kept of the assessment made by the State Board of Equalization for the taxes of 1883-4-5, that will disclose affirmatively that steamboats, moles, wharves, etc., were not included in the assessment. In session you may have said so. Are there any minutes that will affirmatively show that fact?

MR. LEZINSKY: No, sir; but those things are not mentioned in the assessment, and you cannot as a rule of law infer that a legal power or a legal body act in opposition to the law, but the inference is that they act in accordance with the law; and, therefore, when they make an assessment of the franchise, roadway, roadbed, rails, and rolling stock, it is presumed that they acted in accordance with the law. And then when it appears further by oral evidence, by parole testimony, that they did discuss the matter, and didn't include fences or steamboats in making up the assessment, then it is settled beyond the peradventure of a doubt.

MR. DAMRON: The great trouble seems to me to be that the Supreme Court took cognizance of that finding, which was in fact a special finding, and passed upon the case on that one finding, that and the other one.

MR. LEZINSKY: The railroad companies knowingly, willfully, and designedly perpetrated a fraud upon the people of the State, which fraud was permitted to be successful through the negligence of Attorney-General Marshall and his representatives. The ultimate object of this fraud is but too well seen in the decision of the Supreme Court when those cases came up there to be decided. Now, don't you suppose that when they put that general finding into those findings, that they knew what construction could be placed upon it? That they knew when the cases should go to the Supreme Court of the United States, they would ask for that construction upon it, and then the cases would go off on that. And, as a matter of fact, their principal argument is on that point.

MR. DUNN: Mr. Haymond deals largely with that point. Mr. Edmunds and Mr. Conkling deal with the Federal franchises.

MR. DAMRON: They raised that question under that general finding?

MR. DUNN: Yes, sir; Mr. Haymond dealt largely with that in his argument before the Supreme Court of the United States.

MR. LEZINSKY: Now, it may be urged that as to the cases against the Southern and Central Pacific Railroad Companies, that there were other points decided that were fatal to these cases; which I assert were also fraudulent, for this reason: It is the allegation of the State Board of Equalization including in their assessment a Federal franchise. Now, a franchise is any power or any right that exists in a corporation coming from the sovereign power, which an individual does not hold; that is, the right of eminent domain, etc. Now, the only thing that is assessed is the franchise in the singular, the roadway, the roadbed, the rails, and the rolling stock. Now, there is nothing that affirmatively appears in this assessment that the Board assessed any Federal franchise; and it appears from the evidence of the members of the State Board of Equalization given before this committee, that they didn't take into consideration the value of any Federal franchise. So I say that that fact is also, and was also a fraud upon the people: but, of course, it is not as apparent presumably as this fact concerning the steamers. But I say, that when they made this point before the Supreme Court of the United States, that they must have known, and did actually know that the State Board of Equalization did not assess a Federal franchise; that it was another subterfuge to affect the decision of these cases, and to avoid the payment of their taxes.

MR. DAMRON: Is this due process, having been decided by the Supreme Court of the United States?

MR. LEZINSKY: They admit that; but as to the case of the California Pacific Railroad Company, and the Northern Railway, and the case of the San Pablo and Tulare Railroad, no question concerning a Federal franchise could have possibly arisen; and so, stripped of their fraudulent finding, a decision of the Court must have been had upon the constitutional question raised in those cases; and assuming a decision in favor of the State upon that point, instead of a judgment for the defendant, there would have been a judgment for the plaintiff for the amount of those taxes; now that is the result of those fraudulent findings. If those cases were stripped of those fraudulent findings, then to-day, instead of a decision in those cases in favor of the defendant and against the plaintiff, there would be a decision in favor of the plaintiff and against the defendant: and so far as to the three cases of 1884, the three cases of 1883, and the three cases of 1885, the State would now have judgment against those railroad companies by which they could collect those taxes, and so far as they were concerned no Langford or Ostrom bills would have been necessary.

Now, what position do we find these railroads assuming when bills are introduced providing for a reassessment in cases where property has failed to pay its taxes? We find them fighting against those bills. What does that amount to? They come in and make a fight against the State getting its just rights in matters where it has lost its rights by their fraud perpetrated upon the people of the State. Because, if the Constitution of the State is not at variance with the Constitution of the United States, and I will assume that it is not, then, under these Acts, that might be passed; a decision could be had and judgments had against these companies which would compel them to pay their taxes. If our Constitution is at variance with the fourteenth amendment of the Constitution of the United States, then no recovery could be had in any case which might be brought under these reassessments.

Now, one other word concerning what might appear concerning the attorneys in this case. Mr. Delmas has appeared before the committee and testified that after the complaint had been filed in these cases, that the Attorney-General, Mr. Marshall, under a decision of the Circuit Court of the United States, stepped in and asked the entire control of these cases; and that from that time forth he had entire control, to do with the cases what he pleased, and Mr. Delmas had nothing whatever to do with the cases; he could not under the decision of the United States Circuit Court. So that Mr. Delmas is not in any way connected with the findings. Mr. Delmas had no control over them. He says that they were not submitted to him—no stipulation was submitted to him, and he had nothing whatever to do with them.

Now, Mr. Cross, in commenting upon this matter, would have you gentlemen infer that Mr. Delmas was connected with the stipulation. And he says that the contention here is that the Attorney-General, Mr. Marshall, was careless or negligent in signing this stipulation. There is no such contention made. The stipulations we will admit were all right. But the findings were not in accordance with the stipulation, and the findings were against the facts; and it is the findings that we have fault to find with, and not the stipulation, or the fact that he signed the stipulation.

Now, as to whether or not in the cases of railroad companies, mortgages should be deducted from the assessment, or whether they should not be deducted, I desire to comment briefly upon the principles of law, and the facts which were perhaps the basis of that provision of the Constitution of the State of California. Now, the ground for the contention of the defendants, is that the railroad companies are denied equal privileges of the law under the fourteenth amendment of the Constitution of the United States, and in this, that while it permits the deduction of mortgages in the assessment of private property, that deduction is not made in the assessment of the property of the railroad companies and other quasi public corporations. That is their contention, as you gentlemen well know.

Now, in the matter of assessment of railroad companies throughout the different States of the Union, an examination of the statutes and the Constitutions of the various States, shows that there is hardly a single State in the Union where railroad companies are not assessed in a manner different from what individuals are assessed. In some of them they pay taxes on their property, paying a certain amount of their net income. In some cases they pay taxes by taking the gross earnings and multiplying it by a certain sum, and that is taken as a valuation of the road, and upon that they pay taxes; that that certain sum being a certain amount, that would be the interest upon so much. And so in almost every State in the Union, railroad companies are assessed and pay taxes in manners that are entirely different from the manner in which individuals pay taxes. Now, this question was fairly raised in what is known as the Kentucky Tax Case. The decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in those cases was as follows: "There is nothing to forbid a classification of property for the purposes of taxation, and the valuation of different classes by different methods. The rule of equality, in respect to the subject, only requires the same means and methods to be applied impartially to all constituents of each class, so that the law shall operate equally and uniformly upon all persons in similar circumstances. There is no objection, therefore, to the discrimination made as between railroad companies and other corporations in the methods and instrumentalities by which the value of their property is ascertained. The different nature and uses of their property justify the discrimination in this respect which the Legislature has seen fit to impose."

And the reason of that is this: That a railroad company is a quasi public corporation; it enjoys certain advantages from the sovereign power of the State, and the fact that it is an agency of the sovereign and an instrument of the State, makes it different from any other classification of persons, corporations, or individuals in the State. And so being an agent of the State, will any one deny the fact that the Constitution or the statutes might say that railroad companies shall not pay any taxes whatever, and if the Constitution or the statutes made that provision, could it then be urged by any man against whom taxes were assessed, that he could say: "I must not pay taxes, because the Constitution of the State provides that railroad companies shall not pay taxes. There is a discrimination as between the railroad companies and myself which makes me free from the payment of taxes." And that argument might just as well be urged, as to say that because a discrimination is made against railroad companies (as they put it), that thereby they are relieved from the payment of any taxes. If a discrimination was made as between persons, then a person could undoubtedly come into Court and say, "There is a discrimination made as between me and this man, and therefore the law does not give me an equal right with him, and I need not be compelled to pay taxes." But that is not the case of the railroad companies.

The Supreme Court says that so far as railroad companies are concerned that you can make a segregation of them as a different class of property, for the purposes of taxation, and make different methods of assessment, and different laws so far as taxes are concerned.

MR. DAMRON: I would like to ask you the question, if the only point there is in those Kentucky cases was as to the classification of property under the State laws?

MR. LEZINSKY: Yes; that the property of railroads—railroad companies was classified into one separate class by itself, and was a class different from that of any other in the State.

Now, there is another view of the case, and that is this: That so far as the classification of property is concerned, the same law which provides for the assessment of mortgages to the mortgagee may classify them, and they may, according to the wisdom of the legislators, exempt a certain class of those mortgages from taxation, and that is just exactly what was done here. Now, let us look for a moment at the position in which both individuals and the railroad companies were in at the time that this Constitution was framed. It was desired by the framers of the Constitution, carrying out the wishes of the people, to make the mortgagees in mortgages pay taxes upon whatever was covered by their mortgages, and to relieve the mortgagor, so far as that was concerned, from the payment of taxes. Therefore, they declared that so far as mortgages were concerned, a mortgage was deemed an interest in the property, and that interest should be assessed to the mortgagee and he should pay the taxes upon it. Now, when they came to consider one distinct class of these mortgages, different from any other mortgages that were held in the State, that is the mortgages of the railroad companies, what did they find? The basis of those mortgages were not notes, but bonds, and those bonds were scattered broadcast over the world, all over the United States and over Europe, and it was impossible to find who held those bonds or where any particular bond was held. And upon an inspection of these mortgages it was found that in every one of them there was a clause which provided as follows: "And the said party of the first part hereby agrees and covenants to and with the said parties of the second part, and their successors in said trust, that it will pay all ordinary and extraordinary taxes, assessments, and other public burdens and charges, which shall or may be imposed upon the property herein described and hereby mortgaged, and every part thereof; and the said parties of the second part, the survivor of them, or their successors in said trust, or any one or more of the holders of said bonds, may, in case of default of the said party of the first part in this behalf, pay and discharge the same, and any other lien or incumbrance upon said property, which may in any way, either in law or in equity, be or become in effect a charge or lien thereon, prior to these presents, or to which this mortgage may be subject or subordinate; and for all payments thus made the parties so making the same shall be allowed interest thereon at the rate of seven per cent per annum, and such payments, with the interest thereon, shall be and are hereby secured to them by these presents, and declared to be payable and collectible in the same sort of currency or money wherein they shall have been paid, and the same shall be payable by said party of the first part to said parties of the second part upon demand, in trust for the party or parties paying the same, and may be paid out of the proceeds of the sale of said property and franchises herein before provided."

Now, it is contended here, and contended in these cases, that if a mortgage was deemed an interest in the property, so far as these railroads or railroad companies are concerned, that they would not be required to pay the taxes that they have paid. But how very different is the truth? Let us take, for instance, the cases of the San Pablo and Tulare Railroad Company. There the corporation is simply assessed for $900,000, without any deduction whatever; while their mortgage debt as covered by the mortgage records of this State is $3,400,000. Therefore if their mortgage shall be presumed to be the value of their property, and the system—the same system could be applied to them that is applied to individuals—the State instead of collecting taxes only upon $900,000, would at the very least collect taxes upon the face of their mortgages, $3,400,000. And how could the State deduct $3,400,000 from $900,000? Does it not show that their property is assessed for less than one third of its value; for probably not more than one fourth of its value, if the mortgage placed upon it is any evidence of its value—of the value of the property? And so with the Central Pacific Railroad Company; so with the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, and so with the Northern Railway Company, and so with the California Pacific Railroad Company. I say that they do not pay taxes into the State which is upon one fourth of the value of their property. And I say that if they were assessed in the same way that individuals are assessed, or could be so assessed, that if the mortgage should be taken as the basis of the value of their property, and that value alone should simply be placed upon it, and the assessment made upon that basis, and that was assessed against the bonds, they would pay taxes in more than four times what they do pay. For under the conditions of the covenant of their mortgage, they would be required to pay that back or pay it themselves in the first place to those who held their bonds. And this State would receive from the railroad companies more than four times the taxes than it does if it received every dollar that was levied under the assessments made.

MR. DAMRON: Why is it that they are not assessed for more than $900,000, if their property is mortgaged for $3,400,000?

MR. DUNN: My recollection is that more than two years ago they had out some $34,000,000 of bonds on the Southern Pacific of California. You know that is within the State; that it covered some of their land, the cars and some of the property—very nearly all the property assessed by the local Assessors, the depots, shops, stations, and grounds. Now I remember asking the question what their bonds were quoted for in the market. My recollection is that the answer was $105 and $106, and the highest assessment on that property has been $17,000,000. I never believed that that property has been assessed for what it ought to have been.

MR. DAMRON: One piece of property in my county was mortgaged for $40,000, at a certain time when our real estate was on wings and was assumed to be worth $100,000. Last year the property was assessed for $25,000. That was $15,000 less than the mortgages on the property; and that is one of the strongest points that I have got in my constitutional amendment in favor of a mortgage tax.

MR. DUNN: Now, I presume you have read the railroad tax cases in 92 United States. The Illinois case. In that case they added together the value of the roadbed and the value of the rolling stock, and that covered the entire assessment. They said after the tangible property was assessed, the balance was the value of the franchise, and the United States Supreme Court not only decided in favor of the State in those cases, but declared this, that there never had been called to their attention a system of assessment which seemed as fair as that system of assessment did. Now, if that had been done in the case of the Southern Pacific Company—they were assessed this year on $14,000,000, and the highest assessment was $19,000,000—they would have been assessed for probably $26,000,000.

MR. LEZINSKY: Now as to the contention that is made here that the railroad companies, if they had the same rule applied to them that has been applied to individuals, have paid now more than $1,500,000 of taxes to the State than they should have paid. Does it not appear that this is all a tissue of misrepresentation, a tissue of falsehood, and based upon their own imagination? Because if they had been assessed the same as individuals, they would have come closer to paying taxes on $3,400,000 in the San Pablo case than they would to have paid taxes on $900,000. I say that in every one of these cases that the discrimination, if any, that has been made in the Constitution has acted in favor of the railroad companies, instead of acting against them.

MR. DAMRON: The Constitution provides that property shall only be assessed at its value, notwithstanding any mortgage that may be upon it greater than the value of the property itself. If the San Pablo Railroad is only worth $900,000, that is all that you could assess it for, notwithstanding the fact that it is burdened with a mortgage of $3,400,000.

MR. LEZINSKY: All of these mortgages were made prior to the Constitution, and all of them contained this clause which I have just read.

MR. SEAWELL: Whether they were made prior or afterwards, they can contain that clause. That is property which is assessed different from any other class of property—any class of property where the mortgage is distinctly on the property and is counted as an interest in the property.

MR. LEZINSKY: Now, a few words in response to the statement or argument of Mr. Cross made here on Monday night, and his remarks concerning a certain stipulation which had been presented to Mr. Haymond, the general solicitor of the railroad companies, for signature, to present a case to the United States Supreme Court, which shall pass upon this point.

I was present myself in the office when this stipulation was presented to Mr. Haymond, and the stipulation was in this effect. The stipulation was drawn originally by Mr. Johnson, the Attorney-General, who drew it just before he went to Washington, and it was presented without his being there to place his own construction upon it. But that stipulation was that a finding shall be had upon the question of the mortgage not being deducted from the assessment, and in parenthesis, there was inserted, "And findings upon all other points are waived." Now, my construction of Mr. Johnson's intention in putting that in, was, that it should be construed in this way: "And findings in favor of the defendant upon all other points is waived." That is, that these findings shall be in favor of the defendant upon this point, and the defendant waives findings upon all other points in its favor. If any other construction should have been placed on it, and the Circuit Court when it came to make up the findings, made a finding on that point and on no other, Mr. Johnson would not, I am certain, agree to any such findings.

I, myself, in that office, asked of Mr. Haymond this question: "Mr. Haymond, is this stipulation made in good faith? Do you propose to carry out this stipulation in good faith: to bring this case up before the Supreme Court of the United States upon this one point?" And his answer was: "There is no avowal of faith." Therefore, the gentlemen who were present there, myself among the number, were put upon our guard to that extent, because I asked him the question whether or not he intended to carry out this stipulation in good faith, and he did not dare to say he would, because he did not intend to. And we therefore immediately, and before Mr. Cross became aware of it, set about preparing a stipulation which would cover every point in issue. And that stipulation was presented to Mr. Haymond on Tuesday morning, and that stipulation I have brought with me, signed by him. Signed by him, I believe, because he could not depart from his statement and refuse to sign it. But, I still believe, if by any means within his power, or the power of his minions, he could prevent the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States upon this one point—mark me, gentlemen—that he will do it.

Now, as to a certain portion of the remarks made by Mr. Cross concerning this stipulation which was drawn up by the Attorney-General and presented to a man whom he believed would act in good faith concerning it, for this man always holds himself out as actuated by the highest principles. What does Mr. Cross say? He says: "These are the men who find fault with such a man as Attorney-General Marshall, because before these tax cases had been litigated at all he drew up and signed a stipulation which, in the light of subsequent events, proved defective. 'First cast the beam out of your own eye before you try to take the mote out of your brother's eye.' These men finding fault with the past Attorney-General because he signed a defective stipulation! Why, it would make a jackass laugh, if a jackass could know some law, to know of such people doing such things." And I agree with him, that perhaps it would make a jackass laugh, but it would not make an intelligent man laugh, and I agree with him that the biggest jackass would laugh the loudest, and perhaps Mr. Cross would laugh the loudest.

I tell you, gentlemen, that in all these matters, so far as the present officials are concerned, there has been every endeavor to get this matter properly before the Courts and to have it properly determined. That at every step, instead of being met by the attorneys for the railroad company as they profess themselves to be, always ready to help in this matter, they are ever retarded. The railroad attorneys will make a stipulation, and then if by any means they can place a construction upon it different from the intention for which it is made, they will do it, so as to make the stipulation of no account.

Now, in conclusion, I have to thank the members of the committee for their kind indulgence in this hearing, and I submit that the report of this committee should be that the State has lost at least the cases of the Northern Railway Company, the San Pablo and Tulare Railroad Company, and the California Pacific Railroad Company, for the taxes of the years 1883 and 1884, by findings which were false and untrue, and, that were it not for these findings, that the Supreme Court of the United States would have decided the constitutional question involved in these cases, and that if judgment had been in favor of the State on the constitutional point, that judgment then would have been in favor of the plaintiff and against the defendant in those cases, instead of in favor of the defendant and against the plaintiff.

MR. DUNN: I want to say a few words. In Mr. Cross' statement the other night he says, "Now, the Board of Equalization had no guide but that law. They had to go by that law; they were sworn to obey the law. If they did not obey the law they were not acting within the law, and that is the law as laid down for them by the Legislature in what I will denominate the 'Filcher Bill,' a bill which was approved and praised by the Controller of the State, and adopted largely at his suggestion." I desire to say that there is not a word of truth in that statement. I never saw the Filcher Bill until it was about on its final passage in the Senate. That is about the substance of what Mr. Cross said also in another part of his argument; it was a repetition of that. At any rate, it was that the Attorney-General and Mr. Maslin and myself had prepared this bill and urged the Legislature to pass it. There is no truth in that statement. Mr. Filcher came to me and I asked him if I could make this statement. I was thinking of bringing him before this committee on that point, but I did not consider it necessary. He came to me in the session of 1883, and he said, "Mr. Dunn, I would like to have you look over this bill." Well, I had just come into office, and I knew nothing about these matters particularly. And he said, "I am very suspicious about this bill." And I said, "Why?" "Well," he says, "Mr. Haymond came to me and said he wondered how I had dropped on such a good bill as this, and I said, 'Why do you think so?' And he says, 'It is a good bill and I think it ought to pass, and the railroad people will pay their taxes under it if it passes.'" I looked it over, and I could not see any objection to it. Of course, this question about steamboats had not been decided at that time. That is all the knowledge that I had of that bill. I did not know who drew it up at that time. I understand since that Mr. Maslin had prepared the bill; whether he had any assistance I don't know.

The following documents relative to the matter under investigation were furnished to the committee as evidence, by Hon. John P. Dunn, State Controller:

CONTROLLER'S OFFICE,) SACRAMENTO, June 18, 1886.)

To Hon. E. C. MARSHALL, Attorney-General:

DEAR SIR: When at San Diego, on the twelfth day of last month, on official duties with the State Board of Equalization, I saw in the San Francisco "Chronicle," of the eleventh, the decision of the U. S. Supreme Court on certain railroad tax cases. In that paper, I found a reported interview with yourself, touching that decision, in which you are represented as saying:

I was opposed to the new Constitution on the ground that the clause relating to railroads, in which there is a discrimination against mortgages, was fatal and in conflict with the fourteenth amendment of the Federal Constitution. As far as the effect of the decision is concerned, there is one result that I plainly see: it leaves no provision for the collection of taxes this year from the railroad company. The Board of Equalization, which will meet in August, will not have the right under this decision to levy an assessment on the railroad property, and I can see no way out of the difficulty except by the calling of an extra session of the Legislature to provide for the contingency. If that is not done no taxes for 1887 can be levied.

I was mortified and astounded that the Attorney-General of this State would deliberately assert that there is no law under which the railroads of the State can be assessed, as, in the decision rendered, the real issue at stake was not passed upon, and nothing involved in it except the shadowy issue of the assessment of fences. By this interview you have become the authority for the idea that the assessments for 1883, 1884, and 1885 have, like those of the cases decided, included the fences, and that the taxes for these years are thereby lost.

At the trial of certain cases for 1880, 1881, and 1882, had at the July term of the United States Circuit Court, in 1883, the Court found that the value of the fences had been included in the assessment by the former State Board. Knowing this, the present Board discussed the matter and purposely determined not to assess the fences, and did not assess them.

And knowing, of my own knowledge, that the fences have never been assessed by the present State Board, I determined to go to the records of the Court and ascertain what manner of findings had been permitted to be made whereby the taxes for these three years could be endangered, or had been lost.

To my amazement, I found that case 3668, against the Central Pacific, for the taxes of 1884, contained the following finding:

The State Board of Equalization, in making said pretended assessment of the said roadway of defendant, did willfully and designedly include in the valuation of said roadway the value of fences erected upon the land of coterminous proprietors.

On the margin was written these words: "No evidence offered to support this finding."

Then, over the above finding, is pasted the following finding:

The State Board of Equalization, in making the supposed assessment of said roadway of defendant, did knowingly and designedly include in the valuation of said roadway the value of fences erected upon the line between said roadway and the land of coterminous proprietors.

As stated in the original finding, "no testimony was introduced to sustain" the finding that the fences were assessed. The attorneys for the railroad knew it, and you knew it. Yet you permitted the findings to be so made upon the "paster" finding.

The same record as to fences was made in the case 3669, against the Southern Pacific, for 1884; and in addition I found the following finding:

The distance of four miles from the wharf at the end of the road of defendant in San Francisco, across the Bay of San Francisco to the wharf at the end of said defendant's road at Oakland, Alameda County, over which part of the bay freight is carried by said defendant upon steamers owned by said defendant and used for the purposes of said railroad, was assessed to said defendant as four miles of said road, at the same amount per mile as any other equal portion of said road, said four miles across said bay constituting four miles of the aggregate of six hundred and two and twenty-two one hundredths miles of said railroad assessed to said defendant.

This finding, like that relating to the assessment of fences, is not true, as the records of the assessment by the State Board of Equalization will prove.

It was stipulated between you and the attorneys for the railroad that the affidavit of the Clerk of the State Board of Equalization should be taken, as to the assessment of the fences, and the distance across the bay. That affidavit was not taken. Why was it not taken? I have no doubt that the attorneys for the railroad well knew that that testimony would show that the fences were not assessed, and that the distance across the bay was not assessed. And can it be possible that you, the Attorney-General of this State, did not know that fact? And if you did not know it, then why is it that you did not take the affidavit of the Clerk of the Board, as you agreed and stipulated to do? Had that testimony been taken, it would relieve these cases of the objection that controlled the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the cases already decided.

For several years these railroad companies have loudly proclaimed that the methods of assessment under our State Constitution were in violation of the Federal Constitution, and therefore void, and that they were anxious to have them heard and decided by the United States Supreme Court upon that issue. Yet, as evinced by their action but a short time since in the San Mateo case, supplemented by the false record made up in these cases, it must be evident to all that they are by every means within their power evading that very issue. And they have succeeded in evading it in these cases through the false findings you permitted them to impose upon the Court.

In the newspaper interview above quoted, you express it as your opinion that no taxes can be legally assessed against the railroads. From your standpoint, all the unpaid taxes against these railroads for 1883, 1884, and 1885 are void. They amount to $1,233,000, besides costs and penalties. As I understand the purport of your language, you intend to abandon any attempts to enforce the collection of these taxes. Nineteen months since judgments against the State were entered in the United States Circuit Court for the taxes of 1883. You have taken no steps to appeal them. If this be not done within a very few months, the cases will be forever lost. You took an oath to support the Constitution of this State. Yet, you admit that assessments made under it are invalid. If you sincerely believe this, it is clearly your duty to step down and out of these cases, and permit attorneys, appointed under the law, who have faith in our Constitution, to take charge of them and prosecute them to final determination.

I feel that I should be derelict of my duty under the law if I failed to expose the transactions in these tax matters.

Finally, the honor of the State demands that the false—the scandalous records alluded to be expunged from the findings of the Court, so that the cases may be appealed and heard upon their merits. If it is your desire to win the cases, and if the railroad attorneys are really willing to have them decided upon their merits, this will be done.

Yours truly,

JOHN P. DUNN, Controller.

GOVERNOR STONEMAN'S REPLY.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,)
SACRAMENTO, November 8, 1883.)

CREED HAYMOND, Counsel for Central Pacific and Southern Pacific Railroad Companies:

SIR: I have already acknowledged the receipt of your favor of the twentieth October, with memorandum, proposing to pay the taxes now due and delinquent from the Central Pacific and Southern Pacific Railroads, and leased lines, for the years 1880, 1881, and 1882, on the basis of the assessment for the year 1882. Immediately on the receipt of your communication and memorandum, I referred them to the Attorney-General to investigate and report on my power, or the power of any State officer, to accept a compromise of those taxes in the manner you propose; and also to the Controller for a statement and exhibit as to whether the taxes on the Central Pacific and Southern Pacific Railroad Companies were excessive, as claimed in your memorandum. The reports of those officers have just come to hand, which I herewith forward and make a part of this communication. The letter of the Attorney-General conclusively establishes the fact that neither myself nor any State officer—even if so disposed—has the right or power to accept any compromise from the companies you represent for the taxes now due from them, or to accept any less amount than the actual tax for the years 1880, 1881, and 1883, as fixed by the State Board of Equalization on the amount for which your companies were assessed for those years. The letter of the Controller also establishes, in my opinion, the fact that the valuations fixed by the State Board of Equalization on the property of your companies were not only not excessive, but that those valuations were not as great as the assessment of other species of property in this State. You must remember that our Constitution declares that all property in the State shall be assessed in “proportion to its value,” and the Political Code declares that “all taxable property must be assessed at its full cash value.” This is no doubt the rule adopted by the State Board of Equalization and County Assessors in ascertaining the valuations of property in this State. Applying this rule to all property assessed, I cannot see that the property of your companies has been excessively taxed, or taxed for more than its value.

But aside from the foregoing proposition, it occurs to me that it would be manifestly unjust, after property has been duly assessed by the lawful officers, the State and county tax levied thereon, after all the forms of law relating to the assessment and taxation of property have been fully complied with, for the State to accept any less amount than the taxes lawfully due from any of its subjects. If the State has the right or power to compromise with your companies, and accept a less amount than the authorized officers have declared to be due from them, then any person in the State, having property taxed therein, would have the same right to fix the valuation on his property, and to claim that the State should accept from him a smaller amount of taxes than had been assessed and taxed against him.

Following this proposition to its legitimate conclusion, admitting that each and every person has the right to fix the valuation on his own property, and pay to the Tax Collector what he deems to be just, our government would soon end in a state of anarchy.

This State is a sovereign power, and in order to secure the respect due to that power must administer the laws justly and equally to all its subjects.

Yours respectfully, etc.,

GEORGE STONEMAN,
Governor.

THE ATTORNEY-GENERAL'S OPINION.

OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY-GENERAL OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA, }

Governor GEORGE STONEMAN:

DEAR SIR: The memorandum of a proposition for a compromise of the taxes due from the system of railroads in California controlled by the Central and Southern Pacific, which has been submitted to this office and the Controller, has been carefully considered. It is not necessary for me to discuss the policy of the proposed compromise. My opinion is that the power to make the compromise suggested, or to accept any sum less than that demanded in the suits now pending on appeal in the Supreme Court of the United States, does not exist in any or all of the departments of the State Government, except as a credit upon the judgment.

The report of the Controller, which I fully indorse, demonstrates that whether compared with other assessments of property or with the actual cash value of the railroad property in question, its assessments, even in the current year, are far too low. The power, into the exercise of which some of the counties have been seduced, and this office is now attempted to be led, would be fatal to revenue and civilization. If the amount of tax levied for State and county support is subject to reduction by State or county officers, or if the Courts themselves can give judgment for less than the lawful demand of the Government, our form of government is a failure.

I see no reason yet to fear the almost menacing attitude assumed by the railroads, if the people and their representatives are true to their duties.

Your Excellency knows that in your hands, with the coöperation of the coördinate branches of the government, the power exists to enforce all lawful obligations, and to promptly and effectually curb lawless power and overgrown arrogance.

Respectfully,

E. C. MARSHALL.

EXTRACT FROM CONTROLLER'S LETTER OF NOVEMBER 8
1883, TO HON. GEORGE STONEMAN, GOVERNOR OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

The State Board of Equalization, for the year 1882, assessed the property of the Central Pacific Railroad Company at the sum of $13,010,520; the Southern Pacific at the sum of $8,226,135. Adopting as a rule of assessment of railroad property the method sanctioned and indorsed by the Supreme Court of the United States in the celebrated decision in the Illinois Railroad Tax Cases, wherein the method of ascertaining the value of railroad property in Illinois is declared to be to add to the amount of the indebtedness the value of the stock of the road, the decision, reported in the 92d United States Reports, pages 604 and 605, the Court says:

The statute of Illinois, and the rule adopted by the Board of Equalization under the power conferred by the clause we have just recited, may not be the wisest mode of doing complete justice in this difficult matter, but we confess we have, on the whole, seen no scheme which is better adapted to effect the purpose, so far as railroad corporations are concerned, of taxing at once all their property, and of making the tax just and equal in its relation to all other taxable property of the State. * * *

First—The market or fair cash-value of the shares of capital stock, and the market or fair cash value of the debt (excluding from such debt the indebtedness for current expenses), shall be combined or added together; and the aggregate amount, so ascertained, shall be taken and held to be the fair cash value of the capital stock, including the franchise, respectively, of such companies and associations.

Second—From the aggregate amount, ascertained as aforesaid, there shall be deducted the aggregate amount of the equalized or assessed valuation of all the tangible property, respectively, of such companies and associations (such equalized or assessed valuation being taken, in each case as the same may be determined, by the equalization or assessment of property by this Board); and the amount remaining, in each case, if any, shall be taken and held to be the amount and fair cash value of the capital stock, including the franchise, which this Board is required by law to assess, respectively, against companies and associations now or hereafter created under the laws of this State. * * *

It may be assumed for all practical purposes, and it is perhaps absolutely true, that every railroad company in Illinois has a bonded indebtedness secured by one or more mortgages. The parties who deal in such bonds are generally keen and far-sighted men, and most careful in their investments. Hence, the value which these securities hold in market is one of the truest criteria, as far as it goes, of the value of the road as a security for the payment of those bonds.

These mortgages are, however, liens on the road, and, taking precedence of the shares of the stockholders, may or may not affect that value to the exact amount of the aggregate debts. For all that goes to pay that debt, and its interest diminishes, pro tanto, the dividend of the shareholder and the value of his share.

It is therefore obvious, that, when you have ascertained the current cash value of the whole funded debt, and the current cash value of the entire number of shares, you have, by the action of those who above all others can best estimate it, ascertained the true value of the road, all its property, its capital stock, and its franchises; for these are all represented by the value of its bonded debt and of the shares of its capital stock.

The total amount of indebtedness of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, in 1882, as shown by the sworn statement of the President of the road, was \$88,855,934 36, and by the same authority the total number of shares of stock issued and paid up is given at 592,755. These shares, at their quoted market value of 89 $\frac{1}{2}$, for March 1, 1882, were worth \$53,125,666.

Therefore, taking the method stamped with the approval of the highest Court in the land as a basis, the Central Pacific Railroad, instead of being as it was assessed in 1882 at $13,010,520, should have been assessed at over $48,000,000, showing that instead of being assessed at its actual value, as required by law, it was really assessed at but about 27 per cent of its value. This value is found after deducting from the gross sum of the value of the stock and indebtedness the value of 5,940,000 acres of land at $2 50 per acre (most of which, however, is probably not assessed at all), and also $5,000,000 worth of property in the State that should have been assessed for that amount by the local Assessors.

Accepting as true the sworn statement of Mr. Leland Stanford and Mr. E. H. Miller, Jr., made to the late Board of Railroad Commissioners, it must be apparent to the commonest mind that Mr. Haymond's claim for reduction has no foundation in merit to stand upon. Messrs. Stanford and Miller say that the total assets of the company, not including lands granted to the companies, are $168,629,241 19. If $168,629,241 19 be the true value of the Central Pacific Railroad, then the portion that lies within this State was assessed in 1882 for about 18 per cent of its actual value. On page 368 of the Railroad Commissioner's Report is found a sworn statement made by Mr. Charles Crocker and Mr. E. H. Miller, Jr., stating that the total income derived from all sources is $25,389,257 35. On the following page the total expenses are given at $14,579,428 42, leaving a net balance of $10,809,828 93, which, as stated by them, is 8.37 per cent net income upon the amount of the indebtedness and capital stock of the road. If this road, which was assessed in 1882 at but $13,010,520, had been assessed at the amount upon which it paid 8.37 per cent net income, the portion in this State would have been assessed for $46,000,000.

Taking either position, the property of the Central Pacific Railroad was assessed not to exceed 28 per cent of its actual value—a rate of value less than one third of that placed upon other taxable property throughout the State.

It is needless to pursue this array of figures with regard to the Southern Pacific; it is sufficient to state that, by the sworn affidavit of the officers of this road, made to the Board of Railroad Commissioners, they received for the greater portion of their road a rental of $3,000 per mile per year, which is 5 per cent on a value of $60,000 per mile, or 10 per cent on a value of $30,000 per mile, whereas it was assessed in 1882 at but $11,512 97 per mile, which is less than 20 per cent upon $60,000 per mile, and less than 39 per cent upon an assessment of $30,000 per mile.

It is to be presumed that the railroad officials will not attempt to dispute the correctness of these figures, as they are their own sworn statement, and as it has, by these figures, been shown that the railroad property in question has in no case been assessed at more than 28 per cent of its actual value, it now only remains to show that other property throughout the State has been assessed at a rate relatively much greater.

The present State Board of Equalization, after a very careful examination of the values of property, in various counties throughout the State, found that the assessments averaged at least 70 per cent of the cash value. Many counties were assessed above this rate, and yet others were raised above it by the State Board. The assessments made by the local Assessors were, in many instances, raised 10, 15, or 20 per cent by the State Board, which made the differences yet greater, thus showing that it was the property of the counties, and not the property of the railroads, that was assessed "out of proportion to the valuations" placed upon the property of the Central and Southern Pacific Railroads and their branches.

Besides this the assessments upon mortgages in this State aggregated $84,635,000, most of which were assessed by the Assessors in the counties at one hundred cents on the dollar; of these mortgages—

In San Francisco, $26,902,936, were raised 15 per cent, making the assessments one hundred and fifteen cents on every dollar of value.

In Alameda, $10,432,516, raised 20 per cent.

In Monterey, $635,965, raised 15 per cent.

In San Mateo, $803,190, raised 15 per cent.

In Los Angeles, $1,572,486, raised 15 per cent.

In San Joaquin, $4,514,029, raised 15 per cent.

In Yolo, $1,746,000, raised 20 per cent.

In Sacramento, $2,814,610, raised 15 per cent.

In Marin, $1,522,760, raised 20 per cent.

In Sutter, $947,016, raised 20 per cent.

In Solano, $2,048,749, raised 15 per cent.

In Tulare, $734,653, raised 10 per cent.

In Kern, $130,000, raised 10 per cent.

In Contra Costa, $1,017,855, raised 20 per cent.

In Santa Clara, $3,332,455, raised 10 per cent.

In Yuba, $444,920, raised 10 per cent.

In Napa, $1,628,164, raised 10 per cent.

In Santa Barbara, $468,575, raised 20 per cent.

In Tehama, $910,000, raised 10 per cent.

In San Benito, $651,420, raised 10 per cent.

In other words, mortgages representing $16,144,722, face value, were raised 20 per cent above their true value; those representing $39,291,965 were raised 15 per cent above their value, and the remaining counties, representing $7,831,612, were raised 10 per cent above their value.

Besides this, there were this year assessed $29,531,160 in money, solvent credits, and other securities, at full value. Again, the property of Spring Valley Water Company, in San Francisco, was assessed for the fiscal year 1881-82 at $5,740,770, an amount but $2,485,365 less than the assessment made against the property of the Southern Pacific Railroad for 1882. And the San Francisco Gaslight Company was assessed for the same time at $6,653,250, which is but $1,572,865 less than the assessment made against the same railroad company for the year 1882.

It is therefore seen that money, solvent credits, and other securities, are assessed at their face value, mortgages mainly so, or above it, and other classes of property at from seventy cents on the dollar to amounts exceeding that figure, whilst the property of the railroads represented by Mr. Haymond is assessed not to exceed twenty-eight cents on the dollar. Yet these people assert that their property was assessed "excessively, and out of proportion to the valuations placed upon other property in this State."

If it be granted that the amount of the mortgages upon railroad property should, as they insist, be deducted from the value of their property, as shown by themselves, the amount for which they should be assessed would yet be much higher than the amount of the assessment of which they complain.

The mass of the taxpayers throughout the State, thousands of them of limited means, are required by law to pay the taxes upon their property before the month of April of each year, under penalty of sale, and, in order to recover it are compelled to pay a penalty of 25 or 50 per cent upon the amount due and for which the property was sold. Such conditions have not obtained as against these railroads, which now owe to the State the taxes due for four years. It may therefore be said with reason that these railroads, instead of being discriminated against, have been treated with marked leniency by the State.

It is therefore time, in my judgment, to determine whether the methods of assessment that shall prevail, and values placed upon property by competent authority, shall be those created by the laws of the State or by the dictation of corporations that receive all of the benefits, yet contribute little to the support of the government; and also to determine forever the question as to whether or not flimsy pretense, under the panoply of wealth, shall be permitted longer to bid defiance to the power through whose clemency they exist.

Having thus shown that the property of the aforesaid railroads was assessed at much less than its actual value, and far less than the assessment upon other classes of property throughout the State, it is therefore plain that they have no right in equity to ask the State to accept their proposition. After diligent research, I have been unable to find any law which, either in terms or by implication, would warrant this office in accepting less than the full amount of taxes due. Hence, finding that there is neither law nor equity to sanction a reduction, there is but one conclusion at which I can arrive, and that is, that, in so far as this office is concerned, this proposition cannot be entertained.

Respectfully submitted.

JOHN P. DUNN,
Controller.

RAILROAD TAXES.

For eight years there has been, and now is, a heavy deficiency in the receipts to the General Fund, School Fund, and Interest and Sinking Fund, owing to the refusal of the Central and Southern Pacific and other railroad companies to pay the taxes levied upon them by the law.

The assessed value of all the taxable property in the State for 1880 was $666,202,674, of which the assessment against all railroads amounted to $31,174,120, being 4.68 per cent of the whole assessment.

In 1881, after equalization by the State Board, the assessment was $658,691,059; and the assessment of railroads was $34,829,668, being 5.29 per cent of the whole amount.

For 1882 the assessed value of the whole property was fixed at $607,472,762, whilst the assessment upon railroads was $27,602,313, being 4.54 per cent of the whole.

In 1883 the entire assessment of property amounted to $764,763,559, whilst the value put upon railroads operated in more than one county aggregated $40,017,000, which is 5.23 per cent of the whole.

For 1884 the total assessment of property amounted to $821,604,703; assessment of railroads, $50,746,500, which is 6.1 per cent of the whole.

For 1885 the total assessment of property was $859,779,423, whilst the total for railroads was $49,035,750, which is 5.7 per cent of the whole.

For 1886 the total assessment of property was $817,445,729; assessment of railroads, $48,051,100, which is 5.8 per cent of the whole.

For 1887 the total assessment of property was $956,740,805; railroads, $47,673,453, which is 4.9 per cent of the whole.

Recapitulating, these assessments for the several years are as follows:

YEARS.	Total Assessments.	Railroad Assessments.
For 1880.....	$666,202,674	$31,174,141

For all these years, the Central and Southern Pacific Railroad Companies, and certain branches controlled by them, have refused, and still refuse, to pay the taxes levied upon them by law, and the very large amounts thus not collected have caused serious disarrangement to the finances of the State, and the several counties through which they run. The total amount due from these companies, representing the face of the tax from 1883 to 1887, inclusive, aggregates $2,547,700 61.

This statement omits the amount due for 1880, 1881, and 1882, as this office has not the data for ascertaining the exact unpaid amounts.

Actions were brought to recover the delinquent taxes for all these years, except for 1887. But for this latter year, after advising with the Attorney-General, none were begun. The history of these railroad tax suits is one presenting deceit, misrepresentation, and false and fraudulent records upon the part of the Central and Southern Pacific Companies. In the cases of 1884 against these companies, the United States Circuit Court findings show that the State Board of Equalization assessed to the railroads the fences along the lines of the roads, and also the distance across the Bay of San Francisco, a distance of four miles, as four miles of the railroads. No testimony was introduced on the trial to prove any such assessments. The State Board of Equalization did not assess either the fences or the distance across the Bay of San Francisco; and yet, in the face of this fact, the then Attorney-General permitted this record to be made a part of the findings of the Court. It is a significant fact, in this connection, that the decision rendered against the State by the Supreme Court of the United States in a similar railroad tax case, was based upon the fact that the findings showed that the (former) State Board of Equalization had assessed the fences along the lines of the roads—thus putting these cases in the identical condition of those already decided against the State by the Supreme Court of the United States, and rendering it worse than useless to appeal them.

In a letter addressed to the Attorney-General, on the eighteenth day of June, 1886, I called his especial attention to the false condition of the record. This false and fraudulent record was, by him, allowed to remain as part of the record, without any attempt on his part, so far as I am aware, to correct it, even after his attention had been called to it by myself in a public communication. This false record was presented to the United States Supreme Court as a true statement of facts in the case. Of course, in view of the Supreme Court's previous decision, there could be but one result to an issue so presented, and the State lost her cases.

In my last report I predicted this result, in the following language:

The false findings in the United States Circuit Court must be corrected, or the State will lose every cent of the taxes shown to be due. This office is powerless to accomplish it. The attorney employed by this office, Hon. D. M. Delmas, is powerless to accomplish it, as the United States Circuit Court recognizes only the Attorney-General as clothed with the right to control the cases. Can it be that a great State vested with all the attributes of inherent power and sovereignty can be thus pillaged of her rights without the possibility of undoing the outrage?

It is strange that the great State of California has been debarred by these companies from presenting to the Supreme Court of the United States for adjudication a correct and truthful record of her railroad assessments.

The present head of the law department of these railroad companies has time after time given out publicly the statement that he was only too anxious to submit these cases on their merits to the Court of last resort; and, yet, the department over which he presides has resorted to the use of false and fraudulent records, to mislead the Court and prevent the cases from being heard on their merits.

The effect of this successful legal chicanery makes itself felt severely in the finances of the State and the several interested counties, the total amount due for all the named years being the large sum of $2,547,700 61. Of this amount, there is due to the State the sum of $946,765 81, of which $556,615 44 is due to the General Fund; $316,199 59 to the School Fund; $69,778 80 to the Interest and Sinking Fund; and $4,171 98 to the State University Fund.

Now let us consider the condition of these funds under their depleted situation growing out of the refusal of these railroad companies to pay the tribute justly due from them to the State. As shown by the foregoing statement, they owe to the General Fund the sum of $556,615 44. Had this tax been paid as all other parties in the State are compelled to pay, all demands against this fund would be payable at sight, and creditors of the State, who are now compelled to wait for months for their money, would receive it on presentation of their Controller's warrants.

As to the School Fund, there has for some time been loud complaint over the fact that the money paid by the State to the counties to aid in the support of public schools is inadequate. Teachers are compelled to submit to reductions of salaries and to wait for months for what is paid them, and various other matters appertaining to the successful running of the public schools has been more or less interfered with. The large amount due this fund from these railroad companies accounts considerably to the people for this deplorable condition of their educational affairs. So, too, the amount due from these same sources to the Interest and Sinking Fund prevents the payment of State bonds now payable. In like manner, the State University Fund will suffer if these companies persist in their present unjustifiable methods. Likewise, the same censurable policy practiced against the State has been enacted against the several counties traversed by these roads. Notably is this true as to Placer, Tehama, Shasta, Nevada, San Joaquin, Stanislaus, Merced, Fresno, Tulare, Sacramento, Kern, Los Angeles, San Bernardino, San Diego, Alameda, Santa Clara, and other counties. Hence, the funds of each of these counties have suffered, as have the State funds, from the same cause. And the taxpayers of these counties have thus been compelled to pay, first, their own taxes, and second, the taxes levied upon the railroads, but which they refused to pay.

I recommend that the Legislature pass an Act requiring the State Board of Equalization to reassess railroads delinquent for taxes for the years since 1880, and that the County Auditors and Treasurers be required, on the settlement with said railroad companies, under this reassessment, to credit them with any partial payments already made for those years.

I earnestly and urgently recommend that the law for the taxation of railroads be so amended as that the same penalty for delinquency of other property shall attach to delinquent railroads, and that that class of property be sold for delinquent taxes as all other classes of property are sold, and that like penalties of redemption be provided. The heavy hand of the law is laid upon the house and home of the farmer, and the owner of city and town homesteads, for delinquency, and the property is sold at tax sale; and is there any good reason why railroad property should be exempted from the severe penalties imposed upon other classes of property for delinquency? Is it of loftier or holier character than the homes and firesides of families? Let the certainty be established that legal clouds will fall upon the title to this class of property through sale on account of delinquency, and that redemption profits such as accrue to purchasers of other kinds of property will ensue, and railroad delinquency and obstinacy will end together.

OFFICE OF THE CONTROLLER OF STATE,)
SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA, February 28, 1889.)

To the Assembly of the State of California:

In conformity with the resolution adopted by your honorable body February 12, 1889, which reads as follows:

Resolved, That the Controller of State be and he is hereby required to furnish the Assembly with the following information, to wit:

First—The whole amount of taxes delinquent upon railroads assessed by the State Board of Equalization for the years 1883, 1884, 1885, 1886, and 1887.

Second—The proportion of said delinquent taxes due the several State funds, and the amount due each county.

Third—The amount which, if the total delinquency were paid, would, upon the basis of the school census for the present year, and the rates levied for school purposes in the several counties, be available for school purposes in each county.

I have the honor to make the following statement:

Replying to the inquiry contained in subdivision first of the resolution, the amounts due for the several years are as follows:

For the year 1883.....	$222,251 33
For the year 1885.....	720,718 11

The assessments upon which these taxes are due were made by the State Board of Equalization, such assessments being for the franchise, roadway, roadbed, rails, and rolling stock of railroads operated in more than one county of the State.

Of the railroad companies delinquent for taxes for the years 1883 to 1887, inclusive, the Central Pacific, Southern Pacific, California Pacific, Northern Railway, and the San Pablo and Tulare, and the Stockton and Copperopolis Railroads each paid sixty per cent of the taxes levied against them for the year 1883, leaving the amount shown in the statement as still due from them for that year.

For the year 1884, the Stockton and Copperopolis Railroad Company paid its taxes in full when they became due and payable, and has also paid the taxes due for each subsequent year. The other companies named above paid about fifty-one per cent of the taxes levied against them for the year 1884, but for the years 1885, 1886, and 1887 they have paid nothing. The North Pacific Coast Railroad Company is delinquent for the sum of $5,339 38 as taxes for the year 1885. The South Pacific Coast Railroad Company is delinquent for the sum of $10,178 48 as taxes for the year 1887. The Pullman Palace Car Company is delinquent for the sum of $1,102 18 as taxes for the year 1887, upon the rolling stock of the company used on the Central Pacific and other railroads.

From the above it will be seen that the entire delinquency, except the amounts due from the North Pacific Coast Railroad Company and the Pullman Palace Car Company, is chargeable to the system of roads operated by the Southern Pacific Company.

Respectfully submitted.

JOHN P. DUNN, Controller.

IN THE MATTER OF CONTEST OF ELECTION

OF

JOHN J. SULLIVAN, Contestant, vs. W. O. BANKS, Respondent.

City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

Testimony taken before Justices of the Peace H. J. Stafford and J. I. Boland.

THOS. R. KNOX, Official Stenographer.

TESTIMONY.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA,)
SATURDAY, December 31, 1888—10 o'clock A. M. }

This matter came on regularly for hearing, in accordance with the notice, before H. L. Joachimson and J. I. Boland, Justices of the Peace, in the Court-room of Justice H. L. Joachimson. Present: Justices H. L. Joachimson and J. I. Boland; the contestant, John J. Sullivan, and Andrew J. Clunie, counsel for contestant; W. O. Banks, respondent, and M. A. Dorn, counsel for respondent, and Thomas R. Knox, shorthand reporter.

Counsel for contestant objected to Justice Joachimson participating in the taking of the testimony, on the ground that he had not been named in his original notice as one of the Justices. Deputy County Clerk L. J. Welch was sworn, and testified that Justice Stafford had come to the County Clerk after the original notice was made and announced that he could not attend to the matter, and that some other Justice would have to be substituted; that the County Clerk then substituted the name of Justice Joachimson. Counsel for contestant still objected to Justice Joachimson acting, and Justice Stafford was called into the Court-room, when counsel for respondent objected to Justice Stafford participating in this case in any manner whatsoever, on the ground that the case was not before Justice Stafford, and further objected to any continuance of the case, on the ground that he was ready to proceed and that there had been no showing authorizing the contestant to demand a continuance (Justice Stafford having announced that he was unable to proceed with the case to-day). Judge Boland then announced that he would hold that the original notice, having Justice Stafford's name in it, he would hold that Justice Stafford was the one to act, but that the County Clerk could now substitute another Justice, the case now being called for the purpose of proceeding.

Justices Stafford and Boland finally continued the matter until two o'clock P. M., and counsel for respondent then objected to the order of continuance.

AFTERNOON SESSION—2 o'clock.

[Before Justices Stafford and Boland, in Justice Boland's Court-room.]

JUSTICE BOLAND: Justice Stafford and I have decided that this matter is before us as originally assigned, and that the subsequent notice is of no effect.

MR. DORN: We will note an exception. I will state to your honors that we have Mr. Knox here, the shorthand reporter, and we might agree on him as the reporter, in order that your honors might certify to the testimony.

MR. CLUNIE: Mr. Sullivan has arranged to have another reporter here. The other side have brought Mr. Knox here, and while I have no objection to his reporting it, Mr. Sullivan secured Mr. Potter, and I would suggest that Mr. Potter be appointed by your honors the official reporter.

MR. DORN: Then each side can furnish its own reporter, and Mr. Potter can take down the testimony for the contestant, and Mr. Knox can take it down for the respondent. Before proceeding in the case at all, or any steps being taken, we interpose an objection to the testimony being taken before your honors, on the ground that we have never received any notice directing us to appear before Justices Stafford and Boland. The only notice we received was to appear before Justice Boland and Justice Joachimson, and before them we were prepared to appear.

MR. CLUNIE: When the matter comes up again I can reply to that if necessary. When I delivered this original notice to the Sheriff, it was in my handwriting, and there it was specified Justices Stafford and Boland.

JUSTICE STAFFORD: Let it appear of record that the attorneys for the respective parties were present at the time the ruling was made.

MR. DORN: Yes, sir. And I want it to appear that I was present, and that I objected to the proceeding going on, and to any orders being made.

MR. CLUNIE: I will ask that that go over until our next meeting.

MR. DORN: Before either of your honors makes any order you must take jurisdiction, and I must make that objection now. I therefore make the preliminary objection to the jurisdiction of your honors, that we have not been cited to appear before you, and whether it was the negligence of the Sheriff, of the County Clerk, or whoever it may have been, the fact appears that we were cited to appear before Justices Boland and Joachimson.

MR. CLUNIE: I want to bring the Sheriff in here, and Mr. Welch, the Deputy County Clerk.

MR. BOLAND: We have decided that we have jurisdiction; that the matter was originally assigned to us, and that the subsequent assignment by the County Clerk was of no force or effect, and that the matter is still before Judge Stafford and myself. The objection of counsel for respondent is overruled.

MR. DORN: We will note an exception. I ask that an entry be made right now of our appearance in the case, and in all this proceeding we preserve this objection, and we reserve that right.

MR. CLUNIE: I object to the Court making any such order as that. I shall object to Mr. Dorn cross-examining any witnesses unless he appears as attorney.

MR. DORN: The objection I desire is that we appear in this case, and that we reserve at all times the right to object to the jurisdiction of this Court.

MR. CLUNIE: The Court can make no ruling on that.

JUSTICE BOLAND: No, sir.

[Here the further hearing was continued until Wednesday, January 3, 1889, at 10 o'clock A. M.]

SECOND DAY.

WEDNESDAY, January 3, 1889. }
10 o'clock A. M. }

Present: Justices J. H. Stafford and J. I. Boland, contestant and respondent, with their respective counsel, and Mr. Knox, shorthand reporter.

MR. CLUNIE: I would state to your honors before proceeding, that after consultation with Mr. Sullivan we have agreed that if your honors will swear Mr. Knox in as official reporter we will be satisfied with him. We want him sworn in as official reporter for your honors.

MR. DORN: That is perfectly satisfactory to us.

[Mr. Thomas R. Knox was here duly sworn as the official reporter to take down the testimony and proceedings and transcribe the same.]

MR. CLUNIE: Have your honors the statement of contest here? I want to show by Mr. Welch that the statement was issued as your honors see it, and I want to show by Mr. Banks that that notice was not in the condition when he received it as when it was sent. I want that testimony in. I will call Mr. Sullivan as a witness on that point.

MR. DORN: I want your honors to refuse to swear the witness. We object to the witness being sworn.

JUSTICE STAFFORD: We cannot do that.

MR. DORN: We object to any testimony being taken, on the ground that as the proceedings now appear before the Court the respondent has never been served with any notice to appear at this time or this place. They are required to proceed under Section 276 of the Code, which reads as follows: [Reads.] It is in evidence before your honors that no notice specifying this time and the place at which your honors met was ever served upon respondent. It matters not to me whether that mistake, or that wrong, whichever you will, occurred in the Sheriff's office or before the notice was served. This notice takes the place of a summons in an ordinary proceeding.

JUSTICE STAFFORD: We have no authority to pass upon that question at all. We have only the power to hear the testimony.

MR. DORN: We say that the citation which calls on us to appear in another Court is no citation at all. The law states that the time and place must be stated, and we now protest against any deposition being taken, and I ask your honors, in accordance with that, to refuse to hear a matter which has never been properly brought before this Court.

MR. CLUNIE: I don't know that it is necessary for me to prove the fact.

JUSTICE STAFFORD: No, you can proceed and prove the facts.

MR. DORN: I want it formally on the record that the objection is made to the witness being sworn, on the ground that no citation has been served.

JUSTICE STAFFORD: We cannot make a ruling.

MR. DORN: We except.

MR. CLUNIE: I will now call Mr. Welch on the matter of this notice.

L. J. WELCH.

A witness on behalf of contestant, was duly sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: You are a Deputy County Clerk of this city and county? Answer—Yes, sir.

Question—Under Mr. Ruddick? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were such on the tenth day of December, 1888? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember the fact of a statement of contest having been filed in your office on that day by John J. Sullivan against Mr. Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you look at that paper [showing] and state whether that is the statement or not? A. That is the statement.

Q. That was received in your office on the day set forth there? A. Yes, sir.

MR. CLUNIE: We offer that statement in evidence, with the indorsement thereon.

MR. DORN: It is part of the record in this case.

JUSTICE STAFFORD: We have no authority to pass upon anything.

By MR. CLUNIE: Who was that statement received from by you? A. I think I received it from you.

Q. On the receipt of that statement what did you do, sir? A. I filed it.

Q. Did you perform any other act at that time? A. Yes, sir; I issued a commission.

Q. Look at that commission [showing]. Is that the commission that was issued by you at that time? A. Yes, sir.

MR. CLUNIE: We offer this commission in evidence, also, if the Court please. It is the first commission. We ask that the statement be marked "Contestant's Exhibit A," and the commission "Contestant's Exhibit B."

[The statement is here marked by the Justices "Contestant's Exhibit A," and the first commission is marked "Contestant's Exhibit B."]

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: What did you do with that commission, contestant's Exhibit B, when you issued it? Answer—I think I delivered it to Mr. Clunie, or Mr. Ruddick; I don't know which now.

Q. Subsequent to that time, as Deputy County Clerk, did you take any action in this whole proceeding? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What action did you take? A. The County Clerk, Mr. Ruddick, notified me that Judge Stafford would be unable to proceed with the examination at the time, and the Clerk directed me to issue a commission directed to Judges Boland and Joachimson.

Q. What did you do? A. I issued the commission.

Q. Is that [showing] the commission that you issued? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you do with this? A. I delivered it to the County Clerk to be delivered to Judge Boland.

MR. DORN: We offer this commission in evidence. "A" [marked "Respondent's Exhibit A."]

Q. There is a question here about the time at which the notice, which was served upon Mr. Banks, was changed. You testified the other day, I think, that the changes in the body of that notice were in your handwriting and were made by you, and they were initialed on the margin with your initials. Can you tell us when these changes were made? A. I think that they were made the day that the second commission was issued.

Q. And that was where? A. In the Clerk's office.

Q. You don't know whether they were made before or after the service upon Mr. Banks, do you? A. I could not state that.

Q. You made those changes without any request from any one, and on your own judgment, did you? A. I don't remember who brought it to me.

Q. Did any one request you to make them? Did Mr. Shaen ask you to make them? A. No, sir; Mr. Shaen had no conversation with me about them at all.

Q. You did not make them at my request, did you? A. No, I don't think I did.

Q. Nor at Mr. Sullivan's? A. No, sir.

JOHN J. SULLIVAN.

The contestant, a witness in his own behalf, was duly sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: Mr. Sullivan, you are the contestant in this matter? Answer—Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember the fact of a statement of contest having been filed by you in the County Clerks' office, of this city and county, on the tenth day of December? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were present when that was filed, were you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember the fact of a commission having been issued by the County Clerk at that time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you go after that statement of contest was filed? A. I went down to your office.

Q. What occurred then? A. You made a copy of that; you exhibited a copy of it, and asked me to serve it on the Sheriff.

Q. I delivered to you a copy of a paper, and asked you to serve it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That paper which I gave you was the same paper that was introduced here in evidence by Mr. Dorn. Without identifying it particularly, could you say it was the paper you delivered to the Sheriff? A. I did not see that paper. I understood it was an exact copy of the original.

Q. Any paper that was then delivered to you, what did you do with it? A. I took it to the Sheriff's office and delivered it to Mr. Simon, Deputy Sheriff.

Q. That occurred in the Sheriff's office? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you paid him his fee as Sheriff? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did that paper, while in your custody, have any changes in it? A. No, sir.

Q. You never looked at it? A. I never opened it at all.

MR. DORN: I want to cross-examine him when the paper comes.

MR. CLUNIE: I shall want to ask him some further questions then. It will be understood that he may be further examined then.

MR. DORN: Yes, sir.

EDWARD J. REYNOLDS.

A witness on behalf of contestant, was duly sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: Mr. Reynolds, what is your business? Answer—Book-keeper in the Sheriff's office.

Q. You are a deputy under Mr. McMann, also? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were such deputy on the tenth of December? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how long prior to that time had you been? A. Almost two years.

Q. And you have been ever since, haven't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember the fact of J. J. Sullivan coming into the Sheriff's office about the tenth or eleventh of December? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were present then, were you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. State what then occurred? A. Mr. Sullivan came in with the notice of contest against Mr. Banks, and both Mr. Simon and I were looking at the contest. I didn't have time to attend to it just then, and I told Mr. Simon to attend to it, and he collected the fees. It was presented to the Superior Court Register.

Q. Mr. Sullivan had the notice of contest when he came in, didn't he?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did he do with that? A. He passed it along the desk to Mr. Simon and me.

Q. You were both there together? A. Yes, sir. The notice, after it was on the Superior Court Register, I delivered it to Mr. Derham, a deputy in the office.

Q. John Derham? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He was a deputy in the office? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You and Mr. Simon were together, I understand? A. Yes, sir.

Q. From the time you received that notice, up to the time of its delivery to Mr. Derham, were there any changes made in that notice? A. No, sir.

Q. Either by yourself or Mr. Simon? A. No, sir.

Q. Did any person change it there? A. No, sir.

Q. Did any person change it while it was in your custody? A. No, sir.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Do you know whether at the time the paper was delivered to you in the Sheriff's office there were any changes in the original? In other words, if there had been any name erased and another one substituted, did you examine it with sufficient accuracy to know whether it was received in its present form, or whether it has been changed since? Answer—It is my recollection that it was received in its present form, because it is seldom in this kind of notice we take the time to examine the contents of them.

Q. The best of your recollection is that it was received in its present form? That is all.

By MR. CLUNIE: What do you mean by its present form? Answer—I mean the way we received it, it was delivered to the deputy.

Q. You do not mean to say by that testimony that L. J. Welch's initials were there, do you? A. I don't know. I did not read the notice at all.

Q. Explain in your meaning to the Court, when you say it was delivered in its present form. You have not seen it, have you? A. I have not seen it now; no, sir.

Q. You don't know what its present form is? A. I don't know what its present form is just now, but I was not positive what the form was when it came in there.

Q. You know this paper has been in Mr. Banks' house for some time, don't you? A. I know it was delivered to him on that date.

Q. And you do not want the Justices to understand you that the paper was in the same condition when it was delivered to your possession that it is now, do you? A. No, that is not what I mean at all.

By MR. DORN: Isn't it possible, by some rule or order of Court, to require a witness to be fairly examined—in other words, to reject leading questions?

JUSTICE STAFFORD: No, sir; we have no more power than a Notary Public would have. We simply take the depositions.

THE WITNESS: I wish the Court to understand that I was not aware what the contents of the body of that was at all, and I have not read it.

By MR. CLUNIE: But you did swear, as I understand it, that while it was in your possession no changes were made, either by you or Mr. Simon?
A. Yes, sir.

JOHN F. DERHAM.

A witness on behalf of contestant, was duly sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: What is your business? Answer—Deputy Sheriff.

Q. How long have you been Deputy Sheriff? A. Two years.

Q. You are a Deputy Sheriff of this city and county, are you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Deputy under Mr. McMann? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were such the last two years? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And are now? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember the fact of a notice of contest of the election of Mr. Banks having been received in the Sheriff's office on the tenth day of December? A. I do.

Q. What connection did you have with that notice? A. Simply to serve the writ upon Mr. Banks.

Q. Whom did you receive the notice from? A. Mr. Reynolds.

Q. Are you the Mr. Derham that Mr. Reynolds refers to when he says he handed it to you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you in the office when Mr. Sullivan came in there? A. Yes, sir; Mr. Sullivan was present at the time I received the writ.

Q. You received the writ from whom? A. Mr. Reynolds.

Q. What did you do with it? A. I took it up to Judge Finn's Court and served it upon Mr. Banks.

Q. During the time the writ was in your possession, did you or did any person make any change in it? A. No, sir; no one ever saw it. It was folded up as when I received it.

Q. Then the paper was never opened by you? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know Mr. Larry Welch? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he make any change in it after you received it? A. No, sir.

By MR. DORN: We object as leading.

MR. CLUNIE: There were no changes made in it up to the time you served it? A. No, sir.

By MR. DORN: Do you know whether at the time you received the paper it was in its present condition or not, sir? A. I couldn't say because I have never read the paper.

 ANDREW J. CLUNIE.

A witness on behalf of contestant, was duly sworn, and testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: I will state that on the tenth day of December, 1888, I filed the statement of contest of the election of W. O. Banks by John J. Sullivan, marked "Contestant's Exhibit A," in the office of the County Clerk of the city and county, with Mr. L. J. Welch, who was then a Deputy County Clerk, and at the time I filed it I had issued, or at least Mr. Welch, in the name of Mr. Ruddick, issued the commission introduced here, marked "Contestant's Exhibit B." Mr. Sullivan was with me at that time, and immediately after that statement had been filed and the commission issued, I went down to my office and there drew a notice of contest, which Mr. Dorn introduced in evidence here, and that notice is all in my handwriting, with the exception of the interlineations introduced by Mr. Welch. Mr. Sullivan was with me at the time I drew the notice in my office, and I delivered it to Mr. Sullivan with instructions to take it to the Sheriff's office. At the time I delivered it to Mr. Sullivan, those interlineations were not in there, and the names of the Justices are Honorable James I. Boland and Honorable H. J. Stafford, and that interlineation has been made since it left my possession, and since it left Mr. Sullivan's—if made at all.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: You delivered it in your office to Mr. Sullivan, did you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What day was that? A. That, I think, was on the same day, the tenth.

Q. Do you know? A. No, I am not positive as to that.

Q. It might have been the next day? A. Yes; it was either the tenth or the eleventh. I know we went down to the office and drew it the tenth, I think; and whether I delivered it to him that day or the next, I am not positive.

Q. Do you know whether you drew it on that day? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are positive you drew it on that day? A. Yes, sir.

Q. But you don't know whether you delivered it to him on that day or not? A. No, sir.

Q. Then Mr. Sullivan may be mistaken when he says you delivered it to him and he went down and delivered it immediately? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then it may have been the day following, instead of the tenth? A. Yes, sir. It was either the tenth or eleventh.

Q. You don't know what Mr. Sullivan did with it after he got it? A. No, sir; only what he has sworn to.

Q. All that you know is that on the tenth or the eleventh you delivered it to Mr. Sullivan? A. Yes, sir; and I will state further that those interlineations were not in my handwriting. The body of the notice is.

S. L. SIMON.

A witness on behalf of the contestant, was duly sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: Mr. Simon, what is your business? Answer—Book-keeper in the Sheriff's office.

Q. You are also a Deputy Sheriff, are you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you have been how long? A. A good many years. Under this administration, too.

Q. You have been all the time during Mr. McMann's incumbency in office? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And are now? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you in the office on the tenth of December of this last year? A. I was.

Q. Do you remember Mr. Sullivan coming into the office on that day? A. Yes, sir.

MR. DORN: We object as leading. I suppose your honors ought to direct the witness to answer, and there ought to be an exception noted, in order to give us the benefit of it.

JUSTICE STAFFORD: Ask the questions and make the objections, and that is all.

MR. CLUNIE: I will consent that it can be understood that to every question asked, Mr. Dorn has an objection and exception, and that I have the same.

MR. DORN: Let it be entered that it is stipulated here by and between counsel for contestant and respondent that each and every question asked by counsel for contestant and each and every question asked by counsel for respondent is objected to on all grounds, and that exception is noted, without specifying any objections or exceptions at the time the questions are asked.

By MR. CLUNIE: Were you present in that office at that time when Mr. Sullivan came in there one of those days? A. I was; I took the writ from him.

Q. Who was there at that time? A. Mr. Reynolds was standing alongside of me. I took the writs from him.

Q. Do you remember who else was there? A. Mr. Reynolds.

Q. Mr. Sullivan was there? A. Yes, of course; he brought them in.

Q. You took the writ from Mr. Sullivan? A. I did, sir.

Q. What was done with the writ then? A. I stamped it as having been received in the Sheriff's office, and then entered it on the register.

Q. Then what did you do with it? A. There was no deputy in at the time, and I laid it on Mr. Reynolds' book and told him to give it to a deputy as soon as somebody came in.

Q. You handed it over to Mr. Reynolds there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is all you know about it? A. That is all.

Q. During the time that writ was in your possession, and prior to handing it to Mr. Reynolds, did you, or did anybody else make any changes in it? A. No, sir; I never allow anybody to make any changes in them.

Q. Mr. Welch did not make any changes in it while it was in your possession? A. No, sir.

Q. You didn't have this Contestant's Exhibit A? A. No, sir.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: You stamped on it the date you received it, did you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. At the time you received that statement of contest and notice, do you know if it was in its present condition? A. I cannot tell that. I don't know what was done to it after it left my hands.

Q. Do you know whether at that time it was all in one handwriting, or whether there had been any changes or interlineations? A. I didn't read it through.

Q. You don't know and cannot tell? A. I could not tell you.

MR. DORN: Of course your honors will rule that you take and have jurisdiction, because if you proceed with depositions you do so.

MR. CLUNIE: We want to get this testimony before the Legislature. That is all. I would like to have it noted in my testimony that that notice is all in my handwriting except the words "H. L. Joachimson."

MR. DORN: The paper sent for is here now and I want to recall Mr. Sullivan.

JOHN J. SULLIVAN.

Recalled.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: I understand you to say that you received this paper from Mr. Clunie; that when you filed your notice of contest you were present in the Clerk's office with Mr. Clunie? Answer—Yes, sir.

Q. And that you then went to his office and he wrote out and handed and delivered it to you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he deliver it to you immediately upon writing it? A. The same day; yes, sir.

Q. What time in the day? A. I should judge it to be about between four and five o'clock in the afternoon.

Q. What did you do with the notice? A. Put it in my pocket.

Q. What did you do with it afterwards? A. Took it home.

Q. How long did you keep it there? A. Until the next day.

Q. What time in the day? A. I should judge about two o'clock in the afternoon.

Q. Then what did you do with it? A. Brought it out and delivered it to the Deputy Sheriff, Mr. Simon.

Q. You delivered it to Mr. Simon, did you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whether at the time you delivered it to Mr. Simon it was in its present condition or not? A. I don't know what its condition is at present.

Q. Do you know if it was all in Mr. Clunie's handwriting at the time you delivered it to Mr. Simon? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know it? A. I think it was; yes, sir.

Q. Do you know? A. I am pretty positive it was.

Q. But you are not positive of it? A. Yes, sir; I am positive. I didn't see anybody else write anything in it.

Q. Are you positive that it was all in Mr. Clunie's handwriting at that time? A. As positive as I can be of anything.

Q. Did you at any time take that notice, or any of those papers, into the Clerk's office? A. No, sir.

Q. Between the time you received that notice in Mr. Clunie's office and the time you delivered it to the Sheriff, did you see Mr. Welch? A. No, sir.

Q. Are you positive of that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are positive you didn't see Mr. Welch? A. I didn't see Mr. Welch. I saw Mr. Shaen.

Q. I don't ask you about Mr. Shaen. Was the paper out of your possession at any time between the time you received it from Mr. Clunie and the time you delivered it to Mr. Reynolds? A. No, sir. I delivered it to Mr. Simon. It was not.

Q. Is that the paper that you delivered to Mr. Simon [showing]? A. I couldn't swear whether it was or not. I didn't pay any attention.

Q. You don't know whether that is the paper or not? A. Not the writing; no, sir.

Q. You couldn't say whether that is the paper or not? A. No, sir; I could not?

Q. Is that your signature? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you mean to say whether that is the paper or not? A. I never read it.

Q. Well, I say, you cannot swear whether that is the paper or not? A. I think it is, but I wouldn't swear positive.

Re-direct Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: You say you saw Mr. Shaen? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did Mr. Shaen have to say about this matter? A. Mr. Shaen said this case would not come up before two Democratic Judges. He said, "We are going to have Joachimson in that case."

Q. Mr. Shaen said that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That he was going to have Joachimson? A. "We." That is, not meaning him and me. But he meant his friends in the case. You asked me the question about going to see Mr. Welch. I did go to see Mr. Welch, but it was after I delivered that to the Sheriff.

By MR. DORN: What did you go to see Mr. Welch about? A. About this change. I spoke also to Mr. Clunie in regard to the change.

Q. What did you say to Mr. Welch about the change? A. I asked him what they changed the Judges in regard to this case for.

Q. What did he say? A. He said Judge Stafford said he could not act in the matter.

Q. Then, at the time you delivered this paper to the Sheriff, you knew that there had been a change? A. No, I didn't know that there had been a change.

Q. Then what did you go to see Mr. Welch for? A. After I delivered the paper I went to see Mr. Welch.

Q. Immediately? A. No, I think it was the next day. I spoke to Mr. Clunie, and he said they had no right to make any changes.

Q. When did you find out that there had been any change? A. Not until Mr. Welch told me.

Q. When did you see Mr. Shaen? A. I suppose I saw Mr. Shaen the next day after the papers had been served.

Q. You didn't see him before the papers were served? A. No, sir.

Q. You didn't see him while you had the papers in your pocket? A. No, sir.

By MR. CLUNIE: Mr. Shaen did not tell you they were going to change it? A. I understood they were going to arrange it, from his conversation.

 W. O. BANKS.

The respondent, called as a witness in his own behalf, was duly sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Did you ever see that paper before? [Showing.] Answer—Yes, sir.

Q. Where? A. It was served on me by a Deputy Sheriff.

Q. Is it in the same form that it was when it was served on you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I don't care about the contents of the printed part of it. Do you see there the name of Mr. Stafford erased, and the name of Joachimson inserted, and the initials "L. J. W., Clerk," opposite, inserted? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that there at the time it was served on you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You see below the name of Stafford erased, and Joachimson inserted? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that change there when it was served on you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When that paper was served on you, what did you do with it? A. I gave it to you.

Q. In that present form? A. Yes, sir.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: You are sure it was in that form, are you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What makes you so sure of it? A. Because I am.

Q. What is the reason for it? You have some reason for being so certain about this. A. I saw the interlineation and noticed it.

Q. You noticed the interlineation particularly at that time? A. I did.

Q. What was written there do you say? A. There is an interlineation: "Joachimson" for, I think, "Stafford."

Q. Don't you know? You say you read it. A. Give me the paper.

Q. Well, tell us; you say you read it, and looked it all over. A. I believe it was the substitution of one Judge for another.

Q. What Judge? A. Judge Joachimson for, I think, Judge Stafford.

Q. You say you think so. Don't you know? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was it? A. It was the substitution of Judge Joachimson for Judge Stafford.

[Here counsel for respondent passes the witness the paper.]

MR. CLUNIE: I object to you handing him any paper, or interfering with the witness. I submit to your honors that that is improper. I ask your honors to make a ruling here. I can show your honors that you have the right to do it. The Code says that you have the right, sitting here, to see that the proceedings are conducted in a proper manner, and that is not a proper manner, I say. I have never before heard of an attorney going up to the stand and handing the witness papers.

MR. DORN: I have no objection to that ruling being made.

MR. STAFFORD: I think you have only the right to make an objection to counsel showing witness a paper.

MR. DORN: I think, in all fairness under the law, your honors, sitting here to hear this testimony, have a right to see that the proceedings are conducted as they should be conducted in any Court, and I believe that that right includes such orders as would compel the attorneys to conduct themselves properly.

MR. CLUNIE: I want it to go on record that it appears that Mr. Banks was unable to state as to what—

MR. DORN: I object to that going on the record. I ask your honors not to put on the record statements that are not sworn to.

MR. STAFFORD: We might suggest that the objection was made to counsel showing the witness the paper, and state the ground of objection.

MR. DORN: No objection.

MR. CLUNIE: I object to Mr. Dorn, after Mr. Banks was unable to state what the interlineations were, getting up and going over to the witness and handing him a paper and pointing to the interlineations.

MR. DORN: We ask it to be noted that Mr. Banks was not unable to state, and was stating truthfully.

MR. CLUNIE: Please hand me that paper. State what the interlineations are? A. The interlineation was that Judge Joachimson was substituted for Judge Stafford.

Q. What are Judge Joachimson's initials? A. H. L.

Q. What are Judge Stafford's? A. I couldn't tell you.

Q. Did you read it at the time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was the name in there at the time it was served on you? A. The name of Stafford was scratched out.

MR. DORN: He stated that the change was made at the time he received it, substituting Judge Joachimson for Judge Stafford.

MR. CLUNIE: I object to Mr. Dorn interfering and correcting the witness, and stating anything that he did not state.

Q. Was the initial "M" in there when it was served on you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are sure of that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Just as sure as you are of anything else you have testified to—"Justice Stafford" and the "M" was scratched out? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You swore to that a moment ago, didn't you? A. I understand that as well as you do.

Q. The "H. M." was scratched out? A. I don't know positive that it is "H. M." Stafford.

Q. You don't know positive what they were? A. I do not.

Q. Is that all the change that was made in it? A. "H. M. Stafford" was scratched out.

Q. And "H. L. Joachimson" was put in there? A. No; I think not.

Q. What else was put in there? A. I think the place was changed to Judge Joachimson's office and the other portion.

Q. What was the other portion, do you remember? A. Other offices, I think; I cannot swear. I didn't commit that paper to my memory. I cannot recite that word for word.

Q. You are unable to state the interlineations that were made? A. I state them as far as I know what they were.

Q. And that is as far as you remember? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the only reason you state that is that it has not been out of your possession? A. It has been out of my possession.

Q. Where? A. It has been in my attorney's possession.

Q. You don't swear that any changes have been made in it by your attorney? A. As far as I know.

Q. All you can say is, that while this paper was in your possession no changes were made in it? A. That is all.

Q. And that is all you can swear to? A. That is all.

MR. DORN: I ask you to look at that paper, Mr. Banks [showing], now; and I ask you to examine that paper carefully, and tell me if it is in the same condition it was when you received it? A. It is, as far as I can see.

Q. Were those interlineations there when you received the paper and delivered it to him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. During the time it was in your possession did you make any changes in it? A. I did not.

Q. Did you deliver it to him in precisely the same condition you received it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Between the time you received it and the time you delivered it to him, did you make any change or scratch in it? A. No, sir.

MR. CLUNIE: I want it to appear on the record, that at the time this paper was shown it was not part of the record, and it was in the witness' handwriting.

M. A. DORN.

A witness for respondent, was duly sworn, and testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: That paper is a paper which was delivered by Mr. Banks, the respondent in this case, to me, on or about the eleventh day of December. My impression is that it was delivered to me on the day it was served, on the eleventh. As to that I cannot state positively. At the time it was received by me from Mr. Banks the interlineations which now appear upon it were upon it, and in the same form, and since its receipt by me there has been no change whatsoever in the form of the notice.

MR. CLUNIE: The same objection to his testimony, that he refers to a paper not in evidence, and makes statements as to a paper not in evidence.

MR. DORN: We offer this paper in evidence, and ask that it be marked "Respondent's Exhibit B."

[Paper marked "Respondent's Exhibit B."]

MR. DORN: That will be introduced in evidence, with the understanding that it is our paper, and we may be allowed to withdraw it any time.

L. J. WELCH.

Recalled for respondent.

By MR. DORN: You testified some time ago that those interlineations were made by you. Answer—Yes, sir.

Q. And that they were in your handwriting? A. Yes, sir.

Q. At whose request did you make them? A. I don't remember.

Q. Where were they made? A. In the County Clerk's office.

Q. Who brought the paper into the County Clerk's office? A. I cannot tell that. I don't remember. I paid no attention at the time it was brought in.

Q. And on what date were they made? A. I am positive it was made the day that the second commission was issued.

Q. You know that they were made in the Clerk's office? A. Yes, sir. I don't remember who brought it, but I made the changes to correspond with the second commission.

Q. The second commission was issued on the eleventh, was it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And this was done at the same time? A. At the same time.

Q. Do you know whether or not the changes had been made before the paper had been served? A. Before that statement had been served?

Q. Yes, sir. A. No, they were made after the return of service of the statement.

Q. Were these changes made in the paper after it had been served on Mr. Banks by the Sheriff? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who by? A. The changes in there?

Q. Yes, sir. A. By me.

Q. Who brought the paper into your office, then? A. I don't know.

Q. Do you mean to say that the changes had been made after the paper had been served by the Sheriff on Mr. Banks? A. I can't say positively about that.

Q. What day were they made. Do you know that? A. The day that second commission was issued.

Q. What day was the second commission issued? A. I will have to look at it to see.

Q. It was issued on the eleventh. Do you know what time of day it was? A. In the afternoon, I think?

Q. Was it after three thirty in the afternoon? A. I can't tell that either. I know it was in the afternoon some time.

Q. Was it after four o'clock—after your office hours? A. No; it was during office hours.

Q. Do you know whether it was after three thirty? A. I don't know that.

MR. DORN: I ask that the reporter note that this paper which was served upon Mr. Banks bears the indorsement that it was received by the Sheriff on December 11, 1888, at three thirty p. m., and that the Deputy Sheriff testified that that was the time he received it, and that it was some time after that before the deputy came into the office to serve it.

MR. CLUNIE: He did not testify to anything of the kind. He testifies it was taken immediately on receipt, up to Judge Finn's Court to where the count was going on.

MR. DORN: And you say you do not know at whose request the changes were made, or who brought it to you? A. No, I do not know; I don't remember who brought it to me.

[Testimony on change in notice, closed.]

FAUST MASCHERINI.

A witness on behalf of contestant, was sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: Mr. Mascherini, what is your business? Answer—Grocery and bar.

Q. Where is your place of business? A. Corner of Greenwich and Montgomery Avenue.

Q. Where do you live? A. At the same place.

Q. How long have you lived there? A. Seven years.

Q. Were you living there about the time of this election, that occurred on the sixth of November? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were a resident of the Twenty-first Senatorial District, were you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where were you on election day? A. I was in the store.

Q. Where were the polls held? A. Right in our place.

Q. In your store, at 718 Greenwich Street? A. Yes, sir; facing on the avenue.

Q. That is, Montgomery Avenue? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were present there on the morning of election, were you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know Mr. Banks, this gentleman here [indicating respondent]? A. I know him that morning.

Q. This little gentleman? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see him on that morning? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you see him? A. On Greenwich Street. I was introduced to him right opposite my store.

Q. Right opposite the polls? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How far from the polls were you? A. About fifty feet.

Q. No further than that? A. No, sir.

Q. You were introduced to him by whom? A. S. DeMartini.

Q. You had some conversation with him? A. I had a few words to say.

Q. What did he say to you? A. He told me to do the best I can for him.

Q. What else did he say? A. He didn't say anything more to me, because he was excited, and on account of the election: he didn't have much to say, because he was busy.

Q. At that time, when Banks told you to do all he could for him, did he give you any money? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did he give you? A. When he told me that, I said, "We need some coin to do something."

Q. You told him you needed some coin? A. No; I said we needed some coin to treat the boys.

Q. Then what occurred? A. He gave me ten dollars, and we got the boys who were standing there, and I treated them.

Q. Did he say anything about doing what you could at that time? A. He gave me ten dollars, and said, "Do the best you can for me," and to treat the boys: that was the meaning, you see.

Q. That is what you think it meant? A. That is what he meant it for.

Q. About this coin, did you ask him for this money? A. That is the simple reason; he told me to do the best and for the boys.

Q. He gave you the money without asking? A. Certainly, without asking it.

Q. That occurred within the precincts of the polls, where? A. Third of the Thirty-fourth.

Q. The third precinct of the Thirty-fourth Assembly District of the Twenty-first Senatorial District on this morning? A. Half past ten in the morning.

Q. On November sixth, in this city and county? A. Yes, sir.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Were you ever introduced to Mr. Banks at any other time? A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't Buckley introduce you to Banks? A. It was Buckley and DeMartini at the same time.

Q. You were introduced by the two of them at the same time? A. The one who introduced me was DeMartini.

Q. How long have you been in business there? A. About six or seven years.

Q. Have you ever bought any man's vote. A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever tried to bribe any man to vote any particular way? A. No, sir.

Q. Have you given a man any money or consideration for voting for one candidate or against another? A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever given a man anything out of your store and out of your saloon, or any other store, or anywhere else, to influence him to vote one way or the other? A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever bribed anybody to vote for or against Mr. Banks, or have you ever bribed anybody to vote for or against Mr. Sullivan? A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever treated a man for the purpose of influencing his vote for one man or against another? A. I treated the boys that were inside at that time.

Q. Did you treat them to buy their votes for or against anybody else?
A. No, sir.

Q. When you treated them, or after you treated them, did you ask them to vote for one man or another? A. No, sir; that was not my business.

Q. And you did not buy them? A. No, sir. I only said, "Boys, here is a treat from Banks."

Q. Did you say anything to them about voting for Banks? A. No, sir, because they were all mixed up.

Q. Did you say anything to them about voting against Sullivan? A. No, sir.

Q. You did not ask them to vote one way or the other? A. I did not ask them to vote one side or the other.

Q. You did not try to influence their votes one way or the other? A. No, sir.

Q. You say Banks gave you ten dollars? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you use that money in any way whatever to influence any man's vote? A. No, sir; I put it right in my till.

Q. And you kept it right there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you did not give it to anybody? A. No, sir.

Q. And you say you have by no consideration of money or otherwise sought to influence, during the last election, any man's vote for or against Mr. Banks, or for or against Mr. Sullivan? A. No, sir.

Q. You kept this money, did you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You put it in your till and put it to good use? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When Banks gave you that money did he say that he wanted you to vote for him? A. He gave me that money and he told me, "I hope you will do the best you can for me."

Q. Did you understand that he was buying your vote with that ten dollars? A. Oh, no.

Q. Did you understand that you were to buy anybody else's vote, or to influence anybody else's vote for him? A. No, sir.

Q. You considered it a mere act of friendship? A. I considered that it treats the boys, to have a drink with him.

Q. Around the different polling places and where the ballots are cast, they have a poor box, haven't they? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in that, as they come along, every man is expected to drop something for the boys? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In doing that, is it the intention to buy anybody's vote, or to do anything wrong? A. No. He gave the money to me. There was no poor box in my pocket.

Q. What was the matter with your till being a poor box? A. That was a private business, you see. That had nothing to do with the poor box or with the election office.

Q. It was simply for you personally? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it was between you and Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you say that money was not to buy your vote? A. No, sir.

Q. Or was not to influence your vote? A. No, sir.

Q. Or the vote of anybody else? A. That was not mentioned at all to me.

Q. Did you understand that you were to do such things? Did you understand that your vote was to be bought for that ten dollars? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you understand you were to use that ten dollars to buy anybody's else vote? A. No, sir.

Q. And you did not use it so? A. No, sir.

By MR. CLUNIE: All you know is that Banks met you and told you to do all you could for him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And gave you ten dollars? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And on that you went into your saloon and said: "Boys, let us have a drink on Banks' money." Is that it? A. And Banks left.

By MR. DORN: You said: "Let us have a drink with Banks." Did you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was all that was done? A. Yes, sir.

By MR. CLUNIE: If you hadn't got that ten dollars, you wouldn't have have done that? A. If I didn't get Banks' money, I don't treat the boys; certainly I wouldn't.

By MR. DORN: Do you know Mr. Sullivan, this gentleman here (indicating contestant)? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you know him at the time he was a candidate for State Senator at the last election, in the Twenty-first Senatorial District? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was he ever in your place? A. Yes, he was.

Q. Did he ever treat the boys there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he set them up for the boys in that place? A. Yes, several times.

Q. About how many times during the time he was a candidate for the office of State Senator at the last election? A. I couldn't tell you that, because sometimes I am there and sometimes my partner is there.

Q. You have seen him in your place and have seen him treat the boys? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was he in your place on election day? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he treat the boys there that day? A. I couldn't tell you. Every time he came in there he always treated the boys.

Q. And election day he was in there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He is a pretty good fellow if he always sets them up for the boys? A. Yes, sir. Everybody does the same thing.

Q. Everybody that came in gave you money to treat the boys? A. No, sir, he didn't do that. He came in and treated the boys standing up against the counter.

Q. And he paid you for the drinks you gave at his order to the boys, as you call them? A. Yes, sir.

Q. On election day? A. Yes, sir.

By MR. CLUNIE: Mr. Banks did not stand at the bar when he had this little conversation with you, did he? A. No, sir.

Q. You were out on the sidewalk, weren't you? A. No, sir.

Q. Where were you when you met Mr. Banks? A. I was introduced in the street, and then he came in the store.

Q. You were in the street first and had this conversation in the street? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then Mr. Banks came in the store after he told you to do what you could? A. No, sir; he came in and gave me the ten dollars inside the store.

Q. Ain't you mistaken about Mr. Sullivan being in your place on election day at all? A. I am sure I saw him on election day.

Q. But you ain't sure you saw him on election day at your place? A. Certainly, because he has been in there.

Q. Wasn't it the day after? A. I couldn't tell if he was there the election day, I saw so many there. He might pass by there. I see his face. I won't say sure.

By MR. DORN: But you are sure he was in there a number of times before election day, and treated the boys? A. Yes, sir; he has been there a few days before election.

Q. When he treated the boys, what did he say about voting for him? A. He knows well when they have a treat from a candidate they all vote for him.

Q. And that was the understanding when Mr. Sullivan treated the boys in your place? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That they were to vote for him because of his treating them? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He had that understanding several times, with several different crowds, in your saloon before election? A. Yes, sir; sometimes he treats.

By MR. CLUNIE: How do you know he had that understanding? Mr. Sullivan never said that to you? A. No, sir.

Q. Mr. Sullivan never said he expected the boys to vote for him because he gave them a drink? That is what you understood? A. When the boys take the glass and drink down and say, "Here is the health to Mr. Sullivan," they do it.

Q. When you say it was the understanding that when Mr. Sullivan gave them a drink, you don't mean that, do you? A. No; they all drink.

By MR. DORN: And you mean when the boys take up the glass they say, "Here is to Sullivan for Senator?" A. Yes, sir.

Q. "Here is to Sullivan, our next Senator?" A. Yes. So they did the same thing with Banks.

By MR. CLUNIE: Did Sullivan ever give you ten dollars and say, "Do all you can for me?" A. No, sir.

JOHN DYKEMAN.

A witness on behalf of contestant, was sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: What is your name? Answer—John Dykeman.

Q. What is your business? A. Engineer.

Q. Where are you working? A. In the United States Appraiser's building.

Q. Do you reside in the Twenty-first Senatorial District? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where? A. At 1108 Taylor Street.

Q. That is what precinct? A. The seventh.

Q. Of what district? A. The thirty-third.

Q. How long have you resided there? A. Three years.

Q. You lived there on the day of election, did you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And prior thereto? A. Prior.

Q. Where were you on the day of election? A. Around the polls in the Seventh Precinct of the Thirty-third District.

Q. Were you around there after the election was over? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was your business there? A. I was put there by the Democratic County Committee to look out for their interests.

Q. You were there how long? A. During the count.

Q. Off and on, I suppose? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know a gentleman by the name of Jones? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was he doing there? A. Republican Inspector.

- Q. He was there when? A. At the same time that I was there.
- Q. When did the count commence? The count commenced on the night of the sixth, didn't it? A. The night of the sixth, after the polls closed.
- Q. During the time that Jones was there, was he acting and calling off the ballots? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. In relation to the count for Senator, he also called that off, didn't he? A. Yes, sir; he called the ticket right off.
- Q. During that time, did you see Mr. Jones do anything in regard to calling off the ballots cast for Senator, that was improper, and state what it was. A. I heard him calling the name of Banks on a Democratic ticket. I had seen the ticket as it come out of the box, and he called the name of Banks, and after he got through reading the ticket I told him Banks' name was not on it, and he said he probably made a mistake, and Sullivan got the vote.
- Q. That was where? A. The seventh of the thirty-third.
- Q. Which was the gentleman? A. This gentleman right here [showing].
- Q. Do you know where that gentleman lived? A. At that time I think he lived on Clay Street, corner of Wetmore Place.
- Q. In what district was that? A. The Thirty-second.
- Q. And this you speak of occurred where? A. In the seventh of the thirty-third.
- Q. And he was there acting? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. He resides in the thirty-second? A. To the best of my knowledge.

Cross Interrogatories.

- By MR. DORN: Do you know anything about where he lives? A. I know, to the best of my knowledge, he did at that time.
- Q. Where? A. Corner of Clay and Wetmore Place.
- Q. That is in what district? A. The thirty-second.
- Q. How do you know he lived there? A. Because he is a friend of mine, and I visited him there.
- Q. When did you visit him there? A. About two or three months before election.
- Q. Did you after that? A. No, sir.
- Q. Then how do you know he lived there? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Why? A. Because I saw him go in there and out of there.
- Q. How many times did you see him go in there and go out of there in the two or three months preceding election? A. The ordinary number of times.
- Q. How many times did you see him go in there and go out of there in the two or three months preceding election? A. Whenever I met him there.
- Q. How many times did you meet him? A. Two or three times a week; whenever he had occasion to go in or come out.
- Q. Every time you met him there? A. No, I did not.
- Q. You met him two or three times a week. How often did you see him go in there? A. He was either going in or going out every time I met him.
- Q. He was just palpitating in and out that door? A. Oh, no.
- Q. He was either going in or out that doorway? A. Oh, no. I met him somewhere else.
- Q. He was not always in the door, going in or coming out? A. Oh, no.

Q. Then what you stated a moment ago is not true? A. Yes, it was true.

Q. That is the truth. Was he always going in or coming out the door?
A. I didn't state that. I stated I met him a number of times, either going in or coming out.

Q. About how often did you meet him in the two or three months before election? A. That I can't tell exactly.

Q. Did you meet him twice? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you meet him three times? A. Probably.

Q. Are you sure of that? A. Yes, sir; I met him probably more than that.

Q. But you were never to his room? A. Yes, sir, I was.

Q. Didn't you state a moment or two ago you visited him two or three months before election, and you were never there since? A. I have not been there since.

Q. During the three months before election you were never in his room?
A. No, sir.

Q. And you don't know whether he lived there or went to visit somebody else there, do you? A. I know that it is—

Q. [Interrupting.] Don't guess at it. A. I know that he lived there.

Q. How do you know it? A. Because I know it.

Q. That is a woman's reason, and you are not a woman. How do you know it? A. Because that is his residence.

Q. How do you know that is his residence? You are stating a fact, and stating it under oath. How do you know that that is his residence? A. I don't know. Everybody thinks, or claims, and knows that it is his residence. If they send for him they go there for him.

Q. Then all you know about it is what everybody claims, is it? A. If I wanted him, I would go there to find him.

Q. And that is all you know? A. That is the only way.

Q. Then you don't know whether he lives there or anywhere else, and you have no means of knowing, have you? You don't know of your own knowledge whether he lives there or whether he simply goes there to visit somebody else? A. To my knowledge, he lives there.

Q. Do you know whether he lives there? A. I know that he did live there. Whether he lives there now or not, I don't know.

Q. You know he lived there three months before election? A. Yes sir.

Q. And you don't know whether he lived there since? A. To the best of my knowledge he did.

Q. Then what you state here is simply what you believe, what you think, with regard to his residence within three months prior to election; that is it, is it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say that on election day you listened to the counting of some of the ballots there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You discovered a mistake there, and you called attention to the mistake, and it was rectified immediately? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is the only mistake you know anything about? A. That is the only mistake I had anything to do with.

Q. And that was rectified immediately when it was called to their attention? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where were you during the time the ballots were being counted? A. In the precinct; in the place where the ballots were counted.

Q. What were you doing there? A. I was watching in the interest of the Democratic County Committee.

Q. Who sent you there? A. The Chairman of the Democratic County Committee.

Q. Who was that? A. Max Popper.

Q. When he sent you there, what did he tell you? A. He told me to watch out and see that nothing was done, and to look out for our interests in general.

Q. What else did he tell you? A. Nothing else.

Q. That is very broad instruction, isn't it; that you went there to look after the interests of the Democratic party in general? A. Yes, sir.

Q. During any of the time you were in that polling place did you handle any of the ballots that were on the string? A. I looked them over.

Q. And handled them after they were strung? A. I didn't take them off the string.

Q. Answer my question. A. Yes, I did.

Q. You looked them over and counted them after they were on the string? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Didn't you know you were violating the law when you touched one of those ballots? A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't you change any of those ballots? A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't you rub your thumb through the name of anybody? A. No, sir.

Q. Are you sure? A. Sure.

Q. Positive of that? A. Positive.

Q. What were you doing with the ballots? A. There was a suspicion aroused in my mind, and I thought by looking them over I might see whether there was any crooked work being done, and we might fix it right there and then.

Q. How many of those ballots did you look at? A. I went through six or eight of them.

Q. At the time they were on the string? A. At the time they were on the string.

Q. At the time you went through those ballots you were not an officer of election, were you? A. No, sir.

Q. You were not a Judge of Election, Inspector of Election, or Clerk of Election? A. No, sir.

Q. And you handled the ballots after they were on the string? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And after they had been counted? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were doing that in the interests of the Democratic party? A. I was doing that for the Democratic party.

Q. And you went there under instructions from the Chairman of the County Committee? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You went there with that instruction and you did handle the ballots? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you a member of the Confidence Club? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who started that club? A. I don't know.

Q. Who is the chief man in that club? A. Do you mean the President?

Q. Yes, sir. A. John Sullivan.

Q. This gentleman here, the contestant, is the President of the Confidence Club? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where are you employed? A. In the United States Appraiser's Building.

Q. Who got you that position, sir? A. I was appointed by Judge Hager.

Q. Who got you that position, sir? A. Mayor Pond sent a letter to Judge Hager, introducing me. Mr. Hager appointed me.

Q. Who introduced you to Mayor Pond? A. William Dinan.

Q. Mr. Dinan was a candidate for the Assembly at this election over in the Twenty-first Senatorial District, wasn't he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Dinan is a member of the Confidence Club, isn't he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Dinan, Mr. Sullivan and yourself are all members of the club, aren't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is a Democratic Club, is it not? A. I believe so.

Q. You know it, don't you. A. Yes, sir, I know it.

Q. It is an election club, isn't it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Started and organized for the avowed purpose of electing Democrats to office? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And run for that purpose? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you and Mr. Dinan and Mr. Sullivan are all members of it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. There was quite a trouble over there during the last election between the Confidence Club and the Ninth District Club, wasn't there? A. I don't know of any.

Q. The Ninth District Club is another club over in that district, isn't it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say you have never heard of any trouble? A. I may have heard of it, but I know of none.

Q. Did you hear of it? A. I have heard of it.

Q. What was the difficulty? A. I don't know. A mere matter of jealousy, I suppose. I don't know of anything else.

Q. During the time you were exercising yourself so vigilantly in behalf of the Democratic party, you were losing your time, weren't you? A. No, sir.

Q. Your time ran on just the same, did it? A. This was in the evening this occurred.

Q. Then you only watched in the evening; you did not watch in the daytime? A. I watched in the day.

Q. During the daytime, did your time run along just the same? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You got your wages just the same, just so long as you were working in the interests of the Democratic party? A. Just such time as I could be off.

Q. And you could get off and be looking out for the interests of the Democratic party; you were sent by Max Popper to look after the interests of the Democratic party over there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you got your wages just the same whether you were over there looking after the Democratic party's interests, or whether you were managing the engine? A. I was managing the engine.

Q. How could you do that when you were over there looking after the ballots? A. I was over there. I was over there during the night.

Q. I thought you said you were there during the whole time that the ballots were counted? A. I couldn't do that. I would have to have some sleep. I was either asleep or at work.

Q. How much of the time did you work? A. I guess I worked the same as I always did.

Q. Tell me what you did? A. I can hardly recall. I did not make any mental note of that kind; I cannot recall positively when I was there and when I was not.

Q. You did not lose any time at all? A. No more than I am to-day.

Q. Are you losing your time to-day? A. No. I should be, but to-day I got permission to come off.

Q. That is what you did when the election occurred? A. No. I did not get off except when I could be off. I went away in my leisure hours.

Q. What position are you promised by Mr. Sullivan as the result of your active participation in this election? A. None whatever. He has not given me a promise, one way or the other, of any kind.

Q. You have not made up your mind what position to take? A. I don't know that it would do me any good if I did.

Q. And you don't think Mr. Sullivan is at all grateful, and that this help will make him at all grateful to assist you to get anything to do? A. I think anybody else would do just the same as long as he is a Democrat.

Q. You are a Democratic officeholder? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Drawing your salary by reason of Democratic appointment? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then your active participation does not partake altogether of disinterestedness? A. No, sir.

By MR. CLUNIE: You are not a free charity giver? A. No, sir.

[Here a recess was taken until 2 o'clock P. M.]

AFTERNOON SESSION—2 o'clock.

FRANK E. DORAN.

A witness on behalf of contestant, was sworn, and testified as follows :

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: What is your business? Answer—Deputy Sheriff.

Q. Where do you reside? A. 807 Union Street.

Q. How long have you resided there? A. About a year.

Q. Did you reside there about the time of the last election? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct is 807 Union, of the Assembly District? A. Where I reside is, I believe, the fifth precinct.

Q. On election day did you stay in any precinct? A. In the Sixth of the Thirty-third.

Q. Were you there all day? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know a gentleman by the name of Lynch? A. I do.

Q. J. D. Lynch. Do you know him? A. I know a man by the name of James Lynch.

Q. Is he in the Court-room? A. No, I don't see him.

Q. On the day of election where was James Lynch? A. He was in the Sixth of the Thirty-third. He was a Clerk of the Board, I believe.

Q. Do you know Mr. Banks, the gentleman sitting here [indicating the respondent]? A. No, sir. I never spoke to the man in my life.

Q. Did you know the fact that a man by the name of Banks was a candidate for Senator from the Twenty-first Senatorial District? A. I did; yes, sir.

Q. Did you have any conversation with Lynch regarding Mr. Banks, on the day of election? A. I had a few words with Lynch.

Q. Tell us what that was? A. Regarding Mr. Banks. I went to Lynch and asked him if he wouldn't vote for a friend of mine, Mr. Sullivan, and he said no, he would not, but he was for Banks. He said, "I have the Democratic ticket, but I have got Banks' money, and I am here to work and to buy votes for him."

MR. CLUNIE: I object to people sitting here and laughing at witnesses.

JUSTICE STAFFORD: Neither of us noticed anything. Proceed.

By MR. CLUNIE: That occurred in the Sixth Precinct of the Thirty-third Assembly District, in this city and county? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was Mr. Lynch there at the election precinct? A. He was there all day.

Q. What doing? A. A part of the time he was clerking; very little clerking, but most of the time he was outside.

Q. What doing? A. Electioneering outside.

Q. Talking to voters? A. Oh, yes, sir; any man that he could get to vote for Banks he would take them around the corner and try and take them up to the polls.

MR. DORN: We move that so much of this matter as related to the conversations between Mr. Lynch and the witness on the stand, which we had no opportunity to object to, not knowing what would be the response—we move that so much as relates to the conversation be stricken out as hearsay, and not competent evidence. There can be no ruling and we have to rest with the motion.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Where do you reside? A. No. 807 Union Street.

Q. You are a Deputy Sheriff, you say? A. Yes, sir.

Q. At the present time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you on the Board of Election over there? A. I was not.

Q. What were you doing over there? A. I was stationed in that precinct. I live in that precinct, and have for twenty-five years.

Q. Who stationed you there? A. I was stationed by the County Committee. I was ordered to take charge of that precinct.

Q. By what County Committee? A. The Democratic County Committee.

Q. Were you stationed there in the Sixth Precinct of the Thirty-third District by order of the Democratic County Committee? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you known Mr. Lynch? A. I have known him, I guess, fifteen or eighteen years.

Q. When you approached him and asked him to vote for your friend Sullivan, you say he refused to do so? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Of course he understood that you were working for Sullivan, didn't he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Didn't it strike you as very singular that he should tell you these things if he knew you were against him? A. No; he was a friend of mine. I have befriended him; I have done him a couple of favors, and I asked him as a personal favor to vote for Sullivan. He said, "I am not going back on Banks." He said, "I am not going to put him in the hole; I have got his money, and I am going to vote for him."

Q. Who was present at the time of this conversation? A. Nobody was present. He called me in the saloon on the corner.

Q. No one was present? A. No, sir.

Q. Corner of what? A. Corner of Pacific and Mason.

Q. Then this conversation took place? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Nobody else was within hearing? A. No, sir.

Q. He told you he was not going back on Banks; he had Banks' money? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was all he said? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are positive of that? A. Well, there was a little more conversation there.

Q. You had a little general conversation? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you a member of the Confidence Club? A. No, sir.

Q. Are you a member of the Ninth District Club? A. No, sir; I am not. I never signed my name to it.

Q. What do you mean, you never signed your name? A. If I am a member, I never signed my name to it.

Q. Is that the same way you are a member of the Confidence Club? A. No, sir; I am not a member of the Confidence Club nor the Ninth District.

Q. Why do you say you never signed your name to it? A. Well, I don't know. Maybe somebody else signed my name to it, if I am a member, and I don't know it.

Q. Did anybody else sign your name? A. That I don't know.

Q. Do you know whether anybody else did or not? A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Don't you know, as a matter of fact, that Mr. Lynch, this gentleman you speak of, is a member of the Morrow Invincibles, and a Republican?

A. No, sir; I do not; and I know him always to be a Democrat.

Q. Do you know what his politics were during the last election? A. He told me he was for the Democratic ticket, except he was for Banks.

Q. Don't you know, as a matter of fact, he belonged to the Morrow Invincibles? A. No, sir.

Q. Don't you know that he was serving as a member of the Board of Election as a Republican? A. He came to me and asked me if I would put him in there as an officer of the Precinct Board of Registration, and I told him no, I couldn't, and he said he would go somewhere where he could get it.

Q. Are you a member of the County Committee? A. Yes, sir, I am.

Q. And you were over there as a member of the Democratic County Committee that day? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And everybody knew, and Lynch knew you were a member of the Democratic County Committee? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you employ men to work for the Democratic ticket on that day? A. I believe I employed two.

Q. Who? A. Mr. Matteson.

Q. Where does he live? A. I don't know.

Q. What is his first name? A. James, I think; I ain't sure whether that is his name.

Q. What is the other man's name? Was it such a common matter for you to employ men to work on election day that you cannot remember their names? A. I can't remember—

Q. [Interrupting.] How many men did you employ on election day? A. I employed two or three, and Mr. Kenney—

Q. [Interrupting.] You had nothing to do but the one precinct? A. No, sir.

Q. Who was Mr. Kenney? A. He was in the precinct along with me.

Q. Who for? A. He was a Democrat.

Q. Was he sent there for the Democratic County Committee? A. No, he was not sent there specially by the Democratic County Committee.

Q. By whose authority did you employ these men? A. I asked him. He had a couple of friends there and asked me if I would put them to work.

Q. Then you did not have enough men to fill the places and Mr. Kenney suggested that? A. I suppose I had enough, but I did it as a favor to him.

Q. How long did those men work? A. From the time the polls opened until they closed, I believe.

Q. Until after the votes were counted? A. Just during the polls being open on election day.

Q. How much did you pay those men? A. I decline to state.

Q. I ask you how much you paid those men for their work? A. I decline to answer unless the Court tells me to do so.

MR. CLUNIE: You decline to answer on the ground that you are divulging the secrets of the Democratic County Committee?

MR. DORN: The witness states he employed men to work at the Sixth Precinct of the Thirty-third Assembly District, on election day, and I ask him how much he paid them?

MR. CLUNIE: And I instruct the witness to decline to answer the question, on the ground that he is divulging the secrets of the Democratic County Committee, which he is not empowered to do.

THE COURT: The witness will answer the question. A. $5.

By MR. DORN: $5 each, or for the whole lot? A. $5 a man.

Q. Who paid that money to them? A. I did.

Q. When did you pay them? A. I paid them the night the polls closed.

Q. You paid each man $5? A. I did not pay them all. I paid my men and Kenney paid his men.

Q. But you gave him the money to pay his men? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Those men were there all the time from the opening to the closing of the polls, you say? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Working for the Democratic County Committee? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you get the money from? A. I decline to answer.

THE COURT: Answer the question. A. I got it from the Democratic County Committee.

By MR. DORN: How much did you get from Mr. Sullivan? A. I never got a dollar from Mr. Sullivan. I am not in the habit of taking money from candidates.

Q. I did not ask you what you were in the habit of doing. I asked you what you did. A. I haven't got a dollar from Mr. Sullivan.

Q. Mr. Sullivan did not give you any money? A. No, sir.

Q. Before or on election day? A. No, sir.

Q. But you got it from the Democratic County Committee? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And with that you hired these four or five or six men to work the Sixth Precinct? A. Yes, sir.

By MR. CLUNIE: You hired them to peddle tickets? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And watch the ticket? A. Yes, sir; and watch the ticket.

Q. And that was the only purpose for which you paid them? A. Yes, sir.

By MR. DORN: Do you know that at the time of election Mr. Banks, the respondent here, was a member of the Republican County Committee? A. No, sir; I do not know if he was a member of the Republican County Committee.

Q. Do you know who the member of the Republican County Committee for that district is? A. No, sir, I do not.

Q. You are not as well posted on the part of the Republican County Committee as you are on the Democratic? A. No, sir, I am not; I paid no attention to it.

Q. You say Mr. Lynch went around the corner with some voters. What corner do you mean? A. The polls were held within forty or fifty feet of a grocery store; right around the corner.

Q. What corner is that? A. That is on the northwest corner.

Q. How far is it from the polls to the corner? A. I guess about forty or fifty feet.

Q. It is within one hundred feet of the corner, is it? A. I guess it is.

Q. If a man wanted to talk to an elector, and didn't want to talk to him within one hundred feet of the polls, he would have to go in the other direction, or around the corner, wouldn't he? A. Well—yes, sir.

Q. If a man wanted to comply with the law, and not talk with a voter, he would have to go in that direction, or around the corner, would he not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Around that corner is an open street, is there not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And open to the public? A. Yes, sir.

Q. It was light on that day of election, wasn't it? A. Yes, sir. Sometimes around the corner, and sometimes they would go in the grocery store.

By MR. CLUNIE: If a man wanted to slip twenty-dollar pieces in a voter's hand, that would be a good place to do it? A. Yes, sir.

STEPHANO DEMARTINI.

A witness on behalf of contestant, was sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: What is your name? Answer—Stephano DeMartini.

Q. What is your business? A. My business is a bootblack.

Q. Where do you live? A. 718 Greenwich Street.

Q. What precinct is that in, do you know? A. The Thirty-fourth, or something; I don't know.

Q. Of what district? A. In the Senatorial District.

Q. Do you know Mr. Banks [indicating respondent]? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You had a little talk with him before you came in the Court-room, didn't you? A. I was talking to him outside.

Q. He asked you what you were doing here? A. He asked me what I was doing here, and I told him they subpoenaed me to come here.

Q. Did he talk to you about your testimony? A. That is all he said to me, what I was doing here; I told him I was subpoenaed to come here.

Q. Is that all he said? Are you sure of that? You are under your oath. A. I say the truth.

Q. Is that all he said? A. He didn't say anything else to me.

Q. He didn't say anything else about what you were going to testify? A. He asked me what I was going to testify, and I said, "I have got to testify to the truth."

Q. He objected to that a little, didn't he? A. I didn't hear.

Q. What else did he say? A. He didn't say anything else that I heard.

Q. Is that all he said? A. Well, I said, "I have got to tell the truth; I don't want to get in any trouble with nobody, only the truth."

Q. Did he tell you about any money or anything of that kind? A. No, sir.

Q. He did not tell you what you were to testify to? A. No, sir.

Q. And he didn't ask you what you were going to testify to? Didn't he ask you what you were going to say on the stand? A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't he tell you that he was a member of the Republican County Committee up there? A. I knew that.

Q. Didn't he tell you that out in the hall? He told you out in the hall that he was a member of the County Committee. Didn't you and Mr. Banks talk out in the hall a few minutes ago, and didn't he tell you that he was a member of the Republican County Committee? A. I knew that.

Q. Didn't he tell you that? A. No, he didn't say to me outside that he was a member of the County Committee.

Q. Did he say anything outside about a little conversation you and he had on election day? A. Outside there he told me—that was what he told me when I came here; he said, "What are you doing here?" I told him I was subpoenaed to come here.

Q. Then what did he say? A. He said, "What for?" I said, "I don't know."

Q. Then what did he say? A. I cannot talk very good English, you know.

Q. You have forgotten what he said to you. Did he tell you to forget what occurred on election day, too? A. What does that mean?

Q. Did Mr. Banks tell you to forget what occurred between you and him on election day? A. I didn't have any.

Q. You had a talk with him on election day, didn't you? A. Yes, I was talking with him on election day.

Q. Didn't he refer to that conversation out in the hall a while ago? A. He didn't say anything to me outside. Only he said to me, what was I doing around here, and I told him, and he said, "When you are on the stand say the truth."

Q. He told you that and went away? A. That is all he told me.

Q. Then he came back the second time? A. We were talking lots of times outside.

Q. You and he had two or three talks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is all that occurred, and he asked you what you were doing here, you told him you were subpoenaed, and he said to say the truth, and that is all that occurred? A. That is all; he told me to say the truth.

Q. You knew Mr. Banks on election day, did you not? A. I knew Mr. Banks before election day.

Q. Where were you election day? A. I was there in the precinct.

Q. In what precinct? A. The Thirty-fourth, I think.

Q. Who were you there for that day? A. I was peddling tickets.

Q. For whom? A. For the Republicans.

Q. Who hired you? A. Mr. Banks hired me.

Q. When? A. He came to me two days before the election.

Q. He came to you a couple of days before the election, did he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did he say to you then? A. He told me if I wanted to peddle the Republican ticket; I told him yes.

Q. What else did he say? A. He said: "I will give you $10 if you will leave your work to peddle the Republican ticket."

Q. He will give you $10 if you will leave your work and peddle the Republican tickets? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He said that to you when? A. Two days before the election. He even told me one evening, and another gentleman by the name of Jackson, that belonged to the Morrow Invincibles.

Q. Give us the rest of it? A. That is all.

Q. He told you he would give you $10 if you would peddle the Republican tickets? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you told him you would do it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have any conversation with him again that day? A. I had lots of conversation.

Q. What did you do? A. He treated me two or three times.

Q. All that occurred between you and Mr. Banks on election day was, he treated you two or three times? A. Yes, sir; he treated me two or three times. I went down to another place, to his brother-in-law's, that I know.

Q. What did you go down there for? A. I went down there to see some Italians—some friends that I know.

Q. What did you go down there for? A. To work the Republican tickets.

Q. Didn't you go down there and ask them to vote for Mr. Banks? A. No, sir.

Q. You went to work the Republican ticket? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And for nobody in particular? A. No, sir.

Q. Are you sure of that? A. Certainly, I am sure.

Q. Banks told you two days before election, if you would go down there election day and peddle Republican tickets, he would give you $10? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he tell you he would give it to you afterwards? A. No, sir; he gave me $10 election day morning.

Q. What was said then? A. He told me to peddle Republican tickets.

Q. You had some talk with some gentlemen up there after that $10 was given to you, didn't you? A. What gentlemen?

Q. With two or three gentlemen that were present in that precinct? A. I had lots of them.

Q. Didn't you talk with them with regard to this transaction that you had with Mr. Banks? Didn't you talk with them about him giving you money? A. Not as I know. I don't know.

Q. Do you know this gentleman here [indicating Mr. Maxwell]? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You saw him on that morning, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Maxwell was there that day, was he not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He saw this man give you the money, didn't he? A. I don't know if he did or not.

Q. Don't you know he was standing right there near and saw it? A. I don't know if he saw him give it to me. I said, myself, he gave me $10.

Q. You told him he gave you $10. Do you remember seeing Mr. Maxwell up in the Fifth Precinct or the Third Precinct of the Thirty-fourth District that day, immediately after Mr. Banks had handed you some money? Didn't you say to Mr. Maxwell that Mr. Banks had given you $10 to work for him? Didn't you say that to him and another person, and in the presence of Mr. Maxwell, and Mr. Capello, and Mr. Dondero, didn't you tell them then that Mr. Banks had given you $10 to work for his interests on election day? Just answer that. A. Yes, I said that he gave me the $10 for me to work for the ticket.

Q. To work for Mr. Banks; didn't you say that? A. That might have slipped out.

Q. You think if you made that statement it might have slipped out: is that it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Don't you know that that is the fact, and that the only reason you have made the statement about peddling tickets is that Mr. Banks told you to do so a few moments ago out in the hall; isn't that the fact? A. No; Mr. Banks came to me two days before to peddle the tickets; that is true.

Q. That is not what I asked you. I asked you if the statement was, when Mr. Banks gave you the $10 he said to work for him for that, and was that a true statement of the business? A. He did not say to work for him. I was working the Republican tickets; and even another man, Buckley, was there.

Q. Buckley was working the Republican ticket, was he not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Mr. Buckley paid you for working the Republican ticket, did he not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You got paid for working the Republican ticket from Buckley, did you not? How much did you get from Buckley? A. From Buckley I think it was $2 50.

Q. What did Mr. Buckley give you that for? A. To stay there with the tickets.

Q. Mr. Buckley was the man that told you about the tickets, was he not? A. Yes, he told me to.

Q. And he agreed to pay you $2 50 a day to stay there? A. He told me he would give me $2 50 to stay there.

Q. Don't you know that that is all they gave you, and that Mr. Banks gave you this $10 to work for him, and didn't you state that to the three parties I just asked you about, and didn't you state it to-day, and didn't you just change your mind when Mr. Banks got you out in the hall there? Isn't that the fact, and don't you know that that is the fact? Didn't Mr. Banks say, "Take that $10 and work for me on election day?" Is that the fact or not? Didn't Mr. Banks say, "Take this $10 and work for me?" Didn't that occur on election day morning in the Third Precinct of the Thirty-fourth District? Answer the question? A. Yes, he gave me $10 to work.

Q. To work for him, didn't he, and didn't you so state to these parties? Did he or did he not? A. What?

Q. Didn't he give you $10 to work for him? Ain't that what he said? A. Yes, he gave me $10.

Q. Didn't he say to work for him? A. He told me to work for the ticket and at the same time, I suppose, to work for him.

Q. Don't you know he said that when he gave you the $10, and isn't that all of it, and isn't it the fact? I want to get a direct answer from you now whether Mr. Banks said that or not? If he said it, say so? A. He told me, "Here is $10; go and work."

Q. "Go and work?" A. "Go and work for the Republican ticket," and I did go.

Q. Didn't he say to work for Banks, too? A. Wasn't he on the ticket?

Q. Just answer this question, yes or no; did Banks state to you when he handed you this $10, that he wanted you to go and work for him; answer that, yes or no? A. Yes, he told me to work for him, and it would be for the Republican ticket.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Did he say to work for him, or did he say to work for the Republican ticket? A. He told me to work for him and to work for the whole Republican ticket.

Q. Do you know whether Mr. Banks, at the time of election, was a County Committee man? A. Yes, sir, I do; he came to me two days—

Q. [Interrupting.] Was he a member of the Republican County Committee? A. Yes, sir.

Q. As a matter of fact, the Republican County Committee and the Democratic County Committee both employed people on the day of election to look out for the tickets and work for the ticket, did they not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In what capacity did Banks employ you to work for the ticket: as a private individual, or as a member of the Republican County Committee? A. He came to me two days before election, like I said all the time; he engaged me two days before to work.

Q. Did he give you this $10 to work for Banks, or did he give you this $10 to work for the whole Republican ticket? A. When he gave me the $40 he said: "You do all you can to try to work for the Republican ticket, and at the same time if you can, get some votes for me too." That is what he said.

Q. Did you ever bribe anybody to vote the Republican ticket? Did you ever bribe any body to vote for one ticket or against another? A. I don't understand.

Q. Did you ever offer anybody money to vote for a ticket? A. No.

Q. Did you ever give anybody any money to vote for a ticket? A. No.

Q. Did you ever give anybody any money to hire them to vote for one ticket or against another? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever hire anybody or give them anything to induce them to vote for Mr. Banks? A. No, sir.

Q. Or against Mr. Sullivan? A. No, sir; I didn't give them any money.

Q. If you worked for the ticket, how did you work for the ticket? Did you hire people—give them money—or did you just talk to them? A. Just talked to them if they wanted to vote the ticket; that is all.

Q. And that is the way you worked the ticket? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in that way you looked out for the Republican ticket—to see if they wanted to vote the Republican ticket—that they had it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You did not bribe anybody or give anybody any money, or drinks, or anything to hire them to vote, did you? A. No, sir.

Q. You did not? A. No, sir.

Q. Was this money given to you to buy your vote? A. No, sir.

Q. Was it given to you to buy anybody's else vote with? A. No, sir: he just gave me that for my work.

Q. He just gave you that for your work and your time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. As a member of the Republican County Committee? A. Yes, sir.

Q. The arrangements were made by Mr. Banks with you to peddle the tickets on election day, two days before election day, were they? A. Two days; yes, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Sullivan ever treat you about election time? A. No, sir.

By Mr. CLUNIE: In consideration of this gift or this $10, you did work for Mr. Banks and for the Republican ticket, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. DORN: You did not work for Mr. Banks specially; you worked for the whole ticket? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you a member of any political club? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What club? A. The Morrow Invincibles.

Q. You are a Republican then, are you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And were a Republican at the time of the last election? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And a member of the Morrow Invincibles? A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Morrow Invincibles is a political organization composed entirely of Republicans, is it not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And at the last election the effort of that club was to elect the Republican ticket, was it not? A. Yes, sir.

CHARLES MURRAY.

A witness in behalf of contestant, was duly sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: What is your full name? Answer—Charles Murray.

Q. Where do you reside? A. 330 Greenwich Street.

Q. What precinct and what district is that? A. In the Second.

Q. Of the Thirty-fourth? A. The Thirty-third.

Q. Where did you live at the time of the election? A. Northwest corner of Filbert and Montgomery.

Q. What district is that in? A. Thirty-third, I think.

By MR. DORN: Do you know? A. I do not know.

By MR. CLUNIE: Where were you about the time of this election? A. I was all over the hill.

Q. At the time of this election you lived in the Twenty-first Senatorial District, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know a gentleman named Leale? A. Yes, sir; I know a gentleman by the name of Leale; that is all the name he gave me.

Q. Did you have any conversation with him before this election? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You had a conversation with him, did you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where was that conversation? A. On the Fisherman's Wharf.

Q. Where is that? A. That is on the sea-wall between Filbert and Union.

Q. That is in this city and county, is it not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You had a conversation with him, you say? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was that? A. The day before election.

Q. That was the fifth of November. A. Yes, sir.

Q. Of last year? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he state to you —

MR. DORN: [Interrupting.] We are certainly entitled, before that question is asked, to know who was present. Was anybody present when you and he had this conversation? A. Yes, sir; there was a little boy standing close by. That is all.

Q. Did Mr. Leale tell you who he was? A. Yes, sir.

MR. DORN: We object to that conversation as hearsay.

MR. CLUNIE: You have the general objection on all grounds, as I understand it.

Q. Did he tell you who he was? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You know W. O. Banks, don't you? A. No, sir, I didn't ever see the man.

Q. Did he state that he bore any relationship to W. O. Banks? A. Yes; brother-in-law.

Q. Did he have any conversation with you in regard to Mr. Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. State that conversation. A. He came down and asked me whether I was Murray's brother. I told him yes, and he asked me could I get a couple of young fellows to work for him on election, and I told him I would do a little myself for him, and he said, "All right; don't you forget my brother-in-law, W. O. Banks," and passed me $5.

Q. You say when he first came he said he wanted some young man to do some work? A. First he asked me if I was Murray's brother, and I told him yes, and he asked me if he could get a couple of young men to work for him to-morrow, election day, and I told him I would do some, and he said, "Don't you forget to do something," and he said, "Don't you forget my brother-in-law, Banks," and he handed me $5. Then he showed me a book with the names of some more different people.

Q. What were the names of those people? A. He asked me where — was and some other Italians, and I told him to go up to Vallejo Street.

Q. And that is all he asked you to do? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you got the $5? A. Yes, sir.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Did he ask you to vote for Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I thought you said he said not to forget him? A. That is what he meant.

Q. You tell me what he said, and don't tell what he meant. What did he say? A. He told me not to forget Banks.

Q. That is all he said? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he gave you $5? A. Yes, sir; he did.

Q. Did he ask you to vote for Banks? A. Well, it was just as much.

Q. Did he ask you to vote for Banks? A. No.

Q. Did you understand and consider that that $5 bought your vote? A. Well, I guess it pretty near bought it.

Q. Did you understand that your vote was bought for that $5? Did you sell your vote for that $5? A. No, not exactly sold the vote for $5.

Q. Did you understand that your vote was being bought with that $5? A. I don't know about that.

Q. Did you understand that you were selling your vote for $5? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you understand you were being bribed to vote for Mr. Banks with that $5? A. I understood this, Captain was looking for me to vote for him, and getting my friends to vote for him.

Q. Did you understand you were being bribed by the $5 piece? You accepted the $5 piece did you? A. Certainly.

Q. Did you understand you were being bribed by that $5 piece? A. No, sir; I didn't have to.

Q. He asked you to work for Banks on election day, did he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And not to forget him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What you understood by the receipt of the $5 was, that in consideration of that $5 you were to work on election day? A. Yes, sir.

Q. For the Republican ticket? A. Certainly.

Q. You did not understand that he was buying your vote, or that you were capable of selling your vote, did you? A. I suppose that was what he was giving me the money for.

Q. The money was to be given to you, to work for the Republican ticket, wasn't it? A. No, I didn't work for the Republican ticket.

Q. What did you do? A. I just voted for him; that is all. He ain't no Republican.

Q. Did you go around with that $5 and buy anybody else to vote for him? A. No, sir.

MR. DORN: Let me see the Code, if your honor please.

MR. CLUNIE: Don't be afraid of Mr. Dorn, Mr. Murray. He won't hurt you, and I will instruct you not to answer any questions that will criminate you.

By MR. DORN: Where do you work? A. No. 330 Green Street.

Q. Where do you work? A. Boatman.

Q. Whereabouts? A. Fisherman's Wharf.

MR. CLUNIE: There were some other reasons, weren't there, that induced you to give your vote to Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have a brother in San Quentin, haven't you? A. I had a brother over there at that time.

Q. Did you receive a letter from him requesting you to vote for Mr. Banks? A. No, sir, I did not; but my brother did; and my name was in it and my cousin's name was in it.

Q. Where does your brother live? A. He lives corner of Montgomery and Filbert.

Q. He lives in the Twenty-first District? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say he received a letter requesting him to vote for Mr. Banks? A. Yes, sir; to him and me and my cousin to vote for Mr. Banks.

Q. Did you get that letter? A. No, sir.

Q. You saw it, did you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. State, as near as you can, what that letter said. A. I couldn't state until I get the letter.

Q. Did he say anything about you in the letter? A. Yes, sir; it said for him to do something for Banks: to get me and my cousin.

Q. Did it ask you all to vote for Banks? A. I couldn't say that it did. I only just looked at the letter once, a week ago.

Q. You have not the letter now? A. No, sir.

Q. That was one of the reasons that induced you to vote for Banks, was it not? A. Yes, sir. I never knew none of them until they sent it over.

Q. This $5 the Captain gave you had no effect on you, had it? A. No, not in one way.

Q. But you intended to vote for Banks anyhow? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You voted for him on account of this letter, as I understand it. A. Yes, sir.

By MR. DORN: You say the $5 had no effect upon you at all? A. No.

Q. You didn't do anything on account of the $5; is that what I understand you to say? A. No, I didn't do anything for the $5.

Q. You say you saw this letter from your brother about a week ago? A. Pretty nearly a week ago. It is inside a week anyhow.

Q. Is that the first time you had seen it? A. I never saw the letter, but my brother just came down.

Q. You stated you have just seen the letter. A. Not when it came over.

Q. When did you see the letter? A. Three or four days ago.

Q. Then how did you know that it was received before election? A. I know it from my brother.

Q. What is his name? A. John Murray.

Q. What did he tell you: that he had received such a letter? A. He come down to me and passed some cards of Banks' to me, and to do all I could for and to vote for Banks.

Q. All you know is that your brother told you he had got a letter? A. No, sir. He has got two letters.

Q. And you only know your brother told you so? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where is your brother now? A. I don't know if he is outside or where he is.

Q. Where is the brother that wrote the letter? A. He is in jail.

Q. Where? A. In the City Hall.

Q. He served the term out in San Quentin, did he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he is now in jail again? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What for? A. I don't know; battery, or something; attempt to rob.

Q. This is the one that wrote you the letter? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say you saw Maxwell on election day, this gentleman right here next to Mr. Clunie [indicating]? A. I don't know; I don't remember whether I saw him or not; I didn't say I saw him.

Q. Do you know a gentleman by the name of George Maxwell? A. Yes, sir, I know him.

Q. Did you see him on election day? No, sir.

Q. You did not? A. No, sir.

Q. Where were you on election day? A. That is hard to tell; I was all over; I was up on the hill, on the wharf, and all over.

Q. What were you doing? A. I was riding around in a wagon.

Q. Who was driving the wagon? A. I decline to answer all that.

THE COURT: Answer the question. A. There was a fellow named Dick Den driving the wagon.

Q. What were you driving around in the wagon for? A. Just for fun; to have a ride.

Q. How many precincts did you vote in on election day? A. Just in one.

MR. CLUNIE: You need not state that. You need not state how you voted.

MR. DORN: I don't ask him how he voted.

Q. How many precincts did you vote in on election day? A. Only one; that is all.

Q. Who is this Den that was driving the wagon that you were riding around in for fun all day? A. He is a saloon keeper or bartender.

Q. What are his politics? A. That is more than I know.

Q. Don't you know that his saloon is Sullivan's headquarters? A. No, I can't say that, for I have not been in his saloon five times.

Q. Don't you know that on the day of election and up until the day after election, Mr. Sullivan's name was across the window? A. No, sir, I cannot swear that.

Q. Have you ever been in that saloon before election? A. I might have once or twice, but not any more.

Q. Who were you with when you were in there? A. I can't say; I can't remember.

Q. Do you know Mr. Sullivan here [indicating contestant]? A. No, sir, I never knew or saw the man before. The day of election I saw him in a buggy and he was pointed out to me.

Q. And you never saw him before? A. No, sir.

Q. Where was he on the day of election when you saw him? A. Corner of Dupont and Union, I believe.

Q. What was he doing? A. Talking to some gentlemen there.

Q. He was in the buggy? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he get out of the buggy? A. I didn't stop to watch.

Q. You and Den went on somewhere else, did you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you don't know that Den's saloon was Sullivan's headquarters during this last campaign? A. No, sir.

Q. You don't know anything about it? A. No, sir.

Q. What did you do all day, riding around for fun up and down Telegraph Hill? Wasn't that rather a curious place to take a buggy ride? A. We were in a two-horse wagon.

Q. Just riding up and down hill all day for fun? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You took the team out at noon and gave them a rest for awhile, didn't you? Did you stop at noon? A. I don't know whether we did or not.

Q. What did you do? Did you just ride up and down that hill all day?

A. Not all day. I was in the wagon from about 10 o'clock until about 4.

Q. What were you doing? Did you sit in the wagon all that time? A. Yes; sit in and get out.

Q. Then there was some of the time you did not sit in the wagon? What did you do when you got out of the wagon? A. I was drinking beer.

Q. That is the way you amused yourself on election day? A. Yes, sir.

By MR. CLUNIE: You say you had a conversation with your brother who got this letter from San Quentin, in which he asked you to vote for Mr. Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did your brother tell you that it would be to the interest of your brother in San Quentin to vote for Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He told you he had been so informed by the officers in San Quentin? A. Yes, sir.

By MR. DORN: How long after election day did your brother's term expire in San Quentin? A. I couldn't say that, sir.

Q. As a matter of fact, wasn't it just two days after election that your brother's term expired in San Quentin? A. I don't know if it was two, or four, or six.

Q. Wasn't it just two? A. I don't know.

Q. Will you swear it was not two? A. No; I wouldn't swear to any.

Q. If his term was to expire in two days more, can you tell me how the officers in San Quentin would help him to get out?

MR. CLUNIE: He did not say that.

Q. You did not say that he would help him to get out, did you? A. No, sir.

Q. You said your brother said it would be to his interest? A. Yes, sir.

Q. They could very easily beat a man to death over there in a couple of days, couldn't they? A. Yes, sir.

E. E. SCHMITZ.

A witness on behalf of the contestant, was duly sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: Mr. Schmitz, where do you reside? Answer—No 1413 Pacific Street.

Q. What is your full name? A. Eugene E. Schmitz.

Q. How long have you lived there? A. About eight years.

Q. That is in what precinct of what district? Do you know the Assembly District that that is in? A. No, I do not.

Q. Is it in the Thirty-fourth? A. Forty-first Senatorial District.

Q. The Forty-first? A. The Forty-first.

Q. Senatorial District? A. Senatorial.

Q. Where did you say it was? A. Pacific Street.

Q. Pacific and what? A. A little below Hyde.

Q. It is the Forty-first Assembly District, isn't it? A. Forty-first Assembly.

Q. Where were you on election day? A. On election day I was in the Seventh Precinct of the Thirty-third District.

Q. What were you doing there? A. I was there in the interest of the Democratic party, appointed by the County Committee.

Q. Who were the Board of Election in that precinct, do you remember? A. I do not.

Q. That was the precinct where Jones was, was it not? A. The same precinct.

Q. He was a Republican Inspector that day? A. I believe so.

Q. They had Clerks in addition to that, didn't they? A. I believe so.

Q. Do you know who the candidates were for Senator that day? A. Yes, sir; I do.

Q. Who were they? A. Banks and Sullivan.

Q. W. O. Banks and J. J. Sullivan? A. W. O. Banks and J. J. Sullivan.

Q. How long were you there? A. I was there from a quarter past six in the morning until half-past three the next morning.

Q. Were you there during the time the votes were being counted? A. I was there during that time.

Q. That was the first night? A. That was the first night.

Q. Did you see anything peculiar going on in that precinct with regard to Sullivan and Banks, or with regard to the votes, or any error? A. The peculiarity I saw there was the error altogether in Sullivan's name being called and the Clerk putting it down to Banks, and calling his attention to it, and it was rectified afterwards.

Q. How often did that occur? A. I believe three or four times.

Q. While you were there? A. While I was there.

Q. The Republican Clerk did it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You saw him tally the vote for Banks? A. It happened three or four times.

Q. While you were there? A. While I was there.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: How did you happen to be there on that day? A. I came there by appointment.

Q. Who appointed you? A. The Democratic County Committee, through Mr. Dykeman.

Q. The whole Democratic County Committee did not appoint you? A. I said through Mr. Dykeman.

Q. Mr. Dykeman testified here on the stand this morning, didn't he? A. I believe so.

Q. Isn't Dykeman a member of the County Committee? A. That I don't know.

Q. He hired you on that day, did he? A. He hired me on that day.

Q. What did he tell you he wanted you to do? A. To look out for the interests of the Democratic party.

Q. Is that the precinct where Mr. Dykeman was active? A. I believe so; yes, sir.

Q. This Mr. Dykeman who is engineer down in the Appraiser's building? A. The same man.

Q. What were you paid for your services? A. I decline to answer; I think that is a private matter.

THE COURT: Answer the question. A. I was paid $10.

By MR. DORN: The price was raising then in that precinct? A. I don't know anything about that.

Q. You were paid $10 for your services? A. I was paid $10 for my services.

Q. What were you there for? A. As I said before, to look out for the interests of the Democratic party.

Q. And whatever was necessary to look out for the interests of the Democratic party you were expected to do to the best of your ability? A. Yes, sir; exactly.

Q. You were there during election day? A. I was there during election day.

Q. What did you do during election day? A. During election day I took care of tickets and of our interests.

Q. Did you talk with any voters and try to persuade them to vote the Democratic ticket? A. I decline to answer that.

Q. I would like to have that answered.

THE COURT: Answer it. A. I did.

By MR. DORN: About how many? A. I can't recollect how many.

Q. A good many? A. Well, a few.

Q. You tried to get everybody you could to vote the Democratic ticket? A. Exactly.

Q. How long have you known Mr. Sullivan? A. I don't know the gentleman at all.

Q. Are you a member of the Confidence Club? A. I am not; nor any other Democratic or political club.

Q. You simply went there because you were to get $10 to work for the Democratic party? A. Exactly.

Q. And during the day you button-holed everybody you thought you could have any influence with, to come there to vote the Democratic ticket? A. I did.

Q. Where did you take them, right around the corner? A. No.

Q. Within one hundred feet of the polls? A. I don't think it was.

Q. There was a place marked there every one hundred feet, wasn't there? A. I think so.

Q. Don't you know so? A. I know so; yes, sir.

Q. You restrained your conversation inside the one hundred foot limit, and did not talk with them until they got outside the one hundred foot limit, did you? A. When I was talking to gentlemen, or electioneering, I was outside of the limits.

Q. You know, as a matter of fact, that one Clerk was a Republican and one was a Democrat, don't you? A. Exactly.

Q. When these mistakes occurred, did the Republican and the Democratic Clerks agree in their tally? A. At this time they were not calling off; that is, one Clerk was not calling off what the other had.

Q. But he was calling off what he had himself, was he not? A. No; he was not at that time.

Q. They were not calling back to each other? A. The Republican clerk was calling.

Q. And the Democratic Clerk was not? A. And the Democratic Clerk was not.

Q. When the Republican Clerk called back his tally did it agree with the Democratic tally? A. That I don't know. I know it didn't agree with what I saw.

Q. But did it tally with the Democratic Clerk's? A. That I don't know.

Q. You discovered a mistake, you say? A. I discovered a mistake of two or three.

Q. How many were there? A. I will swear that there were at least three.
 Q. Will you swear that there were four? A. I will not swear that there were four.

Q. Whenever a mistake was discovered it was rectified, was it not?
 A. Yes, sir; that is, while I was there.

Q. Were those the only mistakes that were made while you were there?
 A few votes on Banks? Weren't a number of other mistakes made in regard to other votes? A. Certainly.

Q. For other officers? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Weren't there as many as three for other offices, during the time you were there, mistakes made calling back and forth, and one would say, "That is wrong" or "This is the way," and the mistake would be rectified? A. For any single office, no.

Q. About how many were there for any single office? A. I don't know.

Q. There were a good many, weren't there? A. There might have been a few.

Q. And if any mistake was discovered it was rectified? A. Exactly.

Q. Was Mr. Dykeman there? A. He was there part of the time I was there.

Q. Were you present when the mistake occurred that he testified about when there was one vote called wrong for Banks when it should have been Sullivan, and that he called his attention to it? He testified that a mistake was made in the tally and one vote for Sullivan was wrongly given to Banks, and that he called attention to it and it was rectified. Were you present at that time? A. I don't remember. I may have been. I don't remember the occurrence.

Q. You were present during the time he was there, were you? A. I was present, as I say, on that day. I don't know what time he was there. He was there off and on, and not all along.

Q. What was Mr. Dykeman's condition as to sobriety on the night of election? He was pretty drunk, wasn't he? A. He was not; no.

Q. Wasn't he under the influence of liquor? A. I was not looking who was under the influence of liquor.

Q. You were not any too sober yourself, were you? A. I was sober myself; yes, sir.

Q. Hadn't you any drink that day? A. I had taken a drink, certainly. I don't abstain from liquor.

Q. Weren't you feeling pretty good yourself? A. I always feel good.

Q. On this occasion it was superinduced by a good many drinks, wasn't it? A. It was not.

Q. What was Mr. Dykeman's condition as to sobriety, I asked you? A. To the best of my knowledge, he was sober.

Q. He might have had on what we call a still drunk? A. I don't know what you call a still drunk. I have never been on a still drunk, so I don't know.

Q. Did you see, during the time you were there, anybody handle the ballots except the election officers? A. I am not sure who were the election officers.

Q. Did you handle the ballots at all? A. I did not.

Q. After they were on the string did you see Mr. Dykeman handle them? A. I did not.

Q. If he testified that during the time you were there he handled and counted some over, he testified falsely, did he? A. No, sir.

Q. Then he testified truthfully, did he? A. He may have handled some of the ballots and I not see him. I say I did not see him handle the ballots.

Q. He was right there in your presence, wasn't he? A. I was not watching him; I was not watching Democratic officers.

Q. Any work they did you thought it would be all right? A. I suppose so.

Q. As a matter of fact, were you not told to not watch him while he handled the ballots? A. I was not.

Q. Were you not told to take particular pains not to see what he did? A. I was not.

Q. When did you get this $10? A. I got part of it right after, just before the count commenced, and about a little while after.

Q. Who gave it to you? A. Mr. Dykeman.

Q. By MR. CLUNIE: The reason you did not watch Dykeman or anybody else, was that this Republican Tally Clerk kept you pretty busy, didn't he? A. That was the only one I was instructed to watch, and that was the only one I did watch.

By MR. DORN: During the whole count, either from the time all the polls closed until the vote was all counted, either yourself or somebody alternating with you, watched all the time, didn't they? A. I can't say who stayed watch. I watched there.

Q. Did you ever go away without leaving some other Democrat who was watching the tally, or leaving some other Democrat who would watch the count when you went away? A. I did.

Q. When? A. It was during the afternoon of the second day.

Q. How long were you gone? A. Three hours.

Q. Was there anybody else there in your place while you were gone? A. I did not leave any relief.

Q. When you came back, didn't you find anybody watching? A. Yes, when I came back I found somebody there.

Q. And that is the only time you know of there being any gap between watchers? A. That was all I knew.

Q. Do you know the gentleman who took your place? A. No, sir.

Q. Who was it you found when you got back there? A. It was Mr. Dykeman.

Q. Mr. Dykeman was in charge of that precinct, was he not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. For the Democratic party? A. He was; I believe so.

Q. Wasn't he what you folks call an extra County Committeeman for election? A. I don't know.

Q. You don't know? A. No, sir.

Q. And he had charge of that precinct? A. I believe he had charge of the precinct.

Q. Did anybody else have charge of watching that tally except Dykeman and yourself? A. I don't know, I am sure.

Q. You know who you relieved, and who relieved you? A. Dykeman relieved me.

Q. Each time? A. When I went away the second time I went away without being relieved.

Q. How did you happen to leave without being relieved? A. I wanted sleep.

Q. Because you thought sleep was more important than any mistakes that might occur? A. Exactly, for the moment.

Q. Then you did not think any mistakes were being made there to make it necessary for you to stay there? A. It didn't matter what—I may not have been conscientious in my duty, and perhaps I should have stayed there.

Q. You did not think the mistakes were very serious that were happening, if you would walk away and leave it, did you? A. I did not know what they were.

Q. And you thought you would walk away? A. Exactly.

Q. Then you thought they were not sufficiently serious in character but what you could sleep? A. I thought there were Democratic Inspectors there and it would be all right.

JOHN MURRAY.

A witness on behalf of contestant, was sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: Mr. Murray, where do you reside? Answer—No. 306 Filbert.

Q. What is your full name? A. John Francis Murray.

Q. Are you a brother of the gentleman that was on the stand before — Murray? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you live there at the time of the election? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You had another brother, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He was in San Quentin? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you, before the election held on the sixth day of November, receive any letter from your brother in relation to voting for any particular person for Senator from the Twenty-first Senatorial District? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where is that letter? Have you it with you? A. No, sir.

Q. State now what the letter said.

MR. DORN: [Interrupting.] Where is the letter? A. I ain't got it here.

Q. What did you do with it? A. I have got it at home.

MR. DORN: Then we interpose a certain objection to this testimony, on the ground that it is apparent that there is better evidence at hand.

By MR. CLUNIE: Did you receive this letter, and what did the letter contain? A. What was in the letter was for me and my brother and my cousin to vote for this Mr. Banks for Senator.

Q. The Republican candidate? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you say that your brother asked you in the letter to vote for him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he say why he asked you to vote for him? A. It was for my brother's interest.

Q. Did you communicate that information to your brother? A. No, sir.

Q. The brother that is here, I mean; not to your brother in San Quentin; but did you ask your brother here to vote for Banks in pursuance of that information? A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. Did you ask your cousin? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You informed them of the contents of that letter? A. Yes, sir.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Your brother who was in San Quentin at the time is a Republican, is he not? Answer—I don't know.

Q. Don't you know, as a matter of fact, that he is a Republican? A. He might have been at that time, over there.

Q. Just answer my question: Don't you know that he was a Republican?
A. I don't know whether he was or not.

Q. Do you say you received a letter from him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that letter asked you to vote for Mr. Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And said it would be for his interests? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he give you any reasons except that why it would be for his interest? A. No, sir.

Q. He just simply said it would be for his interest, and asked you to vote for Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you say you told your brother, who testified on the stand, of the contents of the letter? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you tell him? A. I told him a day or two before election.

By MR. CLUNIE: In regard to this brother in San Quentin, don't you know, as a matter of fact, that before he went to San Quentin he had been a Democrat? A. Before he was over there, yes, sir.

Q. And you don't know what the change was over there that induced him to write this letter? A. No, sir.

JOHN CAREY.

A witness on behalf of contestant, was sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: What is your full name? Answer—John Carey.

Q. Where do you reside? A. No. 306 Filbert Street.

Q. Where did you reside at the time of the election? A. No. 306 Filbert Street.

Q. You have been residing there some time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know a gentleman by the name of Leale? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He is a captain of a steamer? A. Yes, sir; Captain of the steamer Elite.

Q. He ran over to San Quentin? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whether he is a relative of Mr. Banks? A. Yes; he is his brother-in-law.

Q. He so informed you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have a conversation with him regarding Mr. Banks before election? A. Yes, sir.

Q. State it. A. He visited the house on five or six different occasions, and he said his brother-in-law, Mr. Banks, was going to run for Senator in this election, and he would like us boys to get in and do some work for him and he would not forget it.

Q. How did he come to you, did he say? A. My cousin Murray was over in San Quentin at the time, and he used to go over occasionally and speak to James, and he came up to the house and he said James Murray sent him up there; the last time he came up he said that there was a paper given to him, or he wrote it out himself I presume on the paper, from my cousin, the names of boys up on the hill, and for him to go and see these boys and see what they would do regarding voting for this Banks. So I went with him on this occasion, and I told him a couple of residences where these boys lived, and then he promised that he would if his brother-in-law should get State Senator, that whatever lay in his power he would do.

Q. When he first came there, or any time during the time that he was there, did he state to you anything in relation to its being Murray's interest that was in San Quentin to do this? A. Yes, sir; he said Murray sent him there.

Q. Did he say it would be to his interest for you people to work for him? A. Yes, sir; he said it would be to his interest.

Q. To work for Banks? A. To work for Banks.

Q. And was it with that understanding that you did work for Banks that you went around to these different people? Was it your understanding that it would benefit Murray that you went around to these different people? A. Yes, sir.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: How did you think it was going to benefit Murray if his term was going to expire within two days after election? Just tell me that, will you? A. Well, I understood from Mr. Murray——

Q. [Interrupting.] Which Murray? A. James Murray.

Q. You understood from the conversation with him? A. No, sir.

Q. Then, how did you understand from him? A. From the letter that was sent; that Mr. ——

Q. [Interrupting.] That is not the question. How did you expect that one working for or against Mr. Banks would help a man whose term expired within two days after election?

MR. CLUNIE: [Interrupting.] You have the right, Mr. Witness, to fully answer the question, as fully as you want to.

By MR. DORN: How did you expect this to benefit a man whose term was to expire within two days after election? A. The term was not expired within two days after election.

Q. How long after did it expire? A. I think within a week or a couple of weeks.

Q. Are you positive of that? A. I think so, yes.

Q. How long after election was it that his term would expire? A. Giving a close calculation of it, I think it was getting towards the close of November.

Q. And you are as positive of that as you are of anything else you have testified to? A. That is my opinion.

Q. And you are as positive it would not expire until the end of November as you are that you went and saw Mr. Leale? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are liable to be mistaken in one as you are in the other? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You know Mr. Leale pretty well, don't you—the Captain of that boat? A. Yes, during his coming to the house. I did not know him before.

Q. He was not an officer of the State Prison in any way, is he? A. I don't know, sir.

Q. Don't you know, as a matter of fact, that he is simply the Captain of the boat? A. He is the Captain of that boat, yes, sir.

Q. You have seen James Murray before he came from San Quentin and since, haven't you? A. Before he came from there?

Q. Yes, sir. A. Yes, sir: I was over on a visit.

Q. As a matter of fact, didn't he tell you that Captain Leale, the Captain of the boat, had done favors for him and was very kind to him? A. No, sir.

Q. He did not tell you Captain Leale was very kind to him, in the way of carrying messages, and he felt under obligations to him? A. No, sir.

Q. He never told you anything about it? A. No, sir.

Q. Don't you know that that is the truth, and don't you know that it was out of a sense of gratitude to the Captain that James Murray asked you to vote for the Captain's brother-in-law? A. That was what came in the letter, sir; the Captain had done a great many favors for him, and it would be to his interest.

Q. That was what came in the letter, was it; that the Captain had done a great many favors for him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that he wanted to return the favor in some way, if possible. A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is the reason why he asked you to vote for Mr. Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is the only reason? A. I believe so, sir.

Q. That is the only reason he gave in the letter? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are positive of that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That the Captain had been kind to him, and had done a great many favors for him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And for that reason he wanted you to vote for the Captain's brother-in-law, Mr. Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was the only reason? A. Yes, sir.

By MR. CLUNIE: You say you are just as liable to be mistaken about the day Murray's term expires as anything else. There is some doubt in your mind about the date of his term expiring, isn't there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. But you are not mistaken about Captain Leale coming to the house and having these conversations with you? A. No, sir.

Q. He said it would be to Murray's interest for your people to work for him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That statement was in the letter? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the statement about Captain Leale was also in his letter? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the statement was in the letter that it would be to his interest? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have any conversation with a gentleman named Mike Smith? A. Captain Smith?

By MR. DORN: You say that in that letter which was received from James Murray there was a statement that it would be for his interest if you voted or worked for Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then, awhile ago, when you told me that there was nothing more in the letter, you stated a falsehood, did you? A. What?

Q. You told me awhile ago that the only reason was that the Captain had been kind to him, and therefore he wanted to return it to him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that statement was in the letter? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was the only reason? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then you stated to Mr. Clunie, later, that there was another reason. Which one of your statements was a falsehood? A. Which one did you ask me?

Q. I have asked you both, and you swear either way, according to the time. You stated awhile ago that the only reason given in the letter was that the Captain had been kind to James Murray? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that the truth? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You told the truth that time, did you? A. Yes, sir; in regard to what came in the letter.

Q. And that is what came in the letter? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is the truth, is it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. No question about it? A. No, sir.

Q. Then the other which was in contradiction of it was a falsehood, was it? A. Yes, sir.

By MR. CLUNIE: You don't understand the question. He is trying to make out that you have sworn on the stand to something that is not true.

A. I know what I am speaking is true.

Q. As I understand it, there was a statement in the letter that Captain Leale had befriended Murray? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And there was also a statement that to work for Banks' election would be for Murray's interest? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then Captain Leale also made the statement to you that it would be to Murray's interest; did he so state to you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Both statements were in there, that Captain Leale had befriended Murray, also, that it would be for Murray's interest to vote for Banks; were both of those statements in the letter? A. No, sir; that was what Captain Leale said, that it would be to Murray's interest if his brother-in-law got Senator.

Q. You don't intend to misstate anything in your testimony here? A. No, sir.

Q. And if you have made any such statements as Mr. Dorn said, it has simply been a mistake? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you desire to rectify it now? A. Yes, sir.

By MR. DORN: Was there a statement in the letter that because of the kindness to James Murray that you were asked to vote for Mr. Banks or work for him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. If anybody made the statement that there was anything else in the letter they stated a falsehood, did they? If anybody testified here to-day that there was some other reason given in the letter, and that this reason you now state was not in the letter, their testimony is false and yours is true? A. Mine is true; yes.

Q. And theirs would be false, wouldn't it? A. I can't say exactly that, because I can't recollect all that was in the letter.

Q. If you state one thing and the other witness states the opposite, and yours true, theirs would be false, wouldn't it? A. I don't know, sir. They might have another part that I don't recollect.

Q. As a matter of fact, do you recollect anything about that letter? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What do you recollect? A. I saw the letter, and I read it.

Q. And that was the statement which it contained? A. Yes, sir.

Q. It was not because of any future favors, but it was because of favors in the past? A. Yes, sir.

Q. To James Murray? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That he asked you as his relative and a friend to vote for the brother-in-law of the man who had been kind to him while he was in jail? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was the only reason he gave? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now you are positive of that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Any other statement of the contents of that letter which would be made by any other witness would be false, would it not? A. I believe so.

Q. The only talk about its being to the interest of James Murray was what Captain Leale said to you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then awhile ago when you said that was in the letter you told what was false, did you?

MR. CLUNIE: He told you three or four times what was in the letter. He said he only read the letter once, and he was not positive what was in the letter, but that to the best of his recollection what he has stated was in the letter is true. He says there may have been something else in the letter and he not know it.

By MR. DORN: You state now that the only reason assigned was because of past favors? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You stated awhile ago that there was some other reason, and then when there was some other reason given and this reason was not given you then stated falsely, and you state correctly now? A. I state correctly now.

Q. Any other statement would be false, would it? A. I don't know.

Q. If this statement is correct any other statement would be false, wouldn't it? A. Any different one than the one I give; yes, sir.

By MR. CLUNIE: You simply state that to the best of your recollection that was all that was in the letter? A. Yes, sir; what I said about Captain Leale, what he would do afterward.

Q. But you did not willingly misstate anything? A. No, sir.

Q. But you state now that you are not exactly familiar with the contents of the letter? A. No, sir.

Q. And the other party who testified knew it more than you did? A. Yes, sir.

By MR. DORN: What do you know about what somebody else knows? You said that Mr. Murray knew the contents of the letter better than you. How do you know he knew it at all? Can Murray read? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How do you know it? A. I am living in the same house.

Q. Does that give you the information that he can read? A. Yes, sir; I see him read the papers and write.

Q. How do you know he knew the contents of that letter better than you do? As a matter of fact aren't you talking about something you don't know anything about? A. No, sir; I am not.

PHILIP A. RILEY.

A witness on behalf of contestant, was sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: What is your full name? Answer—Philip A. Riley.

Q. Where do you reside? A. No. 127 Francisco Street, sir.

Q. How long have you resided there? A. About a year.

Q. That is in the Twenty-fourth Senatorial District, isn't it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In what precinct? A. That is the First Precinct.

Q. Do you know W. O. Banks, this gentleman, here [indicating respondent]. A. Yes sir; I met him a couple of times.

Q. You know he was a candidate for Senator from that district, do you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see him any time before election? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have a conversation with him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was present at that conversation? A. Mr. Fay.

Q. And yourself? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Just state the conversation between yourself and Mr. Fay and Mr. Banks. A. Mr. Banks asked the boys to come over in the saloon and drink.

Q. Ask how many? A. A whole crowd of boys at the North End Social Club.

Q. Do you belong to that club? A. Yes, sir; I was President at the time.

Q. Go on. A. We went over there and began to talk and Mr. Morrow had sent down a big picture frame to the boys, and we asked Mr. Banks to give us money to have our pictures taken, and we began talking and he said he didn't want to put out money for anything, and he said he would put $20 over the bar—he would give us $40 if we carried the precinct for him—he would put $20 over the bar there, and he would give us $20 more if the precinct was carried for him.

Q. When was that? A. The second day before election.

Q. That occurred between you and this gentleman and Mr. Banks. He didn't say this out before the whole crowd? A. No, sir.

Q. You and Mr. Banks and he went away and talked one side, did you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he said if you carried that precinct for him for Senator he would put $20 over the bar now? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he would give you the other $20 when you carried it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That occurred in this city and county? A. Yes, sir.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Who was present when that conversation occurred? A. Me and Mr. Fay. There was some of his friends present, but they did not hear us.

Q. How do you know they did not? A. Because we were talking quietly.

Q. How far away were you from them? A. About from here to you [indicating].

Q. This was when? A. This was on Sunday night.

Q. Of what week? A. The Sunday before election.

Q. Where was that? A. That was in William Lilkendey's saloon.

Q. You are positive it was in Lilkendey's saloon? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are positive it was the Sunday night before election? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What time in the evening? A. It was early; I believe it was between five and eight.

Q. It was between five and eight? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And this proposition was made to you by Mr. Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And there was nobody else present? A. Yes, sir; Mr. Fay was present.

Q. I mean except Mr. Fay? A. No, sir. They were people present there, but I don't think they heard it.

Q. What did you say? A. I said no, we couldn't do it; that I didn't live in the precinct.

Q. That was the only reason you gave for not doing it—that you did not live in the precinct? A. No, sir.

Q. You thought if you lived there you could do it? A. No, sir. I wouldn't try to force nobody to do it.

Q. You told him that you would not do it? A. I told him I could not do it.

Q. He told you he would put up $40 to have those pictures taken if he carried that precinct? A. No, sir.

Q. And he told you he would put $40 up? A. No, sir. He said he would put $20 up first, and $20 more after we carried the precinct.

Q. And you told him you couldn't do it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the name of that club? A. The North End Social Club.

Q. Do you know Mr. Sullivan [indicating contestant]? A. Only by sight. I never spoke to him.

Q. That same night that you met Mr. Banks was the night Mr. Morrow had a meeting over that way, was it not? A. I couldn't say.

Q. Isn't it true? A. That Mr. Morrow had a meeting there that night?

Q. Yes. A. I couldn't say so. No, I don't think it was.

Q. Was it on a regular meeting night of your club that this took place? A. No, I don't think it was.

Q. You think it was not on a regular meeting night? A. No, sir.

Q. Was it on the occasion of any special meeting? A. No, sir.

Q. How did it happen you were there? A. We are always there in the club in the night time.

Q. You were always there? A. Yes, sir, the boys were there dancing.

Q. Did you have a ball that night? A. No, sir.

Q. How do you know it was Sunday night? A. I am most positive it was Sunday night.

Q. Are you able to swear it was Sunday night? A. No, I won't swear.

Q. You stated awhile ago it was Sunday night. A. I believe that it was Sunday night.

Q. You cannot state the day of the week? A. Yes; it was Sunday night before election.

Q. You know that was not the night Mr. Morrow had a meeting there? A. No, sir, I don't think it was.

Q. Are you positive about that? A. That is positive.

Q. How did you happen to meet Mr. Banks that night? A. He came past the club and stepped in.

Q. Didn't you ask him to come in? A. No, sir, I did not ask him to come in.

Q. Didn't you ask him to come in and see that picture frame that Mr. Morrow had given the club? A. No, sir. Some of the other parties might have asked him, but I never asked him.

Q. You asked him to have the picture of that club taken, did you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why did you ask Mr. Banks to get the pictures taken of that club? A. Because we were told to ask him for the boys.

Q. What boys? A. The boys that belonged to the club.

Q. The boys that belonged to the club told you to ask Mr. Banks to get the pictures taken? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why did you ask Mr. Banks to have the pictures taken of the club? A. Because he was a candidate.

Q. Because he was a candidate you asked him to get the pictures taken? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you acquainted with him before that? A. I had met him before.

Q. And because he was a candidate for office you asked him to have the pictures of that club taken, and he refused? A. No, he did not refuse to have them taken; he gave us $10.

Q. You said awhile ago he refused to have them taken, and made a different proposition. You said he refused to have the pictures taken, and made a different proposition. A. I don't say he refused to have the pictures taken.

Q. Your first testimony was that he refused to have the pictures taken. Do you say he did not refuse to have the pictures taken? A. No, sir; he gave us $10 that night.

Q. He gave you $10 right then? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did he give you $10 for? A. To have the pictures taken, I suppose.

Q. Who did he give it to? A. He gave it to me, when me and Mr. Fay were standing talking to him.

Q. He gave it to you personally? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where? A. In Lilkendey's saloon.

Q. Toward having the pictures taken? A. Yes, sir.

Q. As a matter of fact, didn't this conversation take place on the night of Mr. Morrow's meeting, and didn't you personally ask Mr. Banks, as a candidate for office, to treat the boys? A. Didn't I ask him?

Q. Yes, you individually? A. No, I did not.

Q. You did not ask him to treat the boys? A. No, sir.

Q. You asked him to have the pictures of the club taken? A. Yes, sir.

Q. But not to treat the boys? A. No, sir.

Q. What were you to do with this club? A. To have the pictures taken, I suppose.

Q. You did not turn it over to the club? A. Yes, sir. I thought you meant did we turn it back to Banks?

Q. Did you keep any account of that? A. No, sir; not anything like that.

Q. Have you got any books for the club? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you put down anything like that? A. No, sir.

Q. What became of the $10? A. We got the pictures with it.

Q. Did you get enough money by the different contributions to get a picture? A. No, sir; we got $10 and got the picture taken ourselves.

Q. That is the only money you got? A. No, sir. He gave us $5 another time to get a barrel of beer.

Q. What did you get from Mr. Sullivan? A. We didn't get a cent.

Q. You did not call him in there and ask him for money? A. No, sir. We never struck another one for money only Mr. Banks.

Q. As a matter of fact, didn't this conversation take place on the night of Mr. Morrow's meeting? A. No, sir.

Q. You are positive it was on the Sunday previous to the election? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it was between six and eight o'clock in the evening? A. Between five and eight.

Q. What is your full name? A. Philip A. Riley.

Q. Where do you live? A. No. 127 Francisco Street.

Q. Where do you work? A. I worked in the woolen mills lately. I worked in the wireworks the last two months.

Q. Where do you work now? A. I work in the wireworks.

Q. Where is that? A. Bay and Mason.

Q. How many members were there in that club of yours? A. It is limited to thirty-five. About thirty members.

Q. There are thirty members now? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have a picture of all of them taken? A. No, sir; we ain't got them all yet.

Q. How many did you get taken? A. We have got seventeen or eighteen.

Q. That is all? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you got those seventeen or eighteen with that $10? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are as positive that this did not occur on the occasion of the Morrow meeting over there as you are of anything else you have testified to, are you? A. Yes, sir.

MR. CLUNIE: He has testified that he did not know.

By MR. DORN: You testified that it was on Sunday night, did you not? A. I testified that I thought it was on Sunday night, but I would not swear.

Q. Can you tell me what night it was? A. I say I think it was Sunday, but I won't swear to it.

Q. It was not a regular meeting night of your club? A. No, sir; it was not.

Q. What night does your club meet? A. It meets Thursday night.

Q. How long before election day was it? A. It was inside of a week.

Q. Did you have another meeting of your club between that time and the election? A. No, sir.

Q. Then it must have been after Thursday before election. A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it on Friday or Saturday night? A. I told you I would not swear to it.

Q. Answer me, yes or no. A. I would not swear to it.

Q. Was it on Monday night before election? A. No, sir. It was before election, but I wouldn't swear what night it was.

Q. You don't know whether it was Monday night or not? A. No, sir.

Q. You don't know whether it was Tuesday night or not? A. No, sir, it was not Tuesday.

Q. You don't know whether it was Saturday night or not? A. I say I am pretty sure it was Sunday night.

Q. Didn't you ask him on this occasion to buy a keg of beer for the club, or to treat them, or didn't he say "No, but I will buy you boys a keg of beer?" A. No, sir.

Q. Isn't that the night the conversation took place? A. No. That is the night Mr. Morrow was down there.

Q. Didn't you go on that same night with Banks over to the brewery to get a keg of beer and the place was closed and you could not get it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then you went to Lynch's and got it? A. Yes—no, sir, we did not. He gave us $5 and we went and got it.

Q. Where did you get it? A. We bought it of Pete McGowan.

By MR. CLUNIE: I understand you to testify to the best of your belief it was the Sunday night before election, but you are not positive what night it was? It was some night before election that this occurred? A. Yes, sir.

Q. But you won't swear what night it was? A. No, sir.

JAMES A. FAY.

A witness on behalf of contestant, was sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: Where do you reside? Answer—No. 212 Francisco Street.

Q. How long have you lived there? A. I have lived three years in that house, and in the next door for five.

Q. Where is that? A. The Second Precinct of the Thirty-fourth.

Q. You lived there just before election? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know Mr. Banks? A. I have seen him.

Q. Did you know he was a candidate at the recent election? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was you present at the conversation with him and Riley a night or two before election? A. Yes, sir, I was.

By MR. DORN: Where was the conversation? A. At Mr. Lilkendey's saloon.

Q. When was it? A. I think the Sunday night before election.

Q. Are you positive of that? A. I am not positive of that, but to the best of my recollection it was Sunday night.

By MR. CLUNIE: I want to show, and you are not able to testify to anything at all except to the best of your information and belief. In view of Mr. Dorn threatening every witness on the stand with the Penal Code, I notify this witness he is not to swear to anything he don't know except to the best of his knowledge and belief.

Q. This, I understand you, to the best of your belief was Sunday night? A. That is what I said.

Q. Go on and state the conversation as it occurred. A. Mr. Banks said he would put $20 over Lilkendey's bar, and then give us $20 more if we carried the Second Precinct.

Q. Of what district? A. Of the Thirty-fourth.

Q. That conversation occurred between you, Mr. Riley, and Mr. Banks? A. Mr. Riley and myself, and Banks.

Q. That occurred in this city and county? A. In this city and county; yes, sir.

Q. And you think it was on Sunday night before election? A. I won't be positive.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: State the exact language you used and the exact language which Banks used. A. That is pretty hard to do, but what he said was that he would put $20 over Lilkendey's bar and $20 more if the Second Precinct is carried for him.

Q. That is not what you said a moment ago? A. It is the same thing.

Q. No, it is not the same thing. Tell me what he did say? A. He said he would put $20 over Lilkendey's bar, and $20 more we would get if the Second Precinct was carried.

Q. Did he say if the Second Precinct was carried for him, or if he carried the precinct? A. It is the same thing.

Q. Which did he say? A. If he carried the Second Precinct.

Q. That you are positive of? A. No, I ain't positive of the words.

Q. Are you positive of anything? A. Yes, sir; I am.

Q. What are you positive of? A. I am positive I am up here on the stand speaking.

Q. That is about all you are positive of? A. Yes, sir; I am.

Q. That is the only thing you are positive of? A. No, it is not. I am positive of the testimony I am giving.

Q. Why did you say you are not sure of it? A. I am not positive of the exact words Mr. Banks used.

Q. What more are you positive of? A. I am positive of more that he said.

Q. You are positive it was Sunday night? A. No, I am not positive.

Q. That is something you are not positive of? A. No, sir.

Q. Then you are positive of the language? A. No, sir; I am not.

Q. That is something else you are not positive about. Is there anything else of your testimony that you are not positive about? If there is, I want to start out with that. As a matter of fact, you are not positive about any of it? A. I am positive Banks came up to me and offered to put $20 over Lilkendey's bar and give us $20 more when he carried—if he carried that precinct.

Q. That much you are positive of? A. I am positive.

Q. Who have you been talking with about this matter? A. I have not been talking with anybody, except myself and Riley.

Q. How did you happen to come here? A. Well, notified.

Q. Who told you to come here? A. Mr. Callihan.

Q. What else did he tell you? A. Nothing else.

Q. He did not ask you what you could testify to? A. He knew what I could testify to.

Q. Did he ask you what you could testify to? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you tell him? A. I told him just as I told you.

Q. You told him that is what you could testify to? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did Callihan happen to ask you this? A. I don't know.

Q. You say he asked you what you could testify to? A. I told him before that. There was another party with us; Riley was there and he might have told him.

Q. Then there was somebody else present besides yourself and Riley? A. Riley was the other party, and Banks.

Q. Those were the only three people that were present? A. That was the three.

Q. And you were away from the rest? A. We were to one side.

Q. Where did this take place? A. Lilkendey's saloon.

Q. At what time? A. Between five and eight.

Q. Just the same time as the other man? A. Well, about the time.

Q. In what part of the saloon did it occur? A. It occurred right alongside of the table at the end of the bar.

Q. Who came into that saloon with Banks, of his own friends, outside of your club? A. That I could not say.

Q. Did you know any of them? A. No, I did not.

Q. And did Banks come alone into that saloon? A. I didn't see Banks until he came up to the club room; then we all went into the saloon together. I believe there were some of his friends with him.

Q. Was this gentleman with him [indicating]? A. I wouldn't swear to that.

Q. Did that other gentleman come into the club room with him? A. I wouldn't swear to that.

Q. Did that gentleman go with him and you over into the saloon? A. I wouldn't swear to that.

Q. Was this gentleman in Lilkendey's saloon during the same time you were there? A. I don't know; I don't recognize him at all.

Q. As a matter of fact, wasn't this gentleman with Mr. Banks and talking with that gentleman? A. I did not say I saw a gentleman there. I don't know whether he was there or not.

Q. You don't know? A. No, sir.

Q. Who else came in with Mr. Banks, besides this gentleman? A. I did not say that gentleman came in with Mr. Banks.

Q. Let us suppose this man did. Then who else did? A. I did not see anybody. I don't know who came in with him.

Q. You don't know anything except the one thing, and you know that you got over to that saloon and somebody made the proposition? A. Somebody was with Banks, and I wouldn't swear who it was.

Q. You are not certain of anything but one thing, and that was that Banks made that proposition to you, and that is fixed in your recollection like a glittering star, is it? A. That is all.

By MR. CLUNIE: You said in your testimony Mr. Banks said he would put $20 over the bar and if this precinct was carried you would get $20 afterwards? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he ask you people to use your efforts to carry that precinct for him? A. He said he would put $20 over that bar and give us $20 more if he carried the precinct. He did not ask us particularly.

Q. What office do you bear to that club? A. I am nothing now. I am Vice-President elect, but at the time I did not hold any office.

By MR. DORN: At that time you were not an officer of the club at all? A. I was not.

Q. Mr. Banks did not ask you or any other members of the club to vote for him? A. No, sir. I don't know about any of the other members; he didn't ask me.

Q. He did not make any proposition of the kind to you? A. Not that I know of.

Q. He was willing to give the club a portion now, and if he was successful he was willing to give them some more? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And if he was defeated he could not afford it? A. No, sir.

Q. And that was the only proposition that was made? A. That was all.

GEORGE RYAN.

A witness on behalf of contestant, was sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: What is your name? Answer—George Ryan.

Q. Where do you live? A. No. 5 Jansen.

Q. What district is that in? A. The Thirty-fourth.

Q. In what precinct? A. The Fourth.

Q. Do you know a gentleman by the name of Michael Smith? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Captain Michael Smith? A. I know him very well.

Q. You have known him for some time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have any conversation with him prior to or since the election on the sixth of November in regard to Mr. Banks and his friends in his behalf, with a convict in San Quentin? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was present at that conversation? A. He and I.

Q. There was nobody else there? A. No, sir.

Q. Proceed. A. He and I had a conversation in the Fourth Precinct; there was a barroom adjoining—I think it was the ninth of November, the last day of the count of that precinct; I think it was the ninth of November.

By MR. DORN: That was after the election? A. After the election. He told me that Mr. Sullivan's defeat was owing to his influence in San Quentin.

MR. DORN [interrupting]: To all this we interpose the special objection again, on the ground that it is the broadest and veriest hearsay in the world.

By MR. CLUNIE: Go on and tell the conversation. A. He and I had been together all the night before and all that day, and wherever I would go he would go, and he told me that Sullivan's defeat was owing to that, to a great extent.

By MR. CLUNIE: Owing to what? A. Owing to his influence at San Quentin, and I asked him how he accounted for that, and he said, "Don't you know that there is twenty-seven convicts in San Quentin that lived in this Senatorial District," and he said "Those twenty-seven convicts befriended us. I was there, and I had letters from them to their friends, and went to their friends when I happened to be away from there, and sought their influence, which I thought I had." I said, "Well, I don't you—"

Q. [Interrupting.] Never mind what you said; I don't care about that.

MR. DORN: I want to hear it.

By MR. CLUNIE: Just wait until I ask you that question. What position had this Mr. Smith occupied at San Quentin? State, if you know. A. I don't know positively, but I heard that he was a Captain there.

Q. Captain of the Guard? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Captain of the Watch? A. That is what I understood. I never was over there.

Q. That conversation occurred in this city and county, in a barroom in the Fourth Precinct of the Thirty-fourth District, on the night of the ninth of November? A. Yes, sir.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Go and tell us the rest of that conversation. You got to the conversation where you told what he said, and you were about to tell what you said when Mr. Clunie stopped you. Answer—I said to Mr. Smith, "You have no influence with our friends if we have any there, and I don't think we have got any there;" and he said, "You have got one man there who has got five relatives in this district, and through you and Mr. Maxwell they were going to vote for Mr. Sullivan, until I got a letter from him to their relatives." I asked him who it was, and he told me it was Murray.

Q. You and Maxwell were very active in Sullivan's fight there wasn't you? A. Very active.

Q. You are a member of the Confidence Club, are you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You and Mr. Maxwell were the chief advisers? A. I don't speak of this Mr. Maxwell. I speak of his brother.

Q. You were making Mr. Sullivan's fight over there, were you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. This conversation that took place between you and Mr. Smith, he told you because he had been friendly to these men while they were in San Quentin; he told you they were willing to help his way if possible, and in that way they were willing to influence their friends in the fight for Mr. Banks? A. That was a portion of it. He told me he had befriended them for this particular purpose.

Q. But the fact was that he had befriended them? A. He had befriended them.

Q. It was for past favors which he had done and not for the hope of future reward that they assisted him? A. And future also.

Q. Why didn't you say that also? A. I did.

Q. No, this is the first you stated. A. It was past and future favors he was to bestow on them; but as to favors he could bestow on Murray, I know nothing about. I only know just what he told me.

Q. Where do you live? A. No. 5 Jansen Street.

Q. How many rooms in that house? A. Eight.

Q. How many people live in that house? A. Do you mean voters?

Q. I asked you how many people live there? A. It would take me some little time to tell you.

Q. Take some little time, and tell us. A. At the present time?

Q. Yes, sir. A. There are two sisters-in-law, the wife, the sister is five, the brother is six.

Q. How old is your brother? A. About twenty-four.

Q. Don't miss yourself; that makes seven. A. Myself is seven, and Dorman is eight.

Q. How old is Dorman? A. About twenty-five.

Q. Is he a citizen of the United States? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he register from that house? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you register from that house? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did your brother register from that house? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many people are remaining in that house now? A. Eight.

Q. That is all of you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Wasn't three of you all and the only voters that were registered from that house? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many voters have voted from that house on election day? A. Four.

Q. Who, besides your people? A. A man by the name of Barry.

Q. Where is he now? A. In the Holy Cross Cemetery. He died previous to election.

Q. He died before the election, did he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was his name voted on election day? A. Not that I know of. I was not a member of the Board of Election, and I could not say that his name was voted. If it was, I think it was the Registrar's fault.

Q. You are positive that there were only four men registered from that house on election day? A. Yes, sir.

By MR. CLUNIE: You ain't responsible for the count? A. No, sir.

Q. You give the legitimate voters that were there, and that is all you supposed attempted to vote from that place? A. Yes, sir.

[Here the further hearing was continued until Friday, January fourth, at nine o'clock A. M.]

THIRD DAY.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA, }
Friday, January 4, 1889—9 o'clock A. M. }

Present: Justices Stafford and Boland, the contestant and respondent, and their respective counsel, and Thos. R. Knox, official reporter.

MR. DORN: Before we proceed this morning, there has arisen a question whether any proposition had ever arisen about votes, and there seems to be a misunderstanding. We have been under the impression all the time that the contestant was unwilling to count the votes, and I will state further that we have never received any proposition to count the votes. Representing respondent, we now propose and offer to count the votes cast, and which are on file now, and which were cast for this office of Senator for the Twenty-first Senatorial District, and that that count shall take place now and before your honors.

MR. CLUNIE: When this contest was first commenced, Mr. Sullivan and myself, particularly after consulting with Mr. Sullivan, talked with Mr. Jacob Shaen, who represented not only the State Central Committee, but also Mr. Banks, I understand, and was particularly active in Mr. Banks' fight, and I then stated myself if Mr. Banks would have the votes counted, we would abide by it; and Mr. Shaen said that he went to Mr. Banks and Mr. Banks had refused to have them counted. Since then they have had these ballots and hawked them around. So far as I am concerned, I won't object to it.

MR. DORN: Will you accept that proposition?

MR. CLUNIE: I am not talking of propositions.

FRED. R. CONWAY.

A witness called for contestant, was duly sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: Where do you reside? Answer—At present, 114 Hayes Street.

Q. How long have you lived there? A. I am living there since shortly after the election.

Q. Didn't you live there a little before the election? A. Yes, sir, I lived there before the election also.

Q. How long before the election did you live there? A. About a year, I guess.

Q. Didn't you live there longer than a year? A. No, sir.

Q. You had been at 114 Hayes Street for a year prior to election? A. No, sir.

Q. How long prior to election did you live at 114 Hayes Street? A. About five weeks.

Q. In whose house did you live at 114 Hayes Street? A. My mother's.

Q. Are you keeping house there? A. My mother does.

Q. And you lived there then? A. I lived there at times.

Q. Then where did you go? A. With Charley Smith.

Q. Who is he? A. A coppersmith, Jackson Street near Drumm, I think it is.

Q. You lived over there, but you ain't positive where you lived? A. You didn't ask that question. You asked me where his shop was.

Q. I asked you where you lived? A. I lived 1236 Broadway.

Q. Did you board there? A. I roomed there.

Q. Did you pay your room rent? A. Yes, sir.

Q. To whom? A. Mr. Smith.

Q. How much? A. Five dollars a month.

Q. How many rooms are there in that house? A. Five, I believe.

Q. Which room did you have? A. The rear room in the upper floor.

Q. That is a bedroom, is it? A. Yes, sir, there was a bed in it.

Q. And what is the number of the house? A. No. 1236.

Q. No. 1236 Broadway? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Charles Smith lived there, and you went to board with him before election? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long did you live there? A. I think about a week following the election.

Q. Then where did you go? A. To 114 Hayes Street.

Q. What was your object in leaving 114 Hayes Street and going over there? A. Because I wanted to room there.

Q. Why did you want to room there five weeks before election and one week after? A. I don't know, any more than to go over there and keep company with Smith.

Q. Smith asked you to, I suppose? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He is a married man, isn't he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he wanted you to keep him company? A. I didn't go exactly to keep him company, but I went to room there.

Q. You said you went to keep him company? A. Well, perhaps that more than anything else.

Q. Smith was lonely and he wanted you to keep him company; is that the fact or not, sir? A. No, it is not exactly the fact that I went to keep him company, but I went to room there.

Q. Does he keep a lodging house? A. No, sir; there were three or four rooming in the house. I don't know whether it was a lodging house or not.

Q. Did they all come in there before election? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Just give me the names of the people that were rooming there five weeks before election. Give me their names? A. Mr. Williams.

Q. What is his name? A. John Henry, I believe.

Q. Does he live there still? A. No, sir.

Q. And he only lived there five weeks before election? A. No; he lived there three months before election.

Q. You said you all moved in there five weeks before election? A. No, sir; I didn't say that.

Q. Who else moved in there? A. Mr. Simpson, I believe.

Q. What is he doing? A. He is a painter, I believe.

Q. Does he live there yet? A. No, sir; Mr. Smith moved about election time over to Berkeley, and we all had to get out.

Q. Mr. Smith don't live there now, then? A. No, sir.

Q. Where is Mr. Smith's place of business? A. Washington and Drumm Streets, I believe.

Q. Don't you know? A. I don't know the number.

Q. Haven't you ever been there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. It is very near there, isn't it? Is it right on the corner of Washington and Drumm? A. No, it is between Drumm and East, I believe.

Q. But you are not positive? A. No, I believe it is down there.

Q. How many times have you been down there? A. Two or three times.

Q. Yet you cannot swear positively where it is. Don't you know you went in that house as a stuffer for the Republican party, as a matter of fact? A. No, sir.

Q. Don't you know you were requested to go there at the request of some Republican politicians? A. No, sir; nobody requested me to go there.

Q. You don't know where James Simpson is now? A. No, sir.

Q. You never knew him before he moved into that house? A. Oh yes, I knew him a couple of years.

Q. How long have you known Mr. Smith? A. A couple of years, I guess.

Q. Has he always been down on Washington street near Drumm? A. He has since I knew him.

Q. And you went there to see him often? A. A couple of times.

Q. How did you come to go to up his house? A. Because I lived up there for fifteen or sixteen years, prior to living on Hayes Street.

Q. Where did you live up there? A. I lived on Bridge Street, off Broadway, between Hyde and Leavenworth.

Q. What is the number of that house? A. I don't know the number. It is a large tenement house; 1227 Broadway is the number of the building.

Q. You lived there at 1227 Broadway for five years? A. About five years.

Q. What five years were those? A. From about 1875 to 1880. Something like that.

Q. In 1880 where did you live? A. I moved to 12 Lynch Street, between Hyde and Leavenworth, Broadway and Pacific.

Q. Did you live there alone? A. No, I lived there with my mother.

Q. You have always lived with your mother for the last fifteen years? A. No, sir; I have been away sometimes.

Q. During the time being in the city, you have been with your mother all the time? A. Yes, sir, as a rule.

Q. Don't you think it a little strange you would leave your mother, after living with her fifteen or twenty years? A. I would often go off and stay a week or so, and stay with the boys—young fellows. I went over to have some fun in the campaign more than anything else.

Q. You went into this district to have some fun more than anything else, in the campaign? A. That was it.

Q. You went because you wanted to have some fun? A. I went because I happened to know all the boys over there.

Q. You are pretty well acquainted with Mr. Banks, ain't you? A. No, sir.

Q. You have never known him? A. I have seen him.

Q. You never knew him before election? A. I saw him going around the hill with the boys.

Q. You talked with him prior to the day of election, didn't you? A. I don't know, unless it was "How do you do?" etc.

Q. Do you swear you never had any further conversation than that with Mr. Banks before the day of election? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are just as sure of that as of anything else you have testified to here? A. Yes, sir.

Q. There is a grocery store, corner of Broadway and Hyde, isn't there? A. Yes, there is a couple there.

Q. And you were in the habit of going in there considerably? A. Yes, sir, at times.

Q. Didn't you go in there pretty often and talk about Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Didn't you go in and say you were for Banks—that he was a good fellow, and you wanted to see him elected? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were up there in the interests of Banks, weren't you? A. No, sir.

Q. Weren't you there in somebody's particular fight? A. Nobody's fight. For the Republican ticket; that is all.

Q. Didn't you have your particular friends there? A. Yes, I have friends, but I don't know any body in particular there.

Q. You are sure you went there five weeks before election? A. Yes, sir, about five.

Q. How long after you got into that district before you registered? A. I guess a couple of weeks.

Q. You are sure of that, are you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you pay your rent when you first went in? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you got a receipt for it? A. I believe so; I am not sure. I did have a receipt. [Looks and produces receipt.]

Q. When was this receipt made out? A. About the first of October.

Q. You are sure of that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You paid five dollars when this was made out? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you asked him for a receipt for it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Don't you know, as a matter of fact, that this receipt was only given to you in case the Registrar came after you and you could show that fact? A. I don't know. When I pay a bill, I want a receipt.

Q. Wasn't that your idea in getting this receipt? A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't you state to those parties you were all right in that house, because you had a receipt? Didn't you state that in this saloon? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you come to make that statement? A. In case there was any trouble arising,

Q. You bragged that around, that in case of any trouble you had that? A. I didn't brag of it.

Q. You made that statement in that saloon two or three times, didn't you? A. I don't know as I made it two or three times. I made it once.

Q. Whose handwriting is that? A. It is my writing.

Q. How does it come Smith didn't write it? A. He doesn't write a very good legible hand, you can see.

Q. You think he doesn't write as good as you do, do you? A. You can see for yourself.

Q. You wanted the receipt in good writing? A. I don't know. He asked me to write it.

Q. You were a member of the Board of Election up there, weren't you? A. I was.

Q. In that precinct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you come to get on there? A. Through a friend of mine.

Q. What friend? A. Mr. Cahill, President of Club No. 2, Thirty-fourth District, I believe it was.

Q. Mr. Cahill, President of Club No. 2, Thirty-fourth District, got you on? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you first talk with Mr. Cahill about getting on? A. I didn't talk with him at all about it. He approached me and wanted me to go on.

Q. When did he approach you? A. Shortly before he did it.

Q. Didn't he approach you and tell you if you would go over he would put you on? A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't you state in this saloon, a little before election, that your object in going over there was to help Banks, and that you were to be on the Election Board? Didn't you so state in this saloon, corner Hyde and Broadway? A. I don't remember.

Q. Wouldn't you remember it if you said it? A. I don't remember anything of the kind.

Q. You don't remember saying that? A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. You might have said it? A. I don't know whether I said it or not. I don't remember saying it.

Q. Was it the fact or not? A. Was it the fact I moved there for that?

Q. Yes, sir. A. No, sir.

Q. You went on that Board? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were put there by Mr. Cahill? A. Yes, sir; at least he signed my application.

Q. Then what did you do with your application? A. I gave it to him.

Q. Then you didn't care any more about it? A. Not until I got my appointment.

Q. Then you went on election morning to the discharge of your duties?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who were the officers of that Board? A. Do you mean the Supervisors, or the Clerks and Judges and Inspectors?

Q. Give me the whole Board. A. James Bellingham was one Inspector there. John L. Durkee, John A. Barry, Mr. Browser—I don't know his first name—and Stephen Williams, I believe his name is, was a Democratic Clerk.

Q. Wasn't it Potter? A. No, sir; Potter was not a Clerk.

Q. He was there? A. He was not a Clerk.

Q. What was he? A. I don't know; he represented the Democratic County Committee, I believe.

Q. You are sure he was not a member of the Board of Election? A. I am positive. Frank Dunn, Harry Simpson, and a couple of other gentlemen—I don't know their names—and myself.

Q. You know a young man by the name of Chadwick, don't you? A. Yes, sir; he was Supervisor.

Q. Chadwick was Supervisor of Election in that precinct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you positive of that? A. Yes, sir; I am. Edward Bellingham was also a Supervisor.

By MR. DORN: Those are the ones that were appointed by the United States authorities. A. Yes, sir; those are the ones.

MR. CLUNIE: Who were the callers there? A. Frank Nixon and Mr. Durkee, I believe.

Q. Did you see any one else calling off while you were there? A. Yes, Barry called one, or two, or three off.

Q. Which was Barry? A. What politics?

Q. Yes. A. What position did he hold?

Q. Yes. A. I think he was Inspector or Judge.

Q. Who was he put there by? A. I don't know.

Q. For what party? A. He was a Republican.

Q. And he called off for that party? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see any one else call? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see Chadwick call? A. No, sir.

Q. You never left there? A. I never left there an hour.

Q. And you didn't see him? A. No, sir.

Q. And you are just as sure of that as you are of anything else you have sworn to? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you are just as sure of that as you are that you did not go into that precinct to stuff? A. Yes, sir.

Q. It was not possible for him to do it and you not see it? A. I was not out an hour, I tell you, and I could see it.

Q. How often did you sleep at Smith's? A. Every night.

Q. You didn't go home a night? A. No, sir.

Q. Who slept with you? A. A man named Williams.

Q. Where is he now? A. He is in town here some place.

Q. Whereabouts? A. On Broadway, between Hyde and Larkin; I don't know the number.

Q. He moved at the time you did, did he? A. No; he lived there three months before election.

Q. But he moved out of Smith's house when you did? A. Yes, Smith went over to Berkeley, and we had to move out.

Q. And you swear positively you slept there every night from the time you went in there until you left? A. Yes, except one or two nights I stayed out all night. I slept nowhere except there.

Q. Don't you know, as a matter of fact, you did not go to that house until the sixth of October? A. I didn't say I moved in on the first.

Q. Yes, you did. You got a receipt here upon the first. A. That doesn't say I moved there.

Q. When did you move? A. I don't know exactly the date.

Q. Don't you know it was the sixth or seventh? A. I moved there the Saturday following the first, I believe.

Q. That is the sixth? A. I don't know.

Q. How did you come to get your receipt from the first of October? What was your idea in that, if you had not been there? A. I don't know; we usually do in paying bills and things of that kind.

Q. You didn't mind a peculiarity about a little thing like that? A. I don't know.

Q. Did you think you could give him a week's lodging? A. Not exactly. I suppose bills are paid on the first of the month, and I asked him how the bill was made out, and he said from the first to the first.

Q. You said a little while ago you were in that house about five weeks before election. A. About six.

Q. There is quite a difference between the sixth of October and the sixth of November, five weeks. You figure it at about five weeks? A. I said about.

Q. Don't you know, as a matter of fact, you were there only about twenty-nine days? A. No, sir.

Q. Don't you know, as a matter of fact, you were there only twenty-nine days, and don't you know you were not entitled to vote in that precinct? A. No, sir, I was over twenty-nine days in it.

Q. Don't you know you were? A. I am pretty sure I was.

Q. When were you there? A. I was there Saturday night following the first, I believe.

Q. How long was that? A. I don't know. It is over twenty-nine days.

Q. You say you know it is over twenty-nine days. How do you know it? A. I don't know how I know it. I think so, anyway. I would like to see a calendar and I can tell.

Q. You are sure you went in Saturday night? A. Yes, sir.

Q. It was not Sunday? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever sleep there after election?

MR. DORN: It was not very likely.

A. Let me see. I was out all night following election.

MR. CLUNIE: We ask to have it on record that we object to Mr. Dorn suggesting to the witness.

Q. Did you sleep there election night? A. I am not sure. I couldn't swear.

Q. Did you sleep there the second night after election? A. I am not sure. I couldn't swear.

Q. Did you sleep there the night after election? A. I don't think so.

Q. Don't you know, as a matter of fact, you never slept there a night after you voted? A. I think I did. I am not sure. I cannot swear.

Q. You won't swear you did? A. No. I was all in an uproar that week. I don't know where I was.

Q. While you were up there you had an interest in advancing Mr. Banks' interest and the Republican ticket? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You worked and did all you could? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you went into the district, as I understand it, to have some fun in politics.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Did you take any special interest in Mr. Banks or in the Republican ticket? A. My interest was more in the Republican ticket than anything else.

Q. Had you any particular reason to be particularly favorable to Mr. Banks, the man you said you did not know except to speak to him? A. No, sir; excepting through Mr. Cahill.

Q. And you didn't know Mr. Banks, and had no special interest in him at all? A. No, sir.

Q. You went over there, as I understand, that you knew the boys in that district? A. Yes, sir; I had lived there a number of years, and naturally I would like to be over there.

Q. At the time you voted and at the time you registered, did you know you would be in that district thirty days before the election? A. Yes, sir, I thought I would.

Q. You said a moment ago you were uncertain, and that you wanted to see a calendar. At the time you voted you were not uncertain, were you? A. I was certain. I said I was there at least twenty-nine days, and I want to know it now.

Q. You knew at that time you had been there thirty days, didn't you, and it is simply it has been some time, and you have forgotten about it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Isn't that the reason for your present uncertainty on the subject? A. Nothing else.

Q. Did you go over there, as accused, for the purpose of gaining a residence for the purpose of voting for or against anybody? A. I don't know as I did.

Q. You went over there for the purpose of being in the place where you were acquainted with the boys? A. Well, I knew everybody, which is my reason more than anything else.

Q. And you recognized the fact that one vote for the Republican ticket there would be no different than a vote for the Republican ticket anywhere else? A. No, sir.

Q. And your reason for wanting to go there was to be among your acquaintances, where you had lived for fifteen years? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Banks ever ask you to go over there or to vote for him? A. No, sir. I think I was over there before Mr. Banks received the nomination.

Q. Were you promised anything by Mr. Banks? A. No, sir.

Q. Or had you any reason or inducement held out to vote for him? A. No, sir; none at all.

Q. Were you ever paid any money or given any consideration by Banks? A. Not a cent. I never received a cent from anybody.

Q. You say you lived in the house of a Mr. Smith. What was Mr. Smith's politics? A. He is a Democrat.

Q. Would you consider it likely, if you went over there to be a Republican stuffer, you would take up your residence in the house of one of your political enemies? A. I don't think so, he not being my politics.

Q. Harry Simpson, referred to as living in the house, was of what politics? A. He claimed to be a Republican, but he said afterward he voted for Sullivan.

Q. Do you know whether or not he was a Republican? A. He claimed to be a Republican.

Q. And he claimed afterwards to have voted for Sullivan? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then, if there were any stuffers there, Simpson would be what we politely term a Democratic stuffer, wouldn't he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say Smith, who kept the house, was a Democrat? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whether he took any active part in the recent election? A. Yes, sir. He was assisting in making Mr. Sullivan's fight.

Q. Was he for or against Mr. Banks, the respondent, here? A. He was against Mr. Banks.

Q. Do you know whether he was or not active in the canvass? A. He was very active.

Q. He was active for Mr. Sullivan, and against Mr. Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. The man in whose house you lived? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the man with whom you roomed, also voted for Mr. Sullivan? A. I don't know how Williams voted. I know he was making Reynolds' fight—another Democrat.

Q. Williams was making Reynolds' fight—another Democrat? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What office was Reynolds the candidate for? A. Assemblyman.

Q. This other gentleman, Williams, whom Mr. Clunie has called a stuffer, was there making a fight for Mr. Reynolds, a candidate for member of the Assembly? A. Yes, sir.

Q. On the Democratic ticket? A. Yes, sir; I don't know how he stood on the Senatorial vote.

Q. The proprietor of the house, Smith, was actively engaged in making Sullivan's fight? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Sullivan, the contestant in this case? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Williams, your room-mate, you say, was actively engaged in making Reynolds' fight? A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Democratic candidate for the Assembly? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Simpson informed you that he voted in the Senatorial election for Sullivan, the contestant in this case? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then if that was a house full of stuffers, the majority was not Republican by any means, was it? A. No, sir.

Q. Those were the men who lived in the house, were they? A. Those were the men.

Q. And you said the reason why you all left the house was because Smith left the house and moved to Berkeley? A. He moved a couple of days before election and we had to go.

Q. Mr. Smith, who was actively engaged in Sullivan's fight, stayed there until two days before election? A. Yes, sir; he roomed at the house until the election.

Q. And then as soon as the election occurred? A. He went over with his wife to Berkeley.

Q. He stayed there and worked and voted on election day for Sullivan? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And was pretty active? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know how much money Mr. Sullivan paid Mr. Smith for his services there? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever hear him say? A. I heard that he got $40, but I am not sure. I am not sure it was $40; but I think it was $40.

Q. You think it was in that neighborhood? A. Yes, sir.

Q. This Williams, whom you roomed with, told you he got $40? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He was the one who was making the fight for Reynolds for the Assembly? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much did Simpson get for making Reynolds' fight for the Assembly? A. He did not make any fight at all.

Q. He voted for Sullivan? A. Yes, sir; so he told me. He was a Republican Clerk.

Q. Did he tell you how much he got for voting? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know how much Williams, who was making the fight for the Democratic candidate for the Assembly, got? A. No, sir.

Q. You never heard him say anything about it, one way or the other? A. No, sir.

Q. You never heard him say anything about it? A. No, sir.

Q. But you are sure that the Smith who was working for Sullivan, and whose house you roomed in, and who left after election, got $40? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would you think that was a good place to plant yourself in as a Republican stuffer? A. No, sir. I went over there more through sport than politics.

Q. And you were a bona fide resident in that precinct and district more than thirty days before election, were you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And were entitled to vote there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You received no consideration whatever for casting your vote? A. No, sir.

Q. And you cast it as you pleased, and without the influence of anybody? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Banks ever ask you to vote for him? A. No, sir.

Q. And you never had any inducement to vote for him, either one way or the other? A. No, sir.

MR. CLUNIE: We offer this receipt in evidence. It reads as follows:

SAN FRANCISCO, October 1, 1888.

Received of F. R. Conway five (5) dollars in advance for one month's room rent, at 1238 Broadway Street.

Paid, C. W. SMITH.

Redirect Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: You say you received nothing for your services over there? A. No, sir.

Q. Not a dollar? A. No, sir.

Q. You are sure of that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You worked in the Board for nothing? A. No, sir: what services do you mean?

Q. For your services over there? A. I got paid for being Clerk, certainly.

Q. How much were you paid? A. I got $16 50.

Q. How long were you there? A. I was there during the count.

Q. Who paid you? A. I went down and had my warrant cashed at Max Goldberg's.

Q. That was all the money you received? A. Yes, sir.

- Q. There was no money paid extra to the officers there by anybody?
A. No, sir.
- Q. Didn't Mr. Banks pay you $3 apiece extra? A. No, sir.
- Q. You are sure of that now? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. You say Smith was making an active fight for Sullivan. How do you know that? A. I could see him around talking about it.
- Q. What did he say? A. He was discussing the merits of the two men.
- Q. Tell us how he discussed it. A. I couldn't use the words exactly, except he would meet a friend, and say he was a pretty good fellow—vote for him—or something.
- Q. You say he told you he got $40 from Sullivan? A. He mentioned it the day of election.
- Q. When did he tell you that? A. The day of election.
- Q. Where did he tell you that? A. In that barroom.
- Q. Whose barroom? A. At the corner grocery.
- Q. Who was there? A. Smith was there.
- Q. The Smith you are talking about, and who else? A. Certain others. I don't know who.
- Q. Did he tell this to anybody else? A. I don't know that he did.
- Q. How did he happen to tell you he got $40 from Sullivan? A. He was talking there, getting a drink; speaking about it.
- Q. This was the day of election? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And you were a member of the Board? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And this occurred in the saloon? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And you had left your duties inside and come outside to take a drink? A. No, sir. Mr. Simpson, the other Clerk, was on duty at the time.
- Q. This was while you were off duty? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. What time of day was it? A. In the afternoon.
- Q. What time in the afternoon? A. I couldn't say. Two or three o'clock.
- Q. Then you were not on duty then? A. I was not on duty; no.
- Q. How long were you out of the room? A. Of the polling place?
- Q. Yes. A. I left there about half-past twelve or one o'clock. I was on from seven until that time.
- Q. You say Smith told you he got $40 from Sullivan to work for him? A. I think it was $40. I said in the neighborhood of $40.
- Q. Why do you think that sum, $40, was mentioned? A. I think $40 was mentioned. He got some money.
- Q. Do you swear Mr. Smith told you he got $40 from Mr. Sullivan to vote for him and to work for him? A. Yes, sir; I am sure of it.
- Q. And you say he told you that on the day of election? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. In this saloon? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. This Simpson you are talking about was making whose fight? A. He was making nobody's fight in particular, but he said after election he voted for Sullivan.
- Q. Simpson told you he voted for Sullivan? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Where is Simpson now? A. I don't know where he is.
- Q. Did he tell you he voted for Sullivan? A. He didn't tell me particularly. He told Cahill.
- Q. Did he tell you that? A. Not particularly.
- Q. Did you hear him say that? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Whereabouts? A. In Wendt's barroom.
- Q. And he was a Clerk put there by the Republican party, and the man you let relieve you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Before he ever went there, had he been for Sullivan? A. No, sir.

Q. Hadn't he told you he was for Banks? A. No, sir.

Q. Hadn't he told you he was on his ticket? A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't you and he talk about how you were going to vote? A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't you and he talk about being on the Board together? A. We spoke of it; yes, sir.

Q. Did he tell you how he got on? A. He got on at the same time I did, in the same way.

Q. Through Cahill? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And yet there was no intimation as to Sullivan? A. No, sir.

Q. Yet there were no inquiries made before he went on that Board how he would vote? A. No, sir.

Q. And you did not know anything about that? A. No, sir. I only knew he claimed to be a Republican: that is all.

Q. Didn't you think it very funny they would take two Republicans from the same house? A. I don't know. I was around there and knew everybody.

Q. And you say he did not mention getting any money from Banks? A. Not a cent.

Q. And you were not paid for your services? A. I got paid for my services.

Q. Cahill did not pay that to you? A. No, sir.

Q. You spent money around there, going around with the boys, just for the good of the party, did you? A. Well, yes, sir.

Q. You didn't get any money from anybody to do that? A. No, sir.

Q. You spent five dollars? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it was all your own money? A. It was all my own money.

Q. You have had some talk with Mr. Banks since you were subpoenaed in this case, haven't you? A. I don't know. Yes, I spoke to him: "How do you do?" or something like that.

Q. Where did you talk to him? A. I don't know. Around the hall here.

Q. You didn't talk to him down town? A. No, sir.

Q. When was this subpoena served on you? A. Yesterday.

Q. What did you do with it after that? A. I kept it in my pocket.

Q. Where did you go? A. I went down town.

Q. Didn't you go to the Mint Saloon? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see Mr. Banks? A. No, sir.

Q. You came here this morning and saw him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you say? A. I said, "How do you do, Billy?"

Q. You had only met Banks once since the day of election? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did he say? A. He asked me if they summoned me.

Q. What else? A. That was all.

Q. And you were here together fifteen minutes before the Court met, weren't you? A. No, sir.

Q. How long? A. About two or three minutes, until Mr. Dorn came.

Q. Didn't you tell Mr. Banks this time about the money this man had got from Mr. Sullivan? A. No, sir.

Q. You never said a word to him about that, or to Mr. Dorn? A. No, sir.

Q. You are positive of that? A. I never spoke to Mr. Dorn in my life.

Q. You are sure you didn't tell Mr. Banks about it? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever tell Mr. Banks about this $40? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you swear that this Smith you were rooming with voted for Mr. Sullivan? A. I didn't see his ballot. I didn't see his vote.

Q. Do you swear Simpson voted for Mr. Sullivan? A. I didn't say it.
 Q. You swore that they both told you so? A. Yes, sir.

Re-Cross Interrogatories.

MR. DORN: You were asked about a conversation that took place here in the hall, and you say you were there a minute or two before I came. Did I speak to you? A. No, sir.

Q. And until you got on the stand, and I asked you the first question, did a word ever take place between you and I? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever see me in your life before? A. Yes; I believe I saw you in the Parlor of the Native Sons.

Q. Did we ever talk together? A. No, sir.

Q. You were asked if you had a conversation with Mr. Banks about your testimony. Did you have any such conversation? A. No, sir.

Q. Did he ask you what you were going to testify to? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you tell him what you were going to testify to? A. No, sir.

Q. Or anything about what your testimony would be? A. No, sir.

Q. You simply passed the time of day, and he asked you if you had been subpoenaed? A. Yes, sir; he was kind of surprised, and I walked up a few steps to you with him.

Q. And he asked you if you had been subpoenaed? A. If I had been summoned.

Q. And what did you say? A. I hauled out the document, and I said I didn't know whether Mr. Banks subpoenaed me or Sullivan.

Q. You did not know until now who subpoenaed you? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you know whether you were subpoenaed by Mr. Sullivan or Mr. Banks? A. No, sir.

Q. And you had no further conversation on the subject? A. No, sir.

Q. At that time I arrived, and you walked away? A. Yes, sir.

JAMES H. DUNN.

A witness on behalf of contestant, was duly sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: Are you a Deputy Sheriff of this city and county? A. Yes, sir; I am.

Q. And have been how long? A. Six years.

Q. You have been a deputy during Mr. McMann's administration, haven't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where has been your position? A. Bailiff of Department No. 3.

Q. You were there as such Bailiff during the time the contest was going on of O'Donnell for Mayor of this city and county? A. I was, sir.

Q. What was your position there? A. Stringer.

Q. Explain to us how that contest was conducted. How did they get the ballots, and what was done? A. In the first place, ballots were handed to Judge Finn, and from there they were handed to the Registrar. He opened the packages, cut the string, and passed them to the caller.

MR. DORN: When Mr. Ryan appears to sign his testimony, there is one question I omitted to ask that I would like to be allowed to ask.

JUSTICE STAFFORD: Very well.

WITNESS [continuing]: He would call the names of the Mayor, hand the ballots to the counsel for the contestant, and he would hand them to me, and I would string them. That was the process.

By MR. CLUNIE: You were able to see every ballot that was cast, were you? A. I did; yes, sir.

Q. And every ballot that was counted in that contest? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you present in that Court-room, stringing, when the Seventh Precinct of the Thirty-third District was being counted? A. I was.

Q. Did you handle those ballots? A. I did.

Q. Did you look at each ballot as it came out? A. I did.

Q. Did you notice anything peculiar on those ballots? A. With relation to the Senatorial part, I did.

Q. Just state what it was. A. I noticed that there were about thirty-five, probably forty Democratic ballots, with Mr. Sullivan's name scratched and no one's name substituted—scratched with a pencil.

Q. Those were the regular Democratic tickets? A. They were.

Q. And on that Democratic ticket J. J. Sullivan appeared as the nominee for Senator? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And no one was substituted? A. No, sir.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Did you make any further observations with regard to the other precincts of the district? A. I did.

Q. Didn't you find that in a very large number of cases the name of Mr. Banks was erased by rubbing a dirty thumb or a thumb with a pencil on that? A. I cannot say that I did.

Q. Can you say that you did not? A. No, I cannot.

Q. Then what you recollect specially looking out for was Mr. Sullivan's name? A. I will tell you what drew my attention to that: There were two gentlemen; one was taking a snap tally, one for each candidate; that is what drew my attention. In fact, I drew the attention of that gentleman, Mr. Maxwell, [indicating] there, first.

Q. In the different precincts, about how many times did you observe the name of Mr. Banks, the respondent here, scratched? A. A great many times; that is, in the different precincts.

Q. Was it scratched two hundred and fifty times? A. That I couldn't say.

Q. Of course you have to guess. Would you say to the best of your knowledge and belief, two hundred times? A. In the whole district?

Q. Yes. A. I think that might have been, but I couldn't swear positive.

Q. You observed it was erased a large number of times with a pencil, and no name substituted? A. I didn't say with the pencil.

Q. How, then? A. It might have been ink or might have been pencil; but the reason I noticed this particularly was there were so many scratched with the pencil.

Q. Isn't it the fact that there are more scratched tickets than there are straight ones? A. Yes, there are more scratched than there are straight.

Q. Wouldn't you swear that there are more scratched tickets? A. I could not swear.

Q. That is, to the best of your knowledge and belief? A. That is, taking the whole.

Q. That is, taking the whole fifty-three thousand or fifty-four thousand? A. I believe there were more scratched ones.

Q. Aren't there a good many more scratched tickets than straight ones?
A. That is, taking them as a whole.

Q. Isn't it a common thing to find a name or a number of names erased, and in many of the cases no name substituted? A. Yes, sir.

Q. It is a common thing? A. Yes, sir; I have seen the whole ticket scratched with the exception of one name.

Q. And nothing substituted for it? A. Nothing substituted.

Q. Haven't you frequently seen one or two names erased and nothing substituted for it? A. I have.

Q. As a matter of fact, wouldn't you say, to the best of your knowledge and belief, as the ballots came out, precinct after precinct, that there are more names scratched which have no name substituted than those that have a name substituted for them? A. No, I couldn't say that, not taking it as a whole. In this case—say a district where there was a fight made for one particular candidate—that might be. You might find a lot of people would say, "Well, I don't like this man, but I won't vote for the other man, anyhow."

Q. In particular precincts where an active fight is made for a particular candidate, isn't it the case in some precincts that because of such a fight the ticket is scratched a number of times? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In this precinct it would be one of the Senators, in another a Judge, etc. Haven't you observed that very frequently? A. I have.

Q. And haven't you observed that in a precinct where a man resided himself, or had a particular number of friends, that his particular name would be frequently substituted for that of his opponent a number of times, and in that way? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In other words, ballots are liable to run in that way? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it is not a remarkable thing that in such an active canvass such a thing should happen for any man? A. No, it is not remarkable.

Q. And such a thing might happen without any wrong being done at all? A. No. It might all happen without any wrong being done, for what I knew.

Q. And because a particular number of ballots have been scratched, it is not a reason that any wrong was done? It might result, in other words, from an active canvass before election? A. Yes, it might.

Q. And between the two opinions, one man might in one way, and one man in another way? A. Exactly.

Q. In other words there is nothing which would enable you to swear or give you any ground for anything more than a mere surmise, because the ballots came out that way? A. That is all.

Q. And the same thing happened in different precincts, to different candidates? A. Not that way; it happened that way but there were other people substituted.

Q. You don't think it happened as many times? A. No, but it happened a great many times.

Q. A great many times similar things happened in a great many precincts? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did Mr. Maxwell commence to sit at that table in that recount? A. That I couldn't tell.

Q. Didn't he commence about the time you reached the Twenty-first Senatorial District? A. That I could not tell you. The first thing I know he came up and asked me if he could sit down there, and he said he wanted to take the tally.

Q. What tally did he want to take? A. I did not know then.

Q. Did he not tell you? A. He did afterward. He told me he wanted to take the ballot in the Sullivan count. I don't believe he took Banks' count.

Q. He stood right at the end of the string or the ballots where they were being strung? A. He did.

Q. Didn't he have a lead-pencil in his hand the whole time he stood there? A. He did not.

Q. Didn't you call back the names and tell him what to tally? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In other words, you assisted him to tally? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are a Democrat, are you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have been an active politician for the last six years, haven't you? A. I took an active part.

Q. Where do you live? A. No. 1119½ Mission.

Q. You are pretty well acquainted with Mr. Maxwell? A. No, sir.

Q. You never saw him around there? A. Oh, yes.

Q. You know he is an active politician? A. I don't know.

Q. You know he is active among the boys, the same as you are? A. No, sir.

Q. You know he was a deputy prior to election, in the Registrar's office, don't you? A. No, sir.

Q. You know it now, don't you? A. Yes, sir; I know he was in the City Hall about—

Q. [Interrupting.] You know you were friendly to him in assisting to call that? A. No; I assisted Republicans too.

Q. Did you assist Republicans? A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. Did you call off Mr. Banks' tally? A. No, sir; I did not, because he did not ask me.

Q. You called off for Sullivan? A. I did a portion of the time; not all the time.

Q. And you assisted in taking it? A. I did.

Q. The whole time you were calling off this tally for Mr. Maxwell—
A. [Interrupting.] Mind you, I did not call off the whole of it.

Q. You did not call off the whole of it because he probably got expert and did not need your assistance? A. Once in awhile he might have said, "Well, what is that?" and I said, "Well, that is either Sullivan or Banks."

Q. Once in awhile when you were calling off for him, there was a Republican standing at the other side, taking off Banks' tally, was there not?
A. He was taking off somebody's tally.

Q. Don't you know Maxwell stood there and took off Sullivan's tally, and don't you know that the other man was a Republican and stood there for the purpose of taking off Banks' tally, and didn't you know it at that time? A. I don't know whether he took Banks' or not.

Q. Wasn't Ray Falk and George McComb standing right there behind the caller? A. He was not behind the caller.

Q. Who was the caller that stood behind you? A. George McComb was there.

Q. Do you know what he was there for? A. No, sir.

Q. You thought he was there for fun? A. I knew he was there for some friend.

Q. And you did not know what tally he was taking off? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you assist him in taking off Banks' tally? A. No, sir, I did not; not in the Banks tally.

Q. In whose tally did you assist him? A. In the Clunie-Phelps. I don't know whether McComb took off Banks' tally or not.

Q. When the Second Precinct of the Thirty-third District was counted, wasn't Lou Jacobs standing there, taking off Banks' tally? A. He was there.

Q. Don't you know he was taking off Banks' tally? A. I don't know.

Q. You don't know what he was taking off? A. He didn't tell me.

Q. He was there during that time? A. He was there, yes.

Q. Wasn't Ray Falk there taking off a tally at the same time? A. He was taking off a tally, but not behind me. Jacobs was there when McComb wasn't there.

Q. Was Maxwell there? A. Maxwell was there; yes, sir.

Q. Maxwell was there the whole time? A. Yes, sir; so was Banks, pretty much all the time.

Q. Was anybody else taking off the tally for Mr. Sullivan at that time, except Maxwell? A. There was another man sat there. I think his name was Phelan.

Q. What was he doing? A. He was keeping a snap tally.

Q. Do you know whose snap he was keeping? A. No, I do not.

Q. Then, as a matter of fact, there were two Republicans taking off tallies there, and one Democrat. Is that it? A. I don't know whether they were Democrats or Republicans, sitting down in the chairs.

Q. Wasn't Phelan there during the whole count of the Twenty-first Senatorial District? A. He was there during the whole count.

Q. Was Maxwell there any time except during the count of the Twenty-first Senatorial District? A. I don't think he was.

Q. You think he was there just at that time? A. During the Senatorial fight. Then I think he went away.

Q. In the Sixth Precinct of the Thirty-third the Court was specially convened for the purpose of counting the vote for Mayor, wasn't it? A. It was.

Q. And wasn't there a very large fraud discovered in the Second Precinct of the Thirty-third against O'Donnell? A. I couldn't tell you now. There were four or five precincts where there were very large frauds.

Q. In the Second Precinct of the Thirty-third wasn't O'Donnell robbed out of eighty-one votes? A. I couldn't tell you the precincts, but I know it was one of them.

Q. It was one of the precincts in that neighborhood? A. Yes, sir.

Q. About that time there were Maxwell, and McComb, and Ray Falk taking off tallies during that time? A. I couldn't tell you whether it was Ray Falk or Jacobs that relieved each other.

Q. At that time wasn't there a conversation between the people that were taking off snap tallies? A. They were engaged in conversation.

Q. Didn't you learn from them at that time that the Republican candidate for the Assembly and the Republican candidate for Senator had been robbed out of votes in that precinct? A. Who was the Republican candidate?

Q. Mr. Banks was the candidate for Senator and Henry Martin was the candidate for Assemblyman. A. The Republicans said they gained so many votes, and Maxwell and the other gentleman said Sullivan gained so many votes.

Q. Wasn't it stated and announced there, as the result of the tally, that Banks gained eighty votes in that precinct? A. I don't think so.

Q. Out of which he had been defrauded by the count. You don't remember that? A. No, sir.

Q. If it had been something that Sullivan gained you would have remembered it? A. No, sir; I would not. I have known Mr. Banks for about fifteen years; we have been very friendly together, and I ain't taking any advantage of him at all.

Q. I don't suppose you are taking any advantage of him, and that is all we are grumbling about, and if all the Democrats were as you were—as fair as you—we would not need this trouble, but some of them did take advantage and we want to find out who they were. A. No; I don't think I ever heard any remark like that. If I did, I don't remember it.

Q. You know Mr. Maxwell tolerably well for a casual acquaintance, don't you? A. I never had an introduction to him in my life; I just spoke to him during the recount. I don't think I ever spoke to him before. I knew that there was such a man as Mr. Maxwell, and I know him when I meet him.

Q. You met him every day there when he was taking off that tally, didn't you? A. I did; yes, sir.

Q. He is generally a pretty calm, quiet man, isn't he? He is not generally excitable in his nature? A. I did not see anything excitable there.

Q. You went on with your business there, and he took off his snap tally in a business-like way, did he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you observe him during the time the count was being taken in the Second Precinct of the Thirty-third District? A. I suppose I did.

Q. Don't you know when the result of the count was known for Senator, that Mr. Maxwell got very much excited and got very red in the face, and showed every sign of being troubled? A. I couldn't say.

Q. You were looking at something else? A. I had plenty to do myself, without noticing the expression of Mr. Maxwell's face. I know there was one precinct where Mr. Maxwell said Sullivan got so many votes, and there was one where Mr. Banks said he got so many votes.

Q. Do you remember what particular precinct? A. No, sir. I don't remember any particular precinct except the one I told you of, and that was the Seventh of the Thirty-third; and it was I that drew Mr. Maxwell's attention.

Q. You called their attention to that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Any precincts in which Republicans gained you did not draw attention to? A. I made the remark that there must have been queer work there.

Q. Any precincts where Republicans gained you did not notice? A. That was not my business.

Q. That was not your political faith. In other words, you were not hunting evidence for Republicans? A. I was not; I was not hunting evidence for Democrats there.

Q. But when you found some you took pains to notify them of it? A. I drew their attention to it; that is all.

Q. You drew their attention to it in a mild kind of way? A. I said: "There was queer work going on here."

Q. You were not particularly anxious they should find out, and so busy you could not see Maxwell's countenance, and you did call the attention of Democrats to the fact that there was queer work in this precinct? A. Yes, sir.

By MR. CLUNIE: You spoke about there being two hundred scratched ballots in the district for Banks, or something of that kind? A. I did not say that; I said that I thought there might be that many. There might be more or less; I don't know.

Q. If you mean they scratched Banks, you mean the name of Banks was scratched, the name of Sullivan was written, do you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You don't mean the name of Banks was scratched and nothing was substituted? A. No. Mr. Dorn didn't ask the question that way.

By Mr. DORN: As a matter of fact, then, you did not find any ballots in the Twenty-first Senatorial District where Banks' name was erased, unless Sullivan's name was put on? A. I didn't say that either.

Q. Sometimes they were one way and sometimes the other? A. Sometimes Banks' name was scratched and nobody's name was substituted.

Q. And sometimes Sullivan's name was scratched and Banks' name was substituted? A. Yes, sir. I never noticed in any precinct, except the precinct I told you.

Q. You must have noticed in the different precincts? A. I did; Sullivan was scratched and Banks was substituted, and Banks was scratched and Sullivan was substituted; and sometimes both names were scratched, and blank.

Q. And sometimes both candidates were scratched and neither substituted? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have had a good deal of experience in observing papers and have been around Courts for the last six years, haven't you? A. I have.

Q. You observed those ballots in that Seventh Precinct of the Thirty-third District pretty carefully, didn't you? A. I didn't examine them any more than that.

Q. Your attention was called to the fact that Sullivan's name was frequently erased with the pencil, did you? Did it appear to have been hurriedly or carefully? A. It appeared to be done hurriedly.

Q. Knowing the way ballots are counted, and what you know of their being counted by a Precinct Board, would it be your judgment that those ballots had been scratched before or after they had been counted and put on the string? A. I couldn't say.

Q. It appeared to have been done hurriedly? A. Yes, sir. I couldn't tell whether those ballots had been scratched after they were strung.

Q. You have been present at Precinct Boards at the counting, haven't you? A. I have, a number of times.

Q. You know that they are taken out of the box by the Inspector, and after the preliminary counting and marking has taken place? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that they are laid on a board and counted immediately? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That they are then passed over on a board and put upon the string? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would it have been possible, after those ballots had been placed on the string and after they had been counted, to have made these erasures?

A. Would it have been possible?

Q. Yes, sir. A. Certainly.

Q. And if they had been so done they would have been done hastily and incautiously? A. Yes, sir; that was about the way they appeared to be.

Q. If Mr. Dykeman, a Democratic watcher, had sat and watched those ballots after they had been counted, and had had a pencil in his hand, he would have had an opportunity to do just this kind of work, wouldn't he? A. The caller?

Q. No. After they had been counted and gone on the string. A. Yes, sir.

By MR. CLUNIE: Say that in a precinct there is a Board of Election officers, one of them is engaged in calling tickets off. You know how they call always. A. Yes, sir.

Q. The man who is calling tickets was detected in the act of calling off on a ticket the name of Banks where the name of Sullivan was? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Another officer in the same precinct is detected in the act of tallying votes cast for Sullivan for Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Another man is a member of the Board—Republican member, who has only lived in the precinct twenty-nine or thirty days. He testified he came in there to have some sport, and they are all Republicans. Would you say that that work which you say is queer work was done by those people around, in your opinion? A. I don't know. They might have stood in together, a couple of them.

Q. What is your opinion? A. That is my opinion.

Q. That it was done by them, and they stood in together? A. Yes, sir; I think it would be very easy.

By MR. DORN: Suppose that there was a Board composed equally of Republicans and Democrats in that precinct, and suppose that at a certain time there was a very active and able worker for the Democratic party who had received ten dollars for his services on that day, and that during the time the Republicans were out of the room temporarily that this man Dykeman handled the ballots, and that afterwards there were found to be erased which would operate in favor of the Democratic party upon a recount or retally. Who do you think would have made the erasures? A. I don't think it was the Republican's work. They couldn't do it very well if they weren't in the room.

J. P. CHADWICK.

A witness called for contestant, was duly sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: Mr. Chadwick, will you please take a piece of paper and write your name and the name of Davies, Page, and Russell for me? Answer—Yes, I will. [Does so.]

Q. I would like to have it in ink. Write Laumeister's name, too. Write the two words "Democratic tickets." [Witness does so.]

Q. Now, write the words "Yourself and the other nominees." [Witness does so.]

Q. What is your full name? A. James P. Chadwick.

Q. Where do you live, sir? A. Where do I live now?

Q. Where did you live at the time of election, and where do you live now? A. I lived, at the time of election, 1720 Hyde.

Q. How long had you lived there? A. About three years and a half, I guess.

Q. What precinct is that? A. The Fifth Precinct.

Q. Of what district? A. The Thirty-fourth District.

Q. That is in the Twenty-first Senatorial District, is it not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You lived there at the time of election, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where were you on election day? A. I was in the polling place.

Q. Where was that situated? A. Broadway and Hyde.

Q. What was your business there? A. Supervisor of Election.

Q. Were you a Marshal or Supervisor? A. Supervisor.

Q. You were a United States Supervisor of Election? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know Mr. Banks? A. I know him slightly.

Q. How long have you known him? A. He is in the same business I am. I have known him ten or a dozen years.

Q. You have known him how long? A. About ten years.

Q. Did you know him at the time he was a candidate for State Senator from the Twenty-first Senatorial District? A. I did not know it until I saw it in the paper.

Q. You did not know that he was a candidate prior to that time? A. I heard it talked of.

Q. What are your politics? A. Republican.

Q. You are a Republican? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You saw in the paper that Mr. Banks had received the nomination for Senator of the Twenty-first District, did you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you call on him then? A. I did not.

Q. How long after you saw it in the paper did you see Mr. Banks? A. I don't remember. I believe I met him one evening. He came down Leavenworth Street and I was standing at Broadway and Leavenworth, and talked with him a little while.

Q. What did you say to him? A. I wished him success, and that is about all.

Q. What did he say to you? A. He thanked me, and went on down the street; I don't know where he went.

Q. That was all that occurred? A. That was all.

Q. There was nothing said at that time about your using your influence in his behalf? A. Not a word.

Q. When did you see him again? A. I suppose I saw him several times before the election.

Q. You suppose you saw him several times before the election? A. I met him at different places down town, or corner of Leavenworth and Hyde Streets.

Q. Did you have any talks with him? A. I might have bid him the time of day, but that is about all.

Q. Did you have any talks with him in relation to his candidacy for Senator? A. How do you mean?

Q. Did he tell you then that he was a candidate, and that he wanted you to get out and work for him? A. He was already a candidate.

Q. Did Banks tell you that: did he say, "I am a candidate for State Senator against Johnny Sullivan: I want you to get out and work for me." Did anything of that kind occur? A. He had no reason to tell me.

Q. I ask you what he did? A. No, he never asked me to work for him.

Q. What did he say to you the second time? A. I don't know.

Q. You don't know what he said the second time? A. I know he never asked me to do anything for him.

Q. He didn't ask you to get out and fight for him? A. He knew I was a Republican. I didn't take any particular interest in his fight.

Q. Did you have a third conversation with him? A. I told you I had six or seven.

Q. You have given us two now. Give us the next one. A. I never was in one conversation that lasted over two or three minutes with him.

Q. Did you and he ever talk as to what he would do for you if he was elected Senator? A. I did not.

Q. Did he ever tell you he would put you in the Sheriff's office? A. He did not.

Q. Did any one on his behalf tell you? A. No, sir.

Q. He never said that? A. No, sir.

Q. Did any one on his behalf? A. No, sir.

Q. You have not written any letters to any one stating that? A. No, sir.

Q. You haven't written any letters to any one? A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. You are sure of that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You state that at no time Banks asked you to work for him for State Senator? A. He did not.

Q. You were a member of the Board of Election? A. I suppose I was, to that extent.

Q. What do you mean? A. I suppose as Supervisor of Election, I was supposed to see a fair count, and I merely had a voice in the Electors and Congressmen.

Q. That was all you had to do, was to see they had a fair count, wasn't it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You knew that at the time it was counted, did you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You knew you had no voice in the Board other than that? A. I knew I had no voice, other than seeing that everything went on fairly.

Q. Don't you know you had no voice in that? A. Yes, sir; outside of Congressmen and Electors.

Q. Didn't you know you had no right to count votes or read them? A. That I don't know.

Q. You knew it, didn't you? A. I don't know it now, and I did not know it then.

Q. Did you count any tickets or read them, in the Fifth Precinct of the Thirty-fourth Assembly District, on the election held on the sixth of November, 1888, did you really count or read any tickets there? A. I don't know whether I did.

Q. Will you swear you did not? A. I cannot remember. There were several people counted; one or two people called off ballots; I cannot remember.

Q. Don't you think that would be a matter you could remember, if you sat down in a chair and took a ballot from a man and read it all the way through? You don't think you would remember that? A. There was so much happened there in two or three days that I can't remember all that happened.

Q. There were a good many candidates on that ticket, were there not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. It would take you some time to read a ticket, wouldn't it? A. I suppose so.

Q. And you cannot recollect whether you read any tickets there or not? A. I cannot recollect.

Q. What is your recollection? A. I may have, and I may not.

Q. What is your recollection of it now? A. It is that I did not.

Q. You are not positive of it? A. No, sir.

Q. One way or the other? A. No, sir.

Q. Don't you know you did read it and that some one stopped you? Don't you remember that? Don't that recall it to your mind? A. Come to think of it, there was one evening there that I was asked to call off a few ballots, and a man by the name of Potter made an objection to the Supervisor calling off the ballots.

Q. Then you did call a few? A. No; I believe I sat down to call and he made an objection.

Q. At any other time did you attempt to call, when Potter was not there? A. I don't recollect.

Q. You recollect distinctly having sat down to call on that one occasion? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Anything else you cannot recollect about? A. I cannot.

Q. About five P. M., one of the days during which the count of the votes cast in the Fifth Precinct of the Thirty-fourth District had been going on, while Mr. Dunn and Mr. Conway were Clerks, didn't you sit down and call off the ballots while people in the room were drunk and asleep?

MR. DORN: I ask that he be required to be definite in this; that he specify whether he means the Board of Election were asleep, or the bystanders were asleep and drunk.

MR. CLUNIE: I decline to allow Mr. Dorn to instruct me how to ask the questions.

A. I don't remember.

Q. You don't remember that? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you remember the fact of the people being drunk in the room? A. What time?

Q. Any day the count was going on? A. There was one day four people came into the polling place that were drunk; they were not members of the Board, though.

Q. Was there any liquor used by the Board? A. I don't remember seeing any.

Q. Did you use any while you were there? A. Use any liquor?

Q. Yes. A. No.

Q. Did any of the Board use it? A. I didn't see any.

Q. You are sure about the fact of four people coming in drunk? A. I won't say they were drunk; there was one of them drunk.

Q. You are certain there were four people? A. They were a little bit under the influence of liquor.

Q. I refer to the number of people. You are certain that there were four people? A. Yes; there might have been six.

Q. Why did you say four? A. Well, I can remember four distinctly.

Q. Do you remember who was calling when those four people came in? A. I do not.

Q. Was Frank Dunn calling, and Fred. Conway, or were they tallying?

A. I know they were Clerks there, but I don't remember what time they were on or what time they were off.

Q. You don't remember who was tallying when this thing occurred—that these people came in drunk? A. I do not.

Q. I would ask you if it is not the fact that at the time those four people came in that you say were drunk, and while they were in the room, if you did not sit down in the place of the man who was calling ballots, and for some time there commence and take a Democratic ballot, for instance, and where the name of Sullivan was printed on, if you did not call the name of Banks right along? A. No.

Q. You are sure of that, are you? A. Sure of what?

Q. That you did not do that? A. I don't remember calling off the ballots at all. If I did, I know I wouldn't call them off wrongly, if I did call them off.

Q. But you remember distinctly you did not call any ballots off wrong, but you don't remember if you called them off right or not? A. I don't remember whether I called off any or not; but if I did call off any, I called them off right.

Q. When that occurred, didn't you commence at the head of the ticket and call the Congressman wrong, then called Banks wrong, then called Davies wrong, then called Launneister wrong, then called Russell wrong, then called Page wrong, and then let the rest of the ticket go in as it was? A. No, sir.

Q. You did not do that? A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't you do that to the number of twenty-six votes? Didn't you call twenty-six tickets that the name of Sullivan was on, for Banks, and that they so tallied in that precinct at that time? A. I did not.

Q. Did you have a pen at that time, or a pencil that day, do you remember? A. I don't believe I had a pencil at all.

Q. Have you got a gold pencil in your possession? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you have one in your possession that day? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you have a gold pen? A. No, sir.

Q. You didn't have any of those in your possession at all? A. No, sir.

Q. On twenty-six tickets didn't you scratch the name of Mr. Sullivan off and insert the name of Mr. Banks with a gold pencil? A. I did not.

Q. With a pen, then? A. No, sir.

Q. That you held between your first and second fingers? A. No, sir.

Q. You didn't do that? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see Mr. Banks after the election? A. I have seen him a dozen times.

Q. Immediately after the election, and after the count was over? A. I believe I saw him the next night. He came down. I believe I congratulated him, and he said, "Sullivan says he is going to contest my election." That is about all he said.

Q. Where did that occur? A. I think it was on Broadway and Leavenworth somewhere.

Q. Wasn't it Broadway and Hyde? A. It might have been.

Q. Wasn't it in the saloon there? A. I don't think it was in the saloon at all.

Q. Didn't you and Mr. Banks have a conversation, shortly after the count was over, in a saloon corner of Broadway and Hyde, and didn't you there inform Mr. Banks of these facts? A. I did not.

Q. Didn't you and Mr. Banks have a drink there shortly after the election? A. I don't remember ever having a drink with Mr. Banks in my life.

Q. Will you swear you did not? A. I will not swear to it, but I am pretty positive.

Q. Will you swear you and Banks didn't have a drink out in that saloon, corner of Broadway and Hyde Street, after the election? A. I am pretty positive we did not.

Q. You are pretty positive that you did not, but you won't swear on it? A. No, because I can't remember what happened two or three weeks ago.

Q. There is a saloon corner of Broadway and Hyde, isn't there? A. Yes, sir; I go there occasionally.

Q. Whose saloon is that? A. It is kept by a man by the name of H. A. Wendt.

Q. You are usually there in the mornings, aren't you? A. Well, I am sometimes there in the morning, sometimes in the evening, and sometimes on Sunday.

Q. Don't you make it a business usually to go in there and get a drink about eight o'clock in the morning? A. I do not.

Q. You have never done that at all? A. I did about a year ago, when I lived at 1720 Hyde.

Q. Since the election, haven't you done it? A. I have been in there several times.

Q. About that time? A. Yes; I have been in there different times, no regular time, within the last year.

Q. You say you have never written any letters since the election? A. I have not.

Q. To any person? A. I have not.

Q. You know Mr. J. J. Sullivan, don't you? A. I know him by sight; yes, sir.

Q. You know who he is? A. I know that he was running for Senator.

Q. Did you ever write any letters to him since the election? A. I did not.

Q. Look at that letter [showing], and tell me if that is your writing or not? A. No, sir.

Q. You swear positively you did not write that letter? A. No, sir.

MR. CLUNIE: We offer that letter in evidence.

MR. DORN: We object to the introduction of that letter, on the ground that there is no proof of the authenticity of the letter or of the author of the letter.

MR. CLUNIE: I offer it. I want the reporter to take it down.

Q. Did you write a letter in the following words to the Hon. J. J. Sullivan, Esq.:

SAN FRANCISCO, December 7, 1888.

Hon. J. J. SULLIVAN, Esq.,

DEAR SIR: Hearing a rumor to the effect that you were going to have a recount or contest for your seat in the next Senate (for it is yours), I will impart to you a little knowledge that I possess as to how the count was conducted in the Fifth Precinct of the Thirty-third District. Rumor had it (and I think it is the truth), that Mr. Banks, if elected, was to put a man named Chadwick in the Sheriff's office, if he was elected. That was right enough, and this man Chadwick worked hard to get votes for Banks. Well, all right, still. The polls closed and the count commenced. A man named Durkee calling them off until 10 p. m. Then a man, Bellinton or Bellingham, called off until 3 p. m. Then he and Mr. Potter went off until 5 p. m. I don't know where they went, and then commenced the dirty work. A young man named Frank Dunn and Fred. Conway were Clerks. It was then Chadwick sat down and began to call off the ballots. There were four people drunk and asleep in the room, and I myself was asleep with one eye open. Although not an election officer, I was interested in the Superintendent of Streets, Mr. Ashworth, and was afraid of what Chadwick might do. I got careless. But Democratic tickets, when in this man's hands, were in a bad place. He started in from Congressman and then called Banks for Senator. The next was Laumeister, the next Davies, the next Russell, and the next Page, and then let the rest of the ticket go in as it was. Well, yourself and the other nominees mentioned, each lost twenty-six votes. He made the scratches and put Republican names with a short gold pen held between his first and second fingers. Banks knows it. Tell him point blank, accuse him of knowing it, and tell him that you know that he and Chadwick had a drink and laughed over it at Broadway and Hyde Streets, and see the effect. Examine the ballots and on twenty-six of them you will swear the names were written by the same hand above mentioned. Now, I would advise you to make a quiet investigation in this way: These people are generally there about eight o'clock in the morning. Accuse Banks point blank of knowing of this affair, and have a couple of men to watch his movements, and also have some one quietly say to Chadwick that he robbed the Democratic nominees for Senator, Congress, Sheriff, County Clerk, Recorder, and District Attorney, twenty-six votes apiece, and have a man watch his movements after that, and see the result. Tell them both that you know positively that it was done, and you will see that one will be trying to find the other to form a plan of defense. I live in the precinct and will see the effect in Wendt's saloon, and will give you the points at the proper time; if necessary, I will go before a Senate Committee. Follow my instructions.

A REPUBLICAN.

Q. Did you write that letter? A. I did not.

Q. You did not write that letter? A. I did not.

Q. And that is not your letter that I showed you? A. Is that it?

Q. That is the letter [showing]. A. No, sir.

Q. And you did not write that? A. No, sir.

MR. DORN: I ask to see the letter.

MR. CLUNIE: And I decline to let you see it at this time.

Q. Is that your writing on this envelope [showing]? A. That is not.

Q. You are positive of that? A. Positive of that.

MR. DORN: Will you let me see that?

MR. CLUNIE: Yes, I will let you see the envelope.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: You say that to the best of your knowledge you did not call the ballots at all in that precinct? A. I did not.

Q. How about the statement in this letter? A. The man must have been crazy, whoever it was, I think.

Q. What is that? A. I think the man must have been crazy that wrote it.

Q. Did anything of the kind ever happen in that precinct? A. He was right as far as Mr. Durkee going off at twelve o'clock and Jim Bellingham, the Democratic Inspector took his place and he called off the ballots until about six the next morning, with the exception of perhaps a half an hour's time the Board adjourned to take a rest. That might have been fifteen minutes.

Q. During the time the Board adjourned did they leave the room, or leave the ballots in anybody's else charge? A. They did not.

Q. They simply rested and remained at their post? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Having thought it all over did you call off any ballots at any time? A. I don't believe I did.

Q. If you did call off any ballots at any time, either Republican or Democratic, did you call them off as they appeared? A. If I did, I should of called them off properly as they appeared.

Q. Did you have any short or long gold pen there between your first and second fingers, or any other fingers? A. No, sir; I never had one in my life.

Q. Did you at any time change, or alter, or interfere with any of the ballots in that precinct? A. I did not.

Q. How long have you known Mr. Banks? A. Do you mean know him by sight?

Q. No; personally, to talk with him? A. I can remember him for ten years.

Q. Have you ever been what you would call a friend of Banks, on personal friendly relations with him, or was your acquaintance a friendly speaking acquaintance? A. Nothing more than an acquaintance.

Q. Had you any special or any other kind of interest in his election? A. I hadn't, any more than he was a Republican.

Q. What business are you in? A. The architectural business.

Q. Mr. Banks is in the same business, is he not? A. He is.

Q. Is that the way in which you happened to know him? A. That is the way I have known him.

Q. You, as an architect, simply knew that there was another architect by the name of Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was about the sum and substance of your acquaintance with him? A. It is.

Q. And according to your best memory you have never had the friendship or friendly relations with him, before or after election, to ever take a drink with him in a saloon? A. I have not. I can't remember ever taking a drink with Mr. Banks.

Redirect Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: Where do you reside? Answer—I reside at 1720 Hyde.

Q. Are you working now? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where do you work? A. I work for myself.

Q. Where do you work? A. No. 1640 Vallejo.

Q. Where do you reside? A. No. 1640 Vallejo.

Q. You said in your direct examination a little while ago that you had never taken a drink in that place since you moved out there a year ago; isn't that your testimony? A. I did not. I have drank in there inside of a year.

Q. When did you move out? A. A year ago.

Q. When? A. I moved some time after election. What day it was I don't remember.

Q. After what election? A. After the last election.

Q. You moved on to Vallejo Street after the last election? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then when you said about a year ago you were mistaken. You did testify in your direct examination that you have not taken a drink since you moved in there about a year ago? A. I said I went in there regularly every morning about eight o'clock, a year ago when I lived in the precinct.

Q. When did you leave there? A. I lived in that district.

Q. Where? A. No. 1720 Hyde.

Q. And you moved into this district since election day? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who were you rooming with on the day of election? A. With my father.

Q. Where does your father live? A. No. 1640 Vallejo.

Q. At the time of the election were you rooming with your father at 1640 Vallejo? A. I was rooming at 1720 Hyde. I said I was—

Q. [Interrupting.] You did not swear a minute ago you were rooming at 1640 Vallejo Street, with your father? A. No. I was living at the time of election at 1720 Hyde; I am living at 1640 Vallejo now.

Q. Where does your father live now? A. At 1640 Vallejo. He lived at 1720 Hyde before election.

Q. How long before? A. I guess three or four years.

Q. How long before the election did he move? A. He did not move before the election, he moved afterwards.

Q. Then at the time of election he was living on Hyde Street, was he?
A. Yes, sir; and so was I.

Q. And you were living there? A. Yes, sir.

By MR. DORN: You lived with your father on Hyde Street three or four years? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Up to the date subsequent to the last election? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then you moved with your father to live on Vallejo Street, where you are now living? A. Yes, sir.

HENRY McLOUGHLIN.

A witness on behalf of contestant, sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

MR. CLUNIE: Mr. McLoughlin, where do you reside? Answer—I resided at 37 Ninth Street up to the first of this month. I ain't stopping any place particular; that is, until to-day.

Q. You were in jail until a few days ago, were you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In the city prison here? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In whose company was you? Who was there with you? A. There was a man named James Murray.

Q. James Murray was there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You and Murray were together, were you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. During the time you and Murray were there, did Murray have any visitors? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who called on him? A. There was some of his relations.

Q. Was this gentleman there [indicating Mr. Banks, the respondent]?
A. No, sir.

Q. Was the tall gentleman there [indicating]? A. Yes, sir; the big man with a beard. He said his name was Mike Smith.

Q. Did Smith and Murray have any talk? A. They had three or four different conversations.

Q. Did you hear any of the conversations? A. A friend of mine was speaking to me. I heard the two of them conversing, and I heard Smith asking Murray if he had those letters burned up, and Murray said, "They are all right," like that.

Q. What was that? A. Smith asked Murray if he had those letters burned up which he got, and Murray said "They are all right; they are all right." Like that. That is all I heard. I was sitting on the bench.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Do you know what letters he was talking about? A. No: I don't know what letters they were referring to.

Q. You don't know what they referred to? A. No; until Murray told me.

Q. Did you think it was any of your business to listen to other people's conversation? A. I couldn't help listening. No, sir; I don't think it is any of my business to listen to other people's conversation.

JAMES MURRAY.

A witness on behalf of contestant, sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: Mr. Murray, where do you reside? Answer—No. 306 Filbert Street.

Q. You were confined in San Quentin at one time, were you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know a gentleman by the name of Leale—Captain Leale? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whether or not he is related to Mr. Banks? A. Yes, sir; he is a brother-in-law, I believe.

Q. During the time you were in San Quentin did you know of the fact of W. O. Banks having been a candidate for State Senator? A. Yes, sir.

Q. From the Twenty-first Senatorial District? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you ascertain that fact? A. Captain Leale came up and spoke of it to me, and asked me to do what I could.

Q. Just state what occurred between you and Captain Leale.

By MR. DORN [interrupting]: Where did this occur? A. In San Quentin.

Q. Who was present? A. Captain Leale and me.

Q. Nobody else? A. No, sir.

Q. Nobody else heard the conversation? A. Not that I know of; no.

Q. Was there anybody near enough to have heard it? A. There may have been.

Q. You don't know? A. I don't know.

Q. What part of the prison did it occur in? A. Outside the wall, in the officers' kitchen.

Q. Do you remember the date? A. I believe it was on the seventeenth day of October.

Q. What fixed that date in your mind so accurately? A. Because there was a letter written out of there on the eighteenth day of October, and it was the day before the letter was written that we had the conversation, me and Captain Leale.

Q. What fixes the date of the letter in your memory? A. Because I saw the letter written, and that is what makes me know and makes me sure of it.

Q. You did not write the letter? A. I did write one, but that letter was written by another party.

Q. What fixes that letter in your memory so accurately to remember the date of it? A. Because I saw the date of it; I was sitting there at the time.

Q. And you remember seeing the date? A. Certainly.

By MR. CLUNIE: Just state the conversation between you and Captain Leale. A. Captain Leale come up to me and he asked me if I would try and do what I could for my friends to help his brother-in-law.

Q. Did he state who his brother-in-law was? A. Why, certainly; he told me his brother-in-law was W. O. Banks, running for Senator, and told me all about the facts, one thing and another, and told me I wouldn't lose nothing by it; and told me it was to my benefit to do what I could.

Q. Did he ask you if you had friends? A. He knew I had friends.

Q. Did he specify who they were? A. Certainly; he knew who my friends were.

Q. Did he ask you about any friend in particular? A. Why, certainly; he told me to write to my brothers.

Q. He told you to write to your brother? A. Certainly.

Q. Any one else? A. Not in particular. Any of my friends.

Q. He told you it would be to your benefit? A. If I would write to my brother or any of my friends.

Q. And get them to vote for Banks? A. And give them a vote for W. O. Banks.

Q. What is Captain Leale's business? A. He is Captain of the steamer running from San Francisco to San Quentin.

Q. That occurred on the seventeenth of October? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In pursuance to that did you write any letter or cause any letters to be written? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you look at that letter [showing]. Is that your writing? A. No, sir. That is a friend of mine.

Q. What is his name? A. A young man named August Martole.

Q. Did he write that at your request? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What caused you to request him to write it? This request of Captain Leale's? A. Yes, in favor of Captain Leale, certainly.

MR. CLUNIE: We offer this letter in evidence.

MR. DORN: We object, as incompetent and irrelevant.

[Here counsel for contestant reads the letter as follows:

SAN QUENTIN, MARIN COUNTY, October, 1888.

DEAR BROTHER: It is so long since I heard from you, or you from I, that I thought I would go you these few lines. It is only when I want a favor from you that I think of writing to you. I have a friend over here, a free man, and he has treated me very good at different times and he asked me would I try and get some of my friends in the city, and I told him I would do what I best could. Well, this fellow has a friend in the city that is running for State Senator on the Republican ticket, and his name is W. O. Banks, and if you can do the things for him I hope that you and Lewis will get what you can for him. Don't forget it—the name. Well, that is about all I have to say in regard to politics.]

MR. CLUNIE: Then it goes on, and that is all that there is about politics.

Q. You wrote that letter in pursuance of that request? A. No, sir; I did not write that letter at all. That was the letter this friend of mine wrote.

Q. You caused it to be written? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How was it sent? A. By Captain Leale.

Q. To whom was it sent? A. To my brother.

Q. It did not go through the regular channel? A. No, sir.

Q. How was it sent—by Captain Leale? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Isn't there a rule over there it should go through the prison? A. Yes, sir; but it did not this time.

Q. In this case it went through the private messenger? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was that letter written to? A. That letter was written to this August Martole's brother.

Q. Was it Martole or Morton? A. His right name was Martole, but his prison name was Morton.

Q. Look at that envelope [showing]. A. That is his brother's.

Q. [Reading] "Mr. George Morton, 3181 Broadway Street, San Francisco, California." It is dated as being mailed at San Francisco.

Q. Did you write a letter yourself? A. Yes, sir.

- Q. Who was that letter written to? A. Written to my brother.
- Q. Will you look at that letter [showing] and see whether that is the letter or not? A. Yes, that is the letter.
- Q. That is your own handwriting? A. That is in my own handwriting.
- Q. You wrote that letter in pursuance of Captain Leale's request? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And sent it to your brother? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Your brother lived where? A. No. 306 Filbert.
- Q. In the Twenty-first Senatorial District? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Did you write any other letters? A. I did.
- Q. This man Morton was living in the district? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. He had a brother in the district? A. Yes, sir; around there.
- Q. There in that district? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And he had a brother living in that district? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Is that dated the first? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. It was before the election you sent this letter, was it? A. Yes, sir.
- MR. CLUNIE [reading]:

SAN QUENTIN, November 1, 1888.

MY DEAR BROTHER JOHN:

I write this letter hoping to find you and all the family well and in good health, as it needs me at present. Dear brother, I want you to do me a favor, and I also want Johnnie Carey and Charlie [somebody's name is torn off] to do me the favor, also. I suppose you will think it str of me in interesting myself in politics, and I still be a prisoner; but in my case it is for my own——.

THE WITNESS [interrupting]: For my own benefit.

MR. DORN: I suggest that the letter be read.

THE WITNESS: It is "interest."

MR. CLUNIE: It is torn off there. [Continuing reading.] You are well aware that I am in position where I come in contact with the free people all the time, so now, my dear brother, I will tell you what I want you to do for me. In the first place, I have a friend who has done many little favors for me since I have been here. And now I want you to help me, as I am looking towards the future. Captain Leale's brother-in-law is running for Senator on the Republican ticket. I want you to put in a vote for him, W. O. Banks, and I also want Johnnie Carey and Charlie to do the same, and that will be doing me a great favor.

That is all I care about. There is a lot more in the letter there.

MR. DORN: If it goes in the testimony I insist that it all go in.

By MR. CLUNIE: That letter was written also in response to these requests of Captain Leale's, was it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was done with that letter? A. That was given to Captain Leale, and he brought it to my house and gave it to my brother.

Q. Did that letter go through the prison? A. It was supposed to go through, but it did not go through.

Q. It did not, as a matter of fact, go through as prescribed by the regulations? A. No, sir; it did not go through.

Q. Did you ever meet Mr. Banks? A. Yes, sir; I met him.

Q. Where did you meet him? A. I met him three days after election.

Q. Where? A. In San Quentin.

Q. You did not meet him before the election? A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. Your term expired when? A. On the fourth day of December.

Q. That was not a few days after election then, as they claim? A. No, sir.

Q. It was pretty near one month after election? A. One month.

Q. Did Captain Leale report to you from time to time after he had seen your relatives? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You had frequent talks with him, did you? A. All the time; yes, sir.

Q. And he repeatedly requested you to carry this on? A. Certainly.

Q. You say he repeatedly told you when you got out they would take care of you? A. Why, certainly. He gave me all the promises in the world.

Q. Captain Leale has free access to the prison there? A. Certainly he has.

Q. He has free access to the prisoners over there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And carried letters out? A. Not if they knew it.

Q. And does he carry them out? A. Yes, sir; at least he carried these out. I don't know what else he has done.

Q. Do you know a man named Smith? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Since you have got out of San Quentin you were rearrested? A. I was.

Q. You were confined in the City Prison? A. Yes, sir.

Q. During that time did Mr. Smith call on you? A. Yes, sir; he did.

Q. Did you and he have any talk about these letters then? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was it? A. He asked if I had these letters burned up, and I told him they were; I told him as much as that they were burned; I told him they were all right.

Q. It was in consideration of these promises that were made, to look out for you in the future, that you wrote these letters, was it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it was that that influenced you in all your acts? A. Yes, sir.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: You say in your letter you had a friend named Captain Leale? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you consider Captain Leale your friend? A. I did at that time.

Q. Why? A. Why?

Q. Yes, sir. Hadn't he done a great many favors for you? A. Had he done a great many favors for me?

Q. Yes, sir? A. Well, no; no as——. [Pausing.]

Q. Hadn't he been kind to you on a great number of occasions? A. No, not any more than I had to him.

Q. Then why should you call him your friend? A. Why shouldn't he?

Q. That treats you kind? A. That treats me as I do him.

Q. And he had done favors for you? A. He may have, but I have done favors for him.

Q. And you felt that your obligations to him had been entirely discharged? A. We stood just about even.

Q. Then you did not consider these letters were friendly on your part to Captain Leale? It was simply mercenary, for hope of reward? A. No, sir. He asked me for these letters.

Q. [Interrupting.] I say it was merely mercenary on your part? A. Certainly.

Q. You were simply selling your influence for whatever it was worth? A. Certainly.

Q. And that was the only motive that actuated you? A. Certainly.

Q. You have been arrested since you got out of San Quentin? A. Certainly. I had to be over there to write those letters.

Q. How long after you were out of San Quentin were you rearrested? A. Eh?

Q. When were you discharged from the State Prison? A. On the fourth of December.

Q. When were you rearrested? A. I believe it was about the twenty-second of December.

Q. What were you confined in San Quentin Prison for? A. For burglary.

Q. For what were you rearrested? A. It was aiding a prisoner to escape from an officer; it was disturbing the peace; that was it.

MR. CLUNIE: I want to say that you can, as a matter of right, refuse to answer any question that may criminate you.

By MR. DORN: You were rearrested for disturbing the peace? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Wern't you rearrested for assault to rob? A. I refuse to answer; I decline to answer.

MR. DORN: That will not criminate him; that will not rearrest him.

A. [Continuing.] Yes, sir; I was arrested for assault to rob, and I was dismissed.

Q. Then why did you say awhile ago that it was for disturbing the peace? A. I had been arrested for disturbing the peace.

Q. You have been under arrest twice since you got out. then? A. Yes, sir

Q. Then you were arrested for assisting a prisoner to escape? A. I was arrested for disturbing the peace and for assisting a prisoner to escape; that was one charge.

Q. That is two charges? A. Well, it was at one time.

Q. You have been arrested on three charges since you got out? A. I was arrested twice.

Q. You have been arrested on three charges since you got out? A. You can call them three charges if you like.

Q. And before you were out of San Quentin you were arrested on three charges? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was your attorney in these cases? A. What cases have you reference to?

Q. In these criminal cases for which you were under arrest? A. I believe it was Clarence Gray.

Q. Was Clarence, then, your attorney in all three of these cases? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In all three of them? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What promises have been made to you as an inducement for your testimony here? A. No promises whatever.

Q. Haven't you been told if you testified right that these charges would not be pressed? A. No, sir.

Q. You have not? A. No, sir.

Q. Who gave bail for you? A. There was no bail given for me. I was dismissed.

Q. Are you dismissed now? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And there is no charge against you? A. There is a charge of disturbing the peace against me, but my mother went bail for that.

Q. And that is the only charge against you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know who employed Clarence Gray? A. Yes, sir: my mother did.

Q. Do you know where she got the money to employ him? A. She got it from her own people.

Q. How do you know it? A. Because I have got cousins and brothers who are working all the time, and they gave it to her.

Q. Did you see them give it to her? A. It won't require me to see that in order to know they gave it to her.

Q. How do you know they gave it to her? A. I know they work, and I know they gave her the money. I ain't there watching around to see what they give her, and what they don't give her.

[Here the witness was temporarily withdrawn, and a recess was taken until 2 o'clock P. M.]

AFTERNOON SESSION.

JAMES MURRAY.

Recalled for further Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: You said in your testimony this morning you had had a conversation with a gentleman by the name of Mike Smith while you were confined in the city prison? Answer—Yes, sir.

Q. Is this the gentleman you had that conversation with [indicating]? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did Mr. Smith happen to go there? A. I don't know how he came, whether to see me or not, but he came in there anyway.

Q. Didn't your brother ask him to come there? A. Not that I am aware of.

Q. Didn't he say your brother had asked him to come there? A. Not that I am aware of; no.

Q. Just stop and think, now, a minute. All I want is to get the truth, and of course you can stop and consider until you remember. A. If he told me that my brothers went to see him I don't remember it.

Q. Then you don't know whether, when he came in, he said that your brother had asked him to come and see you or not? A. No, I don't remember.

Q. Did you ever leave a note anywhere for Mr. Smith to call and see you? A. I left a note for Captain Smith. I left a note for him to call and see me at my house.

Q. When was that? A. It was about three weeks ago last Monday, I believe.

Q. Was that after your arrest? A. No, sir.

Q. Before your arrest? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Before either of your arrests? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You left a note for him where? A. I believe it was in the Mint Saloon.

Q. And you asked him to come and see you at your house, did you? A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. What did you ask him? A. I asked him if he wanted to see me, he could either call or send for me.

Q. Didn't you state in your note which you left at the Mint Saloon that you wanted to see Captain Smith, and ask him to come and see you, and didn't you further state that people had been to you in the interests of Mr. Sullivan, the contestant in this case, and offered you certain inducements for the testimony in a particular direction, and stating that you wanted to see Mr. Smith relative to the matter? A. Not that I am aware of.

Q. Didn't you write that letter? A. I wrote a letter; yes, sir.

Q. Didn't you write the letter I have just narrated to you? A. Not that first; I don't believe I did.

Q. What did you say? A. I might have told him that I would like him to send word to me if he wanted to see me.

Q. Didn't you state in that letter that three different parties had been to you asking you to testify? A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. In the letter you did not say that? A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. You didn't say anything about that? A. About testifying? I don't believe that word was in it.

Q. Well, it meant you were expected to be a witness in this case? A. I didn't say anything about a witness; no, sir.

Q. What did you say in the letter? A. I never wrote a letter; but I cannot say for sure.

Q. Wait a moment. You said you did write a letter? A. I admit I did write a letter; yes, sir.

Q. You did, didn't you? A. I did; yes, sir.

Q. Now, you did write a letter? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was in the letter? A. I could not explain. I couldn't go over the particulars of it, nohow.

Q. You couldn't explain? A. No, sir.

Q. What did you want of Smith? A. I didn't want to see him in particular; but I wanted to see him—

Q. If you didn't want to see him, why did you leave the letter for him? A. I left the letter referring to Mr. Banks, because I was promised Mr. Banks would do what he could for me, getting some work or another.

Q. Did you say anything of that kind in your letter? A. It meant the same thing.

Q. Did you say anything of that kind in your letter? A. I told him I called on Captain Leale a couple of times, and also on Mr. Banks, and didn't see either of them.

Q. Didn't you say in the letter you had been approached by people in the interest of Mr. Sullivan, to give in your testimony the contents of a letter which you had sent from San Quentin to your brothers? A. I don't think I mentioned anything about anything—

Q. [Interrupting.] Will you swear that you did not? A. As far as I know, I don't think I said anything like that.

Q. As far as you know you don't think you said anything like that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you swear now, and I ask you again, that you didn't say just exactly that? A. Exactly what?

Q. Didn't you say in the letter you had been approached by people in the interest of Mr. Sullivan, to give in your testimony the contents of a letter which you had sent from San Quentin to your brothers? A. I didn't mention Mr. Sullivan's name.

Q. Did you mention this contest? A. I don't believe I mentioned anything about the contest either.

Q. Did you mention any letter—anything about a letter which you sent from San Quentin to your brother? A. I may have mentioned that.

Q. Did you or not? A. I won't swear I did or did not.

Q. Did you ask in the letter to see Mr. Smith before you were able to testify one way or the other, or didn't you say in the letter you were afraid to testify according to the promises these people had made you? A. I didn't say anything about testifying either way.

Q. Didn't you ask Mr. Smith to call at 356 Lombard Street and see you? A. I asked him if he wanted to see me.

Q. You said nothing in that letter at all then about having been approached by people asking you to testify in this case? A. I may have said there were three or four parties come to me and spoke to me, but that is about all I did say.

Q. Didn't you say in that letter three or four parties had come to you in this case and they had held out inducements to you, and you wanted to indicate that fact to Mr. Smith? A. I didn't say nothing of the sort.

Q. You swear positively to that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you swear as positively to that as to anything else you have testified to? A. What did I testify to?

Q. You know what you testified to. You are as positive of this as you are of anything else? A. Of what?

Q. That you didn't say anything about going on the stand. A. I swore I didn't mention anything about a witness or contest or anything else; neither of those things were in the letter I wrote.

Q. You are just as positive of not saying anything about those things as you did of any other things you had given since you were on the stand? A. I don't know what I said.

Q. You are as positive of what you now state as you are of anything else you have stated? A. Yes, sir; I am positive that I did not mention nothing about the contest, or about anything in reference to that business. I might have said in the letter that there were two or three parties come to me.

Q. You say you did say to him that two or three parties had come to you? A. I might have said that; I won't be sure.

Q. What did they come to you about? A. I didn't say what they come to me about.

Q. You said just simply two or three parties had come to you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You didn't tell him what it was about at all? A. No, sir.

Q. You didn't say anything about what it was? A. No, sir.

Q. You are positive of that? A. I think I am.

Q. Do you swear to that positively? [Witness pauses.]

Q. Take all the time you want to. [After a pause.] Have you made up your mind yet? A. Well, as far as I can remember, that is all I mentioned; that there were three or four parties come to me. That is all; that is all I can remember of it.

Q. And you didn't say what they came to you about? A. Well, I may have—[Pausing.]

Q. As a matter of fact, was it true that three or four parties had come to you? A. I decline to answer that question.

THE COURT: Answer the question.

MR. DORN: Had they? A. What is it, again?

Q. I ask you who those parties were that had come to you? A. Who they were?

Q. Yes, sir. A. I don't see that I have to mention any names.

Q. I see that you have to mention the names.

THE COURT: Answer the question.

MR. DORN: Who were they, sir? A. Am I supposed to mention any names?

Q. Of course you are supposed to mention names.

THE COURT: Did you hear the question? A. Yes, sir.

THE COURT: Answer the question.

By MR. DORN: Who were they, sir? [A pause.] Give me their names. A. I can't remember their names.

Q. You can't remember the names? A. No, sir.

Q. Then why did you ask if you were supposed to give the names, and why did you hesitate that long before you replied? You knew the names a few moments ago? A. I didn't say any names. I said three or four parties. I thought it was not required.

Q. You did know their names? A. No, I didn't know their names.

Q. You can't tell any of them? A. I can't remember that, no.

Q. Do you mean to tell me under oath that within the last three weeks three men have approached you on this subject, and asked you to testify, and that you do not now remember their names? A. I only guess there were three parties, and I cannot tell what parties it was in particular.

Q. You look at me, and don't look at anybody else in the room. A. I am looking at you.

MR. DORN: I have seen several attempts to coach witnesses by bystanders in the room, and if it occurs again I shall certainly ask your honors to exclude the witnesses.

Q. Do you know a gentleman by the name of Collins, a Collector in the Harbor Commissioners? A. Yes, sir; I know him.

Q. You are acquainted with him? A. I know him; that is about all.

Q. Isn't he one of the men who approached you on this subject? A. No, sir; not that I know of.

Q. Have you had any conversation with Mr. Collins? A. No more than I had with anybody else.

Q. Have you seen him since you left San Quentin? A. I have seen him on several different occasions.

Q. Where did you see him? A. I might have seen him a dozen times.

Q. Where did you see him first? A. He is in the habit of going along that way when he goes to work.

Q. Where did you first have your conversation? A. The first time I saw him I think he was going down to work, passing along Filbert Street.

Q. What was your conversation with him? A. It was about one thing or another. I don't suppose that there was anything—nothing about politics.

Q. When was it you had your conversation with him about politics? A. Anything they would talk about politics I don't think it concerns this case.

Q. I think it concerns this case very materially. When was it you had your talk with him about politics? A. I might have talked—

Q. [Interrupting.] Don't tell me what you might have done, but tell me when it was. A. Oh, I ain't sure when it was.

Q. To the best of your knowledge when was it? A. It might have been about three weeks and a half ago.

Q. Where was it? A. Oh, on Telegraph Hill. I see him every day going down to work. We always talked.

Q. You are pretty friendly with him, aren't you? A. Oh, not friendly. Just so.

Q. What part of Telegraph Hill was this? A. Corner of Montgomery and Filbert.

Q. What time of day or night was it? A. It was at noon time, when he was going to lunch, and he had to come back.

Q. Who was present? A. I don't suppose there was anybody present. There might be and there might not.

Q. What did he say to you about this case? A. What case? This case going on now?

Q. Yes, sir; this case I am talking about. A. I don't remember him saying anything about this case.

Q. Your memory is a blank on that subject, is it? A. I don't remember it being a blank, but I don't remember it.

Q. If he said anything you proceeded to forget it, did you? A. I don't remember whether he did or not. I don't think so. I told you I don't remember his saying anything.

Q. Why did you say you had a conversation with him about politics? A. It was about other matters; it was about O'Donnell.

Q. You said awhile ago you had a conversation with him about this case. What was it? A. I didn't say anything of the sort. I said I had a talk with him about politics. I didn't say anything about this case.

Q. Did he ever tell you anything about this contest? A. Not as I know of.

Q. What did he ask you about your testimony in this matter? A. He didn't ask me, I don't think, about any testimony in this matter.

Q. Who else talked with you about this case? A. About what case?

Q. Don't say to me, "What case." You know what case we are talking about. A. My brothers and my cousin.

MR. DORN: I ask that this witness be required to answer the question and not to resort to any such impertinence. A. [Continuing.] My brothers and my cousins talked about the case to me.

Q. What did they say to you about it? A. They talked; they were down here on the stand day before yesterday, and one thing and another.

Q. At the time you sent that letter to Mike Smith you said in that letter three or four people had talked to you about this case, wanting you to testify. Who were those people? Collins is one of them. A. I didn't say nothing of that sort.

Q. Is Collins one of them? A. No, sir; not as I know. I don't remember him saying anything to me.

Q. He either did or did not, and I want you to tell the truth. A. To my best opinion he did not.

Q. Will you swear positively that he did not? A. I couldn't swear positively because I don't think he did.

Q. Then somebody did, but you can't remember who they are? A. I tell you there were three or four parties, but I don't remember what particular parties they are.

Q. Then so many people have talked to you about testifying in this case that you cannot say who they are? A. Yes, sir; there is so many.

Q. What inducements were offered you, then, by these people if you would testify in this case, sir? A. Testify in this case?

Q. Yes, sir; that is what I am talking about exactly. A. I don't believe there was any inducement held out to me for to testify in this case.

Q. What case was it? A. It was something about a letter. I believe, from what I understand people were talking about. I did not know of any case coming up.

Q. Somebody wanted to get possession of that letter? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was it wanted to get possession of that letter? A. I told you there were several parties, and I cannot remember who they were.

Q. Was Mr. Maxwell, this gentleman here [indicating], one of them? A. No, sir; he didn't ask me for the letter.

Q. Was Mr. Clunie one of the gentlemen that talked to you about the case? A. No, sir; I don't know who Mr. Clunie is.

Q. Which one of them was it that told you it would help you in your case? A. What case?

Q. In the case for which you were under arrest at that time—if you would give him that letter? A. There was none of that.

Q. Which one of them was it you told, then, that they would railroad you over to San Quentin again because of the way in which you and your brothers had acted in this matter? A. Which one of them?

Q. Yes, sir? A. I don't know of any of them told me that.

Q. You don't know whether they did or not? A. No, sir.

Q. You cannot state? A. No, sir.

Q. You don't remember? A. I don't remember.

Q. Then they might have told you that? A. I don't say they did tell me that. I don't remember anybody talking to me—any conversation of that kind. That case I was in and got arrested, I turned up and got dismissed.

Q. Weren't you told, and didn't you state to Mr. Smith, that these people approached you to get possession of that letter you had written at San Quentin? A. No; I said they might try and send me to San Quentin, but I did not mention any names, or anything else.

Q. Didn't you tell Mr. Smith they had threatened to railroad you into San Quentin again if you did not produce that letter? A. I said they might try to do something against me.

Q. That who might try and do something against you? A. I don't know who they were. I didn't say any names.

Q. Didn't you tell Mr. Smith, in the presence of Sergeant Lindheimer, the present Keeper in the City Prison, at the desk of the Sergeant, that people had approached you and asked you for that letter, and told you they intended to railroad you into San Quentin unless you produced it? Didn't you tell him they intended to do that on account of the action you and your brothers took in the last election, and unless you produced that letter? A. It was nothing of the sort.

Q. What was the conversation that took place between you and Mr. Smith in the presence of Sergeant Lindheimer in the City Prison? A. If you want me to go through with the plain facts, I will state them to you.

Q. The conversation took place just as I have said, did it? A. No, it did not.

Q. Where did it take place? A. It took place in the City Prison, but not in the form you say.

Q. Where did it take place? At the Sergeant's desk? A. It may have been a little ways from the Sergeant's desk.

Q. At the end of Sergeant Lindheimer's desk? A. I cannot say.

Q. Was the Sergeant there or not? A. I cannot say. I didn't say nothing I was scared of anybody's seeing me.

Q. You don't know whether Sergeant Lindheimer was there or not? A. I do not.

Q. In that letter, didn't you state the names of the people who had approached you? A. No, I did not.

Q. You only said that three or four people had approached you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is all you did say about it, and now you don't remember the names of one of those people? A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. You don't remember whether or not they made any promises to you or any threats? A. As I told you before, I said that I told Captain Smith—I didn't say anybody told me; I said they would try and do something hard against me; I might have said something like that.

Q. That is what you said in the letter? A. No, sir; but to Captain Smith.

Q. You did say in the letter that three or four people had approached you about the letter? A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. And had approached you to get you to testify? A. I didn't so testify; no, sir.

Q. To get the letter then; that was it? A. I don't believe I mentioned the letter; I said three or four parties approached me; I didn't say letter or testify.

Q. You did not tell what they approached you for? A. No, sir, I did not.

Q. Will you tell me now what these three or four parties approached you for? A. They might have talked to me.

Q. What did they approach you about? A. They talked about politics, and one thing and another.

Q. Just tell me what they approached you about? A. They might have said if I would turn up the letter it would be for my interest.

Q. They might have said something of that kind? A. Yes, sir.

Q. They might have said to you then, if you would turn up the letter it would be to your interest? A. It might have been that way; I don't say they did.

Q. And according to that you did turn the letter up, did you? A. No, sir.

Q. Where did the letter come from? A. You are talking about three weeks ago?

Q. That is what I am talking about? A. I didn't turn no letter up to them.

Q. I am talking about the time the people approached you, before you sent the letter to Captain Smith, and the people you referred to in your letter? A. Oh, well; I misunderstood you.

Q. Well, we will understand each other after a time. What did those people that approached you—that you told Captain Smith, in your letter, had approached you—say to you? What did they approach you about? A. They got talking about one thing and another, and they heard that I was interested in this Banks business, and they told me I done wrong, and that I ought not to have done it, and one thing and another.

Q. That was what they said? A. Yes, sir; that was about the size of it.

Q. What did they say to you about the introduction of that letter? A. I don't suppose they did much, because I don't think they knew I had the letter.

Q. You don't think they knew about it, do you? A. No, sir.

Q. Who was it approached you after your arrest, and told you you would be railroaded into San Quentin if you did not produce the letter? A. I told you I don't remember anybody telling me any such thing.

Q. You don't remember one way or another about it? A. I don't remember anybody coming up and asking a question like that. I may have just told Captain Smith.

Q. If they said that would you remember it? A. I think I would.

Q. You either guess or think all the time. A. I think I would if they said it.

Q. I don't want you to guess. I want you to tell the truth. If anybody told you that would you remember it? A. I think I would.

MR. CLUNIE: You have a right to say that. Just keep that up.

By MR. DORN: You stated in your direct examination this morning that Captain Smith called on you in the city prison in your cell. Was that the truth? A. Did I say Captain Smith called on me?

Q. Yes. A. I don't think I did. I said Captain Smith came into the city prison and was speaking to me.

Q. That is what I mean. A. Yes, sir.

Q. Didn't you state in your direct examination this morning that Captain Smith called on you in the city prison and in your cell? A. You asked me if Captain Smith came to see me and I told you I didn't know —.

Q. [Interrupting.] Just answer my question. A. He was in and I was talking to him.

Q. Well, answer my question.

By MR. CLUNIE: I submit that where a witness cannot answer yes or no to that, that he be instructed that he cannot, and not what Mr. Dorn says. [To the witness.] I tell you you can say that all the way through.

By MR. DORN: You testified in your direct examination this morning about Mr. Smith calling on you in the city prison. A. I testified this morning I was talking to Mr. Smith in the city prison.

Q. And you did not say he was in the cell? A. No, sir; I did not say he was in the cell.

Q. If you said it, it was wrong? A. Yes, sir, it was dead wrong.

Q. It was false, then? A. Yes, sir.

Q. If you stated this morning in your testimony that Captain Smith called on you in the presence of the gentleman who was on the stand? Didn't you state in your testimony this morning that you had conversation with Mr. Smith, in the presence of the other witness, McLaughlin? A. I did not testify to that. I guess you are mistaken.

Q. McLaughlin testified he overheard a conversation between you and Captain Smith. If I mistake not, you testified to the same conversation, did you not? I didn't hear Mr. Smith have no conversation with nobody, no.

Q. Did you have any conversation with Mr. Smith there? A. Yes, sir; I told you I did, and I told you that three or four times.

Q. Was it about these letters? A. Yes, sir; it was about the letters.

Q. Who were present at that conversation? A. I don't know; there might have been more, but I did not hear it.

Q. Where did it take place? A. On the bench at the city prison.

Q. Wasn't it at the end of Sergeant Lindheimer's desk? A. No, sir; it was not.

Q. How far was it from the Sergeant's desk? A. I guess the bench is about three feet—the further end of the bench—from the desk.

Q. You say, then, the conversation took place about three feet from the desk? A. From the desk, yes, sir; on the bench.

Q. At the time of the conversation, wasn't Mr. Smith leaning against the Sergeant's desk with his elbow? A. Not at that time; no, sir.

Q. You were both sitting on the bench? A. We were both sitting on the bench.

Q. And that is the time you had this conversation. Was anybody else sitting beside you? A. Yes, there was; there was McLaughlin and his sister.

Q. McLaughlin and his sister were sitting beside you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How far were they sitting from you? A. I did not look to see; they might have been a foot, or a foot and a half.

Q. Were they in conversation, or did they stop to listen to you? A. I don't know; I didn't pay any attention.

Q. Was your face toward McLaughlin, or was your back? A. I was looking toward Captain Smith at the time.

Q. Was Captain Smith between you and McLaughlin? A. No, sir. He was standing in front of me. When I said he was sitting down, I made a mistake.

Q. You were sitting on the bench then? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Captain Smith was leaning against the Sergeant's desk? A. No, sir.

Q. He was not. He was standing in front of you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And McLaughlin was by the side of you? A. He was at the left of me: yes, sir.

Q. Was McLaughlin or his sister near you? A. I think McLaughlin was.

Q. And you were in that position, and about three feet from Sergeant Lindheimer's desk, you had this conversation; was that it? A. Yes, about.

Q. You are not positive that that was the position, are you? A. Yes, sir; I am positive.

Q. The reason I ask you is because you have changed it once or twice. A. No, sir; I beg your pardon; I did not change it; nothing of the kind. You are talking about one time we were at the end of the desk, and I am talking about another time we were sitting on the bench.

Q. Where was the first conversation that took place? A. On the bench, I believe.

Q. That was the first one? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who were present at that time? A. McLaughlin and his sister.

Q. Then McLaughlin, and his sister were there both times, were they? A. No, sir.

Q. Only the first time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then you were sitting on the bench at that time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What position were you in and what position was Smith in? A. I was sitting down, and I think Captain Smith was standing up.

Q. I thought you said you were both sitting on the bench? A. I did, but come to think, I think Captain Smith was standing up. He may have got up afterwards.

Q. You had two conversations, did you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was either of the conversations where you both sat down? A. Captain Smith may have sat down awhile at the first conversation and then stood up afterwards.

Q. At this first conversation, when you first started in, Captain Smith sat on the bench about two or three feet from the Sergeant's desk, you sat next, facing him, next sat McLaughlin, and next on the bench was McLaughlin's sister? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were engaged in conversation and they were engaged in conversation— A. [Interrupting.] I don't know whether they were engaged in conversation.

Q. Were you facing McLaughlin or Captain Smith? A. I was paying attention to Captain Smith, what he was saying.

Q. And you were facing him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Whatever you said and whatever he said was directed in that way, was it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What conversation took place? A. Captain Smith asked me about some letters, and he asked me if they were burned.

Q. Just give me the words, as nearly as you can? A. And I told him they were all right; that is all.

Q. That is all the conversation that took place, is it? A. That is all.

Q. Wasn't the conversation which took place between yourself and Captain Smith at the time you mention, to this effect: Didn't Captain Smith, when he came into the city prison, say to you, "I met your brother on the street, and he told me you were here." Was not that about the first thing that was said? A. He may have said that.

Q. Wasn't the next thing that he asked you, "What is the matter?" That you went on to tell him about the case, and told him that these people had threatened if you did not assist them in this they would "job" you, to use your own language? Wasn't that the next thing that was said? A. No, sir; I don't think I said anything of that kind. The first time Captain Smith came down to see me I couldn't have said anything like that. I said these people might try and do me up and do me some harm, or send me across the bay, or something of that kind.

Q. You may have told him that? A. Yes, I might have told him they might try.

Q. Didn't you tell him these people had been after you for these letters, and didn't you tell him if you did not testify in their favor they might—

A. [Interrupting.] No, sir; I did not say anything to him about the letters.

Q. And you did not say anything to him about the letters? A. No, sir.

Q. And he didn't say a word to you about them? A. Only what I said awhile ago.

Q. Then you did say something to him about the letters? A. He asked me about the letters, and I gave him the answer; yes, sir.

Q. Then why did you say to me just now you did not talk about the letters? Why don't you tell the truth, and we will get along? A. I did tell you the truth.

Q. Then when you stated a moment ago that you had no conversation about the letter, you stated a falsehood, did you? A. I didn't say I didn't have no conversation about the letters. When Captain Smith asked me about the letters, I told him, but that was about all I told him about the letters.

Q. If you stated a moment ago and the reporter's notes show that you had no conversation about the letters, you told a falsehood, did you? A. Did I say so?

Q. If you said it, it was a falsehood, was it? A. I don't say I said so.

Q. If you did say it, it was a falsehood, was it? A. I cannot give you any answer on that, because I told you straight up and down.

Q. Did you not state to Captain Smith that these people had been after you for the letters? A. No, I didn't tell Captain Smith nothing like that.

Q. You did not? A. No, sir.

Q. Are you sure of that? A. I did not say it.

Q. Do you swear positively to that? A. To what?

Q. That you did not say it? A. That I did not say?

Q. Yes. [Witness pauses.] I think you had better take time to think. A. No, I didn't say nothing to Captain Smith about any letters.

Q. Didn't Captain Smith then say to you—ask you if he had ever at any time over in San Quentin or since, made any promises to you or asked you to vote for Mr. Banks, or for or against Mr. Sullivan, and didn't you then say to him that he hadn't done anything of the kind? Did that conversation take place? A. It may have.

Q. As a matter of fact, while you were in San Quentin, did Captain Smith ever ask you to vote for or against Mr. Banks, or for or against Mr. Sullivan? A. No; he did not.

Q. You had another conversation you say. Did you not at this conversation state that in behalf of Mr. Sullivan persons had offered to go your bail and to get you out of jail if you would produce those letters? A. I didn't say anything of the sort.

Redirect Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: When you went on the stand, you told me you did not want to say anything that ever occurred between you and Captain Smith, and that you didn't want to drag him in, because he was a friend of yours. Now, I ask you to state everything that occurred between you and Captain Smith over at San Quentin. A. There was not much occurred.

Q. You were over in San Quentin when Captain Smith was there, were you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Banks had been nominated for Senator, hadn't he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you and Captain Smith have any conversation over there about it? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you and he have any conversations over here after you got back? A. No, sir.

Q. Not here? A. Oh, no.

Q. Did you and he have any conversation over there about Mr. Banks? You need not be afraid of him, he is not going to harm you. A. I ain't afraid of nobody; but Captain Smith never said nothing to me.

Q. He never asked you over at San Quentin to vote for Mr. Banks? A. No, sir.

MR. DORN: Before another witness is called, I see Mr. Ryan is here, and I want to recall him for one further question before he goes.

MR. CLUNIE: I object to my case being interrupted.

MR. DORN: Before he signed his testimony I made the request to both of your honors and it was granted.

JUSTICE STAFFORD: It would have to be added to the testimony, I think.

MR. CLUNIE: I want it to appear that I had a witness on the stand and then Mr. Dorn interrupted that.

JUSTICE STAFFORD: It was ordered this morning that this witness should be recalled.

MR. DORN: I made the request this morning of both your honors, and you said it would be done; and to-day noon, just before adjournment, Mr. Ryan was present, and I asked your honors to let him testify then, and you said to wait until two o'clock.

JUSTICE STAFFORD: That is correct.

MR. CLUNIE: I don't want these other people to have to wait. That is all.

 GEORGE RYAN.

Recalled for further cross-interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: You stated yesterday, I believe, that at the last election there were four persons registered from your house? Answer—No, sir; I did not.

Q. Then I am mistaken? A. I stated the day before yesterday.

Q. Who were those voters? A. George Ryan, William Ryan.

Q. Those are brothers of yours, I think you stated? A. That is myself and brother. Also, Charles Dormer.

Q. Mr. Dormer has not been a witness here in Court. A. No, sir.

Q. You stated, I believe, that Mr. Barry died before the election, did you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that so far as you knew his name was not voted at the last election? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That you supposed it was scratched off the register? A. No, sir. You asked me whether I knew if his name was voted or not, and of course I said his name was not voted, to my knowledge. I still say the same, not knowing whether it was voted. I was not present there.

Q. Were you not present at the polls on that day? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you vote? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What time in the day? A. About half-past six in the morning.

Q. How long did you remain there? A. I went right away, immediately.

Q. Did you return to the place any time during the day? A. Yes, sir; several times.

Q. What time during the day? A. I could not give you the exact time.

Q. About how many times during the day? A. I should say about five or six times during election day.

Q. You were there about five or six times during election day? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how long would you stay each time? A. I think the longest that I stayed was ten minutes.

Q. What did you mean a moment ago by stating to me that you did not know whether he voted or not, because you were not there? A. I mean to say because I never saw him voted, or heard of him voting.

Q. Did you mean to say you could not see if you were there? A. He never voted while I was there.

Q. That is probably true, because he did not vote at all. About three o'clock you were present at the polls for a few moments, weren't you? A. I don't think I was there at three o'clock, although I couldn't say, not knowing the time. I had no watch with me, and looked at no clock.

Q. In the neighborhood of three o'clock in the afternoon you were present at the polls? A. Probably.

Q. And you came accompanied by another gentleman? A. I came accompanied by four gentlemen.

Q. One of those gentlemen voted, did he not? A. One of those gentlemen voted?

Q. Yes. A. No, sir.

Q. Neither one of them voted? A. No, sir.

Q. Neither one of the four gentlemen you came with voted? A. No, sir; they did not live in the precinct.

Q. About three o'clock in the afternoon, is it not true that you came to the polls, and with a man pretending to be Mr. Barry, who was dead, and that that man offered a vote, claiming that his name was Barry, and that upon his being challenged, you said that was Mr. Barry, and that he lived in your house, and that he voted upon your recommendation? A. No, sir.

Q. That is not true? A. That is not true.

Q. Nothing of the kind occurred? A. Nothing of the kind occurred, and the man that says so, lies.

Q. That is not true, then? A. That is not true.

Q. And you did not say while Mr. Pistolesi, this gentlemen here [indicating], was acting as Inspector; didn't you come to the polls with another man, and didn't that man offer to vote under the name of Mr. Barry, who had died in your house, and didn't you say to Mr. Pistolesi that the man was Mr. Barry, and didn't he vote under that name? A. Mr. Barry never died in my house. I never went with anybody that ever pretended voting Mr. Barry's name, because Mr. Barry, I thought, was canceled from the register, which he ought to have been, and I, nor anybody else, would try to do anything of that kind.

Q. What made you think he was canceled from the register? A. It was the Registrar's place to cancel all men that were dead.

Q. And that is why you thought it? A. It was part of his duties. I thought it was, and if his name was voted, I don't know it.

Q. It is the Registrar's fault, is it, if somebody voted his name? A. Certainly it is.

Q. Didn't you come to the polls with the man who pretended to be Mr. Barry? A. No. Before you go any further, I did not.

Q. Didn't somebody vote the name of Mr. Barry while you were present? A. No, sir.

Q. And didn't you say that was Mr. Barry? A. No, sir.

Q. You swear to that positively? A. I swear to that positively.

Q. And as positively as to anything else you have testified to? A. And as positively as to anything else I have testified to; as positive as I am sitting in this chair. I swear it more positive than anything else I have said—more positive than anything.

Q. You are more positive about that than anything else you have testified to? A. I am.

Q. Why are you so positive about that? A. Because I knew the man was dead, and I knew I was not going to get myself in trouble.

Q. You are absolutely certain about this, are you? A. Yes, sir; I am positive.

Q. If you are more positive about this than you are about anything else, then you are uncertain about this? A. No, sir; I am not. I am positive of everything else I said on this stand.

Q. How is it you are so positive of that? A. Well, the man is dead, and to ask a man to vote a man that is dead is a thing I don't think I nor anybody else would undertake to do, unless he is a criminal, and that is why I said I wouldn't undertake to do this, and didn't, and that is why I am more positive of it.

Q. If you are more positive about this than you are of anything else, then you are a little uncertain? A. No, I am not.

Q. Then you are no more positive of this than you are of anything else? A. Well, yes, I am. Of course in some things you can make right sure, but this I am positive.

Q. Can you be anything more than certain? A. Well, I am absolutely positive of this.

Q. Then you are not more positive of this than you are about any of the other of your testimony? A. Yes, I am more positive of this.

Q. Then you can't be any more positive of this than to be absolutely certain, can you? A. Well, no.

Q. Then there must be a degree less than that which applies to the rest of your testimony? A. Yes, there is a degree less; just about a degree.

Q. Then you are not absolutely certain of the rest of your testimony that you have given here? A. Yes, I am positive of the other testimony.

Q. Will you define for me the difference between this testimony and the other? A. I could define to you from now until to-morrow morning, and you would still ask the same questions.

Q. No; if you will answer the question. A. In this way: The man died, and I didn't attempt to ask anybody to vote a dead man's name, nor a living man's name.

Q. It is not a question of your asking them to vote a dead man's name. You apparently did not; all you did was going there and giving your sanction to his being the dead man? A. I don't associate with those kind of people.

Q. You say you are more certain about this than you are about anything else you have testified to? A. Yes; I am a little more.

Q. Then you are not as certain about the other part of it? A. I am certain about the other part.

Q. Then you are not certain about the last? A. Yes, I am.

Q. If you are more certain about the last, then you are not certain about the first? A. Yes, sir; of course I am.

Q. Then you are not more certain about the last? A. I swear positively everything that I said here.

Q. Do you swear more positively to that than you do to the first? A. I am more positive of that.

Q. If you are more positive of the last, then you are not as positive of the first; isn't that true? A. No; I said I am not more positive of Barry's name not being voted than I am of the balance of my statement, although I swear the balance of my statement I am positive of, as I said previously.

Q. Then you are positive as to all? A. Yes, sir; I am positive as to all.

Q. Then, when you said you were more positive of the last, you swore falsely, did you? A. No.

Q. Are you as positive that Barry's name was not voted as you are to any of the rest of your testimony? A. I am.

Q. Just about? A. I said I am as positive.

By MR. CLUNIE: You don't know whether some one in your absence came up and voted Mr. Barry's name, do you? A. Oh, no.

Q. These people are trying to make you swear that Mr. Barry's name was voted. You swear, as I understand you, Barry's name was not voted in your presence? A. Oh, no.

Q. You won't swear that Banks did not come up and vote it? A. Oh, no, I would not swear to that; that it was not voted.

By MR. DORN: Didn't this gentleman come up with Mr. Maxwell, and didn't he, in the presence of yourself and Mr. Maxwell and Mr. Pistolesi, the Inspector, vote the name of Barry? A. I never met Mr. Maxwell at that precinct on that day of election; that is, up until the polls closed. After the polls closed, of course, I met him—during the count.

Q. How long have you known this gentlemen, Mike Smith? A. I don't know. I have known him by reputation, I guess, fourteen or fifteen years.

Q. You have known him by reputation only? A. Well, I know him and see him.

Q. And is that the sum and substance of your acquaintance with him? A. Oh, no.

Q. What other acquaintance have you had with him? A. I had acquaintance with Mr. Smith politically.

Q. Of what date? A. I couldn't give you the date.

Q. How long have you known Mr. Smith politically? A. I think it is six years ago.

Q. Politically? A. Yes, sir; to the best of my knowledge, it is six years ago.

Q. Was your acquaintance a casual acquaintance or intimate? A. I was not an intimate acquaintance.

Q. Was your acquaintance with him such as you would confide to him the secrets of your business? A. No, sir.

Q. Or that he would confide to you the secrets of his business? A. He may have confided his secrets to me, but I never confided mine to him.

Q. Your acquaintance was one-sided; it was friendly on his side and it was distant on yours? A. I didn't say it was distant.

Q. Just give us how it was? A. Of course I knew Mr. Smith, and that he was a politician, and whenever Mr. Smith would talk to me about politics—anything that would go to injure me—he would never know it, and it was just the reverse on the other side. He tried to talk with me and find out matters from me, and instead of him finding from me, I found from him.

Q. You are pretty smart, then? A. I think I am as smart as Mr. Smith.

Q. Then the acquaintance was simply one of pumping on your side and talking on his? A. We were both pumping.

Q. Only you succeeded better than he did? A. I think I did.

Q. Then your relations were not friendly; they were distant? A. Oh, they were friendly.

Q. And each one was on his guard against the other? A. I don't know whether he was on his guard or not, but I was on my guard.

Q. You were on your guard against him, and probably he was not? A. Probably he was not.

WILLIAM LOVICK.

A witness on behalf of contestant, sworn, and testified as follows;

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: Where do you reside? Answer—On Gough street.

Q. On Gough street, where? A. Between Oak and Fell.

Q. How long have you lived there? A. About ten months.

Q. Did you live in this city and county on the day of election? A. I did.

Q. Where were you on the day of election? A. I was part of the time over in the Thirty-third District, and I was part of the time over in the Forty-fourth.

Q. What was you doing over in the Thirty-third District? A. Over there drinking whisky a good part of the time.

Q. You couldn't get any whisky in the Forty-fourth District? A. Yes, sir; but I thought I would go over there.

Q. Tell us what you were doing over in the Thirty-third District. A. I went over there because I am better acquainted over there than I am in the other part.

Q. What was the occasion of your going where you were better acquainted? A. I don't know the occasion. You might naturally go where you were better acquainted.

Q. Were you running acquaintances that day? A. I was not.

Q. Why did you go over there? A. I couldn't tell you why, any more than that I went down town in the evening.

Q. Didn't you have any object in going there? A. I did not.

Q. You had none at all? A. No, sir.

Q. What part of the Thirty-third District were you in? A. I was in the lower part, Union street and to Francisco.

Q. Just drinking whisky and without anything to do? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your business? A. Machinist.

Q. Did you go on these speers very often? A. No sir; I don't.

Q. Just a holiday? A. That is it.

Q. Where did you vote? A. I voted in the Forty-fourth District.

Q. What time? A. About seven o'clock in the morning.

Q. Then where did you go? A. Then I went home.

Q. And then where did you go? A. I went down town, and from there went over to the Beach.

Q. What part of the Beach did you strike? A. I struck the lower part of it.

Q. What precinct? A. I was in the First, Second, Third, Fifth, and Sixth.

Q. Did you talk to anybody that day about how they should vote? A. No, sir.

Q. What are your politics? A. My politics are any way I feel like voting. I am a free lance outside of national politics.

Q. And you were walking around that day as a free lance? A. I was.

Q. You knew Mr. Banks that day? A. I have seen him before.

Q. Did you never talk with him? A. I can't say that I did.

Q. You have never seen him before? A. No, I can't say that I did.

Q. You knew he was a candidate, did you? A. I did.

Q. Wasn't it in his interests that you went over there? A. No, sir.

Q. You didn't ask anybody in the Thirty-third District to vote in his interest? A. No, sir.

Q. No person at all? A. No person at all.

Q. You had seen Mr. Banks the day prior to election? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where? A. Over in the Thirty-third District.

Q. What were you doing over there the day before election? A. I had no work that day.

Q. So you went over in the Thirty-third District? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you see him? A. Filbert and Montgomery Avenue.

Q. In whose saloon? A. Winter's.

Q. Who was present? A. I couldn't tell you who was present. There were a dozen or more drinking at the bar when I was.

Q. You were drinking with Mr. Banks? A. Yes, sir; drinking with anybody and everybody.

Q. Did Mr. Banks ask you to drink? A. I couldn't say positively whether he paid for it or not.

Q. You knew it was somebody? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Banks was in the room? A. Mr. Banks was in the room.

Q. Did you and Mr. Banks have a talk then? A. No, sir.

Q. Did he not say a word to you? A. He might have said he was a candidate.

Q. What were you doing in that saloon there? A. As I drop in any saloon: I went because I am acquainted around there.

Q. Did you and Mr. Banks talk about his being a candidate? A. No, sir.

Q. Did he say he was a candidate? A. He did not.

Q. Did he ask you to peddle tickets for him? A. No, sir.

Q. Did he tell you you did not live in the district? A. No, sir; a party spoke of it at the time.

Q. Who did? A. I don't know.

Q. Did each man up and say it? A. No, sir.

Q. What was the occasion of it? A. I don't know.

Q. Did somebody happen to be in that saloon and treat, and somebody jump up and say, "He don't live in the district?" A. Yes.

Q. You are sure that it was said that Lovick did not live in the district? A. Yes, sir; but there were a dozen or more around the bar.

Q. Did you have any Republican tickets in your pocket on the day of election? A. Neither a Republican nor a Democratic ticket in my possession all day; only the one I voted.

Q. Did you see Mr. Banks on the day of election? A. I did.

Q. Where? A. Over on Filbert Street.

Q. What precinct? A. I can't tell you whether it was the Fifth or Sixth.

Q. You saw him at Filbert and what street? A. Filbert and Montgomery Avenue.

Q. How long had you lived in that district before you moved over on to Hayes Street? A. About eighteen years.

Q. You are somewhat of a politician? A. No, sir.

Q. And you don't take any interest in politics? A. No, sir.

Q. And you cannot tell what precinct you were in? A. No, sir; not that day; because it is divided up.

Q. When was it divided up? A. Two or three years ago.

Q. And you cannot tell what precinct it was? A. No, sir.

Q. Don't you know you said it was the Fifth? A. It may have been the Fourth; I don't, I won't say.

Q. Just where? A. Just below the corner of Filbert on Montgomery Avenue.

Q. Where did you see him on that day, in a saloon? A. No, sir; I saw him on the street.

Q. He was on the street? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were on the street? A. I was on the street, too.

Q. He was in a buggy? A. No, sir.

Q. He was just walking along? A. Yes, sir.

Q. The polls were right there, were they? A. Near there; about two or three hundred feet.

Q. And that was where? A. Filbert, near Montgomery Avenue.

Q. Who else was there with you? A. I think I was talking to Magner and to George Kimball.

Q. Do you know Mr. Magner? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He was present at the time you saw Mr. Banks? A. I just left him when I saw Banks.

Q. You and Banks had a little talk? A. Not much; no.

Q. What did you state to him, and what did he state to you? A. I could not state. It don't amount to anything.

Q. Did Mr. Banks give you forty dollars at that time? A. No, sir.

Q. Did he give you twenty dollars? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He gave you twenty dollars at that time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did he give you that twenty dollars for? A. There was no arrangement made, and I did just as I felt like.

Q. You just happened to meet Mr. Banks on the street, and he knew you were not a voter in the district at all? A. I don't know whether he knew it or not.

Q. Didn't you swear a moment ago that he knew you were not a voter? A. I did not, sir; that he knew. I said it was spoken of in the saloon.

Q. Didn't you swear he was in the saloon, and somebody said that you were not a voter? A. Yes, sir; but there might have been a great many things said.

Q. It was said in a loud voice, was it not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he must have heard it? A. He might have and might not.

Q. And you swear you met Mr. Banks on the street, in one of the precincts of the Thirty-third District? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you said what? A. Just passed the time of day.

Q. Mr. Banks gave you twenty dollars? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you don't know what he gave you it for? A. We had no understanding at all.

Q. What did he say? A. He didn't say anything; he passed the time of day and passed me the twenty dollar piece and I put it in my pocket and walked off.

Q. Were you a free lance around on that day, too? A. Yes, sir; I was.

Q. And you took the twenty dollars and put it in your pocket? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you do with it? A. I spent it.

Q. What for? A. I couldn't tell you all that now that I did spend it for.

Q. Did you use it to help Mr. Banks? A. I did not use it for anybody, I helped some of the lads to get their skins full.

Q. Mr. Banks did not say "Get out and help me with this?" A. He did not.

Q. Didn't you come to Mr. Magner, right after Mr. Banks had given you that twenty dollars, and say that this money had been given to you by Banks to get out and help him? A. No, sir. I told Mr. Magner I got this twenty dollar piece from Banks.

Q. And then didn't you tell him that Banks had given you that twenty dollars to help him with? A. No, sir.

Q. You swear that positive? A. I swear that positive.

Q. What did you say? A. I said I got twenty dollars from Mr. Banks.

Q. And you swear Mr. Banks did not tell you what to do with that twenty dollars? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you wanted those people to believe it? A. I don't care whether they did or not.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: This Magner you had the talk with was a Democrat, was he not? A. Yes, sir; and so am I a Democrat.

Q. And you knew Mr. Magner when you stated to him that you got twenty dollars from Mr. Banks, was not a friend of Banks? A. I did; yes, sir.

Q. You didn't get this money for the purpose of buying any votes, did you? A. I did not.

Q. It was not the understanding between you and Mr. Banks that it should be used? A. We had no understanding.

Q. You simply asked Mr. Banks for the twenty dollars, and he gave it to you?

MR. CLUNIE: I submit he did not say that.

By MR. DORN: Did you just ask Mr. Banks for twenty dollars, and he turned and passed it over to you? A. A kind of a strike.

Q. Did you use that money for the purpose of influencing anybody's vote, one way or the other, in the Senatorial election? A. I did not.

Q. Was it given to you with the idea that you should so use it? A. I don't know what idea it was given to me with. It was there, and I got it. I didn't ask anybody to vote one way or the other.

Q. During the entire day you did not ask anybody to vote one way or the other? A. No, I did not.

Redirect Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: You swore a moment ago when I asked you, that there was no conversation passed between you and Mr. Banks at all, that you simply passed the time of day and he handed you twenty dollars. Now, after Mr. Dorn has prompted you, you say you asked him for it and he handed it to you. A. I don't know how it was, but I reached my hand out and the twenty dollars was there.

Q. You just came up and passed the time of day with Mr. Banks, and you reached your hand out and there was the twenty dollars? A. Yes, sir.

Q. If you did tell Mr. Magner Mr. Banks gave this money to you to help him, it is not true? A. I didn't say he gave it to me to help him; I said I got twenty dollars from Mr. Banks.

Q. You were subpoenaed to come yesterday, weren't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why didn't you come? A. Because I couldn't come very well.

Q. A subpoena was served upon you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why didn't you come? A. I didn't think it was necessary for me to be there.

Q. When was the last time you saw Mr. Banks? A. This is the last time I saw him.

Q. When before this? A. I saw him on election day about two or three o'clock in the afternoon.

Q. Did you see him yesterday? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see him this morning? A. No, sir.

Q. You didn't inform him yesterday you had been subpoenaed? A. No, sir.

Q. You didn't inform anybody else? A. No, sir.

By MR. DORN: Yesterday when this subpoena was served on you, were you paid your fee for attendance here? A. I was not.

Q. Then that was your reason for staying away? A. No. I tell you I would have come, only the job broke down and I quit work.

 LUKE KING.

A witness on behalf of contestant, sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: Mr. King, where do you reside? A. No. 316 Chestnut.

Q. How long have you lived there? A. Since August tenth.

Q. Last year? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you live there at the time of last election? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you vote from there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct is that? A. The Second of the Thirty-fourth.

Q. Did you vote from that precinct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who did you vote for for State Senator. A. Mr. Banks.

Q. How did you come to vote for Mr. Banks? A. I was asked to do it as a favor. Standing at Montgomery and Filbert one night, I was approached by a young man named Charles Murray, and he said, would I do him a favor. And I said, what was it? And he said, "By voting for Banks." And I said, I would vote for him to do him the favor.

Q. Did he tell you it would be in the interest of his brother, who was in jail? A. Yes, sir; he said it would help his brother.

Q. That was the reason you did it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was the reason you did it. A. It was through his influence.

Q. And that induced you to it? A. I didn't have to.

Q. At the request of Murray you did do it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it was for that reason you did it? A. Yes, sir.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: What are your politics? A. Democratic.

Q. Did you vote the State ticket, except for Senator? A. No, not when I voted for Banks.

Q. Did you vote a straight ticket, except for Banks? A. No.

Q. How many names did you scratch on your ticket? A. Two or three.

Q. Who requested you to scratch them? A. Because I have friends, and I did the favor for them.

Q. For different friends you scratched different names on your ticket? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What other names did you scratch? A. I decline to answer that.

MR. DORN: I ask that he be instructed to answer.

JUSTICE STAFFORD: We cannot instruct him to answer.

THE WITNESS: I decline to answer that.

MR. DORN: Do your honors decline to instruct the witness to answer that?

JUSTICE STAFFORD: Yes, sir.

MR. DORN: We except.

Q. Do you know Mr. Banks? A. I know him now.

Q. Did you know him at election time? A. No.

Q. You had never seen him? A. Yes; I saw him up the street, there.

Q. You did not know him to speak to? A. No, sir.

Q. You say you did scratch some other names on your ticket? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many? A. I told you, about two or three.

Q. You did have friends, yourself? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you scratch Mr. Sullivan's name? A. Didn't I scratch it when I put Mr. Banks' name down?

Q. I say, did you scratch Sullivan's name? A. Of course I scratched his name.

Q. Then you scratched Mr. Sullivan's name for Senator? A. I scratched Mr. Sullivan's name for Mr. Banks' name:

Q. Did you write Mr. Banks' name on? A. I guess I did.

Q. Did you write Mr. Banks' name down? A. I did.

Q. Can you write? A. No; I don't know if I can.

Q. Then how did you write Banks' name on there, if you cannot write?

MR. CLUNIE: He did not say that; he said it was written on there by himself or somebody else.

A. You asked me if I could write?

Q. Yes, sir. A. That is a funny question.

Q. Can you write? A. Yes; I can write.

Q. Did you write Bank's name on that ticket? A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. What part of the ticket did you write it? A. Opposite Mr. Sullivan's.

Q. Which Sullivan? Judge Sullivan or the candidate for Senator, do you know? A. The man that run against Mr. Banks.

Q. Do you know? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you swear that you scratched the name of Sullivan and wrote Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it opposite Judge Sullivan's name or opposite the name of the Sullivan running for Senator? Do you swear positively which it was? A. I scratched for the man that ran for Senator.

Q. Will you swear which it was? A. All I know is, I scratched his name—Sullivan's. There were two Sullivans on the ticket.

Q. You did not scratch both? A. One was for Supreme Judge, I suppose.

Q. Did you scratch both Sullivans? A. No, I did not.

Q. Which one did you scratch? A. The one that ran for Senator.

Q. Did you scratch with a lead pencil or with a pen? A. I scratched with a pen and ink.

Q. When and what time of the day? A. In the daytime, I guess.

Q. Was it election day? A. Yes, it was election day.

Q. Will you write the name of W. O. Banks on there? [Witness does so.]

Q. Is that the way you wrote it on that ticket? A. I guess it was.

JOHN DONOVAN.

A witness on behalf of contestant, was duly sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: What is your name? Answer—John Donovan.

Q. Where do you live? A. No. 1253 Montgomery Street.

Q. How long have you lived there? A. About nineteen years.

Q. Did you live there at the time of the election held in November of last year? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct is that in? A. The Thirty-Third Assembly District.

Q. In what precinct, do you know? A. The First.

Q. You voted in that precinct, did you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who did you vote for for State Senator? A. Mr. Banks.

Q. How did you come to vote for Mr. Banks? A. On the night before election, Charles Murray came to me and asked me would I do him a favor. I asked him what favor was it. He said to vote for this Banks; he said it would help his brother out that was in San Quentin. I told him I would.

Q. Was that the reason you voted for Mr. Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it was at the request of Charles Murray? A. Yes, sir.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Do you know Mr. Banks? A.—No, sir. I saw him election day, but I don't know him to talk to.

Q. Who wrote your ballot for you? A. I wrote it myself.

Q. Who subpoenaed you to come here? A. I heard about the contest, and I thought I would take a walk up here.

Q. Have you been subpoenaed at all? A. No, sir.

Q. Who did you tell how you voted? A. I didn't tell no one.

Q. Nobody knew until you got on the stand how you voted? A. No, sir.

Q. And Mr. Clunie never asked you that question? A. No, sir.

Q. You have never told a living soul, from the day of election until now, how you voted? A. I told him I voted for Mr. Banks; that was the only man.

Q. Who did you tell that? A. This gentleman here [indicating].

Q. This gentleman here [indicating]? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did he know it? A. I told Murray I voted for Banks.

Q. Did you ever tell Murray you voted for Banks? A. Yes, sir; I told Charles Murray.

Q. And then you told this gentleman here [indicating]? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I thought you said you never told anybody? A. I told Charles Murray; that is all.

Q. When you swore a while ago that you never told anybody, you swore to a lie did you? A. No, I didn't swear to a lie.

Q. Which one is the truth? [A pause] How much money were you told you would get for giving that testimony? A. I didn't get any money at all.

Q. How much money are you going to get? A. I don't get nothing.

Q. What was promised you? A. Nothing. Just to state that I did the favor for Charles Murray.

Q. You are just testifying now as a favor to Charles Murray? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you think it was going to be a favor to Charles Murray?

A. To be a favor for his brother.

MR. CLUNIE: He is not talking about how you were voting, but if you were offered any money to come here and testify. A. No, sir; I was not.

By MR. DORN: What is your business? A. Boatman.

Q. What are you doing here? You are not running a boat here in the City Hall? A. I just thought I would take a walk up here.

Q. How often do you take these walks? A. Once in a while.

Q. How long before since you were in this City Hall? A. This is about the first time I have ever been here.

Q. And you concluded to take a walk up here? A. No. I usually take a walk around.

Q. And your walk landed you in the City Hall, for the first time in your life? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you happen to come here to-day? You had some reason, and somebody told you to come here? A. There was no one told me to come here.

Q. Then how did you happen to come? A. I told you I heard about the contest and I thought I would come.

Q. Where did you hear of it? A. I read it in last night's "Report."

Q. Nobody told you about it? A. Charles Murray.

Q. When you said a while ago you never told anybody, you told a falsehood, did you? A. Falsehood? No.

Q. Was that the truth? A. I told Charles Murray that I voted for Banks.

Q. Is it true you never told anybody? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then it is a falsehood when you say you told Charles Murray? One or the other of them is bound to be untrue. A. I said I told Charles Murray I voted for Banks.

Q. Then when you said a while ago you hadn't told anybody, you said what was not true, did you? [A pause.]

MR. DORN: That is all.

GEORGE F. MAXWELL.

A witness on behalf of contestant, was duly sworn, and testified as follows :

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE : What is your business? Answer.—I am clerk of the Board of Fire Commissioners.

Q. Where do you reside? A. No. 1911 Stockton Street.

Q. How long have you resided there? A. About twenty-one years.

Q. Do you know a man by the name of Mike Smith? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Captain Mike Smith? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you known him? A. I guess I have known Captain Mike Smith for the last ten years.

Q. Do you know what official position he has occupied in that time? A. I don't know all of the positions he has occupied.

Q. Do you know of his having occupied a position at San Quentin during that time? A. I heard he did.

Q. What position did he occupy there? A. That I couldn't tell you.

Q. Was it Captain of the Guard? A. I couldn't say whether it was Captain of the Guard or what it was.

Q. Have you had any conversation with Captain Smith since the election in relation to the contest, or in relation to the election of W. O. Banks as State Senator from the Twenty-first Senatorial District, and what was it brought it out? A. The only conversation I recollect ever having, and that I ever told anybody about, was a conversation on—I think it was the eighth.

Q. The eighth of what? A. The eighth of November; two days after election. I believe, about eight o'clock, we were all in the Fourth Precinct of the Thirty-fourth, talking about election, and it looked then like a victory for Mr. Banks, and we had virtually given up the fight then for Mr. Sullivan, and we got talking about the battle, and Mr. Smith and I got to talking about things, and about this fight, and he told me he thought he had got the best of us on one or two occasions, and that was that we had neglected some of the convicts over at the prison.

By MR. DORN : Who was present at that conversation? A. There was a whole saloonful of people.

Q. Name some of them. A. Mr. Ryan was very close to me and Mr. Smith.

Q. Who else? A. And Mr. Banks there. They were conversing at the end of the billiard table, and Mr. Smith and I were to one side.

Q. And Mr. Banks was present too? A. They were all present.

Q. Was Mr. Sullivan there? A. I don't recollect now whether he was in the room or not. He had been there.

Q. Weren't you all drinking with Mr. Sullivan at the time this conversation took place? A. I don't recollect that portion, whether we were. We all took drinks with Banks, with Smith, and with Mr. Sullivan, and with several parties.

By MR. CLUNIE : Just go on and tell the conversation that occurred, what he told you about these convicts. A. About the convicts, he told me in a general conversation that there was some twenty-seven people, I think, in the penitentiary that had friends and relatives in that Senatorial District, and that they were quite a factor in that fight, and that they had sent letters to their friends and relatives in that district, and that they had helped Banks considerably in his fight.

Q. Did he state who requested those convicts to send letters? A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't he say he had requested them to send them? A. I don't recollect his saying that.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: What, if any, steps did you take toward attempting to get a pardon for this same James Murray we have been talking about?

A. I tried to assist him to get a pardon.

Q. When was that? A. Some four or five, or three or four months prior to election.

Q. Why did you do that? A. Because I knew his brothers, and his mother came and asked me if I couldn't assist her.

Q. You were a pretty active member of the Confidence Club over there which was organized, among other things, for the special purpose of electing Mr. Sullivan State Senator? A. The Confidence Club, as near as I can understand, was for the whole Democratic ticket, from top to bottom.

Q. You were located over in the Twenty-first Senatorial District, weren't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you made a strenuous effort for the election of Sullivan? A. Not any more than any other Democratic candidate.

Q. Do you mean to tell me that right in his own district and in his own doorway you made no more fight for him than you did for any of the other part of the ticket? A. I personally did not, myself.

Q. Do you know that the club did not? A. I don't speak of the club.

Q. You are a member of the club, aren't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were present at the meetings, weren't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you heard matters discussed? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you say now you made no more fight for Sullivan than for any other candidate on the ticket? A. They said they wanted to see Sullivan elected, and they would do anything in their power to elect him.

Q. Did you make any special fight for Sullivan? A. Not at all.

Q. You were for the whole Democratic ticket? A. I was for the ticket.

Q. And you never went out of your way in your efforts for Sullivan; you had got the entire Democratic ticket? A. No; I was for Sullivan and for the ticket.

Q. You were for the Sullivan first, and for the ticket second? A. No, sir; I was for the ticket first, and for Sullivan second.

Q. How long have you been employed in your present position in the Fire Department? A. Since the first of the month.

Q. Do you mean the first of January? A. Yes, sir.

Q. This last three or four days? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What were you employed at before that? A. I was Clerk in the Corporation Yard.

Q. You have been in the Fire Department right along before that for some time? A. I had.

Q. And on election day what was your special duty in the Fire Department? To help carry the election over in the Twenty-first Senatorial District, was it not? A. The Fire Department takes no hand in politics that I know of. I never was instructed—

Q. [Interrupting.] I don't ask you what you were instructed. I ask you if the Fire Department didn't take an active hand in the last election?

A. As to the Department, I don't know what it did; but I know that I as a member took an active part.

Q. Don't you know that a number of the other members of the Fire Department did take an active part; and wasn't your present position a reward for your services in the last election? A. No, sir; I don't know it.

Q. Don't you know that instead of having your present position you would have been fired out of your then position if you hadn't done what you did? A. No, sir; I don't know that.

Q. Do you know a gentleman by the name of Pete Fleming? A. Fleming? I do, yes.

Q. Do you know what his position is in the Fire Department? A. He is foreman of No. 2 Truck, I believe.

Q. Do you know what his position is in the same Department? A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. You don't know anything about it? A. No, sir; I am not running all the Departments in town. The Fire Department is all I am connected with.

Q. Are you acquainted with Mr. Fleming? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does Fleming belong to the Confidence Club? A. He does.

Q. He keeps a saloon called the Iroquois Saloon, does he not? A. He and another gentleman did.

Q. Who is his partner in that saloon? A. Ryan is his partner, I understand.

Q. Do you know? A. That is what I heard.

Q. That is, the previous witness? A. I don't know.

Q. Do you know George Ryan? A. Yes, sir; I do.

Q. Do you know whether Fleming does any work here in the City Hall? A. No, sir; I couldn't swear that he does.

Q. Do you know who is the janitor of this room you are sitting in now? A. No, sir.

Q. Don't you know it is Mr. Fleming? A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Where do you reside? A. No. 1911 Stockton Street.

Q. How long have you resided there? A. About twenty-one years.

Q. At the last election, how many men registered from your house? A. Four or five.

Q. You registered yourself? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your full name? A. Geo. F. Maxwell.

Q. Who else? A. I have got two brothers there.

Q. What are their names? A. William and Thomas.

Q. Were they both registered from there? A. I believe so.

Q. Do you know? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who else? A. My father-in-law.

Q. What is his name? A. Jesse Podd.

Q. Who else? A. Two roomers.

Q. What are their names? A. That I couldn't tell you.

Q. Does Mr. Geo. W. Amos live in that house? A. Yes, sir; I believe that is it.

Q. He is one of the two, is he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does a man by the name of Herbert L. Warren live in that house? A. Yes, sir; I know his name is Warren. I don't know what his first name is.

Q. In what business is your brother, William Maxwell, engaged. A. He is out in the Tax office.

Q. How long has he lived in that house? A. About the same length of time I have.

Q. Are you the proprietor of that house? A. In conjunction with my two brothers, I am.

Q. Who owns the place? A. My mother.

Q. Where is your brother, Thomas Maxwell, employed? A. At the seawall.

Q. You are all three employed in Democratic offices at the time? A. No, sir; we are not anything of the kind.

Q. You are all employed in public offices? A. No, sir; we are not.

Q. You are, are you not? A. I am; yes, sir.

Q. And your brother William Maxwell is, is he not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Your brother Thomas, where is he employed? A. He is employed in a grain warehouse by Thos. A. Gove.

Q. That is not a political position? A. No, sir.

Q. In what business is your father-in-law, Mr. Podd, engaged? A. He is working on a dredger on the seawall.

Q. Then he occupies a political position? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In what position is Mr. George Amos? A. I don't know in what position he is.

Q. Isn't he in the Fire Department? A. Not that I know of.

Q. Wasn't he a member of the Fire Department at the time of the last election? A. Not to my knowledge; he is not a regular member; he might have been a substitute, for what I know.

Q. Didn't he come from the same particular engine house that you did? A. The same particular engine house that I did?

Q. When did Mr. Amos come to your house first? A. I guess two or three months prior to election.

Q. Did he pay you his rent? A. No, sir; he did not.

Q. Who did he pay it to? A. He paid it to my wife.

Q. And you don't know? A. No, sir; I don't keep any track of it.

Q. Was it one month before election that he came there? A. No, it was more than that?

Q. Was it six weeks? A. That I couldn't tell you. It was two months and maybe two months and a half.

Q. It may be two months and may be six weeks. When did Warren first come to the house? A. The same time.

Q. They came in together, did they? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did they leave the house? A. Warren comes and rooms there now when he is ashore.

Q. How long ago has he roomed there last? A. That I couldn't tell you.

Q. As a matter of fact, when did Mr. Amos leave the house? A. About twelve or fifteen days after election, I guess.

Q. They left within twelve or fifteen days after election. As a matter of fact, did they ever sleep in the house after election? A. I am not keeping any cases on when they slept in the house.

Q. I ask you to tell the truth. Did they sleep in the house after election? A. I couldn't tell you.

Q. You don't know what business Amos is engaged in? A. No, sir.

Q. And you don't know what business Warren is engaged in? A. Warren is on one of the revenue cutters, I believe. So he told my wife.

Q. And they came to your house two months or six weeks before election, and you cannot tell whether they slept there afterwards? A. No, sir; I could not tell positively if they slept there before, because I never saw them in bed.

Q. Do you know that they ever did sleep in the house? A. They paid their room rent there and came there.

Q. And that is all you know about it? A. That is all I know about it.

Q. Didn't Mr. Fleming bring those men there? A. No, sir.

Q. He did not? A. No, sir.

Q. Before you changed positions, what were you doing? A. I was Clerk of the Corporation Yard then.

Q. What was your duty there while you were Clerk there? A. I was Clerk of the Yard, kept accounts of the stock at the yard, and storekeeper in general.

Q. What hours were you expected to be there? A. From nine until five.

Q. On election day what hours did you keep there? A. Election day is a holiday.

Q. You don't work on holidays? A. No, I do not.

Q. After election day, on Wednesday, what hours did you keep? A. I don't think I was there on Wednesday.

Q. On Thursday were you there? A. No, sir.

Q. On Friday were you there? A. No, sir.

Q. On Saturday were you there? A. I couldn't tell you that.

Q. On Sunday, of course you were not there? A. No.

Q. On the following Monday were you there? A. On the following Monday, I think I was there. I was there as soon as the count was over.

Q. Then for the remaining portion of the week you devoted yourself to politics? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there any reduction of your salary on that account? A. You will have to refer to the records.

Q. I just refer to you. Did you get your salary for that time? A. Of course I got it.

Q. When you drew your salary you were required to make an affidavit, were you not? A. No, sir.

Q. Not at all? A. No, sir.

Q. You were not required to make an affidavit that you had served during the time? A. No, sir.

Q. You got it without? A. Yes, sir. I am a regularly appointed member of the Department.

Q. What was your business on election day; what were you doing? A. I was Captain of the Third Precinct of the Thirty-third District.

Q. Is that the precinct that is called the Italian quarter, up there? A. There are a good many Italians live up there.

Q. Who stationed you there? A. The Democratic County Committeeman of the district.

Q. Well, a Democratic County Committee did not. A. Well, a County Committee.

Q. Who was the man? A. I don't recollect that man's name, in the First Precinct.

Q. The two Democratic County Committeemen stationed you up there, as you call it, as Captain? A. Captain of the precinct.

Q. What were your duties up there? A. To see that everything runs right for our party, and to put people to work peddling tickets, and one thing and another.

Q. How much money did you require up there that day? A. I don't know; I required a great deal more than I had.

Q. How much money did you spend in that precinct; how much money did you give out on that day? A. I could not tell you.

Q. How much? $1,000? A. Less than $100.

Q. How much less than $100? A. I couldn't tell you.

Q. Wasn't it about $100? A. No; well, it was somewhere in that neighborhood. I had $30 that belonged to the precinct, and then I spent some of my own money.

Q. You spent some of your own money, but you don't know how much? A. No, sir.

Q. As a matter of fact, wasn't it a good deal more than $100? A. No, sir: I just told you it was $100.

Q. Exactly? A. Yes, sir—well, in the neighborhood of $100.

Q. Haven't you stated since election, and named sums a good deal larger than $100 that you spent on election day? A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Haven't you so stated? A. I stated not to my knowledge.

Q. If you so stated, it is not true, is it? A. I don't think I ever did so state.

Q. If you did so state, you told the truth, did you? A. I generally tell the truth.

Q. But if you made such a statement as that, you then told the truth, did you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. If you said that you spent over $500 in that precinct on election day, you told the truth, did you? A. Anybody that states that tells a lie.

Q. If you did so state it, it would be the truth? A. If I did so state it, it would be the truth.

Q. Will you tell us what you did with that $500? A. I said that if I had said that, it would be the truth.

Q. You said you told the truth? A. Yes; but you have not proved that I said that.

Q. How many men did you employ on election day? A. Eight or ten, I suppose.

Q. What wages did you pay them? A. Different wages.

Q. Give it to us. A. All the way from $5; some $2 50; some $7 50 and some $4.

Q. How many men did you pay $7 50 to? A. I didn't keep any list.

Q. About how many? A. I couldn't tell you. I hired people in both precincts.

Q. Was it five, or one, or what? About how many? A. Maybe one.

Q. How many did you pay five or six dollars to? A. I couldn't tell you.

Q. Was it as many as three? A. I couldn't tell you.

Q. Was it less than five? A. I don't recollect—to the best of my recollection.

Q. About how many did you pay $4 to? A. That I couldn't tell.

Q. About how many did you pay $2 50 to? A. I couldn't tell you that either.

Q. Were they in the neighborhood of ten? A. I couldn't tell. I didn't keep any list of them.

Q. You only know you gave out about $100 and you did not keep any list, but you gave to anybody? A. I gave it to whoever I thought was good.

Q. You did not spend any of that money in behalf of any of the Republican candidates, did you? A. No, sir.

Q. How long have you known John J. Sullivan, late candidate for Senator of the Twenty-first Senatorial District? A. I guess about seven or eight years.

Q. And you are pretty friendly with him, are you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In fact you are an intimate friend of his? A. Yes, sir.

Q. One of your special desires in this late fight and election was his election as Senator? A. Nothing more than any other candidate on the ticket. Of course I would like to see Mr. Sullivan elected.

Q. Didn't you do all in your power two years ago for his election to the Assembly? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Didn't you do all you could, and wasn't it your special duty to do all you could for him? A. No, sir.

Q. And wasn't it your special duty to do all in your power? A. No, sir. I told you I was for the ticket, and I did all I could for it, and Mr. Sullivan was on it, and therefore I did all I could for him.

Q. It was your special business in the election two years ago? A. I don't know anything about it two years ago.

MR. DORN: I ask your honors to instruct the witness to answer the question.

THE COURT: The witness says he don't recollect.

By MR. DORN: Do you state you don't recollect how much? A. That is what I said.

Q. Was it $100? A. I told you I didn't recollect.

Q. Was it more than $1? A. I told you I didn't recollect.

Q. You spent some money? A. Yes, sir; I spent some money.

Q. You don't recollect how much? A. No, sir.

Q. And that money was furnished you by Mr. Sullivan, was it? A. No, sir; I never got a dollar in my life from Mr. Sullivan.

Q. You never drank with him? A. Oh, yes, sir.

Q. During the last campaign, did you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. But you say you were on friendly terms, and were in the habit of talking with him, and drinking occasionally with him during the last campaign? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he was an intimate friend of yours? A. That is what he was.

Q. And yet you took no special interest in him? A. Any more than I had for the others.

Q. And you had been intimate neighbors? A. No, sir; we were never neighbors in our lives.

Q. How far did you live from him? A. I never measured the distance, but I think it is about a mile.

MR. DORN: We are not through with Mr. Maxwell yet, and will not be for some time.

MR. CLUNIE: I have a witness here from the jail that I want to examine.

MR. DORN: I have no objection to let Mr. Maxwell be withdrawn for the present, and let this witness be placed on the stand.

[Here the witness was temporarily withdrawn, and instructed to be present to-morrow morning at nine o'clock.]

WILLIAM GRIFFITH.

A witness on behalf of contestant, was duly sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: Mr. Griffith, you are confined in the city prison now, are you? Answer—Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you reside prior to that time? A. Broadway Street, between Montgomery and Kearny.

Q. That is in what district? What Senatorial District is that in? A. I don't know. It ain't in the Twenty-first.

Q. Did you ever live in the Twenty-first District? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When? A. About two years ago.

Q. Were you an officer of any club in this city and county? A. No, sir.

Q. Were you an officer of a club prior to the election? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you President of the Acme Social Club? A. No, sir.

Q. Were you Secretary of it? A. No, sir.

Q. The Arcade Club, rather? A. Sergeant-at-Arms.

Q. And you occupied that position how long? A. Just about two months.

Q. Were you in that position at the time this election was held? A. No, sir; I was not.

Q. Had you been, prior to that election? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long had it been since you were Sergeant-at-Arms? A. Three months.

Q. Do you know Mr. Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see him prior to the election? A. No, sir.

Q. You never saw him at all prior to that time? A. No, sir.

Q. How long have you known him? A. Well, about two years ago last election.

Q. When did you see him last? A. I saw him since election.

Q. Where did you see him? A. I don't know where I did see him.

Q. Where have you been? A. I have been in the prison.

Q. You must have seen him in the prison then, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then you do know where you saw him? A. Yes, I saw him in the City Prison.

Q. Then you are making a mistake when you say you did not know where you saw him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he visit you there? A. No, sir.

Q. How did you come to see him there? A. I have been removed from there.

Q. You were sentenced to the county jail? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were never in the county jail? A. I went in first and come right down again.

Q. Who did that? A. The officer that took me there.

Q. What officer? A. I don't know what officer it is.

Q. How did he come to do that? A. That is by his orders, I believe.

Q. Was that by the Judge's orders? Didn't the Judge order you sent to the county jail? A. Yes, sir.

Q. For how long? A. A year.

Q. When was that? A. Over five months ago.

Q. And you saw Mr. Banks in the city prison at that time? A. No, sir.

Q. You have not seen him at all since then? A. Yes, I saw him after election.

Q. What day? A. I couldn't tell you the day.

Q. How long after election day? A. It was a good while.

Q. Was it a month? A. No, it was not a month.

Q. Was it fifteen days? A. Yes, sir; about that.

Q. What occurred between you and Mr. Banks there? A. Nothing.

Q. You did not have a word with him at all? A. No, sir.

Q. You did not say anything? A. No, sir.

Q. You said nothing about a pardon? A. No, sir; I didn't show myself.

Q. You kept out of the way? A. Yes, sir.

- Q. Do you know Captain Smith? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. When did you see him there? A. I see him there pretty regular.
- Q. He generally goes down there pretty regularly? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Who did he go down there to see? A. He was there all by himself.
- Q. Who did Mr. Banks go there to see? A. I don't know who it was.
- Q. You know the people that are confined there? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Was it Mr. Murray he was with? A. No, sir; I have not seen him since Mr. Murray has been there.
- Q. Did you take any part in Mr. Banks' election? A. No, sir. How could I? I was in jail.
- Q. With your people on the outside? A. No, sir.
- Q. Did you have any correspondence with the Arcade Club, during the time you were in jail, regarding Mr. Banks? A. No, sir.
- Q. Who was President of the club at that time? A. I couldn't tell you; I was in jail.
- Q. Do you know who the officers were? A. No, sir.
- Q. Who was the officer there at the time of election, do you know? A. What election?
- Q. You know there was an election held here a month or so ago, don't you? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. At the time of the election, who was President of that club? A. That I couldn't tell you. I was two or three months in jail about that time.
- Q. And you don't know who they were, and who they are now? A. No, sir.
- Q. Did Mr. Banks ever talk about getting a pardon for you? A. No, sir.
- Q. Did Mr. Williams come down there and try to get a petition for a pardon for you? A. There was something about a petition.
- Q. Do you know Mr. Williams? A. Yes, I know him when I see him.
- Q. You knew he was circulating a petition for your pardon, didn't you? A. I didn't know whether he was doing it or not.
- Q. You swear to that, do you? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Are you positive of that now? A. Of what?
- Q. That you did not know that there was a petition ever circulated for your pardon? A. Yes, I know there was a petition, certainly.
- Q. And you did not know who was circulating that? A. I did not know.
- Q. You did not know how it was being done, or anything about it? A. No, sir.
- Q. Did you ever talk with Mr. Banks about that? A. No, sir.
- Q. Did you ask Mr. Banks to sign it? A. No, sir.
- Q. Did you ever ask Mr. Williams to get Mr. Banks? A. No, sir.
- Q. Did you ever talk with Mr. Williams about it? A. He said he was going to get a petition up or something.
- Q. Did he tell you he was going to get you pardoned? A. No, sir.
- Q. Did you ever speak to Mr. Banks about it? A. No, sir.
- Q. Did you tell to any officer of the city prison that you belonged to the Arcade Club, and that you took a special interest in Mr. Banks' fight? A. No, sir.
- Q. Do you know Charles Armiger? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Did you ever have a talk with him? A. He approached me.
- Q. What did you talk with him about? A. He come up to me and said: "Them fellows are giving you the lash."
- Q. He said, "Them fellows are giving you the lash?" A. Yes, sir.
- Q. What object did he have? A. I don't know.

Q. Didn't you tell Armiger, in this city prison, in this city and county, that through your influence the Arcade Club had exerted their influence, and every member of it had worked for Mr. Banks, and that in consideration of it he had agreed to get you a pardon? A. No, sir.

Q. You are positive of that? A. I am positive of that.

Q. And the only conversation you had with Armiger was, he said that they were giving you the lash, and he didn't mention who they were? A. No, sir.

Q. He didn't mention William's name? A. No, sir.

Q. Nor no one else? A. No, sir.

Q. And you are sure of that? A. No, sir; I have never had any conversation with Armiger at all, since I have been in jail there.

[Here the further hearing was continued until to-morrow morning at nine o'clock.]

FOURTH DAY.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA,)
SATURDAY, January 5, 1889—9 o'clock A. M.)

Present: Justices Stafford and Boland, the contestant and respondent and their respective counsel, and Thos. R. Knox, official reporter.

GEORGE F. MAXWELL.

Recalled for further cross-interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Where do you reside? Answer—No. 1911 Stockton.

Q. How far from that is the engine house of Four Hose Company? A. It is about a block, I guess.

Q. Do you know who were registered from the house where Four Hose is situated? A. I know some of the people that register from there, yes.

Q. About how many of them, do you know? A. Half a dozen, I guess; eight or ten probably.

Q. Do you know how many were registered from there at the last election? A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. You do not? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know who is the teamster of Four Hose? A. The Driver, do you mean?

Q. Yes, I mean the Driver. A. A man by the name of Riley.

Q. Do you know who is the Steward? A. Mike Ryan.

Q. Do you know who the Foreman is? A. James Durham.

Q. Do you know who the Assistant Foreman is? A. No, I do not.

Q. Isn't it Frank Keene? A. No, I couldn't tell you whether Frank Keene is Foreman or Assistant Foreman.

Q. Do you know any of the hosemen? A. Yes, sir.

Q. About how many of them do you know? A. I guess I know them all by sight.

Q. About how many do you know? A. There are nine men in the company; there are about five or six of them hosemen; I know them by sight.

Q. Can you name any of them? A. I know Frank Keene by sight, and William Durham, and Gus Finn.

Q. Who else? A. James Brady. I don't recollect the names of the others.

Q. Do you know a man by the name of Fred. Jackson? A. Yes, sir; Jackson is one.

Q. Do you know a man named Michael Powers? A. Yes, sir; Powers is another one.

Q. Do you know any others? A. If you will call off the list I will tell you.

Q. Do you know any of the others? A. I know all the men by sight.

Q. Do you know how many extramen there are at Four Hose? A. There are six extramen; or rather there are six extramen, the Foreman and two permanent men.

Q. Where did these people that belonged to Four Hose live? A. They live at various places.

Q. Do they live in the engine house? A. Some of them do.

Q. About how many of them? A. I couldn't tell you how many of them did.

Q. What is the number of the house where the Hose Company is located? A. It is No. 4.

Q. I mean the number of the street. What street and number? A. It is in the eighteen hundred block; I don't exactly know the number.

Q. It is on Stockton Street, isn't it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Isn't the number 1802?

MR. CLUNIE: I want at this time to interpose an objection to all this testimony as not cross examination, in any form. I will say to the witness that I shall ask him to refuse to answer these questions, on the ground that they have no bearing on this case at all. I understand that they are seeking delay in getting this before the Legislature, and I shall state that I shall close my case this morning, and ask your honor to certify it to the Legislature. I understand that not from Mr. Dorn, but some one else that knows their purpose.

MR. DORN: This is not so.

Q. What is the number of that house? Isn't it 1802? A. It is about that number.

Q. Do you know a man by the name of Charles Bass? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does he belong to Hose Company No. 4? A. He is, I understand, a substitute there.

Q. Do you know? A. No, I don't know. The Foreman can give you that information.

Q. Is there a man by the name of Antonio Benavides belongs to that company?

MR. CLUNIE: I object as not cross examination, in any way.

MR. DORN: I ask your honors to instruct the witness to answer.

THE COURT: The witness does not refuse.

MR. CLUNIE: I instruct him to refuse. I want it noted that Mr. Dorn has announced himself as intending to drive these proceedings out so as it will be impossible for the Legislature to receive these proceedings on the second week of the session of the Legislature, as provided by law. I ask the witness to decline to answer the question.

MR. DORN: I say that any person that has made any such statement has deliberately lied, and I will state that I never made such a statement of any kind.

Q. Do you know Antonio Benavides? A. I have just been instructed by my attorney, Mr. Clunie, not to answer.

MR. DORN: I ask your honors to instruct the witness to answer.

THE COURT: [To the witness] Answer the question.

MR. CLUNIE: I understand that your honors have the same powers as Notaries Public. Your honors have no power to require a witness to answer, I believe.

THE COURT: [To the witness] Answer the question.

MR. CLUNIE: Note an exception to the ruling.

[Here the reporter reads the last question to the witness].

A. Yes, I know him.

By MR. DORN: Do you know where he lives? A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Do you know whether he was registered from Hose Company No. 4?

A. I understood that he was.

Q. Who told you so? A. I don't recollect.

Q. You knew that he was, then? A. No, sir, I don't, only from hearsay.

Q. Is Antonio Benavides a member of the Fire Department? A. He is an extra driver in the Fire Department.

Q. Do you know George T. Bell? A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Do you know whether he was registered from Hose Company No. 4?

A. No, sir.

Q. You don't know the man at all? A. No, sir.

Q. Does he belong to the Fire Department? A. I don't know.

Q. You don't know whether he does or not? A. No, sir.

Q. You would know whether he belonged to Hose Company No. 4, wouldn't you? A. If he was a permanent extraman in the house I would know him.

Q. Do you know Edward F. Green? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does he belong to the Fire Department? A. He was a substitute extraman.

Q. Do you know whether he was registered from Hose Company No. 4?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know where he lived? A. I never knew him to have a permanent place of residence.

Q. Do you know a man named James McKenna? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is he a member of the Fire Department? A. He is an extra driver.

Q. Then there were five or six who were extra drivers for Hose Company No. 4? A. I did not speak of them as extra drivers.

Q. This man is an extra driver in the department? A. McKenna is; yes, sir.

Q. Do you whether he was registered from Hose Company No. 4? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know where he lives? A. Do you mean to-day?

Q. Yes, sir; to-day. A. No; I do not.

Q. Do you know where he lived at the time of this election? A. He was registered from Four Hose, and claimed that as his residence. I will state that, with extra drivers, it is customary for them to sleep in any house they want to, or any place convenient for the Engineers, so they can get them.

Q. It is customary for them to sleep where they please? A. Well, near the engine house; in the truck or hose house; wherever they see fit.

Q. Around wherever they please? A. Wherever the District Engineer sent them. They are in those houses for the convenience of the District Engineers.

Q. Do you know how many hose houses and truck houses there are in that Twenty-first Senatorial District? A. There is Four Hose, Three Engine, and Four Truck.

Q. There are three different ones? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where is Number Two Truck? A. Two Truck is on Broadway Street, between Dupont and Stockton.

Q. It is in the Twenty-first Senatorial District, is it not? A. No, sir; it is not.

Q. Do you know the members of Two Truck? A. I know the majority of them, I guess.

Q. Do you know Michael Flarety? A. I know a man by the name of Flarety; I don't know whether it is Michael or not.

Q. He is the driver there, is he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know Alfred Florance? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is his business there? A. He is a Tillerman.

Q. Do you know Peter Fleming? A. Yes; I know Peter Fleming.

Q. What is his position there? A. He is the Foreman of the company.

Q. He is a particular friend of yours, isn't he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know where he lived? A. Do I know where he lives to-day?

Q. Yes, sir. A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Do you know where he lived at the time of the election? A. No, sir.

Q. Wasn't he at the time of the election registered from 638 Green Street? A. I don't know.

Q. You don't know where he was registered from? A. No, sir.

Q. Isn't it the proper thing for him to register from the house where the fire company is situated? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know if during the last election any organization, or any branch of a political organization, was located at 638 Green Street? A. Yes, sir; there was a Democratic Registration Bureau.

Q. That was the headquarters of the Democratic Registration Bureau, was it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And if this Mr. Fleming was registered at all from there, he was registered from the Bureau, was he not? A. From the Bureau? I guess not. No.

Q. Do you know what portion of the house the Bureau occupied? A. It occupied the cellar.

Q. Do you know what is over the cellar? A. There was a big rooming house there.

Q. Do you know a man by the name of James Cumiskey? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where is he located? A. He is an extraman in No. 2 Truck.

Q. Do you know where he was registered from in the last election? A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Wasn't he registered from No. 4 Hose? A. Not that I know of.

Q. Do you know whether he was registered from No. 2 Truck in the last election? A. I couldn't tell you where he was registered from.

Q. Don't you know he was registered from No. 3 Morse Place? A. No, sir.

Q. No. 3 Morse Place is in the Twenty-first Senatorial District, isn't it? A. I don't know where No. 3 Morse Place is.

Q. You are pretty well acquainted there, are you not? A. No, sir.

Q. Don't you know where No. 3 Morse Place is? A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Do you know a man by the name of James Adams? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does he belong to the Fire Department? A. He is an extraman of No. 2 Truck.

Q. Wasn't this man James Adams registered from No. 638 Green Street at the last election? A. That I cannot tell.

Q. Do you know a man by the name of William Finnegan? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does he belong to the Fire Department? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where was he registered from at the last election? A. I don't know.

Q. Don't you know he registered from 638 Green Street? A. No, sir; I do not. I don't pay any attention to their registering.

Q. Do you know a man by the name of John Finnegan? A. I believe that is a brother of the other Finnegan.

Q. Does he belong to the Fire Department? A. I believe he is a member of Truck 1, on O'Farrell Street, between Dupont and Stockton.

Q. Wasn't he registered from 638 Green Street, in the last election? A. I don't know. I had something else to do besides hunting up where people registered from.

Q. Do you know the members of No. 3 Engine Company? A. I know some of them by sight, and some to speak to; yes, sir.

Q. Do you know a man by the name of Patrick Barry? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is he a member of that company? A. He is the Foreman of No. 3 Engine.

Q. Where is No. 3 located? A. It is on California Street between Leavenworth and Hyde, I believe.

Q. Is that in the Twenty-fourth Senatorial District? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know James Fraser? A. I think that is the name of the Engineer.

Q. Just give me as many of them as you can remember. A. I know the Driver, Holmes, the Engineer, and Barry.

Q. Barry is the Foreman? A. Barry is the Foreman.

Q. Do you know a man by the name of William Geddes? A. No, sir.

Q. He is put down in the report as a Stoker. A. No, sir; I don't know him.

Q. Do you know Lorenzo Henry? A. There is a man by that name in the company, I believe, but I never saw him.

Q. Do you know a man in that company by the name of George W. Lawton? A. Yes, I know Lawton.

Q. Do you know a man by the name of Shields? A. I know there is a man in that company, but I don't know his full name.

Q. Do you know Timothy J. Driscoll? A. Yes, I know Driscoll.

Q. Do you know a man by the name of James T. Britt? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know John J. Sullivan? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is he a member of that company? A. He is.

Q. Is that the candidate for Senator at the last election? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is Mr. Sullivan at the present time connected with that company? A. I believe not.

Q. Don't you know, as a matter of fact, that he is? A. No, I don't. I understand that Mr. Sullivan resigned from Three.

Q. When did he resign? A. I couldn't tell you. I have not seen his resignation.

Q. You are in possession of the records of the Fire Department, are you? A. I am.

Q. And those records would disclose that resignation? A. They would if it had been passed on by the Board of Fire Commissioners.

Q. Suppose it had been passed on by them? A. It would not appear on the records until passed upon by the Board.

Q. If a man sends in his resignation, and it is not passed upon by the Board, he is still a member of the department? A. He is a member of the department until such time as the Board passes on the resignation.

Q. Then, so far as you know, John J. Sullivan was a member of that company, and is to-day? A. He was a member of the company, and I understand he has resigned.

- Q. Then that is hearsay? A. Yes, that is hearsay.
- Q. Then you know that he was, and you don't know that he has resigned? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. That is the same Sullivan who is the contestant in this controversy, is it? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Do you know a man by the name of Michael Dougherty? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Is he connected with that company? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Do you know a man by the name of George Holmes? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Is he connected with that company? A. Yes, sir; he is connected with that company.
- Q. Do you know whether these men I have named to you resided in the engine house there on California Street? A. I don't know anything about who resides in the engine house on California Street.
- Q. Do you know who was registered from there in the last election? A. No, sir.
- Q. Do you know a second man by the name of Patrick Barry? Do you know another man by the name of Patrick Barry, connected with that same engine? A. Do you mean the same man?
- Q. No; I don't mean the same man. There is a Patrick Barry put down in the record as Foreman? A. Yes, sir; that is the man I know.
- Q. Do you know another man by the same name, who is connected with the same company? A. No, sir; I do not.
- Q. Do you know such a man is connected with that company? A. Yes; I know that he is Foreman of Three Engine.
- Q. Leaving out Patrick Barry who is Foreman altogether. A. I don't know any other Patrick Barry.
- Q. If there was such a man you would know him? A. I think I would.
- Q. Then he is not connected with that company? A. Not to my knowledge.
- Q. Then, if a man by the name of Patrick Barry registered from that engine house at the last election, he was not in that house? A. He was not paid by the company.
- Q. Do you know a man by the name of Patrick Nolan. A. No, sir; I do not.
- Q. Is there any such man connected with the department? A. I don't know until I refer to the records.
- Q. Do you know a man by the name of William Peterson? A. No, sir.
- Q. Is there any such man connected with that engine? A. I couldn't tell you that. He may be a substitute. We keep no records of the substitutes.
- Q. If any such a man has ever lived and been permanently attached to Engine Number Three, you would know him, wouldn't you? A. No; I wouldn't be likely to know him.
- Q. How is it you know all the rest of them? A. Because I have been acquainted with them.
- Q. You say you would not be likely to know this man, but you do know all of the others? A. I might, but not know his name.
- Q. Is there anybody around there that you don't know? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Members of the department, and those connected with it? A. No, sir; not men.
- Q. Is there anybody now connected with the Fire Department that you don't know? A. Yes, sir; there is a whole lot of them connected with the Fire Department, and I couldn't tell until I look at the record.
- Q. Do you know a man by the name of J. B. Lavaroni? A. Yes, sir.

- Q. Where does he live? A. He lives up on some of those Dago alleys.
- Q. Isn't this man, J. B. Lavaroni, the Steward of No. 1 Hose Company?
A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Then you do know him? A. I just told you I knew him.
- Q. Then you say he lived up in one of the Dago alleys? A. I just told you that is where he lives.
- Q. That is the particular branch you were Captain of in the last election, was it not? A. When?
- Q. In the last election. A. I told you I was in the Third Precinct of the Thirty-third District.
- Q. And you were the Captain? A. I told you I was one of the Captains.
- Q. What other Captain was there there? You did not mention that yesterday. I supposed you were in the exclusive charge and command. What other captain was there? A. I couldn't tell you; the County Committeeman regulates that part of it.
- Q. Did you say there was another man in charge there coöperating with you? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And you don't know his name? A. I do know his name, but there were several people, and what positions they held, whether Captains or Lieutenants, or what, I don't know.
- Q. You said just now, I believe, you were one of the Captains up there?
A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Now I ask you the direct question, who were the others? A. I understood that Mike Spinetti.
- Q. Who were the others? A. I couldn't tell you. A man by the name of Lundign, I believe, was his name—an Italian—was doing a good deal of work up there.
- Q. These two men were also Captains? A. That I don't know. The County Committeeman can tell you better than I can. I understood there were others.
- Q. They were also assisting you in that precinct? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. In behalf of the Democratic party? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Who employed them? A. The Democratic County Committee.
- Q. The Democratic County Committee employed you, didn't they? A. No; they did not employ me; my services went to the Democratic County Committee for nothing.
- Q. I understood you to say yesterday you were placed there as Captain by the Democratic County Committee? A. I was asked to go there and assist the County Committee.
- Q. These men, you say, were as active as you were in promoting the interests of the Democratic County Committee on that day? A. Yes, sir; I think they were.
- Q. And assisted in the same manner? A. Probably assisted some for all I know.
- Q. To the best of your knowledge and belief they assisted more than you did? A. Well, I don't know: they assisted what they could there.
- Q. Do you know a man by the name of Victor Dem Artini? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Where does he live? A. I think he lives on Union Street.
- Q. Hasn't he recently been added to the Fire Department? A. He has been appointed to Seventeen Engine House.
- Q. A new engine? A. A new engine.
- Q. Where did he live prior to that? A. He lived where he lives to-day, on Union Street.

Q. Wasn't he also Captain in the same precinct with you on the day of election? A. Yes, sir. I don't know what office he held there. He was an assistant in the precinct.

Q. He was working in the same way you were. That made four that were working in that precinct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And since the election he has been about the Fire Department, and has become a member, you say, of No. 17? A. No, sir; he went in there when the company was organized, last July.

Q. Do you know a man by the name of Wolf, who was also a Captain or Lieutenant in the same precinct on election day? A. Yes; I think I do.

Q. He was there assisting also in the precinct, was he? A. Yes, sir. I think there was a man by the name of Wolf that was one of the Democratic officers of election there. I know him by his nick-name, that is all.

Q. As a matter of fact, didn't this man Wolf get drunk, so as to be unable to be very efficient in his services, and wasn't he discharged during the day, and wasn't Mike Spinetti put in his place? A. No, sir; I think not.

Q. You think they were both there acting all day? A. Yes. There was a man they called Levy.

Q. Do you know an organization at North Beach called the Dauntless Club? A. The Dauntless Club; yes, sir.

Q. Where are their headquarters? A. Somewhere on Green Street, I believe.

Q. Aren't they in the same building with Mike Spinetti? A. I think they are all underneath.

Q. Don't he live in the same building where their headquarters are located? A. I don't know where Mike Spinetti lives, personally. I think his father owns this house where this hall is.

Q. Do you know of the political affiliation of the Dauntless Club? A. Yes, sir; I know them to be Democrats.

Q. Do you know what price was paid to them for their vote at the last election for Senator? A. The price paid for them?

Q. Yes, sir. A. I don't know as they got any price for their vote.

Q. Between four and five in the afternoon of election day, do you know what arrangement was made between certain persons on behalf of Mr. Sullivan and the Dauntless Club for their vote for Senator? A. There was no arrangement made with the Dauntless Club.

Q. How do you know? A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Then say so.

MR. CLUNIE: You say what you want to, as you are the witness, and Mr Dorn is not.

By MR. DORN: Where were you between four and five on election day? A. I was between the First, Second, Third, and Fourth Precincts.

Q. Did you see John J. Sullivan, the contestant in this case, about that time of the day? A. Between four and five?

Q. Yes, sir. A. I couldn't tell you; I don't recollect.

Q. Between four and five did you see Patrick Barry, Foreman of No. 3 Engine Company, on election day? A. I don't recollect that either.

Q. Do you recollect some time in the afternoon of election day seeing Patrick Barry and John J. Sullivan, the contestant in this case, together up in that neighborhood? A. I recollect seeing Mr. Sullivan about one o'clock in the afternoon, I guess. I don't recollect whether Mr. Barry was with him or not.

Q. Do you remember seeing them together in the afternoon of election day at all? A. No; I don't remember seeing them together.

Q. They might have been together and you not see them? A. They might have been together and I not see them; yes, sir.

Q. Then you say that if any arrangement of that kind was made with the Dauntless Club, or with any members of the Dauntless Club, you don't know anything about it? A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. You do know that their affiliation was Democratic, and that your impression is that they voted for the Democratic candidate? A. Yes, sir; I believe they voted for the Democratic party.

Q. Then some arrangement might have been made between parties and that club, and you not know anything about it? A. Well, I don't think so.

Q. Are you a member of the club? A. No, sir.

Q. Then how would you know about it? A. I have got a good many friends in the club.

Q. You were not a party to any such arrangement? A. If anything of that kind had been going on, very likely some of the members would have told me.

Q. You were not a party to any such arrangement, were you? A. No, sir.

Q. And you are not a member? A. No, sir.

Q. How would you know it then? A. Because I would have been told.

Q. The reason you would know about it is, you think, that if such an arrangement had been made, somebody would tell you about it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is the only reason you swear it was not made? A. I swear that no such arrangement was made, to my knowledge.

Q. You said you knew a man named Fleming, of No. 2 Truck, I believe? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whether he was a United States Marshal at the last election? A. Yes, I believe he was.

Q. You said you knew a man named Lavaroni, of No. 1 Hose, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You knew a man by the name of Edward Lanigan? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Victor Demartini? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whether these men I have just mentioned were United States Marshals at the last election? A. I understood they were extra United States Marshals, without pay, on election day.

Q. Were you a United States Marshal? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Those men that I have named were the Democratic Captains, you said, in that precinct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Including yourself? A. Some of them were; yes, sir.

Q. And you were all stationed there at that precinct, were you? A. They were stationed around in that district; not particularly in that precinct.

Q. You testified in your direct examination to a conversation which took place at Greenwich and Jansen Streets, at the Fourth Precinct of the Thirty-third District, I believe? A. The Fourth of the Thirty-fourth.

Q. About the time the returns were being made up? A. That was the time; yes, sir.

Q. Referring to the conversation between yourself and Mike Smith, who were present at that time? A. Mr. Banks was present, and Mr. Ryan. There was quite a number of other people there I don't know.

Q. Wasn't Mr. Sullivan there? A. He was there, but whether he was there when this conversation took place, I couldn't say. He was there before or after.

Q. He was there before or after this conversation took place? A. Yes, sir; he was there. We all went into that saloon to take a drink.

Q. Who were you drinking with? A. I don't recollect who we drank with first. We drank with several parties. We drank with Mr. Banks, and I think we drank with Mr. Smith and several other parties.

Q. You also had a drink with Mr. Sullivan, didn't you? A. I think we did; I don't know.

Q. You say Mr. Banks was present, Mr. Smith was present, and yourself. Anybody else? A. Ryan.

Q. Anybody else that you know of? A. I don't recollect now.

Q. To the best of your knowledge and belief, those were the only persons present at that conversation? A. There were other persons present, but I don't know who they are.

Q. At this same time isn't it the fact that you all gathered there because that was the last precinct to be returned, and that Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Banks were both there? A. They were both there.

Q. And they were there when Mr. Ryan was there, were they not? A. He came around there for about five or ten minutes—may be fifteen minutes—to look at the count.

Q. Wasn't Denny Sullivan, District Engineer of the Fire Department, there too? A. He drove up there in his buggy.

Q. Did you not hear the conversation there between Mr. Banks and Mr. Sullivan, the contestant and respondent in this matter, concerning the fairness or unfairness of the election between them? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Didn't you hear Mr. Banks ask Mr. Sullivan, or make a remark something to this effect, although I don't pretend to state the exact words: "Well, Sullivan," or "Johnny, when we went into this thing we promised to give each other a square fight, and I have done it." And didn't you hear Sullivan there acknowledge that the fight, so far as Banks was concerned, and the canvass, had been fair and square? A. I recollect Banks making a remark of that kind, but what answer Sullivan gave I wouldn't be positive.

Q. Don't you remember, as a fact, that that was the tenor of the answer? Those were not the exact words, of course. A. I don't recollect what answer was made. I recollect Mr. Sullivan shaking hands with Mr. Banks.

Q. Wasn't Mr. Sullivan's answer, "I have no fault to find with you," addressing Banks, "but I was beaten by my friends?" A. Yes, sir; I recollect that remark being made by Mr. Sullivan.

Q. Wasn't a man by the name of Steve Ford mentioned, as one of the men who should have been his friend, and who had not been his friend in the matter? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know a man by the name of Edward Ettridge being mentioned in the same way? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Didn't you then say, with regard to these men, Murray, that have been on the stand here, that you thought instead of being friendly with Smith, they should have assisted you in this fight, because you had done all you could to get a pardon for James Murray? A. What is that?

Q. I say, didn't you say to Mr. Smith, and in the presence of Mr. Banks and the other people there, that you thought the Murray boys ought to have stood in with you, and that you expected them to have done all they could, as you had tried to get Mr. Murray a pardon? A. My recollection is, that Mr. Smith told me he got away with three friends of mine up on Telegraph Hill I didn't know anything about, and I said then, "I do, and it was the Murray family," and that those people ought to be my friends.

Q. Why did you think they ought to be your friends? A. Because I had been acquainted with them a number of years.

Q. And you had tried to get him a pardon, hadn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they knew you had tried to get it? A. They knew that.

Q. As a matter of fact, you testified yesterday, you knew a man by the name of Fleming pretty well? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Didn't you assist in procuring for Fleming, while he was a member of the Fire Department, a second position of janitor? A. No, sir; I had nothing to do with it.

Q. Don't you know, as a matter of fact, that a resolution was passed afterwards by the Fire Commissioners, that no man should hold two positions, and that Fleming thereupon pretendedly resigned and put another man in his place? A. I do not know that.

Q. And that the other man has never done the work or drawn the pay, but that Fleming is drawing it to-day? A. No; I don't know that as a matter of fact.

Q. You don't know that, as a matter of fact? A. No, sir.

Q. But you have heard of it? A. I have heard a rumor.

Q. And you have told different people that that was the case? A. No, sir; I have never told anybody anything of the kind.

Q. Do you know where Banning Place is? A. No; the name is familiar, but I couldn't tell you where the street is.

Q. How far was it from the polling place of the Third Precinct of the Thirty-third Assembly District, at the last election? A. That I couldn't tell you.

Q. Isn't it right around the corner? A. I don't know what the name of the street is.

Q. There is a narrow street there? A. There are a couple of narrow streets there; yes, sir.

Q. In the immediate neighborhood? A. Right in the immediate neighborhood; yes, sir.

Q. And they are very close to where the polling place was located in the Third Precinct of the Thirty-third Assembly District? A. Very near; they are in the same block.

Q. You don't know whether it is called Banning Place or not? A. I couldn't tell you the names of the streets.

Q. One of these streets is westerly from the polling place, isn't it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. With regard to the name, isn't that narrow street or alley a little to the west of the polling place of the Third Precinct of the Thirty-Third Assembly District, the corner around which yourself and the other numerous Captains of that precinct took people that you were persuading by various means to vote the Democratic ticket? A. Took them around where?

Q. Took them around in that alley? A. Not to my recollection. Some people may have taken them around there.

Q. Did you do that? A. I don't recollect that.

Q. Do you know whether the other Captains of that precinct did? A. No; I saw some of them talking in there.

Q. Did you go in that alley at all? A. Oh, yes, I go through all of those alleys.

Q. Did you go in that alley on that day? A. Yes, sir.

Q. With voters of that precinct? A. I don't know whether with some of the voters. I went through, simply.

Q. What did you go in there for? A. I went in there to talk with them privately.

Q. Did the other Captains go in there to talk with them privately? A. I couldn't tell you.

Q. Did you see them? A. Yes, I saw some.

Q. With voters of the precinct? A. I couldn't tell you with voters of the precinct. I went in there to take a short cut.

Q. And the purpose of taking those men there was to talk to them privately? A. Yes; sometimes to go through and get a drink.

Q. That was the purpose for which you and the other Captains used that alley on that day, to talk privately with voters? A. And to walk through the street the same as I would any other street and alley.

Q. About how many men did you talk privately with, and walk around in that alley with, on that day? A. I don't recollect the number.

Q. Was it as many as five? A. I don't recollect.

Q. Was it as many as ten? A. I told you I didn't recollect.

ANTONIO GIOTTO.

A witness on behalf of contestant, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: You were subpoenaed here as a witness, were you?
Answer—Yes, sir.

Q. And you got your fees? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where were you on election day? A. In the city.

Q. Were you up on Polk Street that day? A. Oh, yes, sir.

Q. Were you on the corner of Polk and Broadway? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have any conversation there with any person regarding voting for Senator in the Twenty-first District? A. One man there, corner of Polk and Broadway, he asked me if I voted or not. I said, "I don't vote this year, because I didn't come in time for the registration, because I worked in Contra Costa County. I came here the ninth, and I don't want to go to jail." On election day here in the city, corner of Broadway and Polk, one man, I don't know him, asked me if I vote, and I said, "No, not this year." He asked me if I wanted to go around and make money, and I said I didn't know how, but what was the way he wanted me to make money, and he asked me if I wanted to take $10, and he showed me $10, to go working the ticket for one man he called it Bank; and he said, "Here is $10; go around and do all you can for him." That is all he said to me. I don't know the man at all. I asked the name, and I asked where he lived, and I asked the profession. I did not know, and he did not want to say anything to me.

Q. You asked him his name, and he didn't tell you? A. No, sir.

Q. And he asked you to take $10 and go around and work for Banks?
A. Yes, sir; for Banks. And I don't know Banks or Sullivan at all.

Q. Did anybody approach you at another place on that day about this?
A. And on the corner of Broadway and Stockton.

Q. What did that man say to you? A. That man, he asked me if I wanted to make money, and I said no: and he showed me one $20 and $5 piece, $25, to go around making votes from my friends for the Republican ticket. I said, "I ain't in such a profession; I don't do it."

Q. Did he say anything about Banks, there? A. He mentioned some man's name; I can't remember it. There he offered me $25, corner of Broadway and Stockton.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Do you know whether Broadway and Stockton is in the Twenty-first Senatorial District? A. I don't know; I can't understand that, because I ain't much posted about politics.

MR. DORN: I suppose, as a matter of fact, you will admit that that is not in the Twenty-first District, Mr. Clunie?

MR. CLUNIE: I don't know that. Broadway and Polk is in the district.

THE WITNESS: That is a man that offered me $10 to vote for Banks against Sullivan, and I said, "I don't do it."

MR. CLUNIE: Broadway and Polk is not in the Twenty-first Senatorial District.

By MR. DORN: How much money were you offered to work for Mr. Sullivan? A. Oh, no money at all.

Q. No money at all? A. Oh, no; I wouldn't sell myself. I am twenty-four years in California, my dear friend. I know.

Q. I don't suppose you would sell yourself at all, only I wanted to know. You say somebody offered you money to work for Banks, as you say? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, I want to know how much anybody offered you to work for Mr. Sullivan? A. None.

Q. Nobody asked you to work for Mr. Sullivan at all? A. No, sir.

Q. Did anybody tell you to vote for Mr. Sullivan? A. No, sir.

Q. Nobody told you to vote for Mr. Sullivan? A. No, sir.

Q. You did not know Mr. Sullivan was a candidate for office, did you? A. No; because I didn't get in time.

Q. You lived over there in the Twenty-first Senatorial District? A. No; corner of Kearny and Jansen.

Q. You were around all day over there on election day? A. No; I don't go on election business. I go to my work. I have got some houses in charge for some kind of agent here in the city. This young man [indicating William Maxwell] come to me to subpoena me where I was working, he paid me the $2 and I come here.

Q. What did he tell you when he gave you the subpoena? A. He called me into Court.

Q. Did he tell you what he wanted you to testify about those things? A. No, sir.

Q. How did he know what you were going to testify to? A. I don't know.

Q. Who did you ever tell what you were going to testify to? A. I am old man enough for that.

Q. But you don't understand me. A. Yes, I understand you perfectly.

Q. Since election day you have never told anybody about these occurrences, have you? A. No, I don't tell anybody.

Q. You have never told anybody at all? A. No.

Q. You have never told anybody? A. No.

Q. If I understand you, you say that from election day till the day you came on the stand, you have never told anybody about these things? A. Oh, yes, I tell here at the corner one day—corner of Bryant and Fourth.

Q. Who did you tell? A. They were talking about election at the time election was over; about four or five days after that I was going down below to buy lumber at the wharf, and there were two or three men there talking, and they said to me, "Didn't you make any money at all this year?" and I said, "I don't want to make money. People come to me and offered me money."

Q. Who were those men? A. I don't know. I don't keep these things.

Q. You don't know? A. No, sir.

Q. And that is all you said to them, that somebody offered you money, but you didn't make any? A. No.

Q. That is all? A. Oh, no.

Q. What else did you say? A. Well, I said it.

Q. Is that all you said to them? A. Yes; I said "I don't sell myself."

Q. And that is all you said, was it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then if you never told this gentleman who subpoenaed you what you were going to testify to, then somebody else had told him, had they?
A. Yes, sir.

WILLIAM MAXWELL.

A witness called on behalf of contestant, was duly sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: Are you a resident of the Twenty-first Senatorial District? Answer—I am.

Q. You have lived there for how long? A. About twenty-one years.

Q. You were living there at the last election? A. I was.

Q. Where were you on the day of election? A. I was in the Third Precinct of the Thirty-fourth District.

Q. Where is that situated? A. It is situated corner of Montgomery Avenue and Greenwich.

Q. Do you know a man by the name of Lynch? A. I do.

Q. On that day did you see Mr. Lynch in that precinct? A. No, sir; not on that day. I saw him previous to that.

Q. Where did you see him previous to that? A. I saw him about two weeks before election in a saloon on Montgomery Avenue.

Q. Did you have any talk with him on that day? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have any talk with him with relation to Mr. Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was that conversation? A. We had several drinks, and walked out about half-past eleven o'clock at night, and Mr. Lynch lives in Salmon Alley; and I said, "I see you are against Johnny Sullivan," and he said, "I am." I asked him, "For what reason? I thought you were a Democrat." He said, "So I am a Democrat, and I am for the whole Democratic ticket, but I am for Banks; I have taken this man's money, and I am going to stay with him, and I have taken his money, and I am going to do all I can for him."

Q. That was Mr. Lynch? A. That was Mr. Lynch. He said, "I am against Johnny Sullivan, and I have got Banks' money, and I am going to do all I can for him."

Q. Were you in Judge Finn's Court during the recount? Did you see the ballots of the Seventh Precinct of the Thirty-third District, during the recount? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where were you at that time? A. I was sitting right alongside the stringer.

Q. Did you have an opportunity to see every ballot as they came out of the box? A. I saw every ballot that came out of the box and was put on file there.

Q. Did you notice anything peculiar about the ballots there? A. Yes, I did.

Q. What was it? A. I noticed a good many Democratic tickets came out straight. There was names had one or two scratches on them, and I noticed a waving line in the name of Mr. Sullivan for Senator, and it wasn't a straight line, but a wavering line, and sometimes it went in the sides.

Q. How often did that occur? A. To the best of my belief, forty or fifty times.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: The Deputy Sheriff was the stringer? A. Yes; he was the stringer.

Q. He had just as good an opportunity to see it? A. He had just as good an opportunity to see it as I did—yes, sir.

Q. If he swore to twenty-five—to some twenty-five or thirty times—he is mistaken? A. Yes, he is possibly mistaken; and I may be mistaken in the number. The number was over twenty-five, I am positive.

Q. You kept no tally? A. I kept no tally.

Q. You now state it from memory alone? A. I now state it from memory alone, as they came out one after the other.

Q. Were you present at the time the Second Precinct of the Thirty-third was counted? A. I was.

Q. Did you take off any tally there for Senator? A. I did.

Q. About what was the result you arrived at? A. I think Mr. Sullivan gained two votes in that precinct.

Q. Don't you know that that is not true? A. No; I know it is true. I am swearing on the stand here, and you cannot tell me what is true and what is not. I kept a tally, and that gave Mr. Sullivan a gain of two votes in that precinct.

Q. And you kept an honest tally? A. I kept an honest tally, just as honest as I could.

Q. That is very variable. A. Never mind how variable it is.

Q. You were pretty active in the last canvass during the last election? A. Probably no more than anybody else.

Q. Do you suppose everybody else in San Francisco took as active a part as you did? A. I suppose they did.

Q. Don't you know, as a matter of fact, you took a great deal of interest, and more than some people? A. I suppose I did more than some people, but I don't suppose so much more than anybody else.

Q. You are a member of the Confidence Club, are you? A. Yes, sir; I am.

Q. You know John J. Sullivan? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He is a particular friend of yours? A. Yes; he is a particular friend of mine.

Q. You are at present employed in the Tax Collector's office? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you, at the time of election, employed in the Tax Collector's office? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did John J. Sullivan get your position for you in the Tax Collector's office? A. No, sir.

Q. He was rather active in getting it for you, wasn't he? A. No, sir; he was not. I never asked Mr. Sullivan in my life to do anything for me.

Q. You wouldn't allow him to do anything for you? A. If it was necessary for him to do it, I would allow him to do it.

Q. And if it was necessary, you expect him to do it? A. Yes, sir; if it was necessary.

Q. Your relations have been such that you would expect him to do it? A. No, sir.

Q. You don't claim anything for your political services? A. Not my services; no, sir.

Q. Not at all? A. No, sir; nothing but friendship.

Q. Which precinct were you in during the last election? A. I was in the Third Precinct of the Thirty-fourth.

Q. Were you a Captain there, or only a Lieutenant? A. I was a Captain.

Q. Who were the other Captains in that precinct? A. There was no other Captain I know of, except Mr. Buckley, of the Republican party.

Q. You had charge of the whole works there for the Democratic party, did you? A. I don't know as there was any works to have charge of.

Q. You were in command? A. I was simply appointed there to look out for the votes.

Q. If there was anybody else there, they were simply Lieutenants under you? A. I don't know of any such office at all.

Q. Do you know of any such office as Captain? A. You might call me Captain. I was appointed by the County Committee to see that the tickets were there on the table, and that there was a man there to challenge.

Q. How many men did you employ on that day? A. There were five ticket peddlers and one challenger.

Q. You employed six? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You employed none to watch? A. No; I did all the watching.

Q. Yourself only? A. Me and Frank Hussey.

Q. And you paid him? No, sir; he got nothing.

Q. Who was Frank Hussey? A. He was a resident of the Thirty-fourth District.

Q. He used to be a member of the Assembly, didn't he? A. I believe he was four years ago.

Q. And he was elected on the Republican ticket? A. I believe he was, four years ago.

Q. And he was a candidate for Senator against Banks, was he not? A. No, sir.

Q. Don't you know that? A. On the ticket?

Q. Yes. A. Or the convention?

Q. Yes. A. Yes; I heard that in the convention he was a candidate.

Q. This former Republican member of the Assembly, and this candidate for nomination for State Senator against Banks, was the gentleman employed by you— A. [Interrupting.] I did not employ him. Hussey gave his services gratis.

Q. He and yourself were the ones to watch? A. We were the watchers.

Q. How much did you pay each man? A. I paid them $5.

Q. Then you paid out exactly $30? A. I paid out exactly $30.

Q. How much money did you use on election day in that precinct? A. Not any more money.

Q. Not a dollar? A. I spent a dollar or so for my meals and one thing and another, and cigarettes and cigars.

Q. Meals and cigarettes was the extent of your dissipation on that day? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You didn't take any beer? A. I don't drink beer.

Q. You don't drink? A. No, sir; I don't drink at all. I don't use liquor in any form.

Q. Did you ever take a drink in your life? A. I have; yes, sir.

Q. You did not spend any money to treat anybody on that day, then? A. I may have, but I don't know—no, I don't recollect treating anybody on that day. I was in the barroom several times, but I don't recollect treating anybody.

Q. The barroom there was open? A. No; it was a little bar in the back.

Q. A little bar in the back, where you had access? A. Well, anybody could get in there.

Q. Were you in charge of one precinct only, or several? A. One.

Q. You didn't go around to any of the others during the day? A. I was in the Fourth Precinct once during the day.

Q. Only in the Fourth? A. Yes, sir; that was only across the street.

Q. Were you there when the polls closed in the Fourth Precinct? A. No, sir; I was in the Third Precinct.

Q. Do you know a gentleman by the name of Riley, a member of the Fire Department? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you remove a Clerk by the name of Alvey during the count there? A. No, sir.

Q. C. W. Alvey? A. No, sir.

Q. Wasn't there a Clerk by the name of C. W. Alvey in the Third Precinct? A. He served all through the Board—all through the count.

Q. Did he keep a tally all during the count? A. No, sir.

Q. Who kept it? A. There was a mistake about the appointment. There were two Judges or two Clerks appointed, I don't know which, one named Riley and the other named Alvey. One was Judge, but both of their warrants called for a clerkship, and Alvey was not competent to act as Clerk, and I think Alvey acted as a Judge and Riley acted as a Clerk. Both of their appointments called for a clerkship; and there was one Clerk more than should be in the Board and one Judge less than should be.

Q. I understand. Riley was a Democrat, wasn't he? A. Riley was not the Riley of the Fire Department; he is a man that lives on Stockton Street and no relative of the Riley of the Fire Department.

Q. And in no way connected with him? A. No, sir; not in any way connected with him.

Q. And you are positive he is not a relative? A. I am positive of that. I think he is a bookbinder.

Q. Do you know that the Riley who was in the Fire Department was around there during the count? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How do you know he is no relation to the other Riley? A. I know he is not.

Q. And you are personally acquainted with both of them? A. Yes; and I know his father and every member of his family. I believe their names are spelled different.

Q. You are positive that that is all the money you used on election day? A. Yes, sir; that is all the money I recollect using, was $30.

Q. Where was that money furnished you from? A. It was given to me by my brother. He received it from the County Committee, and gave it to me.

THOMAS J. L. SMILEY.

A witness on behalf of contestant, was duly sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: Mr. Smiley, you are the Registrar of this city and county, I believe? Answer—Yes, sir.

Q. And as such you have in your custody the records of the Board of Election Commissioners? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you the records of the Board of Election Commissioners, or the official vote of the Thirty-third Assembly District? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Please give me the vote for the Electors of that district. I want you to give me the vote for Electors first. Give us the highest and the lowest for each—the Democratic and Republican? A. The First of the Thirty-third, all the Republican candidates received eighty-eight.

Q. They all received eighty-eight? A. Yes, sir.

Q. For Electors? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did the Democrats receive? A. One hundred and sixty-five, all.

Q. What was scattering? A. Nothing.

Q. Now turn to the Senatorial vote. A. The First of the Thirty-third, Banks received seventy-nine, and Sullivan received one hundred and sixty-four.

Q. What was the scattering vote there? A. Nothing.

Q. Take the Second Precinct. A. In the Second, the Republican candidates received one hundred and five, with the exception of one, who received one hundred and three.

Q. Now, the Democratic? A. Four of them received one hundred and eighty-nine, and one received one hundred and eighty-eight.

Q. That is the Third Precinct? A. No, sir; the Second.

Q. I want the Third Precinct, now. A. In the Third, one of the Presidential candidates received one hundred and thirty-four; two of them received one hundred and thirty-four; four of them received one hundred and thirty-three, and one received one hundred and thirty-two.

Q. That is, the Republicans? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now give us the Democrats? A. The Democrats, six received one hundred and sixty-one, and two of them received one hundred and sixty.

Q. Now give me the Senatorial vote there. A. Of the Third Precinct?

Q. Of the Third; yes, sir. A. Banks received one hundred and twenty-six, and Sullivan received one hundred and fifty-eight.

Q. Now, the scattering vote for Senator. A. The scattering there was one vote for Senator.

Q. Now, give me the Fourth Precinct. A. Presidential of the Third, there were seven scattering; one each for Mr. Pixley, Mr. Lyon, Mr. Duncan, Mr. Inman, Mr. Garnet—one for each.

Q. Give me the Republican and Democratic. A. In which precinct?

Q. In the Fourth Precinct. A. In the Fourth Precinct, the three Republican Electors received one hundred and forty-six, and five received one hundred and forty-five.

Q. Now, the Democratic. A. Five received one hundred and fifty-six, two received one hundred and fifty-five, and one one hundred and fifty-four, and no scattering.

Q. Now, the Senatorial. A. The Fourth of the Thirty-third. Banks received one hundred and forty-one; Sullivan received one hundred and fifty-four; scattering, none.

Q. No scattering at all in that precinct? A. No, sir.

Q. Now, give me the Fifth of the Thirty-third. A. The Presidential?

Q. Yes, sir. A. The Fifth of the Thirty-third, one of the Republicans received one hundred and eighty-seven, one received one hundred and eighty-six, five received one hundred and eighty-five, and one one hundred and eighty-four. Of the Democrats, seven received one hundred and eighty-seven, and one received one hundred and eighty-six.

Q. Now, the Senatorial vote. A. Banks received one hundred and ninety-six; Sullivan received one hundred and seventy-one; and scattering, two.

Q. Now, the Sixth. A. In the Sixth, seven Republican Electors received one hundred and thirty each, and one received one hundred and thirty-two. Of the Democrats, seven received one hundred and sixty-two, and one received one hundred and sixty-one.

Q. Now, the Senatorial. A. Banks received one hundred and thirty-nine, and Sullivan received one hundred and forty.

Q. What is scattering? A. Six.

Q. Does it show who those six votes were counted for, or simply scattering? A. Just scattering.

Q. Now give me the Seventh Precinct. A. Seven Republicans received one hundred and seventy, and one received one hundred and seventy-one.

Q. Now the Democratic. A. Seven received one hundred and thirty-three, and one received one hundred and thirty-two; scattering, three.

Q. Give us the Senatorial of the Seventh. A. Banks received one hundred and eighty-one, Sullivan one hundred and fifteen, scattering five.

Q. Now give me the Eighth Precinct. A. Presidential?

Q. Yes, sir. A. Seven Republicans received one hundred and ninety and one received one hundred and eighty-nine.

Q. Now the Democratic. A. Of the Democratic, seven received ninety-two and one received ninety-one, and seven scattering.

Q. Now give me the Senatorial of the Eighth Precinct. A. Banks received one hundred and ninety-one, and Sullivan received seventy-four.

Q. What is the scattering? A. Seventeen scattering.

Q. Does it show who those scattering were for? A. No, sir; it don't show.

Q. Now turn to the Fourth Precinct of the Thirty-fourth District. A. The Fourth on the Presidential?

Q. Yes, sir; just the same as you have been giving it. A. One Republican received one hundred and thirty-one, two received one hundred and thirty, four received one hundred and twenty-nine, and one received one hundred and twenty-eight.

Q. Now the Democrats. A. Five received one hundred and forty-three, one received one hundred and forty-two, and two received one hundred and forty-one.

Q. Now the Senatorial. A. The Fourth of the Thirty-fourth?

Q. Yes, sir. A. Banks received one hundred and forty-one, Sullivan one hundred and twenty-four, scattering one.

Q. There is only one scattering? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Give us the Fifth Precinct now. A. The Fifth of the Thirty-fourth, four of the Republicans one hundred and thirty-three, three received one hundred and thirty-two, and one received one hundred and thirty-one. The Democrats all received one hundred and nineteen, and one scattering.

Q. What is the Sullivan and Banks vote there? A. Banks received one hundred and thirty-eight, Sullivan received one hundred and five, and scattering, three.

Q. Now give us the Sixth Precinct. A. Of the Presidential, one Republican received one hundred and forty-one, and seven received one hundred and forty. Democratic, seven received one hundred and forty-eight, and one received one hundred and forty-seven; scattering, one.

Q. Now the Senatorial. A. The Sixth Senatorial, Banks received one hundred and sixty-six, and Sullivan received one hundred and fifteen; scattering, seven.

Q. Now give us the Seventh Precinct of the Thirty-fourth District. A. Seven of the Republicans received one hundred and forty-three, and one received one hundred and forty-two. Of the Democrats, six received ninety-nine, and two received ninety-eight; scattering, one.

Q. What is the Senatorial vote in that Seventh Precinct? A. Banks received one hundred and sixty; Sullivan received eighty; scattering, three.

Q. Give us the vote in the Third Precinct in the Thirty-fourth Assembly District. A. Of the Presidential Electors, five Republicans received one hundred and fifty-two, and three received one hundred and fifty-one. Of the Democrats, seven received one hundred and sixty-seven, and one received one hundred and sixty-six; four and three scattering. Banks received one hundred and forty-one, and Sullivan received one hundred and sixty-eight.

Q. Give us the total vote for Senator in that Senatorial District—that is, in the two Assembly Districts, the vote for Senator. A. There were two thousand three hundred and three votes for Banks, and two thousand two hundred and thirty for Sullivan.

Q. What is the scattering? A. The sum total of the scattering is fifty-five.

Q. That makes a total of how many? A. Four thousand seven hundred and forty-one.

Q. Have you the Presidential vote in those two districts, so you can give it to me? A. No, sir.

Q. Have you any way of telling, by your returns, how many ballots were voted in the Twenty-first Senatorial District that did not properly belong in that district? A. No, sir; they come under the scattering.

Q. That is mostly what the scattering is composed of? A. I imagine so, sir.

Q. Did you put down any scattering in the Third Precinct of the Thirty-fourth District? A. Only four.

Q. What was scattering for Senator? A. In the Fourth of the Thirty-fourth the scattering was one; in the Third of the Thirty-fourth the scattering was two.

Q. And that is all that appears there? A. That is all.

Q. And you cannot account for the discrepancy between the Presidential electors' vote and the Senatorial vote? A. I don't know that there is any discrepancy.

Q. There is a discrepancy. But you cannot account for that? A. No, sir. There were three hundred and twenty-six cast.

MR. CLUNIE: Will you admit that Mr. Banks has received his certificate?

MR. DORN: There is no question about that. We admit that he has received a certificate of election from the Registrar.

Cross Interrogatories

By MR. DORN: Please give us the rest of the precincts which Mr. Clunie skipped. The Second Precinct of the Thirty-third Assembly District he skipped, A. The Second Precinct of the Thirty-third District, the Republican Electors, seven of them received one hundred and five and one received one hundred and three. Of the Democratic Electors, five received one hundred and eighty-nine, one received one hundred and eighty-eight, one received one hundred and ninety, and one received one hundred and ninety-one. No scattering.

Q. Give us the vote for Senator. A. In the Second Precinct of the Thirty-third District, Banks received eighty-six, and Sullivan received one hundred and ninety-six. No scattering.

Q. Have you any means of knowing or accounting for the discrepancy between the vote for Senator in that precinct, in which it appears that the Republican Electors received one hundred and five and Banks received nineteen less? Have you any information which will account for that discrepancy? A. No, sir; I have no means of knowing.

Q. Have you any means of accounting for the fact that Mr. Sullivan in that precinct received some eight or ten votes in excess of the Democratic Presidential Electors? A. No, sir.

Q. You have no more information on that precinct than you have on any other? A. No, sir.

Q. And you have no means of accounting for the discrepancies in favor of Banks and against Sullivan than you have in favor of discrepancies in favor of Sullivan and against Banks? A. No, sir.

Q. Give us the First Precinct of the Thirty-fourth District? A. Seven Republicans received one hundred and thirty-seven and one received one hundred and thirty-six. Of the Democrats, all received one hundred and forty-eight, and no scattering.

Q. What was the vote for Senator in that precinct? A. One hundred and thirty for Banks and one hundred and forty-seven for Sullivan.

Q. What is the scattering? A. None.

Q. You have no means for accounting for Banks' discrepancy in the vote in that place? A. No, sir.

Q. Give us the Second Precinct of the Thirty-fourth District. A. The Republican candidates received one hundred and twenty-nine each, seven of the Democrats received one hundred and eighty-four, and one one hundred and eighty-four.

Q. Give us the Senatorial vote. A. One hundred and thirteen for Banks and one hundred and ninety-five for Sullivan; no scattering.

Q. Have you any means in the world for accounting for the fact that Banks runs behind the Republican Electors ten or fifteen votes, and Sullivan runs ahead in that precinct? A. No, sir.

Q. Then taking the whole district through, one precinct after another, as appears from your returns in your possession, in some of the precincts Banks' vote is less than the Republican Electors, and in some it is in advance; and in some of the precincts Sullivan's vote is less than that of the Democratic Electors, and in some it is largely in excess? A. It appears to be so, sir.

Q. Isn't that shown by the record you hold in your hand? A. I didn't carry it through in my head regularly, but it attracted my attention as it went along; that was about the result.

Q. The Eighth Precinct of the Thirty-third Assembly District, have there not been eleven Republican votes, which were rejected by the Board of Election, counted in two Courts where different election contests have been going on? A. I have no means of knowing.

MR. DORN: If your honors please, this is the most auspicious occasion that I know of to repeat the proposition which I made before, the Registrar being here now, and all the parties being present; and on behalf of the respondent, Mr. Banks, we offer to come into this Court, and before your honors count the ballots cast for the office of Senator in the Twenty-first Senatorial District in the last election, and to abide by the result of those ballots.

MR. CLUNIE: How do your honors feel about counting the ballots?

JUSTICE STAFFORD: We have no ruling to make on that.

MR. DORN: I presume if the ballots are here your honors will take evidence on that as on any other subject.

MR. CLUNIE: As I stated yesterday, we made this offer to Mr. Banks, and he declined.

JUSTICE STAFFORD: If both parties will agree, and the Registrar will produce the ballots, I don't know how we can refuse to count them.

MR. DORN: Upon producing the subpoena for those ballots, will you produce those ballots in Court, to be counted, Mr. Smiley? A. Those ballots are sealed—on the recounts which have progressed—have been resealed and placed in the custody of the Registrar, who was then Mr. Prindle. The Board of Election Commissioners voted that Mr. Prindle and one of the Election Commissioners, Mr. Strother, should see that they were placed in the vault and be properly sealed and properly watched, and that Mr. Strother was to hold one key of the vault, and the Registrar was to hold the other, all of which has been done. Mr. Strother cannot obtain admission to that vault without my presence, and I cannot obtain admission to the vault without Mr. Strother's presence. From conversations I have had with Mr. Strother with regard to the matter, I don't think there will be any difficulty in producing the matter on summons.

By MR. CLUNIE: Do you say these ballots have been all sealed up by the Judges? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would you undertake to open the ballots? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And break the seal of the ballots? A. Yes, sir; if the Judges told me to do it.

Q. And count them again? A. Yes, sir; and seal them up again.

MR. DORN: Will you accept the proposition, Mr. Clunie?

MR. CLUNIE: I am not going to say anything.

JUSTICE STAFFORD: Two years ago there were two or three of these contests, and the then Registrar, Mr. Walsh, refused to produce the ballots, or to open them, and it was conceded that we had no right to order the Registrar to produce the ballots. If the Registrar, without any subpoena from us, will produce the ballots, and will open them, very well. We have no objection.

By MR. CLUNIE: Do I understand that without the subpoena you are willing to bring those ballots into Court and break open those packages? A. I have not said so.

MR. DORN: Will your honors not give me any subpoena for the Registrar, and for him to produce the ballots?

JUSTICE STAFFORD: We will not order him to open the packages.

MR. DORN: Are you willing now to have them counted, Mr. Clunie?

MR. CLUNIE: Yes, sir; and I have always been.

MR. DORN: I ask that the reporter note that stipulation.

MR. CLUNIE: I object to the reporter noting anything of the kind.

MR. DORN: I ask that the reporter note his refusal to enter into the agreement.

MR. CLUNIE: I object to the reporter noting anything of the kind.

WILLIAM J. SULLIVAN.

A witness on behalf of contestant, sworn and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: What is your full name, Mr. Sullivan? Answer—William John Sullivan.

Q. Where do you live? A. I lived until a few weeks ago at 2510 Leavenworth Street.

Q. How long did you live there? A. I have lived there ever since I came back from sea, six months ago.

Q. Did you live there at the time of election? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where were you on election day? A. In the Second of Thirty-fourth.

Q. That was your place; in the Second of Thirty-fourth? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Prior to the time of your voting was there any proposition made by any person to give you money for voting for Mr. Banks for Senator from the Twenty-first Senatorial District? A. There was on the morning of election, about two hours before I voted. There was a man came to me and offered me $5, provided I voted for Mr. Banks.

Q. That was in the Second of Thirty-fourth? A. Yes, sir.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: You did not accept his proposition? A. No, sir.

Q. What is the name you generally go by around town? A. They call me "Yankee" sometimes.

Q. They call you Yankee Sullivan. Where did you get that name? A. I couldn't tell you where I got it.

Q. That is the name by which you are known around town? A. Not by everybody. There are only a few call me that.

Q. You don't know who the man was that made this proposition, do you?

A. No, sir; I don't know his name. I know him when I see him, but I don't know his name, and I never saw him before.

Q. Have you ever told anybody about that occurrence until to-day? A. I told Mr. Callihan.

Q. When did you tell Mr. Callihan? A. I told him on the day of election, before I voted.

Q. He was a Democratic Captain of Election over there on that day, wasn't he? A. I believe he was.

Q. How much did Mr. Callihan give you for voting for Mr. Sullivan? A. He didn't give me anything. I received no money from anybody at all.

Q. What was you promised? A. Promised nothing.

Q. You have been talking about your testimony here in the last few days, haven't you? A. No; I haven't said nothing.

Q. Have you spoken to anybody at all about it? A. No, sir.

Q. You have not said a word about it? A. No; Callihan asked me once if I was going up to testify, and I told him yes, I would testify to what I told him on the day of election, because he asked me. I did not know I was to testify until the other day. He asked me if I remembered it.

Q. Haven't you within the last three days stated to a friend of yours, in this city and county, that you were going up here to testify in this case in the manner you have now testified, and that you were going to get $10 for it? A. No, sir.

Q. Wait a moment; and that if he would go with you and give similar testimony that he would be paid the same amount? A. No, sir.

Q. You swear positively to that, do you? A. I swear positively.

Q. You have made no statement that you were to get anything for your testimony here? A. No, sir. I never expect to get anything, either.

Q. You swear you have never said that to anybody? A. No, sir.

Q. And you never said you were going to get $10 for your testimony? A. No, sir.

Q. And you don't expect to get it? A. No, sir; and I was never promised anything.

Q. Do you know Mr. Riley of the North End Club? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know Mr. Fay? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you known Mr. Riley and Mr. Fay? A. I guess about fifteen years; maybe sixteen years.

Q. Do you belong to the North End Social Club? A. I am not a member of it, but I have got the privilege of going there.

Q. You are on friendly terms with them, are you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whether they have a large picture frame there which was presented by Mr. Morrow? A. I don't know who it was presented by, but I know they have got a large picture frame there.

Q. About how many pictures are there in it? A. There is none in it at present. All of them haven't got their pictures taken.

Q. They are having their pictures taken? A. They might be through, but they were getting them taken.

CHARLES SMITH.

A witness on behalf of contestant, sworn and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: Mr. Smith, where do you reside? Answer—At the present time I reside in Berkeley.

Q. Where did you live shortly before the election? A. No. 1236 Broadway.

Q. How long did you live there? A. Two years.

Q. That was in the Twenty-first Senatorial District?

Q. Do you know that man standing up there [indicating F. R. Conway]? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he ever pay you $5 for room rent there? A. No, sir.

Q. He swore on the stand that he did. Then he is mistaken, is he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever give him a receipt for that? A. No, sir.

Q. He is mistaken, is he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He swore on the stand that you said Johnnie Sullivan had given you $40 for work you had done for him. Is that true or false? A. That is false.

Q. Did you ever receive any money from Mr. Sullivan for what you did? A. No, sir.

Q. This is the man that I refer to as Mr. Conway [indicating]. That is all.

Cross Interrogatories.

By Mr. DORN: How did you come to get people registered from your house that didn't pay rent to you? A. The man wanted to come over there to vote.

Q. What did he want to come over there for? A. He came to vote, I suppose.

Q. Are you in the habit of giving receipts to people who do not pay you money? A. No; not very often.

Q. How long have you known Mr. Conway? A. I suppose about a year and a half or two years.

Q. Are you an intimate friend of his? A. I always have been.

Q. And you gave him a receipt for money that he never paid? A. Who got the receipt?

Q. I don't know who got it. You signed the receipt, did you? A. I signed the receipt.

Q. You signed the receipt and never got a dollar for it? A. I never got a dollar.

Q. And you sent that receipt out with your signature on it knowing it was false, and that it was not true; namely, that you got $5? A. I don't understand you.

Q. The receipt says you got $5. And you signed the receipt knowing the statement was false, did you? A. I never got any $5.

Q. You knew at the time you were signing a falsehood? A. I got nothing at all.

Q. You got the $5? A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. And you signed a receipt for $5? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you signed that which was false? A. I suppose so.

Q. What? A. According to that I got no $5.

Q. Then you signed what was false? A. The receipt is true enough, yes; the man wrote it and I signed it.

Q. The receipt was true, was it? A. It was true, far enough, yes.

Q. The receipt was true, was it? A. The receipt can't be true if I didn't get $5.

Q. Do you swear that the receipt recited a falsehood? The receipt says you received from him $5. That was not true, was it? A. No, it was not.

Q. And you put your name on to it? A. That is all right.

Q. And you sent a lie out into the community, with your name signed to it, did you? A. I don't think it went into the community at all. I think it went into the man's pocket.

Q. Then you sent a lie into his pocket with your named signed to it? A. I guess that is about the size of it.

Q. How many more men were registered from your house on election day? A. Two more.

Q. What are there names? A. Simpson and Williams.

Q. Do you know what their politics were? A. No; I do not.

Q. Do you know what Simpson's politics were? A. Republican, I think.

Q. Don't you know perfectly well that he was a Democrat and actively engaged making a canvass for a Democrat? A. No.

Q. What were Williams' politics? A. Republican.

Q. I suppose you are Republican, are you not? A. No, sir; I am a Democrat.

Q. Don't you know, as a matter of fact, that Williams was a Democrat and that he was engaged in making Reynolds' fight for the Assembly there? A. No, sir; I know nothing at all about it.

Q. You don't know anything about it? A. No.

Q. Did these other men pay rent to you? A. One of them did.

Q. Which one? A. Williams.

Q. Williams paid you rent, did he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Simpson pay you anything? A. No, sir.

Q. You gave him a receipt, did you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you sent out another lie with your name signed to it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much did Mr. Williams pay you? A. $5.

Q. He paid you $5? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you get a receipt for it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I thought probably it would be in accordance with your practice to refuse to give a receipt if you got $5.

MR. CLUNIE: I submit that Mr. Dorn has no right to say that and insult the witness.

By MR. DORN: What were you doing on election day?

MR. CLUNIE (to witness): I want to tell you that you need not answer insulting or impertinent questions from Mr. Dorn—under the Code—and I would ask your honors to instruct him that he has a right to be protected from insulting and impertinent questions.

JUSTICE STAFFORD: We did not hear it.

By MR. DORN: What were you doing on election day? A. It is hard to tell. I was buggy riding part of the day.

Q. Whose buggy were you riding in? A. That is a very hard question for me to answer.

Q. You don't know? A. I don't know.

Q. As a matter of fact you got in the buggy, and you don't know whose buggy it was? A. That is about the size of it.

Q. You did not ask, as long as you got a ride? A. That is about the size of it.

Q. You didn't pay for the buggy, did you? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you pay for the drinks you had around town while you were riding? A. I think I did.

Q. You paid for all of them, did you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You did not get treated all day? A. To the best of my recollection, no.

Q. You were not out riding with a lady, were you? A. No, sir.

Q. Were you alone in the buggy? A. I was part of the time.

Q. About how much of the time? A. Well, it is a long time ago.

Q. About how many people did you ride with during the day? A. Two or three.

Q. You were driving a buggy, were you? A. I was part of the time, and part of the time I was not.

Q. As a matter of fact, don't you know who hired that buggy? A. I know where the money came from to hire that buggy.

Q. Who did? A. Mr. Barry.

Q. Who is Mr. Barry? A. You will have to inquire; I couldn't tell you.

Q. Michael Barry, isn't it? A. I think that is his first name.

Q. He is the same Michael Barry who was a member of the Assembly two years ago, isn't he? A. I think he is.

Q. He was at that time very actively engaged in Democratic politics, was he not—this Mr. Barry? A. I couldn't tell you.

Q. Don't you know as a matter of fact he was engaged making the fight for Mr. Sullivan there? A. I couldn't tell you about it.

Q. For the last two or three days preliminary to election? A. I don't think I saw him for two or three days before election.

Q. How did he happen to take you out in the buggy on election day? A. He happened to drop down at the polls, and asked me if I wanted to take a ride.

Q. This was election day? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Election day he came and asked you if you wanted to take a ride? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What banner was on his buggy that you went to take that ride in—or on the horse? A. It was a friend of mine running for the Senate.

Q. Who was the friend? A. J. J. Sullivan.

Q. "J. J. Sullivan, for Senator," was printed in great big letters? A. I didn't say great big letters at all.

Q. Well, small letters? A. Now you have got about the size of it.

Q. About what size? A. I couldn't tell what size.

Q. Were they as big as the letters on this transcript here? A. They may have been large or small letters; I couldn't say.

Q. Just look at that transcript. You say the name John J. Sullivan for Senator was on a banner on the horse. Will you swear the letters were as large as that? A. I couldn't swear.

Q. About what size? A. I couldn't tell you, because I never measured.

Q. Weren't they large letters? A. I don't suppose they were larger than anybody's else.

Q. They were letters which could be easily read across the street, weren't they? A. I guess so.

Q. That was the buggy you went riding in, was it? A. I put the banner on there myself, sir.

Q. When did you put the banner on there? A. I guess about ten or eleven o'clock election morning.

Q. Where did you get the banner to put it on? A. From Con Ryan.

Q. You got the banner from Con Ryan's? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then put the banner on the horse, before Barry asked you to take a ride with him? A. That was after I had the team. I couldn't very well put it on the horse if I didn't have it.

Q. When Barry asked you to take a ride with him there was no such banner on the horse? A. I didn't say Mr. Barry asked me to take a ride with him at all.

Q. Didn't you say Mr. Barry got a buggy down there, and asked if you would like to take a ride? A. You asked me where I got the buggy.

Q. Where did you get it? A. Out of the livery stable.

Q. Didn't you state a little while ago that where you got the buggy was Barry came to you on election day, and asked if you would like to take a ride? A. Yes, sir; that is what I said.

Q. And that is where you got the buggy? A. Yes, sir; that is where I got the buggy.

Q. Did he go and get the buggy then, or did you get the buggy? A. The buggy was sent for.

Q. Who sent for it? A. Mr. Barry.

Q. Who did he send for it? A. I couldn't tell you.

- Q. Did you wait until he got the buggy? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And at that time there was no banner on the horse when it came?
- A. No, sir.
- Q. Then you took the buggy, did you, or did Barry? A. I took it.
- Q. Where did you get it? A. I couldn't tell.
- Q. Did you go straight to Con Ryan's to get the banner? A. I think I did.
- Q. How many banners did you put on the horse—one on each side? A. I couldn't tell you now.
- Q. To the best of your knowledge you put one on each side? A. To the best of my knowledge I think there was only one on.
- Q. That one had lettering only on one side, didn't it? A. I don't know.
- Q. You took your ride, did you? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. After you got your horse and buggy and banner fixed up, where did you go? A. I think I took a ride out as far as Fillmore and Post.
- Q. Who did you take in with you when you got out there? A. I don't recollect who it was now.
- Q. Can't you call his name? A. No, sir.
- Q. Where did you take him to? A. I took a ride out there.
- Q. You brought him back, then, did you? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Where did you bring him back to? A. I can't say positively.
- Q. Why did you go outside the Twenty-first Senatorial District with that banner on your horse? You went out and got a man and brought him back, didn't you? A. I did nothing of the kind.
- Q. What did you do? A. I told you I went out for a buggy ride.
- Q. Where did you go to? A. I told you Post and Fillmore.
- Q. When you got to Post and Fillmore, did you turn right around? A. I came right back.
- Q. You turned in the middle of the street? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Did you go straight back? A. I may have stopped somewhere.
- Q. Who went with you on that ride? A. I couldn't positively say who it was.
- Q. Did anybody go with you? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. You don't know who it was? A. I couldn't tell you.
- Q. Did anybody come back with you? A. Yes, sir; I couldn't tell you.
- Q. Did the same man come back with you? A. I couldn't tell you; I have a very poor memory.
- Q. When you got back into the Twenty-first Senatorial District, what did you do? A. I guess we went in the corner and had a drink.
- Q. What corner was that? A. It must have been Wendt's corner; that is about the only corner I know.
- Q. Who paid for the drinks? A. I paid for it myself.
- Q. Where did you get the money from? A. I work for a living, sir.
- Q. That is not the question. A. Well, I don't steal.
- Q. Where did you get the money from that you were spending around over the district on election day? A. My own money I work hard for.
- Q. You did not get a cent of it from anybody else? A. No, sir.
- Q. How much of your money that you spent on election day has been paid back to you? A. Not a dollar.
- Q. How much is owing to you now? A. Not a dollar.
- Q. Who paid for this buggy? A. Mr. Barry.
- Q. What was Barry doing around during the day in the district there?
- A. I couldn't tell you; I only saw him once, for about twenty minutes.
- Q. At the time he got the buggy? A. Yes, sir.

- Q. What instructions did he give you when he got that buggy for you?
A. None, sir.
- Q. None at all? A. No, sir.
- Q. He told you to take this buggy and put Sullivan's banner on it and go and take a ride? A. He did not tell me to put anybody's banner on it.
- Q. He just told you to come and take a ride? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. That is all? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Simply, "If you want to take a ride, take this buggy and get a ride?"
A. That is all.
- Q. And a henchman rushed off and got the buggy, and you went and took a ride? A. He did not.
- Q. Why did you put the banner on afterwards? A. Because it did not suit me that way.
- Q. Why didn't it suit you that way? What did you want with Mr. Sullivan's banner on that horse? A. It didn't suit me. It suited me and I put it on.
- Q. Why did you put Sullivan's name on the banner that day? A. Because he was a friend of mine, and I was doing all I possibly could to send him to the Senate.
- Q. Awhile ago, on your direct examination, when you were asked if you took any part in the Senatorial fight, you said no, you did not, didn't you?
A. I have not been asked any such question.
- Q. And if you did state awhile ago in your direct examination that you took no active part in the Senatorial fight, you stated what was not true, did you? A. I made no such statement.
- Q. If you did make any such statement it would be untrue, would it?
A. I made no such statement.
- Q. If you did make any such statement it would be untrue, would it, I say? A. Yes, sir; it would.
- Q. And you did take an active part in working for Mr. Sullivan for the Senate? A. I did, as far as my own vote went; that is all.
- Q. What were you galavanting up and down that hill with a buggy for?
A. Just to take a ride.
- Q. As a matter of fact, wasn't it to bring the people to the polls? A. No, sir.
- Q. And weren't you sent for by Mr. Barry to bring people to the polls?
A. No, sir.
- Q. To vote? A. No, sir.
- Q. Who rode around with you? A. I couldn't tell you.
- Q. What were they riding with you for? A. I don't know; pleasure.
- Q. And you don't know your object in taking a ride? You don't know what you were riding for, except that you were riding? That is all? A. That is about all.
- Q. In fact your memory is not very good. It is very poor, is it? A. Well!
- Q. Do you know a gentleman by the name of John Magner over there in that district? A. I did about twelve years ago; I haven't seen him, though, lately.
- Q. You did not see him on election day? A. I don't think I did.
- Q. Didn't you, as a matter of fact, see him on election day? A. I won't swear positively, but I don't think I did.
- Q. But your memory is not good, and you don't know that you did see him? A. I don't think I did.
- Q. With all your riding around in that district with your banner on your horse, you say you did not see John Magner on that day? A. I don't think I did.

Q. About how much money did you spend on election day? A. I never kept any account of it.

Q. About $50? A. No.

Q. It may have been $50 or $100, or more or less? A. It may have been more or less.

Q. You have no means of remembering? A. No, sir.

Q. You kept no account? A. No.

Q. And you don't know what you used it for? You were simply using it to influence and assist your friend, John J. Sullivan, to get to the Senate, was it? A. That is not what I said.

Q. That is what you were putting it in at? A. Driving around.

Q. You knew at the time you gave this receipt to Conway, that he was a Republican, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You knew at the time you gave the receipt to Williams that he was a Republican, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you knew at the time you gave the receipt to Simpson that he was a Republican, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were very anxious and solicitous for the election of your friend, John J. Sullivan, to the Senate at the same time, were you? A. I didn't put it that way at all.

Q. You were, were you not? A. How is it.

Q. You made up your mind to allow three Republicans to register from your house and never pay a dollar rent, and you sent out a false receipt in order that they might vote against John J. Sullivan? A. I said one man got his receipt and paid his money.

Q. And the other did not? A. No.

Q. And you, a friend of John J. Sullivan, driving around with a buggy all day with John Sullivan's banner on all day, and you had sent out false receipts with your name signed to them; do you consider that friendship with John J. Sullivan? A. Consider what?

Q. Do you consider that kind of action friendship to John J. Sullivan? A. I don't know what you mean.

By MR. CLUNIE: Whatever you spent, it was your money? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you thought you had a right to spend it without asking Mr. Dorn about it? A. Yes, sir.

By MR. DORN: You were talking with Mr. Clunie out in the hall a few moments ago, weren't you? A. No.

Q. You were talking to Mr. Maxwell then? A. No.

Q. Or with Williams? A. No.

Q. You have not talked with any of them? A. No.

Q. You don't know any of them? A. No, sir.

Q. You are not acquainted with any of them? A. No, sir.

Q. You don't know Williams? A. No.

Q. You are not acquainted with Mr. Maxwell [here indicating William Maxwell]? A. Where is the gentleman?

Q. You are not acquainted with this gentleman [now indicating William Maxwell]? A. No, sir.

Q. You don't know Mr. Clunie?

MR. CLUNIE: I have met the gentleman.

By MR. DORN: Where did you meet Mr. Clunie a few minutes ago? A. In the Court-room.

Q. You had a talk with him, didn't you? A. Certainly. He said, "How do you do; your name is Smith," and I said, "Yes, sir."

Q. Is that all? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He did not ask you what you were going to testify to, did he? A. No, sir.

Q. He simply said your name is Smith? A. He asked me what I came up here to testify; that was all.

Q. What did you tell him? A. I told him that I was sent for to come up here to testify.

Q. Who sent for you? A. I don't know that.

Q. Who subpoenaed you? A. I don't know that.

Q. And you say you don't know Williams? A. What Williams have you reference to?

Q. I ask about the man that roomed in your house? A. Why didn't you say? Certainly I knew that man.

Q. You are acquainted with him? A. Yes, sir. There are about a dozen Williams.

Q. He is the only lodger who paid you rent? A. He paid his rent, yes, sir.

Q. What kind of a lodging house do you think you were running over there?

MR. CLUNIE: That is not a fair question, I submit.

By MR. DORN: How long have you known this Williams? A. I should judge about two years.

Q. You have known him during all the last year, then? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know if he is at work anywhere? A. I don't think he is working.

Q. Do you know if he has worked anywhere during the last six or eight months, or a year? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where? A. He has worked for me.

Q. When? A. Since last night.

Q. What? A. Since last night. Last night he took the job.

Q. How long ago was it that he commenced to work for you? A. I guess it was about last Wednesday.

Q. What is he doing? A. Laboring.

Q. Up to the time he commenced to work for you, do you know if he worked anywhere? Do you know of his working anywhere for the six months preceding election? A. I never kept track of him.

Q. As a matter of fact, don't you know he has not done a day's work for six months preceding election? A. I couldn't tell you anything about it.

Q. When did he pay you for this room? A. If you can jog my memory as to the time of the big fire down here, I can tell you.

Q. I cannot do that. A. Well, I cannot tell you.

Q. When did he pay you that five dollars? A. Just after the fire.

Q. Then you state that you don't know whether he did any work for six months? A. That is what I said.

Q. But you do say, and all you know, is that just after the big fire he paid you five dollars? A. He paid me some money just after the fire; somewhere, a few days.

[Contestant rests.]

MR. CLUNIE: When will your honors meet again?

JUSTICE STAFFORD: On Monday.

MR. CLUNIE: I want to ask your honors to transmit my testimony to the Senate as soon as the witnesses have all signed. The law provides that it must be transmitted to the Senate on the second day of the session. My testimony or depositions have closed, and they can go up, and I have no further objection to their depositions being taken.

JUSTICE STAFFORD: We both agree upon the propositions that the depositions will not be forwarded until they are completed.

MR. CLUNIE: I want to note an exception to that ruling, and I will apply to the Legislature to have it sent up.

JUSTICE STAFFORD: The further hearing of the matter is continued until Monday, January seventh, at two o'clock p. m. The Justices' Courts will reorganize on Monday, and that will occupy the attention of the Justices during the forenoon.

MR. CLUNIE: Our depositions are closed, and I ask that it be noted that we ask the Court to forward our depositions to the Legislature, and I object to the continuance being taken to-day, the whole of the rest of the day being before the Commission.

MR. DORN: I ask that the reporter note that the reason for the continuance until two o'clock next Monday, is because the Justices' Courts will be reorganized on Monday afternoon, and that the Justices have continued the matter of their own motion.

[Here the further hearing was continued until Monday, January 7, 1889, at two o'clock p. m.]

FIFTH DAY.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA,)
MONDAY, January 7, 1889—2 o'clock p. m.)

Present: Justices Stafford and Boland, the contestant and respondent, and their respective counsel, and Thomas R. Knox, shorthand reporter.

MR. DORN: Before proceeding with the depositions I wish to announce that Mr. Reddy will appear in conjunction with me as counsel in this case, from this time on. I see Mr. Dykeman is here to sign his testimony, and I would like to ask him one further question.

MR. CLUNIE: We have closed our case. You can call him as your witness, I suppose.

MR. DORN: Very well.

JOHN J. DYKEMAN.

Recalled as a witness on behalf of respondent.

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: I believe you testified in this case some time ago, did you not? Answer—Yes, sir.

Q. Under subpoena from the contestant? A. Yes, sir.

Q. At that time you testified, I believe, that you were employed in the Appraiser's building as an engineer? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been so employed? A. Three years next March.

Q. You are employed there at the present time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where were you employed before you secured the position you are now occupying? A. I was not employed at all for about four or five months.

Q. Prior to that four months, what were you engaged at? A. I was a Deputy in the Assessor's office.

Q. Prior to that, what were you engaged at? A. I was not engaged at all prior to that, for a short time.

Q. Before that short time, what were you doing? A. I was water tender on a steamer.

Q. What steamer? A. The steamer "Yaquina."

Q. Who did you receive your appointment from? A. The engineer.

Q. Who was that steamer run by? A. The Oregon Development Company.

Q. Have you ever been employed by the Harbor Commissioners? A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever been employed on a steamer which was run by the Harbor Commissioners? A. No, sir.

Q. You have never been employed, either directly or indirectly, by the Harbor Commissioners? A. No, sir. I was employed by a man that did the repairing for the Harbor Commissioners.

Q. What was his name? A. His name was Deakin.

Q. In what capacity were you employed? A. As a machinist.

Q. Where? A. In his shop.

Q. Where was the shop? A. On Main Street.

Q. Were you paid by the Harbor Commissioners, or by him? A. By him.

Q. Entirely? A. Entirely.

Q. And you never worked for the Harbor Commissioners? A. No, sir; I never received any pay from them.

Q. Did you ever do any work for them for which you did not get pay? A. Not for them; no, sir.

Q. Who paid you? A. Mr. Deakin.

Q. Where is his place of business? A. The number then was 135 Main, and since then it has been burned down, but it is in about the same place, I think.

Q. What is his business? A. Machinist.

Q. When did you quit that employment? A. About six years ago.

Q. Do you know a steamer or dredger, or whatever it is called, called the "Anosha," on the bay here? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who ran that steamer? A. The Harbor Commissioners.

Q. Were you ever employed on that steamer, I asked you? A. I don't understand your question directly.

Q. I asked you the direct question, Were you ever employed on that steamer? A. I have done repair work on that steamer; yes, sir.

Q. What repair work did you do? A. Overhauling the machinery.

Q. In what way? A. General overhauling.

Q. Tell us in that general way what you did. Did you turn the boilers over, or did you take them out, or what did you do? A. Just filed up the brasses, and straightened things generally.

Q. And that is all you did, was it? A. That; and I can't recollect what work I have done.

Q. For whom did you do that work? A. For Mr. Deakin.

Q. When did you do that work? A. Six or seven years ago, or eight, probably.

Q. Wasn't it within the present year? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you swear positively to that? A. I swear positively.

Q. At the time you did that work were you not, as a matter of fact, under salary from the Harbor Commissioners? A. No, sir.

Q. Were you not? A. I was not.

Q. After you did that, didn't you render a bill for some two hundred odd dollars for new brasses and finishings? A. No, sir.

Q. What bill did you present? A. None at all.

Q. You worked for nothing? A. I received my wages from the man that employed me.

Q. As a matter of fact, didn't you present a bill either for yourself or your employer? A. No, sir.

Q. You never did? A. I never did.

Q. You don't know anything about any bill that was presented? Wasn't there a fraudulent bill presented by you for some $200 for brasses, claiming it to be new: and wasn't the bill objected to; and didn't you lose your position on account of it? A. No, sir.

Q. You are as positive of that as anything else you have testified to? A. Anything else.

EDWARD ATTRIDGE.

A witness called for respondent, was duly sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Mr. Attridge, where do you reside? Answer—2005 Leavenworth Street.

Q. How long have you lived there? A. About twelve years.

Q. Have you lived there with your folks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you in Court some day or two ago, during the hearing of this proceeding, when Mr. Riley and Mr. Fay testified? A. No, sir.

Q. You were not? A. No, sir.

Q. Where were you the Sunday night before election, Mr. Attridge? A. I believe I went around with Mr. Banks.

Q. You believe you went around with Mr. Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In company with Mr. Banks did you go on that evening to the North End Social Club? A. Yes, sir; we were down there.

Q. Tell me how you happened to go there? A. We were over at the boat clubs, over on the beach, and we came along, going along Francisco Street, I think it is, where the club is, and as we were walking down two young fellows walked from across the street and said, "Hello, Mr. Banks."

Q. Do you know who the young fellows were? A. I could pick one of them out.

Q. Is he in the Court? A. No, I don't see him here.

Q. Where did he come from? A. He came from across the street, I believe, to this saloon, and he shook hands with Mr. Banks, and walked down, and when we got in front of the clubrooms he said, "Come on inside," and Banks said, "I have got an appointment on the other corner with Smith, and he is two hours late." He said, "Come inside and see the picture frame that Mr. Morrow gave us."

Q. Do you know whether this gentleman who gave that invitation was a member of that club? A. I think he was.

Q. Go on. A. We went inside; they lit the gas up and there was a large crowd there, and they brought this frame down and showed it to Banks, and said Mr. Morrow gave it to them, and Banks looked at it, and he said it was very nice, and we were talking there, and they kind of threw little hints to get money to put their pictures into it; they made a remark that they wanted to get their pictures taken to put in the frame.

Q. Who did they make that remark to? A. To Mr. Banks. They didn't make the remark, but it was hard hinting toward that. We walked out then to get a drink, and they gave three cheers for Banks.

Q. Who asked him? Riley, the President of the club, asked him for money to have the pictures taken? A. No, he didn't ask him for any money, but they brought the frame down and put it on the floor and said they were going to get their pictures put there, throwing a hint for the money. It was not Riley who said so. And as we were going out he asked them to have a drink, and as we were going out they gave three cheers for him. Another gentleman with him said, "There is a club solid for you." And I said, "No, I know better," and he said, "No, I won't get a vote in that club; don't think I am a chump." We went over in the saloon, had a drink, and Billy put his glass on the table, and one of them, and one of them caught hold of him and pulled him down to the billiard table and got to talking, and I don't know what they said, and we all had a laugh over it, and what this gentleman said to Banks, I don't know.

Q. Did Banks give them $10 to have their pictures taken? A. Not that I saw.

Q. If he did, would you have seen it? A. I would have in the club-room.

Q. If anybody testified that in the clubroom they were given $10 by Banks to have their pictures taken, that testimony was not true, then? A. No, sir; I could see it if I was not close to him.

Q. And Mr. Riley testified as follows: "Mr. Morrow had sent down a big picture frame to the boys, and I asked Banks to give us money to have our pictures taken, and we all together talking, and he said he did not want to pay money for anything, and he said he would put $20 over the bar; he would give us $40 if we carried the precinct for him; he would put $20 over the bar there, and he would give us $20 more if the precinct was carried for him." Mr. Riley's testimony was that that conversation took place on Sunday night previous to the election, to the best of his knowledge and belief, between the hours of six and eight in the evening, and that it took place in Mr. Lilkendey's saloon. Did any such conversation as that take place? A. I believe they had a conversation in Lilkendey's, where he went to one side with Riley.

Q. Was anything said about giving them $20? A. I didn't hear it.

Q. Would you have heard it if it had taken place? A. I couldn't tell whether they did. Unless they spoke it very loud I wouldn't have heard it.

Q. You didn't hear any such conversation? A. No, sir.

Q. Who went with you into the clubroom besides Banks? A. There was a man named Kline and these other two fellows that we met up the street.

Q. And who, if anybody, went with you over to the saloon besides the members of the club? A. Mr. Kline and Mr. Banks; three of us walked together.

Q. Mr. Kline, Mr. Banks, and yourself walked together? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is Mr. Kline present here? A. I don't see him.

Q. Mr. Kline and yourself went to the saloon with Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that the gentleman who went [indicating a gentleman who was called in at the door]? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say that man took Mr. Banks aside and had a conversation. Where did that conversation take place? What part of the saloon? A. It took place right back against the billiard table.

Q. Who were present at the immediate place where the conversation took place? A. Mr. Kline was there, and I see him leaning over on the billiard table.

Q. Describe how it happened. What was Banks' position? A. Banks stood with his hands in his pocket, and was smoking a cigar, and the gentleman was talking to him, and Kline stood with his back against the billiard table, and Banks and the other gentleman that was talking with him stood this way [indicating], and Kline stood by the side of the billiard table. He could hear what they were saying, but I could not.

Q. You were the other side, then? A. Yes, sir.

Q. But Kline stood directly against Banks, and could have heard what was said, if anything had been said? A. I think he could; yes, sir.

Q. Was Kline in such a position that if Banks said anything at all he would have been able to hear it? A. I think he would; yes, sir.

Q. How close was he to him? A. Pretty close.

Q. Was he six feet? A. Closer than that.

Q. Was he within two feet? A. Well, two or three feet. Banks and the other gentleman was on the other side, and Kline was on the other side of the billiard table leaning right over [indicating].

Q. Did Kline occupy that position, and was he there that close to Banks the whole time the conversation went on, whatever the conversation was? A. I believe he was.

Q. Did you see Banks take out any $20 and offer it to these men or make any display of money? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know John J. Sullivan, the contestant in this case? A. Yes, sir, I do.

Q. How long have you known him? A. I knew him two years ago—over two years ago.

Q. You knew him over two years ago? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And have you known him ever since? A. Yes, sir; I have known him.

Q. Within the last month or two, and within at least thirty days before the last election, on the sixth day of November, 1888, did you see Mr. Sullivan? A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. And did you have any conversation with him? A. I had a conversation with him, yes.

Q. Where was that conversation? A. I had a conversation down where I am working; down in my shop. I believe it was the Saturday before election.

Q. The Saturday before election? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Tell us what that conversation was. What did Mr. Sullivan come down there for? A. He come down there and I was standing across the street from the shop, and he come over and talked to me, and he gave me a pretty good roasting up for kicking against him, and he said if ever he could do me any harm, he would do so.

Q. What did he give you this roasting up for? Because you had been a Democrat, or because he thought you ought not to oppose him—which? What was his reason for giving you that roasting up? A. He thought I was a Democrat and ought to have stood with him.

Q. And what, if any, threats did he make against you? A. He didn't make any particular, but he told me if he could ever do me any harm, he would do it.

Q. He told you if he could ever do you any harm, he would do it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that all the conversation? A. No, it was a little longer than that, but I cannot remember what else was said. That was the principal part of the conversation, though.

Q. Mr. Sullivan knew at that time that you were assisting or actively engaged in assisting in Banks' canvass, did he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Prior to the election? A. No, sir.

Q. Who were present at that conversation? A. There was a young fellow named Jake Short.

Q. And yourself? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Mr. Sullivan? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever have any further conversation with Mr. Sullivan relative to election? A. Yes, I think I had a conversation with him, first starting in.

Q. What was that conversation? A. He come down to me and asked me if I wouldn't stay in with him, and he said he never done wrong to anybody, and he would like to have me stay with him, and he told me if Banks promised to do anything for me, he would do the same thing, and we went down then to the corner, and we had a drink, and he said, "Ed., let me off light; don't cut me too bad." I told him in kind of an off way that I am in for Banks to win, if I can. That was about the whole of the conversation. And another man came down to see me.

Q. Who was the other man? A. Mr. Jack Tyrrell.

Q. Jack Tyrrell was one of the people who were actively engaged making Sullivan's fight over there, was he not? A. He come in the district.

Q. Wasn't he actively engaged in assisting Sullivan in the election? A. I don't know, but he come down to me on account of my being a Democrat, and asked me to pull down, and I told him I was in for Banks now, and I would stay right in through it.

Q. Mr. Sullivan then told you if you didn't assist him in the election for Senator, and that if he ever got the opportunity and could ever do you any harm, he would do it? A. He claimed I was doing him dirty work.

Q. And he told you if anybody else would do anything for you, he would do as much? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he say what he would do for you? A. No, sir.

Q. Did Maxwell ever call on you? A. Mr. Maxwell was down to see me before the primary election and wanted me to go to the convention, and I told I didn't want to go, and I told him I went two years ago to help Sullivan along, and I got no thanks for it.

Q. What did Maxwell at that time tell you, if anything, about putting you in the Fire Department if you would stand in this time? A. He didn't exactly tell me he would put me in the Fire Department.

Q. Give us the language he used? A. Why, he asked me of any young fellow up on the hill that wanted to go in there. He asked me about this young fellow, Jack Finney, and I said, "He is a pretty good fellow." and he said, "Do you think he is a proper fellow to put in the Fire Department?" And I said, "Yes, I think so."

Q. What did he say about putting you in the Fire Department if you helped Sullivan in the election? A. He said this was about the only time the young fellows along there had a chance, and he said, "I want to see you put in this time."

Q. And as a consideration for that, he asked you to vote for Sullivan? A. He asked me to go to the convention; he didn't ask me to help Sullivan.

Q. But he proposed to put you in the Fire Department and get you a position if you would stand in with the boss? A. He did not exactly promise me the Fire Department, but he said if there was a position got I would get it, and he would try and get it for me.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: You have been a great friend of Mr. Banks for years, haven't you? A. No, sir; I have not.

Q. A warm personal friend of his for years? A. No, sir.

Q. How long have you been acquainted with him? A. Not very long.

Q. How long? A. Just this last campaign.

Q. You are a Democrat, are you not? A. No, sir.

Q. You never were? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you turn over? A. This last year.

Q. Did you go over on account of the tariff question? A. No, sir; I did not; I went over because I thought I would get treated better on the other side.

Q. You are sure the tariff had nothing to do with it? A. Sure of it. I have got my own mind, and I think I can vote the way I want.

Q. You thought you would be treated better on the other side? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why was that? A. I didn't get treated right on the other side.

Q. How is that? A. The men I am working for are Republicans, and they have been talking to me right along.

Q. Then it was not because you were not treated right, but it was because the men you are working for asked you to go there? A. Because the man I am working for asked me, and because I was not treated right.

Q. Now, you had two reasons: one, because the man you are working for asked you, and the other, because you were not treated right. Now, tell me about how you were not treated right. Tell us how you were not treated right. You did not expect to be Governor, or anything of that kind, did you? A. I did not; no.

Q. Why were you not treated right? A. I said two times these people have got no use for me. I asked for something two years ago, and I didn't get it.

Q. You asked for something two years ago, and you did not get it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you ask for? A. I asked for the police force.

Q. And they didn't give you the police force, so you went over? A. I didn't want the police force, but I wanted to be a police officer.

Q. That was a mistake, then, that you wanted the police force. You asked them to be police officer, and they didn't do it, and you thought you would go over? A. Yes, sir; that was it.

Q. Who did you ask this? A. Buckley himself.

Q. You thought Buckley had the giving of the police officers, did you? A. I did; yes.

Q. What made you think that? A. Because I was in the Municipal Convention two years ago, and I went to see Buckley, and I asked him for this, and I said I might want it some time, and he said: "I will do it for you, if I can, Attridge."

Q. You knew Buckley was not a Police Commissioner, didn't you? A. I did.

Q. You knew he was not on the force in any way? A. I knew he was not on the force; yes, sir.

Q. Still you thought he could give you a police position? A. I thought he could give me the position there.

Q. Was that before or after the last convention? A. It was right while the convention was in session.

Q. That was while the convention was in session before the last election? A. Before the last election.

Q. Then Buckley told you he would do what he could for you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then you went on and were a Democrat that year? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are in politics for what is in it, are you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. For whatever you can get out of it? A. I don't know what a man is dealing in politics for. He ain't dealing in it for fun.

Q. You ain't in it for fun? A. No, sir.

Q. Then you went over to the Republican party for the fun you could get out of it? A. I went over for good friends and to benefit myself.

Q. What do you mean by that? A. In case I should want anything I could go after it, and I might be able to get it.

Q. Did the Republicans tell you they would treat you better if you came in? A. No, sir.

Q. What made you think you would get treated better than the Democrats treated you? A. Because, when I told him I asked Buckley to get on the police force, a man named George Allen, the foreman of A. Schilling, he come to me and offered to put me on the police force.

Q. Who is this Allen? A. He is foreman for A. Schilling & Co.

Q. Then you wanted to get on the police force? A. I refused it.

Q. You didn't want to go on? A. No, sir; not then.

Q. Still you went over to the Republican party? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You didn't want it this time? A. Not this time; I might try next time.

Q. You expect something next time; is that it? And for that reason you went in for Banks to hold four years. He holds four years, don't he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you expect something next time? A. I never got a promise from him.

Q. You expect something? A. Not unless I can have it.

Q. Didn't you swear a minute ago you expected to get something next time—in two years from now? A. If I went after it, I said I expected to get it.

Q. Did you say anything about going after it?

MR. DORN: Yes, that is what he said.

MR. CLUNIE: Don't interfere with me.

Q. Didn't you testify a moment ago that you didn't want anything now, but you expected to get something in two years from now? A. I said if I went after it, I expected to get something from the Republican party.

Q. Did you go after it? A. I don't know whether I will or not.

Q. Haven't you made up your mind about it? A. No, sir; I haven't.

Q. Do you think you will go after anything? A. I couldn't tell you what I think about it or not. I ain't thinking of it now at all.

Q. When you determined to go over to the Republican party, what did you do? How did you go over there? Tell us what you did. A. I don't think I did anything more than getting out and trying to work the ticket.

Q. You say you only knew Banks since the last Republican Convention; is that it? Is that what you say? A. I only knew him this last campaign.

Q. When did you become acquainted with him? A. Inside of the time—inside of a couple of months.

Q. A couple of months before the election; is that it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you meet him? A. Right down at my own shop.

Q. Did he come down there? A. He came down there with a gentleman named Stevenson.

Q. What did he say to you? A. I was introduced to Banks by Stevenson.

Q. Banks at that time was a candidate, was he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did he say then? A. He only said he understood I was taking an active part in his fight and he was glad to hear it.

Q. You were taking an interest in his fight before he came down to see you? A. Before I knew him; yes, sir.

Q. Who got you to take that interest? A. Jim Stevenson, the foreman of the shop where I am working.

Q. And Mr. Allen? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Allen and Stevenson? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Allen was the one who told you if you wanted to go on the police force he would get you there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he requested you to do it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he and Stevenson requested you to do it, and that was why you did it? A. No; I told you I was not treated right.

Q. Didn't you testify awhile ago that Mr. Allen had requested you to get in and work? A. Yes, sir; I testified that and the other.

Q. Both? A. Both of them.

Q. Mr. Allen was the one that told you you would be treated better, wasn't he? A. He didn't exactly tell me I would be treated better, but he made an offer to me that meant just as much.

Q. He made an offer to you that meant just as much? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And this Mr. Allen was the one that requested you to work for Mr. Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. It was on account of Allen? A. Partly on account of that.

Q. What did Banks say when he came down? A. He didn't say any more than he heard I was taking a pretty active part in his fight, and he was glad to hear it.

Q. And you both said "good-by," then, and he went out? A. There might have been more, but I don't remember it.

Q. That was only about two months before election, was it? A. About that.

Q. You have not a very good memory, have you? A. No; a poor memory.

Q. Then all the testimony you have given here has been given when you all the time had a poor memory. Everything you have testified to here you have testified to positively, haven't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you sure, then, that Banks, in the transaction with these boys at the North End Social Club, didn't have any money in his hand at that time? A. Not in the clubroom.

Q. You might have forgotten it? A. I don't forget that at all.

Q. Why do you remember that and not remember what Banks said to you? A. I told you what he said.

Q. No, not all of it? A. Well, the principal part of it, I told you.

Q. And that was not all? A. No, sir.

Q. When did you see Banks again? A. I saw him off and on; I couldn't exactly tell you when and where.

Q. When next did you see him, do you remember? A. No, sir; I can't remember.

Q. Do you remember how frequently after that? A. Not very frequently; maybe once or twice a week.

Q. Did you have any particular place to meet him? A. No, sir.

Q. He had no headquarters? A. No, sir.

Q. You went around with Banks, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you quit work and go around? A. No, sir.

Q. You didn't go round in the daytime? A. No, sir.

Q. You went around at night? A. I went around one Sunday night and afternoon with him.

Q. You went around before that yourself, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You went around most every night, didn't you? A. Yes.

Q. And spent your money? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And invited the boys to take a drink? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And told them you were making Banks' fight, didn't you? A. I asked them to vote for Banks.

Q. How long did you keep that up? A. I guess about three or four weeks.

Q. Do you work down in Schilling's, do you say? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What do you get there? A. About $80.

Q. Are you a married man? A. No, sir.

Q. You have no one but yourself? A. No, sir.

Q. This money you spent was all your own, was it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much did you spend? A. I couldn't exactly tell you. I don't believe I spent more than $30 or $40.

Q. You went around in the saloon there three or four weeks, and you only spent $30 or $40; is that it? A. I didn't go around saloons every night.

Q. Where did you go? A. I went to people's houses.

Q. You made a pretty careful canvass of the district, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What induced you to do that particularly for Banks? Did you think Banks was of more importance than Harrison? A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. What induced you to go around? You didn't do this for Harrison, did you? A. No, sir; I didn't want to do it for Harrison.

Q. You didn't do it for the Presidential Electors, did you? A. Yes, sir; I tried to turn people over.

Q. Did you go to their houses? A. I have asked a couple of people.

Q. How many did you ask? A. I couldn't tell you how many.

Q. Did you ask as many for the Presidential Electors as you did for Banks? A. I don't hardly think I did. I was making my fight principally among Democrats, and I think it would be foolish to ask Democrats to vote the Republican ticket.

Q. You were making your fight among Democrats, and all you asked them to do was to scratch their tickets and vote for Banks; was that it? A. That was the principal part of it.

Q. What was your particular idea in taking this interest in Banks' fight? Why did you do that? What was your object in that? A. Because friends of mine had asked me to work for Banks.

Q. What friend? A. The foreman down in my shop.

Q. Mr. Allen? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is the same gentleman that wanted to put you on the police force? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is he the only one that asked you? A. No, sir.

Q. Who else? A. Jim Stevenson asked me.

Q. Who else? What did Jim Stevenson say to you when he asked you? A. He didn't say much to me. Jim Stevenson and I are pretty good friends, and Jim asked me if I wouldn't get in and help Banks out, and I said yes.

Q. Did he say why he wanted you to help Banks out? A. No, sir; he did not.

Q. Did he say Banks had promised to take care of him if he was elected? A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't Stevenson tell you Banks had agreed to take care of him if he was elected, and that it would be to his interest if he was elected, and for you to get out and work for him? A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't Banks promise to take care of you if he was elected? A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't you so state to Mr. Sullivan? A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't you so state to Mr. Tyrrell? A. Jack Tyrrell?

Q. Yes. A. No, sir.

Q. You had a conversation with Tyrrell, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You had a conversation with John Sullivan? A. Yes, sir.

Q. They both called at your factory where you were working, did they? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Didn't Tyrrell ask you what the reason was you were against Sullivan and for Banks, and he was also surprised because you were always a Democrat; and didn't you state that the reason was because you couldn't get anything out of Sullivan and you could out of Banks? Didn't you so state? A. I don't know whether I did or not; I might have said so.

Q. Don't you know you said so, and don't you know that that is the fact? A. I don't exactly know.

Q. Don't you exactly know whether that is the fact or not; whether that statement was made to you? A. No, sir.

Q. Just swear one way or the other on that; was it made or not? A. I couldn't tell. Jack Tyrrell asked me, "Anything Banks agreed to do for you, I will bring you up and Sullivan will do it," and he gave his word that Sullivan would do it.

Q. Jack Tyrrell said he would give his word? A. Jack Tyrrell said he would give his word, anything Sullivan would promise me would be faithful.

Q. Anything Banks promised you, Sullivan would too? A. Anything Banks promised me Sullivan would do the same.

Q. How did he come to say that to you? A. Just by spitting it out of his mouth.

Q. Didn't you say anything to cause him to spit it out? A. I don't think I did.

Q. Didn't you tell Tyrrell there that Banks had made some promises to you, and then didn't Tyrrell say that anything Banks had promised Sullivan would do. Isn't that the fact and isn't that the whole conversation that occurred between you? Is it or is it not? I want you to swear at it now, sir. A. I don't know.

Q. You don't know? A. I can't exactly remember. I might have told Tyrrell I would get something, or something of that kind.

Q. As a matter of fact don't you know you did tell Tyrrell you would get something? A. I don't know whether I did or not.

Q. What is your best recollection as to that? A. I stated before I couldn't tell.

Q. You can't remember as to that? A. No, sir.

Q. You remember positively about all that occurred when you and Banks went around that night, though; you remember that all positively?

A. I remember that down at the North End Club.

Q. You remember that particularly, do you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why do you remember that more than you do anything else? A. Because I was right there when they had the talk; the transaction.

Q. Weren't you right there then, when you and Jack Tyrrell had the talk? A. Yes, I was right there too.

Q. You weren't any nearer than you were at the North End Club, were you? A. No, sir.

Q. Then how is it you recollect more of that than you do of the Jack Tyrrell conversation; can you explain that to us? A. No, I can not.

Q. But you won't swear you did not tell Jack Tyrrell and Johnny Sullivan you expected to get something from Banks? You won't swear to it? A. I won't swear to it; no, sir.

Q. Where did you and Banks go that night you were traveling around through the district? A. The first place I met him was down on Union Street, about Powell Street.

Q. Where did you go from there? A. We went down to, I believe it was, the Triton Boat Club. I think that was the first place we went to.

Q. Who did you see there? A. I don't know who the gentleman was we spoke to.

Q. What was the conversation that occurred between you and Banks and that gentleman? A. I was not so close to him that I knew. Banks went down, I believe, looking for a man named Curley, and Curley was not there, and they took him up, I believe, to his house.

Q. What was the name of that boat club? A. The Triton, I believe.

Q. You went down with Banks? A. I went down, but I didn't go in the club. I didn't go down to see anybody.

Q. And you did not hear the conversation that occurred between them? A. No, sir.

Q. It was Banks' custom, whenever he was going to talk with anybody, to separate himself from you, did he? A. He generally did that.

Q. That was up in this saloon, wasn't it, when he wanted to talk with these people he got away from you? A. No, sir.

Q. You were there all the time? A. Yes, I was there all the time.

Q. And you heard all the conversation with Fay and Riley, and all these gentlemen? A. I heard it in the clubroom, but not in the saloon.

Q. Did you hear it all after you got in the saloon? A. No, I didn't. I didn't hear nothing in the saloon.

Q. There was quite a large crowd in the saloon, wasn't there? A. Yes, sir; quite a large crowd.

Q. And you were mixing with the crowd? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Weren't you paying any attention to what Banks was doing? A. I saw this gentleman take Banks one side and have a talk with him.

Q. But you were not noticing what he was doing, and you were mixing with the crowd, weren't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see Banks give any money out that night? A. No, sir.

Q. Not a dollar? A. No, sir.

Q. He didn't treat anybody to drinks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did he treat? A. He treated down in that saloon—Lilken-dey's.

Q. That was the only place? A. No, sir; it was not the only place.

Q. Did he have many private conversations with gentlemen that night? A. No, I didn't see many private ones.

Q. How many do you think there was? A. There was a big crowd around him talking, and I didn't see anything private about it. The only one was down there at the boat club.

Q. And you didn't participate in any of these conversations? A. No, sir.

Q. Did Banks ever give you any money? A. No, sir.

Q. Did he ever give you $10 and say, "Here is $10?" A. No, sir; all the money he gave me was $10 to pay for a buggy, and I paid some money myself.

Q. How much did he give you to pay for a buggy? A. I believe it was $7 50.

Q. And that was all the money you ever received from Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then you don't know what Banks agreed to do for you? A. He agreed to do nothing.

Q. Then if you made such a statement it was a falsehood, was it? A. I don't say I made it.

Q. Well, if you did make it, you must have stated a lie, mustn't you? If you told it to Sullivan and it was not so, you must have told a falsehood; isn't that a fact? Was it so? A. Was it so?

Q. The statement you made to Sullivan about Banks having agreed to take care of you, and the statement you made to Tyrrell; which was it—so, or was it not?

MR. DORN: I object to that form of question. A. Banks never promised me anything.

By MR. CLUNIE: Did anybody on behalf of Banks ever promise you anything? A. No, sir; no one did.

Q. Did you ever tell Sullivan, Banks had agreed to take care of you or that some of his friends would? A. I believe Sullivan occupied a pretty good job, and I was willing to occupy it.

Q. And you didn't tell him and tell Tyrrell that Banks and his friends had agreed to take care of you? A. I might have told him that.

Q. What was your object in telling him that, if nobody agreed to it with you? A. Banks had not agreed to it.

Q. Did anybody? A. No, sir.

Q. Did anybody ever talk to you about this except Stevenson and Allen? Did anybody ever send for you? A. No, sir.

Q. No one at all? A. No, sir.

Q. You are sure of that? A. No, sir.

Q. And you are sure that you talked with nobody about the Banks-Sullivan fight? A. I talked to one man about it.

Q. Who was that you talked with about it? A. He didn't send for me, though—the man didn't.

Q. I asked you who you talked with. [A pause.] You are not afraid to tell, are you? A. No; but I don't want to tell.

Q. You better tell us, I think; we would like to know. Was it Mr. Jake Shaen? A. No, sir.

Q. Was it Ray Falk? A. No, sir.

Q. Was it William Williams? A. It was not.

Q. Are you sure of that, now? A. I am sure of that.

Q. Tell us who it was? A. I refuse to answer that question. It was not Mr. Higgins, though.

MR. CLUNIE: I would like your honors to instruct him to answer.

THE COURT: Answer the question.

By MR. CLUNIE: Who was that man? A. It was the Governor.

Q. Governor Waterman sent for you, did he? A. No, sir; he didn't send for me.

Q. How did you come to go to Governor Waterman? A. I was brought up there.

Q. What were you brought up there for? A. I don't know.

Q. You don't know what you were brought up there for? A. I was brought up there—I was going up to Higgins, but it was claimed that Mr. Higgins was sick, and he says, "Come up and see the Governor;" and I went up.

Q. Who took you up? A. Mr. Banks.

Q. Mr. Banks took you up to Mr. Higgins? A. He didn't take me to Mr. Higgins.

Q. He was going to take you to Mr. Higgins? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then he said Mr. Higgins was sick, and then he said to come up and see the Governor? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You went up, then, and saw the Governor? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You had a nice talk, did you? A. About two minutes.

Q. Are you on friendly terms with the Governor? A. I don't know if it had been very friendly or not.

Q. That was the first time you ever saw the Governor, was it? A. He was pleased to see me, and he was glad to hear I had turned over.

Q. He had heard of your turning over? A. I don't know whether he did or not, but I told him I did. I told him I had turned over Republican.

Q. What did he say? A. He didn't say much. He didn't say anything.

Q. He just said he was glad to hear you had turned over? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he ask you where you lived? A. I don't think he did.

Q. Just tell us the conversation that occurred between you and the Governor of this great State, and Mr. Banks? A. It was not very much.

Q. Tell us what it was? A. It was nothing at all, any more than Banks said the Governor was a personal friend of his and introduced me to him.

Q. And what did the Governor say? Banks said, "Attridge, the Governor is a friend of mine;" is that it? A. He told me the Governor was a personal friend of his; yes, sir.

Q. When you got up to the Governor, what occurred? Did Mr. Banks go in and say, "Mr. Attridge, the Governor is a personal friend of mine." Is that the way it was? A. No, sir; he introduced me to the Governor, and he told him I was doing all I could for him.

Q. What did the Governor say? A. He said he was glad to hear it, and I told him I was a Democrat up to that time, and I was a Republican now, and he said he was glad to hear it.

Q. Was that all? A. That was about all.

Q. Then you went out? A. Some one come in the room and we went out.

Q. Was Mr. Higgins up there? A. No, sir.

Q. Mr. Higgins was not with the Governor that time? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you and Mr. Banks ever speak with the Governor after that time? A. No, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Banks tell you he expected to have a great many vacancies down on the waterfront down here? A. No, sir; he did not.

Q. Did he tell you that there might be a vacancy by which you might get in? A. No, sir; not exactly.

Q. Did he tell you that, I say? A. No, sir; he did not.

Q. Did you have words enough with the Governor to understand that the Governor would take care of you? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you have enough to satisfy you that he would? A. No, sir.

Q. What did you go up to the Governor there for? A. Because I was brought there.

Q. What was it for? A. I didn't know what it was for.

Q. Were you curious to see him? A. No, sir; not a bit.

Q. You had not heard that he was looking for you? A. No, sir.

Q. You had no particular interest to see Governor Waterman? A. No particular interest.

Q. You hadn't gone up to the hotel to see him before, had you? A. No, sir.

Q. What, in your own mind, caused you to go up there? A. Because Banks asked me to go and be introduced to him.

Q. Wasn't it because Waterman was to tell you you would be taken care of if you took part in the Banks fight? A. No, sir.

Q. Why did you go to see Mr. Higgins? A. Because I was asked to.

Q. Did you know him? A. No, sir.

Q. Why did you want to go to see Mr. Higgins? A. Because, if I am a Republican, I want to know the man I am dealing with?

Q. Mr. Higgins don't own the Republican party, does he? A. Well, he owns pretty near it.

Q. Did Mr. Banks give you that information? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you understand that Mr. Higgins owned Mr. Banks? A. No, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Banks ever tell you that Mr. Higgins was a personal friend of his? A. No, sir.

Q. Did he tell you Mr. Higgins would be guided in dealing out these appointments by Banks' advice? Did he tell you that? A. The Governor?

Q. Yes, the Governor. A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't he tell you Mr. Higgins would have a nice lot of fat positions here? A. No, sir.

Q. And that the Senators, in particular, would have a chance in dealing them out? A. He never mentioned Mr. Higgins' name.

Q. Didn't I understand you a moment ago that Mr. Banks asked you to go up and see Mr. Higgins? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now you say Mr. Banks never mentioned Mr. Higgins' name. A. You said the Governor.

Q. Did Mr. Banks tell you? A. Mr. Banks told me to come up and see Mr. Higgins. He said, "I can't promise nothing; I haven't got the goods to fill them."

Q. He couldn't promise anything because he didn't have the goods to fill them with. A. Yes, sir.

Q. But Mr. Higgins had lots of goods and he would go up and see if he could get a counter for him; isn't that the fact? A. I don't know as it is exactly the fact.

Q. Ain't that pretty near the fact and isn't that pretty near it?—you to bolt the Democratic party and Mr. Sullivan, who has been your friend?

A. Mr. Sullivan been my friend!

Q. He has not been your friend? A. No, sir.

Q. You have always been linked with the Democratic party, haven't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Wasn't it that hope that induced you to go with Mr. Banks to see Mr. Higgins? A. It was not an office for myself.

Q. Who was it for? A. Some one I might ask for hereafter.

Q. You wanted to get an office for somebody else; was that it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And through Mr. Banks you wanted to get an office for somebody else? A. I told him nothing of the kind.

Q. When did he tell you he couldn't make any promises? A. I told him I was taking an interest in his fight, and he told me he couldn't fulfill any promises, but he could take me to a man that would do it.

Q. Then Mr. Banks said that voluntarily, without asking anything of him; is that it? A. That is about it.

Q. Didn't Mr. Banks ask you what you wanted? A. No, sir.

Q. And didn't you tell him, and didn't he tell you he couldn't promise you anything, and if you would go he would take you to a man who could do it? A. No, sir.

Q. Ain't that about it? A. Well, no.

Q. Did you see Mr. Higgins? A. No, sir.

Q. You tried to see Mr. Higgins? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He was the man Mr. Banks referred to as having the places to deal out? A. He didn't refer to him, but he brought me up there to see him.

Q. What did he bring you up there to see him for? A. To get acquainted with him. What did I want to see Buckley for two years ago?

Q. Didn't Mr. Banks say he couldn't give you any promises because he couldn't fulfill them, but would take you to a man that could? A. If I wanted it.

Q. Then you did see him to get taken care of? A. No, sir.

Q. Well, for your friend? A. If I wanted it.

Q. Then you did not see Mr. Higgins? A. No, sir.

Q. Then at the same time and in the same conversation, Mr. Banks said "Let us go see the Governor." Is that it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. At that time you were hunting this assurance that you could have a place for your friend? A. I was not exactly hunting it.

Q. You wanted to know it? A. I wanted to have a talk with the man I am dealing with. I wanted to be acquainted with him. That is why I went up there.

Q. You considered you were dealing with Mr. Higgins, and then Waterman, didn't you; isn't that the fact? A. I considered I was dealing with the Republican party.

Q. Who are the Republican party? Mr. Waterman and Mr. Higgins? A. No.

Q. Just Mr. Higgins? A. No, lots more of them.

Q. Who else? A. I think all of them holding offices are Republican.

Q. Did you want to talk with all the men holding offices? A. No, sir.

Q. You said you wanted to know the men you were dealing with? A. I would like to know any good gentleman.

Q. Did Mr. Banks take you around and introduce you to all the men holding offices here? A. No, sir.

Q. He just took you to find Mr. Higgins and couldn't find him, and you subsequently went to see Governor Waterman. Did you find Mr. Higgins? A. No, sir.

Q. You were hunting for an assurance that your friend would be taken care of if you wanted him to be? A. If I asked it; yes, sir.

Q. That was your object in visiting Mr. Higgins that day with Mr. Banks? A. I went up to see Mr. Higgins.

Q. You did not see Mr. Higgins that day? A. No, sir.

Q. Then you went to see Governor Waterman? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you get the assurance there? A. No, sir; I didn't. I got nothing.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. Higgins after that? A. No, sir, I never saw the man.

Q. You never talked with him? A. No, sir; not to know him.

Q. But to Governor Waterman; you were hunting for this assurance; and as soon as you saw the Governor you did not hunt any further for the assurance; is that the fact? [A pause.] You say you wanted an assurance that your friend would be taken care of if you wanted him to be? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And up to the time of seeing the Governor you were after that assurance, and went to see Mr. Higgins for it? A. I went to see Mr. Higgins to form his acquaintance.

Q. And up to the time you went to the Governor's room you had that desire? A. I didn't go up there for anything.

Q. Well, you had that desire, I say, and you went up to the Governor's room, in the Occidental Hotel, didn't you? A. Not from the Governor; no, sir.

Q. You had the desire to know it from Mr. Higgins, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. After your interview with the Governor you did not desire it any more. Is that the fact? A. No, it ain't exactly the fact.

Q. What do you mean by that: that it is not exactly the fact? A. I thought the way it was, Mr. Higgins, I guess, knows a little about me by this time, but I never spoke to the man.

Q. How does he know about you? A. Through other parties telling him, I guess.

Q. Who are the parties? A. I don't know.

Q. Who do you think? A. Jimmy Stevenson is one, I guess, and Ed. Williams.

Q. Who else? A. George Allen, foreman down at the shop.

Q. Who else? A. I think that is enough.

Q. Ain't there one more that spoke to him, if you could think real hard? A. Yes; there might be two.

Q. Just give us that one or two. You know who I want. Don't you think Mr. Higgins has heard a little about you from Mr. Banks? A. I guess he has.

Q. You and Mr. Banks had no friendship prior to the time of your meeting him at this time? A. No, sir.

Q. And the only reason of his speaking to Mr. Higgins about you would be for your part taken in this campaign? A. I guess so.

Q. If he did speak to Mr. Higgins, that was the reason of his doing it? After seeing the Governor, didn't he tell you it was all right now, that you would be taken care of, and that he would see Mr. Higgins for you? A. No, I guess not.

Q. Didn't he tell you that that day? A. No, he did not.

Q. Why didn't you say, "Well, Mr. Higgins is sick, and we can go up another day and see him." Didn't that occur to you? A. No, sir.

Q. In other words, as soon as you got out of the Governor's room you didn't want to see Mr. Higgins? A. If anybody was to come to bring me I would go.

Q. But you wouldn't hunt him yourself? A. No, sir.

Q. And prior to the time you were in the Governor's room, you were hunting him? A. Yes, sir.

Redirect Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Were you hunting him before this time? A. No, sir; never at all.

Q. You never hunted Mr. Higgins in your life, did you? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you try to see Mr. Higgins except one time when somebody took you there and proposed to introduce you to him? A. No, sir.

Q. You never did, before or after, try to see him? A. No.

Q. You say your object on that occasion was to try to get acquainted with him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you intend to ask him for any position or for any promise? A. At that time I did not; I just wanted to be acquainted with him.

Q. All you desired to do was to be acquainted with him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And if you had found him, it was not your intention to ask him for anything, but if you wanted to see him in the future you could do so? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was this proposed introducing you to the Governor to get a promise or to simply get acquainted with him? A. Simply get acquainted with him.

Q. Did he tell the Governor you wanted anything or you wanted anything for anybody else? A. No, sir.

Q. He simply stated you were a Republican? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Mr. Banks told him you were formerly a Democrat? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Governor said he was glad to hear it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did the Governor either directly or indirectly promise you anything for yourself or any of your friends? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ask him for any such thing? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you go with the intention of asking something of him for anybody? A. No, sir.

Q. And you had no reason to expect it? A. No, sir.

Q. And you don't think you would get anything if you did ask it? A. No, I don't think I would.

Q. You say the reason you left the Democratic party was because you were not treated right? A. Yes, sir.

Q. As a matter of fact, then, your principal complaint against the Democratic party is against Mr. Sullivan and against Mr. Buckley, is it not? A. That is about the whole of it.

Q. Why did you expect Mr. Sullivan to be a friend to you two years ago and did not treat you right? What did you expect him to treat you right two years ago for? A. It was not Mr. Sullivan exactly, but it was the people that were behind him.

Q. You said awhile ago in your direct examination that you did not like Mr. Sullivan, or that you were down on Mr. Sullivan, or something to that effect, I believe, did you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the reason of that? Why don't you like Mr. Sullivan? He was a friend of yours, was he not? A. He was never any friend of mine. I worked for him, being a Democrat, and I worked for the whole ticket.

Q. Then why are you down on Mr. Sullivan? Why do you dislike him? A. One reason is, that there was a man who was in the Fire Department before he went to the Senate, puts him in his place and comes back again, and being a State Senator, and he throws this man out.

Q. Then what else did he do? Did he draw the pay himself? A. I believe he does.

Q. Do you say that is the reason you are down on him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the salary he draws in that way? A. I think it is about $34 a month.

Q. And you think a man that is in the Legislature, and comes back and throws a poor man out that he has put in his place, is a poor man for Senator? A. I don't think a Senator is a proper man to be in the Fire Department.

Q. And that is one reason you are down on him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the further reason, you say, you are down on him and the Democratic party was because you were not treated right two years ago? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were active in the campaign for the Democratic party two years ago, were you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who did you apply to to do something for you two years ago? A. To Mr. Buckley.

Q. Why did you apply to Buckley? A. I told Geo. Maxwell, "If I am a Democrat, I want to be acquainted with the man I am dealing with." And I asked him to bring me down to Buckley, and he did so.

Q. I will ask you the same question you were asked a little while ago: Why did you want to see Mr. Buckley? A. Just to have his acquaintance. I don't want to be running, working the Democratic ticket and not knowing him, and he was doing the whole thing.

Q. Was Buckley on the Democratic ticket? A. No, sir.

Q. Why did you want to see him? A. He was running it.

Q. Then with the same opinion from Mr. Higgins, that he was the man you wanted to see in the Republican party, you thought Buckley owned the Democratic party? A. About the same thing.

Q. That was the way you sized up the two parties? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you didn't think there was any use in your working until you got acquainted with him? A. No, sir.

Q. Then when you went to see the Governor on what you mentioned, you hadn't any intention of asking for any position, and didn't ask for any? A. No, sir.

Q. And you didn't ask the Governor for any assurance that you would get one? A. No, sir.

Q. And you simply wanted to get acquainted with him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And your seeking for Mr. Higgins on that day was simply to get acquainted with him? A. No, sir.

Q. You didn't intend to, and would not have asked for any such thing had you seen him? A. No, sir; not at that time.

Recross Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE—You were just paving the way. You did not get anything from the Governor when you went up there, did you? A. No, sir.

Q. You didn't find anything laying round loose up there? A. No, sir.

Q. Isn't it the fact that your idea in going to the Governor, and going to Mr. Higgins, was to get your father a place? A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't you so state to Mr. Sullivan? A. I might have.

Q. Is it not the fact? A. I guess I did. Mr. Sullivan said that he would do so, too.

Q. What is that? A. Maxwell came to me and said my father was looking for a place now, and if they got on top, why he would get it.

Q. You said your father was looking for a place? A. I didn't say so; I didn't say he was looking for a place.

Q. He wouldn't refuse one, would he? A. I don't suppose he would, if he got it.

Q. Did you tell Mr. Banks your father was looking for a place? A. No, sir.

Q. Isn't that the reason, as a matter of fact, why he took you up to Mr. Higgins, to get your father a place? A. No, sir; I don't know as it was. Banks told me he couldn't put no man to work.

Q. Did you tell him you wanted your father to get a place? A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't he take you up to Mr. Higgins to get you a place—ain't that the fact now? Didn't he take you and tell you to come along, and he would go up to Higgins and fix that? A. No, sir.

Q. What did he say about that? A. Nothing. I come down, and he asked me to go up and see Higgins.

Q. Had you mentioned your father's name to him before that? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever mention your father's name to him before that? A. No, sir.

Q. You didn't say a word to him or to Banks? A. No, sir.

Q. But you did tell Sullivan, Banks had agreed to get your father a place? A. I might have told him so.

Q. If you did tell him so, it was a lie, was it? A. I don't know. I have told lots of other people, too.

Q. You are in the habit of telling lies, are you? A. No, sir.

Q. Then if you have told a good many people lies, you must be in the habit of it? A. When you have lots of men around you, you say anything to get away, and you have got to tell them something when they ask your reason for it.

MR. DORN: That was the reason you were trying to get away from Sullivan.

By MR. CLUNIE: You are in the habit of lying, are you? A. No, sir.

By MR. DORN: If you said anything of that kind to Sullivan, it was because he was following after you and trying to get you to support him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Sullivan then did say if you would stand in with him he would give you anything that Banks would? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you say he did make that promise to you before the last election? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you declined the offer? A. Yes, sir.

By MR. CLUNIE: Do you know William Maxwell? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Didn't you meet him on the street one day before the election and say that you wanted a place for your father, and that Banks had agreed to get it for you? A. No, sir.

Q. Will you swear to that? A. No, sir.

Q. What did you say to him? A. Maxwell said to me, "Sullivan will beat Banks as much votes as he did Dr. May," and I said, "He may beat him, but he won't beat him as bad as he did Dr. May."

Q. Was that all the conversation? A. Well, I had a long conversation with him.

Q. But you did not tell him what I asked you in that last question? A. I don't know. I might have told him, too; I said I told lots of people.

Q. Do you swear positively that you did not tell Maxwell that you wanted a place for your father, and that Banks had promised to get it for you? A. I don't say that I did.

Q. If the notes show that, did you tell it to him? A. I might have said it to him or Sullivan.

Q. Do you say you did tell it to him? A. I don't know whether I did or not.

Q. When Sullivan saw you down at your place, who was with him? A. My father was.

Q. You had known him for a good many years prior to that, had you? A. Sullivan?

Q. Yes, sir? A. No, sir; I have not.

Q. You did not know Sullivan before that at all, did you? A. Yes, I knew him before that.

Q. What occurred when your father brought him down? A. He said anything Banks would do for him, he would do it.

Q. Didn't your father introduce Sullivan to you? A. No, sir; my father was introduced to Sullivan before that.

Q. But he did not introduce you to him? A. I don't know that he did; but I didn't need an introduction.

Q. Will you swear to that? A. I don't know why he need introduce him to me if I had spoken to him.

By MR. DORN: Did he introduce you? A. I can't say.

Q. You had known him before, had you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you had been acquainted with him? A. Yes, sir.

JAMES LYNCH.

A witness on behalf of respondent, being duly sworn, testifies as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Mr. Lynch, where do you reside? Answer—I live No. 3 Salmon Street.

Q. What are you politics? A. Republican.

Q. Were you present when a Deputy Sheriff by the name of Doran testified? A. I was not.

Q. If anybody testified that you were a Democrat, then they were slightly mistaken, were they so? A. I believe so.

Q. How long have you been a Republican? A. About six months, I suppose.

Q. And you voted the Republican ticket at the last election? A. I did.

Q. The witness Doran testified as follows; "I went to Lynch"—meaning you—"and asked him if he would vote for a friend of mine, Mr. Sullivan, and he said no, he would not, but he was for Banks; he said 'I have the Democratic ticket, but I have Banks' money, and I am here to work and buy votes for him.'" He testified that this conversation took place at the polling place of the Sixth Precinct of the Thirty-Third Assembly District, on the sixth day of last November. Did any such conversation as that take place? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever say to any person, or at any time, that you had Banks' money, and that you were there to work and buy votes for him? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you work or buy votes for Banks at the last election? A. No, sir.

Q. And you never stated so either to Doran or to anybody else? A. No, sir; not as I can recollect. If I did, I told him a lie.

Q. If Doran so testified he testified falsely, did he? A. I suppose so, yes.

Q. At the last election did you buy any votes for anybody? A. I did not.

Q. Did you bribe anybody to vote for anybody? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you have any of Mr. Banks' money to buy votes with? A. I did not.

Q. Were you given any money yourself to vote the Republican ticket? A. No, sir.

Q. You voted the Republican ticket as a matter of course? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And because you thought it was right? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you vote the Republican ticket or become a Republican because you expected a position, or something of that kind? A. No, sir.

Q. Or from a conviction that it was the right party? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which was it? Were you promised anything or given anything? A. I was not.

Q. Or given anything as an inducement for changing? A. No, sir.

Q. You are simply one of the number of reformed Democrats, and concluded to change? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You had a good deal of company in San Francisco in that respect, didn't you? A. I did.

Q. You knew a good many more Democrats who went the same way, didn't you? A. I did.

Q. No such conversation as that took place, then? A. No, sir.

Q. And you never made any such statement to Mr. Doran? A. No, sir.

Q. Or to anybody else? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know this Mr. Doran, a Deputy Sheriff? A. I do.

Q. He was over at the Sixth Precinct of the Thirty-third Assembly District at the last election, was he not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was he doing there? A. I don't know.

Q. What are his politics? A. He is a Democrat.

Q. Did he stand around, or what did he do during the day? A. He was standing there all day.

Q. What did he do with regard to getting people to vote one way or the other, that you observed? A. I didn't observe him getting anybody to do anything; I observed him speaking to his friends.

Q. Did anybody bring any people up to Mr. Doran to be talked to before they voted on that day? A. I couldn't say.

Q. As a matter of fact, didn't you see several people who were actively engaged in making a canvass for the Democratic party bring voters up to Mr. Doran and have a private interview with Mr. Doran, and then walk up and deposit their ballots at the Sixth Precinct of the Thirty-third District? A. Not exactly? I couldn't state.

Q. Tell us exactly how it happened. What was Doran doing there in the way of getting votes for the Democratic party? A. I couldn't observe that he was doing anything of the kind.

Q. What is that? A. I don't know that he has done anything of the kind.

Q. What did he do? A. He simply stayed there, as I said, and was speaking with his friends, and what conversation he had with his friends I don't know.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: What is your business? A. I am a grainer.

Q. Where are you working? A. I am working at present on Pacific Street.

Q. How long have you been in that business? A. About ten years, I should judge.

Q. And you lived in this Twenty-first Senatorial District? A. Yes, sir; born there.

Q. Were you an officer up there? A. I was.

Q. What? A. Republican Clerk.

Q. You were a Republican Clerk? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Doran testified on his direct examination that you were a Democrat. You have been a Democrat, haven't you? A. Not exactly. I have only had one vote previous to this one, and it is a mystery to those people whether I was a Republican or Democrat.

Q. You were a Democrat, were you? A. Not exactly.

Q. Did you belong to the Non-Partisans? A. No, sir.

Q. You did not belong to the reform party, did you? A. I did.

Q. You were a member of the reform party? A. No, sir: but I was one of the reform Democrats that joined the Republican party.

Q. I thought you said you had never been a Democrat, exactly? A. Well, say that I did.

Q. You say you were a reformed Democrat, who had joined the Republican party? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then you had been a Democrat? A. Then I guess I might have been a Democrat.

Q. Then Mr. Doran was not very far off, was he? A. Not on that question, no.

Q. You had only changed six months before the election? A. That is all.

Q. How long had you been investigating the great principles of the Democratic and Republican parties before the last election? A. Since last election.

Q. Did you devote your attention to any particular question? A. No, not exactly.

Q. You became familiar with the tariff, I suppose? A. Oh, no.

Q. You didn't inquire into that at all? A. No.

Q. Then the reason of your reformation was not the tariff at all? A. No, sir.

Q. You know that that was a great question involved in the last political campaign, don't you? A. I should judge so.

Q. But you went over on an independent issue? A. I did.

Q. What was the issue? A. Nothing particular.

Q. It was not the tariff? A. No, sir.

Q. You are sure of that? A. I am sure of that.

Q. What was the question that drove you from the Democratic party? A. No question in particular, but I simply joined the Republican party of my own free will.

Q. There must have been some reason that actuated you? A. No, none at all.

Q. Just without a reason you joined the Republican party? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Don't you think that was funny? A. No, not to me; it may be to you.

Q. How is it that you were a Democrat before? How is it you had been a Democrat six months prior to the election and then turned over and became a Republican? You want us to understand you had no reason at all for it? A. No reason at all.

Q. And that occurred six months before election? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have been working as a grainer ever since, have you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why did you quit? A. I am working at it to-day.

Q. When do you expect to stop? A. I don't expect to stop at all.

Q. You were appointed one of the Republican Clerks at the Sixth Precinct of the Thirty-third District, were you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you there all day? A. No; half a day.

Q. You were sworn in as a regular Clerk there? A. Yes, sir; I was.

Q. And received your pay as Clerk? A. Yes, sir.

Q. From the Registration Office here? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were on how long? A. I took the afternoon and he took the forenoon, so we run it off as a six-hour watch.

Q. Who took the forenoon? A. A gentleman by the name of Josephs, I believe.

Q. A gentleman by the name of Josephs took the forenoon and you took the afternoon? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you spend the time after you got off? A. Right around the polling place.

Q. You stood around the polling place all the time? A. I did.

Q. What were you doing around there? A. The County Committeeman, Jones, gave me a challenge book for about half an hour, until he sent a man up to take the book and challenge.

Q. That is all you were doing? A. That is all I was doing, yes; I was standing there.

Q. You didn't ask anybody to vote the Republican ticket? A. No, sir.

Q. Not one? A. No.

Q. You are sure of that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And just as sure as you are of anything else you have testified to? A. I am.

Q. Don't you think it was a little strange for a Republican Clerk to come out there and take a challenge book and challenge for the Republican party? A. No, I didn't think it was strange at all.

Q. You had been sworn in to faithfully discharge your duties as a Clerk? A. I was.

Q. Notwithstanding that fact, you went outside—— A. [Interrupting.] It was not necessary——

Q. [Interrupting.] But you did it? A. I did it; yes, sir.

Q. You went outside, and acted as a challenger for the Republican party? A. I did.

Q. Under the orders of the Republican County Committeeman? A. Yes, sir; I acted as challenger only for about half an hour.

Q. What did you do all the rest of the time? A. I was around the polling place, partially, and there and around.

Q. What were you doing around there? A. I was doing nothing.

Q. Just standing around? A. That is all.

Q. That was all you had to do, was it? A. That was all I had to do. That was all I wanted to do.

Q. You did not talk with anybody? A. I did not.

Q. You did not mention politics that day? A. I could not say I mentioned politics.

Q. You did not talk with Democrats at all? A. I talked with Doran; yes, sir.

Q. What did you say to him? A. I don't know exactly what I said to him.

Q. You swore awhile ago you didn't say certain things to him. Why do you know that? A. I am positive I did not say it to him.

Q. Why? A. Because it is simply I didn't say it to him.

Q. What did you say to him? A. I can't recollect what I did say to him.

Q. As a matter of fact, you don't recollect what you did say that day to Doran. That is the fact, isn't it? A. Yes, sir; that is the fact.

Q. You didn't have any money up there that day at all, did you? You didn't have a dollar with you? A. No, sir; I didn' have a cent.

Q. Didn't you take a drink once in awhile? A. I did; and I stood the groceryman off for it, too.

Q. Who did you stand off? A. A groceryman, corner of Pacific and Mason.

Q. What is his name? A. Liebsher.

Q. How many drinks did you have that day? A. I had about ten or fifteen, or twenty.

Q. Doran says you were a little drunk that day? A. I don't think so.

Q. A little thing like fifteen or twenty drinks don't bother you at all? A. Oh, no.

Q. They wouldn't affect you at all? A. Not a bit.

Q. You had this conversation with Doran; he said you were a little full; at that time you had about fifteen or twenty drinks in you. Is that true? A. No, sir.

Q. How many did you have? A. At that time I had about four, I should judge.

Q. What made you think you had only about four? A. I drank considerable after I left him.

Q. What time did this conversation occur? A. I should judge as early as nine o'clock in the forenoon.

Q. Wasn't it a little earlier in the day? A. Well, between eight and nine.

Q. Up to eight o'clock you only had four drinks? A. No.

Q. Are you certain you did not tell Doran you were a Democrat, and you had advanced money and you were spending it for Banks? A. No, sir. Mr. Doran asked me: "I understood you were always a Democrat;" and I said "Probably I was; that makes no difference to you or anybody else, does it?"

Q. That is all you said? A. That is all I said to him.

Q. You did not say anything to him about working the Republican ticket at all, did you? A. No.

Q. Didn't you tell him you were aiding the Republican ticket out there? A. I didn't tell him; he didn't ask me the question.

Q. As a matter of fact, didn't you? A. I was working the ticket.

Q. You had the Republican ticket, didn't you? A. Yes. I didn't have Republican tickets, no.

Q. What did you have? Did you have Democratic tickets? A. No, I didn't have the Democrat ticket.

Q. What did you have; the Non-Partisan? A. I voted the straight Republican ticket.

Q. But didn't you tell Doran you were helping the ticket out there that day? A. No, I didn't exactly tell him anything of the kind.

Q. What do you mean by exactly? A. I don't remember of telling him.

Q. You don't remember what you did tell Doran? A. No.

Q. As a matter of fact, didn't you have the Republican tickets in your hand that day? A. I had the Republican tickets in my hand early in the day—about six o'clock—and I gave them to a young fellow there to peddle that day.

Q. And you didn't touch them again? A. No, sir.

Q. You did not take one ticket off the Republican table? A. I might have taken one ticket off the Republican table to vote myself.

Q. After you voted yourself, did you? A. No, sir.

Q. You did not touch them? A. No, sir.

Q. If a gentleman comes and swears he saw you with them, he is mistaken, is he? A. I believe he is.

Q. Don't you know? A. Yes, I know he is mistaken.

Q. You didn't have any Democratic tickets in your possession? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you have any Democratic tickets with Sullivan scratched and Banks written on them? A. No, sir.

Q. And you didn't ask anybody to vote that ticket? A. No, sir.

Q. If anybody says so, they are mistaken? A. They are.

Q. Didn't you ask anybody to vote the Republican ticket that day? A. Oh, no.

Q. You are sure of that? A. Sure of it.

Q. And you did not pay anybody? A. I did not pay anybody; no.

Q. And you did not use any money there that day? A. I didn't have any money to use.

Q. Did you use it? A. I didn't use it.

Q. Didn't you ask anybody to vote, and tell them how much they would get, and refer them to another man? A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. Are you sure of that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have any talk with William Maxwell before election? A. How long before election?

Q. A couple of weeks before? A. I can remember meeting Maxwell in the saloon down the avenue, and I was pretty full, and he walked up the street with me.

Q. You were pretty full that night? A. I was.

Q. But you were not pretty full when you talked with Doran? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you remember what you said when you were full? A. I do not.

Q. Did you tell Maxwell at that time that you had Banks' money, and that you intended to spend it to secure his election, and that you could not go back on him? A. Not as I recollect.

Q. You would recollect if you told it to him, wouldn't you? A. I would not.

Q. Would you recollect it if you had told him? A. If I had told him, yes, sir.

Q. Do you swear you did not tell him? A. I couldn't say that I could swear that I did not tell him.

Q. You were pretty full that time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And whatever you said didn't go? A. Yes, that is the idea.

Q. Whatever you said you won't swear to? A. No, sir.

By MR. DORN: If you made any such statement, it is not true, is it? A. What is that?

Q. If you told him any such statement as that it was not true, was it? A. It was not true; no, sir.

Q. And on election day you didn't have a dollar, and you stood the groceryman off for the drinks you had? A. Yes, sir.

By MR. CLUNIE: You did not know Mr. Banks at all, did you? A. Certainly I know him.

Q. How long had you known him? A. I had known by sight, I guess, about four or five years. I know his brothers and went to school with his brothers.

Q. Is that the reason you came from Democrat to Republican? A. No, sir.

Q. When did you meet Banks, and become personally acquainted with him? A. During the Republican Convention. I was Sergeant-at-Arms of the Republican Convention, and I was introduced to him down there.

Q. And you were introduced to Banks there? A. I was.

Q. That was when he was nominated, wasn't it? A. That was before he was nominated.

Q. Did you have any talk about his going to be the nominee for Senator of the Republican party? A. I did not.

Q. Did you wish him success, or anything of that kind? A. No, sir.

Q. You did not say anything about it? A. No, sir.

Q. When did you see Mr. Banks after that? A. I met him about once a week on the street.

Q. Did you stop and talk with him? A. No, he just bid me the time of day.

Q. He bid you the time of day and went by? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see him the first week after the Republican Convention? A. Yes, I believe.

Q. He was then the candidate for State Senator? A. I don't know.

Q. You don't know whether Banks was a candidate for Senator a week before the convention or not? A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Was it two weeks after the convention? A. I don't know how long after the convention; it is a mystery to me.

Q. You are aware of the fact that he got the nomination after the convention? A. Yes, sir.

Q. After the nomination, did you and he have any talks? A. No, sir.

Q. You have not spoken? A. Yes, sir; we have spoken.

Q. Did you and he have any words? A. No, sir.

Q. You have never been promised any position by him? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you promise to vote for him if he would help you? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ask him to put you to work? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever ask him to put anybody else to work for you? A. No, sir.

Q. Was it understood for anybody? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever drink with him? A. I have taken a drink with him occasionally.

Q. Where did you drink with him? A. I don't know exactly myself.

Q. How often have you drank with him? A. About ten or fifteen different times.

Q. Did you go around with him in the district? A. I did not.

Q. You asked your friends to help you, of course, didn't you? A. I did.

Q. A great many of them? A. Yes, a great many of them.

Q. Who did you ask? A. I don't know as I am obliged to answer that question.

MR. DORN: As far as you can remember? A. You want to know all whom I asked?

By MR. CLUNIE: I would like to know just a few. A. I asked a gentleman by the name of Meehan.

Q. Where does Meehan reside? A. He lives Broadway and Taylor.

Q. Did you buy Mr. Meehan? A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't you give him a dollar? A. No, sir.

Q. Are you sure of that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you ask him to vote for him? A. About two or three weeks before election, I guess.

- Q. And he told you he would do it, did he? A. He did.
- Q. Then out of friendship to you? A. He did.
- Q. How long have you known Meehan? A. I have been raised with Meehan.
- Q. How long? A. I have known him about twenty years, I guess.
- Q. And your acquaintance with him has been more intimate? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Do you live near him? A. I do, about a block.
- Q. And you saw him about three weeks before election? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Did you see him again? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And talk with him? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. When? A. Say every day or night before election I would meet him, and talk to him.
- Q. You asked him to vote for Banks? A. I did; yes, sir; and he answered me, and that satisfied me, and I didn't ask him again.
- Q. You asked him to vote for Banks? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. How long before election was the last time that you asked him? A. I couldn't say.
- Q. Didn't you see him on election day at all? A. I did.
- Q. You were not talking with him, were you? A. I was talking with him, yes. He was peddling tickets.
- Q. For you? A. Not for me, no.
- Q. You put him to work, though, didn't you? A. No; the County Committeeman, as far as I can understand, put him to work.
- Q. Weren't you there in charge for the County Committee? A. No, sir.
- Q. You did not do that at all? A. No, sir. I simply interceded for him and got him that job on that day.
- Q. With whom did you intercede? A. Mr. Jones.
- Q. He was a County Committeeman? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And he put Meehan on at your request? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. You did see Mr. Meehan on election day, then? A. I did; yes, sir.
- Q. He was a little under the influence of liquor? A. No; not exactly.
- Q. He was a little under the influence? A. Well, yes.
- Q. Did you treat him? A. Yes, sir; once, I believe.
- Q. Where? A. Pacific and Mason.
- Q. Whose grocery store? A. Liebsher.
- Q. And you did not pay for that? A. No, sir.
- Q. He bought it? A. No, sir.
- Q. Where did you go to treat him? A. I simply felt like it, I suppose.
- Q. What conversation occurred between you and him when you treated him? A. No conversation whatever; we simple took our drink and he went out to—we had a dry goods box where we had some ballots and tickets on, and he simply went up there and took care of them.
- Q. Did you ask him if he had voted? A. No, sir.
- Q. You did not ask him that question at all? A. No, sir.
- Q. And you didn't ask him whether he voted for your friend Banks or nor? A. No, sir.
- Q. That you are positive of? A. I am positive.
- Q. Think of it, and see if you are sure you did not ask them to vote for Banks on election day? A. No, sir.
- Q. And you did not ask any other of your friends on election day to vote for Banks? A. No, sir.
- Q. Did you know as a matter of fact whether he had voted? A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. Did you go up to the polls and see about that? A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. What is his name? A. Lewis Meehan.

Q. You did not go up to the polls with him? A. I had been around the polling place all day. As far as taking him up there, I did not take him up there; I did not take him up.

Q. You did not walk up with him when he went up? A. No, sir.

Q. You are sure of that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Positive? A. Positive; yes, sir.

Q. You are just as positive of that as you are of anything else you have sworn to? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who is another friend of yours that you asked? A. I asked Dunn.

By MR. DORN: Deputy Sheriff? A. No, sir.

By MR. CLUNIE: Did you ask Jimmy Dunn? A. I asked Henry Dunn.

Q. Did you ask Henry to vote for Banks? A. I did; yes, sir.

Q. And he told you he would do it, did he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you see him? A. I saw him on the corner there.

Q. Did you see him on election day? A. I didn't, not as I can recollect.

Q. Would you recollect it if you had seen him? A. Well, no.

Q. Did you talk with Henry on election day? A. I did not.

Q. You did not have any conversation with him before he voted? A. No, sir.

Q. You didn't give him any money to vote? A. No, sir.

Q. And you didn't go up with him to the polls? A. No, sir.

Q. Who else? A. I have asked my brother.

Q. Did you ask your brother to vote for Banks? A. I did.

Q. You did not give him the ballot on election day? A. No, sir.

Q. You did not talk to him on election day? A. No, sir.

Q. And you did not go up with him when he voted? A. No, sir.

Q. Who else did you ask? A. Robert Murray.

Q. Where does he reside? A. On Auburn Street.

Q. How much did you offer him? A. I didn't offer him a cent. I didn't offer anybody anything.

Q. Do you know a man named Joyce? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You talked with him a little, didn't you? A. Yes, I did; I asked him.

Q. And you asked him to vote for Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You didn't say anything to him about money? A. No, sir.

Q. You didn't tell him where he could find any money, if he voted that way? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you treat him at all? A. I couldn't tell you if I did or not.

Q. You didn't have any money on election day, did you? A. I did not.

Q. If you treated him, that must have been charged, too, in that saloon? A. Yes; I had money after noon time. That was when I was stationed inside.

Q. Where did you get the money? A. I got it from Banks.

Q. That was the man that was running for Senator? A. I got it from him to pay them people for peddling tickets.

Q. You got money from Banks on election day, then, didn't you? A. I got that money from Banks to pay the peddler and challenger.

Q. You got that money from Banks to pay the peddler and challenger, and you went and treated Joyce on it? A. I did not treat Joyce on any money of that kind at all.

Q. Then if you treated Joyce you must have treated him and had it charged at Liebsher's? A. I didn't swear I treated Joyce.

- Q. You did treat him, didn't you? A. I don't recollect it.
- Q. If you did treat him, you must have treated him there, didn't you?
- A. No, I might have treated him at some other saloon.
- Q. Whereabouts? A. On Salmon Street.
- Q. You must have had an account there, then? A. No, sir. I don't know as I drank there.
- Q. You don't know where you drank before, do you? A. I know one particular place.
- Q. Did you drink in the Salmon Alley saloon? A. I believe I was treated there myself.
- Q. Who treated you? A. That I can't remember.
- Q. You say you were treated there? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. But you didn't treat Joyce there, you say? A. I don't know whether I did or not.
- Q. You say you got this money from Banks to pay the people that were inside; is that it? A. People that were outside.
- Q. Who was outside that you had to pay? A. There was William Golden, he was challenging.
- Q. He was appointed by the Republican Committee, wasn't he? A. No, sir; not exactly.
- Q. What do you mean by not exactly? A. Yes, Jones asked me to get him a man to take charge of the challenge book that day.
- Q. Jones is the Republican County Committeeman? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. He asked you to do that? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Then you went and got this Golden? A. Yes, sir; I did.
- Q. And Banks gave you money to pay it? A. Yes, I asked him to pay the people that because I didn't think I would see Jones that day.
- Q. Why should Banks have to pay them? The Republican Committee had got them, hadn't they? A. I did not know that.
- Q. You said Jones, the Republican County Committeeman, had told you to get these people? A. Yes, and I couldn't find Jones in the afternoon, and I thought I would make sure by asking Banks for it.
- Q. Don't you know Jones was up there very often that day? A. I saw him once or twice.
- Q. About what time did you get this money? A. Between twelve and one, I should judge.
- Q. Hadn't Jones been up there before that? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. You didn't ask him for the money to pay this man, did you? A. No, sir.
- Q. And you had to get it from Banks? A. No; simply asked Banks for it to pay these people that I didn't want to see them running around all night to get it.
- Q. You hired Golden, didn't you? A. I did.
- Q. Who else did you hire? A. Meehan.
- Q. You hired Meehan? A. No; I didn't hire him, but referred him to Jones. Jones hired Meehan.
- Q. You swore a moment ago that you hired him, didn't you? A. No; I swore I interceded for him with Jones.
- Q. And you paid Meehan, didn't you? A. No; I didn't pay Meehan. Meehan was paid by the County Committeeman.
- Q. Did you swear a minute ago that you paid him? A. No, sir: I swore I got money to pay Meehan and Golden, and I swear I paid Golden, and not Meehan.
- Q. Then you got money to pay him, and did not pay him; is that it?
- A. That is it.

Q. How much did you get? A. $10 to pay the both of them, and I referred Meehan to Jones, and Jones paid him, so he got his $5.

Q. You got $10 to pay the both of them, and you referred Meehan to Jones, and Jones paid him, so he got his $5, and you kept the $5? A. I did.

Q. What did you do that for? A. I generally pick up all the loose change that is running around.

Q. Weren't you around that day picking up loose change? A. I was not.

Q. Did you find any more laying around? A. I did not.

Q. All you found was $5? A. Yes, sir.

Q. All you got from Banks was $10? A. Was $10.

Q. You are sure of that? A. I am positive of that.

Q. And you told him you were getting it to pay Golden and Meehan? A. I did.

Q. All of these people you got to vote for Banks, did you? A. I did.

Q. They were all Democrats, weren't they? A. I don't know whether they were or not.

Q. Don't you know Meehan's politics? A. I do not. This was his first vote.

Q. Hadn't he told you before that he was going to vote for the Democratic nominee? A. No, sir.

Q. Why did you ask him to vote for Banks? A. I don't know why, but I said Banks was a friend of mine, and simply asked him to vote for him, and I didn't know his politics.

Q. How long had you known Banks? A. That is, his folks were.

Q. How long had you known his folks? A. We went to school together.

Q. How long had you gone to school with his folks? A. Not with his folks, but his brothers.

Q. You said his folks were friends of yours? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you mean by that? A. Well, his brothers.

Q. And you went to school with his brothers? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And on account of having gone to school with his brothers, you asked these people to vote for him, did you? A. Yes, sir; because they asked me.

Q. Who were they? A. I can't exactly recollect who asked me, but I had no particular choice on the ticket at all; I was working the whole ticket.

Q. How many brothers has Banks? A. He has got two, I think.

Q. You went to school with him, didn't you? A. Yes sir, I did.

Q. What school? A. The Washington Grammar.

Q. How long ago was that? A. It is about ten or eleven years ago.

Q. Who was the teacher? A. I had three or four teachers in that school.

Q. Who was the one who taught you and Banks? A. I believe Mrs. Lamb, or Mr. Lambert.

Q. Which one of the Banks was it that was with you? A. Roddy Banks.

Q. How old is Roddy? A. I don't know.

Q. How old was he when he went to school with you? A. I don't know; I never knew his age.

Q. Was Roddy a little boy when he went to school with you? A. No, he was not.

Q. How old is he now? A. I don't know the man's age.

Q. Where does he live now? He lives now on Sacramento Street, between Leavenworth and Jones Streets, I believe.

Q. How long has he lived there? A. I don't know.

Q. Do you know where Roddy voted from? A. No, sir.

Q. Was Roddy the one that asked you? A. Roddy? No.

Q. Then it must have been the other one, wasn't it? A. It wasn't the other one.

Q. He had two brothers, and you say they asked you to vote for Mr. Banks. Now, it was not Roddy or the other one; who was it, now? A. Nobody asked me to vote for Mr. Banks.

Q. Then you were wrong a little while ago when you said somebody asked you to do it, and you did it? A. I was asked to when I put these people to work. Golden asked me to put him to work. I didn't understand your question.

Q. I asked you why you were working for Banks, and you told me that his folks asked you; are you a little deaf? A. I am.

Q. And you don't understand my question, do you? A. No, sir.

Q. And that is the reason you answer them the way you have? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why did you work particularly for Banks? A. Because I felt like it.

Q. What caused you to feel that way? A. Knowing his brother.

Q. And it was just because you knew his brother that you went around and asked these half a dozen people to vote for Mr. Banks; is that it? A. That is it.

Q. That is the only consideration you had? A. That is all.

Q. When had you seen his brothers before that? A. I have seen them off and on for years.

Q. When did you last talk to his brother? A. I believe the last time I talked with the brother was yesterday.

Q. Prior to the election when did you talk with him last; or, before the election, how long was it? A. I don't know.

Q. Was it a year? A. No; I think it was going on only around the Republican primaries.

Q. Where did that conversation occur? A. Washington and Leavenworth.

Q. When had you seen him before then? A. I have seen him off and on for years.

Q. Have you been rather intimate with him? A. Yes, sir; we are.

Q. How intimate; do you call at each other's houses? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever meet in business? A. No, sir.

Q. Had you ever spent ten minutes with him since you left school, prior to the time you exhibited this great friendship with him, and got in and worked with his brother? A. I have.

Q. Where? A. Wherever I would meet him.

Q. Where? A. Washington and Leavenworth was the principal place.

Q. When? A. Two or three months ago.

Q. What conversation did you have with him? A. Talking over old times, I suppose, what conversation I had with him.

Q. Did you say anything about his brother then? A. I did not.

Q. Did he tell you his brother was going to be a candidate for Senator? A. He did not.

Q. When did you see him after that? A. I saw him at Washington and Stockton.

Q. What did you say to him then? A. I didn't say anything to him.

Q. Which brother is this? A. This Roddy or Roderick; I don't know which. They call him Roddy.

Q. You were very intimate with this man? A. Yes, sir.

Q. So intimate that you were going out of your way to hunt up men to vote for his brother? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were old school acquaintances? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you don't know his name? A. I have forgotten it. There are lots of people I know in this town, and I don't know their first name.

Q. What is his nickname? A. Roddy. I don't know whether that is his nickname or his right name.

Q. You talked with him where? A. Leavenworth and Washington, and Washington and Stockton.

Q. Who was present when you had this talk? A. There might have been a dozen.

Q. Can you name some of them? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Name them. A. McLane, McFarland, Mr. Creamer—there were two or three Creamer brothers, and two or three McLanes.

Q. And they heard of you, and Roddy renewed your old acquaintance; is it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you see him after this second conversation? A. Washington and Stockton.

Q. When was that? Was that after the nomination of his brother? A. No, sir. I saw him before at Washington and Stockton, and I saw him there after the election, at Washington and Stockton.

Q. After he was nominated and before the election, did you ever see Roddy, then? A. I believe so.

Q. Did you and Roddy have any talks? A. No, sir.

Q. Did Roddy give you any money to help you along? A. No, sir.

Q. Never a cent? A. No, sir.

Q. Did Roddy tell you what he would do for old acquaintanceship if his brother got elected? A. He did not. I just did it my own self.

Q. You just did it of your own free will? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You did not talk with the Governor about this matter, did you? A. No, sir.

Q. He did not send for you? A. No, sir.

Q. You were a reformed Democrat? A. I was.

Q. You didn't run up and interview Governor Waterman about it? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you meet Mr. Higgins? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you inform Mr. Higgins about it? A. No, sir.

Q. You knew Mr. Higgins, did you not? A. I do not. I have seen him, but I have never spoken to him.

Q. You have heard of him? A. I have heard of him; yes, sir.

Q. And you have never seen Governor Waterman? A. I have not.

Q. Did Mr. Banks ever tell you about the friendship the Governor had for him? A. No, sir.

Q. He never related that? A. No, sir.

Q. Did he tell you about Mr. Higgins' friendship for him? A. No, sir.

Q. Did he tell you that when he got in as Senator he expected to control a great deal of patronage? A. No, sir.

Q. Nothing of the kind ever occurred? A. No, sir.

Q. And you swear you did not give anybody a dollar on election day to vote? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you swear you were not there to do that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you didn't do that? A. I swear I didn't pay anybody to vote.

Q. Do you swear you did not do it after they got away? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever do anything that leaned that way? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever make anybody a present of money in consideration of having voted? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever inquire how a man had voted and then make him a present? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you tell anybody that in consideration of voting, you would give them a present? A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. If Mr. Doran and if Mr. Maxwell swear you made this statement to them, that is not correct, is it? A. Not as I can remember. If I did say it, I don't recollect it, and if I stated it, it is a lie.

Q. Are you in the habit of running around lying to people? A. I josh anybody. I don't recollect ever telling anybody.

Q. But you are in the habit of joshing that way? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you think that is quite a josh? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know a man named John Feeney? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have a little josh with him? A. I did.

Q. What did you tell him? A. I told him pretty near the same thing.

Q. What did you tell him? A. I don't remember what I told him.

Q. You told him pretty near the same thing? A. I suppose I did.

Q. You swore you told him pretty near the same thing, didn't you? A. I suppose I did.

Q. What did you mean when you swore a minute ago that you didn't know what you told him? A. I don't know. You know you are getting the best of me.

Q. And you don't know what it was? A. I do not.

Q. Will you swear you did not tell Johnny Feeney you had Banks' money, and were using it to help him to be elected Senator from the Twenty-first District? A. Not as I know of.

Q. Are you positive you did not? A. I couldn't say, because I was drunk that day.

Q. Whatever you said that day, you were drunk; is that it? A. Not exactly drunk, but I had a few drinks in.

Q. What day was that? A. I don't know; I suppose it was on election day, wasn't it?

Q. Are you drunk every day? A. No, I don't think I was. I drink considerable every day, though.

Q. And that day you had these conversations, no matter what it was, you had been drinking considerable; is that the way you want it to go on record. A. I suppose so.

Q. Did you know anybody up there that was giving Banks' money away? A. I do not.

Q. Do you know a man named Arnold? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have a little talk with him? A. Yes, sir, I suppose so.

Q. Another little josh? A. Yes, I suppose so.

Q. Did you tell him if he would get in and vote for Banks you would steer him up where he could get some money? A. No, sir.

Q. You had a talk with him, didn't you? A. I don't know whether I did or not.

Q. Did you have any talk with him before election? A. No, sir; I don't know as I ever did. I had talks with him, but not on that proposition.

Q. If Mr. Arnold says that you told him before election that if he would vote for Banks, you would steer him up where he could get some "stuff" as he called it—you would do it? A. No, sir.

Q. Are you positive? A. Yes, sir; I am positive.

Q. You are positive you never had that conversation? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was it? A. I don't know.

Q. You had some conversation? A. No; I don't know whether I did or not.

Q. You have never talked with that man? A. Oh, yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever talk with him on that subject? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever talk with him on the subject of Mr. Banks? A. I would not swear I did not.

Q. You don't know what you did say? A. No.

Q. You may have been drunk at that time? A. Probably; yes.

Q. And you think it may have been very likely you may have made some statement to him when you were drunk, joshing him? A. It might have been. I don't know.

Q. Do you know a man by the name of Elliot? A. Elliot; yes, sir.

Q. He is a personal friend of yours, isn't he? A. He is; yes, sir.

Q. He got in a little trouble here awhile ago, didn't he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Burglary? A. No; no burglary.

Q. Highway robbery? A. Yes, sir, I believe it was robbery.

Q. You were down there for him? A. No, not exactly. I went on the stand for him.

Q. You swore for him? A. I did.

Q. That helped considerable, didn't it? A. Not as I know of. It didn't look that way.

Q. What did you swear to, to his character? A. No, sir.

Q. You swore for this man Elliot in the Police Court, did you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He was held over? A. Yes, sir; he was.

Q. Not because you swore? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever go to Mr. Banks on behalf of Elliot? A. I did not.

Q. Do you know George Williams? A. I do.

Q. Did you have a little talk with him? A. I did.

Q. About this man Elliot? A. I did.

Q. Mr. Williams was pretty close to Mr. Banks, was he not? A. Not as I know of. I know that he knows him; that is about all. I don't know that he was close to him.

Q. Don't you know Mr. Williams took a great interest in Banks' fight? A. No, sir.

Q. Don't you know that he was fighting for him? A. No, sir.

Q. Don't you know that he was paying people to work for him? A. No, sir. I would have been after Williams myself if I had thought he had it.

Q. Why? Were you looking for money? A. No, not exactly.

Q. Why should you have been after Williams, then? A. Well, I couldn't say. I would have been after him to speak to him; that is all.

Q. And if he hadn't had any money, you wouldn't have wanted to have spoken to him? A. No, sir.

Q. Are you in the habit of speaking to people on election day when you ask a man to vote and give him $2 50; is that what you call speaking to him? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you do any of that kind of speaking on election day? A. I did not.

Q. Tell us what you said to Elliot? A. I don't know as that is necessary.

Q. Tell us what you did for Elliot? A. If Mr. Dorn says so.

Q. Mr. Dorn wouldn't say so for the world.

MR. DORN: If it has no relevancy, I suggest he do not answer it.

THE WITNESS: I don't think it has got anything to do with the case.

- By MR. CLUNIE: Just tell us what you did with regard to Mr. Elliot?
- A. I was simply a witness for him; that was all.
- Q. What do you know about a highway robbery? A. I know that I happened to be in Elliot's company that evening.
- Q. You were not robbing people that evening? A. No, sir; I was not.
- Q. But you were in his company there? A. I was not.
- Q. You were in his company there, you say? A. I was in his company that evening.
- Q. You were with him robbing? A. I was not.
- Q. What did you swear to? A. I swore that I was in Elliot's company at the time that the robbery was committed.
- Q. And the Police Court differed with you, didn't they? A. I don't know.
- Q. They didn't believe you, did they? A. It looked that way.
- Q. The charge against Elliot was highway robbery? A. It was.
- Q. You went on the Police Court stand and swore you were with Elliot at the time the robbery was committed? A. Yes, sir; I simply swore Elliot was with me at the corner of Washington and Leavenworth.
- Q. At what time? A. I left him at twelve o'clock. We were up there all the evening.
- Q. What time did they claim the robbery had been committed? A. Round them hours.
- Q. Before what Judge did you swear to that? A. Before Judge Sullivan.
- Q. And Judge Sullivan, as soon as you swore to that, convicted the man, or held him to answer? A. I guess not.
- Q. What did they do? Did the jury convict him? A. I guess so.
- Q. And there were twelve men convicted him in the face of your statement? A. I don't know whether they did or not.
- Q. They convicted him after you had that swear, didn't they? A. I don't know.
- Q. You don't believe in your mind that the jury believed you, do you? A. It appears they did.
- Q. Just tell us what you did for Mr. Elliot when he was convicted? A. I did not do anything.
- Q. You quit, then, did you? A. I quit; yes, sir.
- Q. You had no further interest in the matter? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. When was Elliot convicted? A. I don't know exactly when he was convicted.
- Q. Was it before or after election? A. It was after election.
- Q. You talked with Williams about the case, didn't you? A. I don't know whether I did or not.
- Q. Elliot was in trouble before election, wasn't he? A. He was.
- Q. And the examination in the Police Court took place before election, didn't it? A. I believe so.
- Q. Prior to the time of that examination, at the time of the examination in the Police Court, had you talked with Mr. Williams about the case? A. No; I just simply asked Mr. Williams if he could go and intercede and get Elliot in the hospital (he had a sore leg), and he said he would try.
- Q. Who did you want to intercede for? A. Elliot.
- Q. Who with? A. I asked Williams if he would intercede for him, getting Elliot in the Receiving Hospital.
- Q. Who did he intercede with? A. I never asked him to intercede with; but I asked him to use his influence getting this man into the Receiving Hospital. That was all the conversation I had with Williams.
- Q. Did you ever talk with Banks about Elliot? A. I did not.

Q. Did you every talk with Williams about getting a pardon for him?
A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever go to Banks and ask him to sign a petition for pardon?
A. No, sir.

Q. And you never went to Williams? A. No, sir.

Q. And it was not in consideration of that that you gave your services to Banks? A. I did not.

Q. You are sure of that? A. I am sure of it.

Q. Do you know whether, as a matter of fact, Banks interested himself for Elliot one way or the other? A. I do not.

Q. You never heard anything about that? A. No, sir.

Q. Did Elliot ever tell you Banks was going to help him out? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever tell Elliot that Banks was your friend? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you remember meeting Maxwell in the City Hall corridor when Elliot was held to answer in the Police Court? A. I don't know.

Q. Didn't you meet Maxwell? A. I don't remember.

Q. Just think for a moment? A. No, sir; I don't recollect ever seeing him on that day. I might have seen him, and I might not.

Q. Didn't you meet Maxwell on that day, in the corridor of the City Hall? A. Of which City Hall, the Old City Hall or the New City Hall?

Q. The Old City Hall. You knew he was held down in the Old City Hall, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Didn't you meet Maxwell down in the corridor of the Old City Hall the day that Elliott was held, and didn't you tell him it would be all right: that Banks could get him out, and that Banks and Williams were your friends? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you swear positively to that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you swear positively that that did not occur? A. Not as I can recollect. I don't remember ever having any such conversation as that with Maxwell.

Q. If you did have it, you would have remembered it, wouldn't you?
A. I suppose so.

Q. Do you know whether Elliott was in jail at the time of election?
A. Yes, sir; he was in jail.

Q. He had been all the time prior to that for how many months? A. I don't know.

Q. Where did he live; do you know? A. He lived on Sacramento Street.

Q. Elliott was a Democrat, was he not? A. No, sir.

Q. He was a Republican, wasn't he? A. He was. He is a member of the Morrow Invincibles.

Q. He is a member of the Morrow Invincibles and he was in jail? A. I don't know how long he was in jail. He was then, and after the election.

Q. Was it a month before? A. I don't know.

Q. Was it three months before? A. I don't know.

Q. Was it four months before? A. I don't know. I don't know how long; he is there now.

Q. Don't you know that, as a matter of fact, Elliott was in jail at the time that the registration opened at the New City Hall for election? A. That he was in jail then? No, sir; because he registered from the City Hall.

Q. How do you know that? A. Because he told me he did.

Q. He told you he registered from the New City Hall? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did he come to tell you that? A. I met him on the street, and he said he had been out registering.

Q. What date was that? A. I don't know what date or day.

Q. Then you do know that he was in jail a few months before election, don't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did he register from? A. I don't know. From his house, I suppose.

Q. Whereabouts? A. Sacramento Street.

Q. Whereabouts on Sacramento Street? A. Between Jones and Leavenworth.

Q. No. 1613, wasn't it? A. I don't know.

Q. Did he go to school with you and this man Roddy Banks? A. I don't recollect. He went to school with me; I don't know whether he was with Banks or not.

Q. Did he and Elliot live together? A. No, sir.

Q. You knew where Elliott lived, didn't you? A. No, sir. He told me he lived on Sacramento street; that is all I know about it.

Q. Did you ever go up to see Elliot at his house? A. I would go up to him on that block.

Q. That block between what streets? A. Between Jones and Leavenworth.

Q. Did you see your friends Jones and Roddy when you went there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Roddy live with him? A. I don't know.

Q. If Roddy had lived with him, wouldn't you know it? A. No.

Q. If Roddy had lived in the same house with Elliot, don't you think you would have known it, you all going to school together? A. I didn't ask him where he lived.

Q. You didn't see him in that house? A. No, sir.

Q. But you called to see Elliot there? A. I met Elliot in that block, and before I met him in that block I asked him where he was living, and he told me he lived on Sacramento Street.

Q. You never met him at the corner of the block? A. I have met him at the grocery store at the corner of the block.

[Here the witness was temporarily withdrawn, and the further hearing was continued until to-morrow morning at ten o'clock.]

SIXTH DAY.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA, }
TUESDAY, January 8, 1889—10 o'clock A. M. }

Present: Justices Stafford and Boland, the contestant and respondent, the counsel for contestant, and Mr. Dorn, of counsel for respondent, and Thomas R. Knox, official reporter.

Mr. DORN: If your honors please, Mr. Sullivan is not willing to consent to a continuance. I am not in condition to be in Court nor to do any business at all to-day. I state to your honors—and I think my word ought to be taken in the matter—that I am unwell, and am not able to proceed in the matter. If your honors cannot continue it until to-morrow, I will ask you to continue it until this afternoon at two o'clock. It is simply that I am not able to go on, and if I am not able to go on at that time, I will have somebody here. If Mr. Clunie will not agree to it, I believe your honors ought to continue it. I do not think this is so much different from any other case that your honors cannot continue it as you would such a case.

MR. CLUNIE: Mr. Dorn spoke to me about this, but I told him I had been instructed by Mr. Sullivan to proceed without delay, and I cannot consent to a continuance under the circumstances, as the Legislature has already met, and if we do not finish the testimony this week, it will go over another week, and we want to get it finished and go before the Legislature.

JUSTICE STAFFORD: I think the request entirely reasonable and the matter may stand over until two o'clock.

MR. DORN: I will state now that I will either be here myself, prepared to go on, or to have somebody here in my place.

[Here the further hearing was continued until two o'clock P. M.]

AFTERNOON SESSION.

JAMES LYNCH.

Recalled as a witness on behalf of respondent for further cross interrogatories.

MR. CLUNIE: I have no more questions.

Redirect Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: You were asked yesterday if some time prior to the election you had not met Mr. Maxwell here, this gentleman sitting next to Mr. Clunie, and if, when you met him, you did not have a conversation with him, in which you said something about having Banks' money. Answer—Not as I can recollect. The only time I can recollect ever seeing Maxwell was at Broadway and the Avenue, and I was pretty full, and he walked up the street with me.

Q. At the time you met him, did you make any such statement to him? A. No, sir; not as I can recollect.

Q. Did you ever make any such statement to Mr. Maxwell? A. No, sir.

Q. As a matter of fact, did you before election, or at any other time, have any of Mr. Banks' money to work for him or vote for him? A. No, sir; not a cent.

Q. And if any such conversation was testified to as being had, do you say it is not correct? A. No, sir; not in my estimation.

Q. You were asked yesterday if you had a conversation with Mr. John Feeney, in which you made a statement that you had Banks' money, and that you were going to work for him therefor. Did you ever have any such conversation with Mr. Feeney? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever make any such statement to Mr. Feeney at any time? A. No, sir.

Q. If Mr. Feeney, or any other person, testifies that you did make such a statement, their testimony would not be true? A. No, sir.

Q. At the last election you were a member of the Morrow Invincibles, were you not? A. I was.

Q. You testified that on election day Mr. Banks gave you $10 to pay two men? A. Yes, sir.

Q. At the time Mr. Banks gave you that $10 do you know whether or not he was a member of the Republican County Committee? A. I believe he was.

Q. Don't you know, as a matter of fact, that Mr. Banks, at the last election and up until the first day of this year, was a member of the Republican County Committee over in the Twenty-first Senatorial District? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Wasn't it the practice of both the Republican and Democratic County Committees at this and, in fact, at all elections, to hire men to peddle tickets for their respective parties, to look out for the tickets, and as challengers, and so forth? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the two men that you hired and that Mr. Banks gave you the money to pay were employed in that capacity, were they? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the money received by you from Mr. Banks was received from him as a member of the Republican County Committee, to pay them with? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that $10 which Mr. Banks gave you to pay those men for the purpose of buying their vote in favor of Mr. Banks, or was it simply to pay for their work done by agreement? A. Simply to pay for the work.

Re-cross Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: You turned out with the Morrow Invincibles during the campaign, did you not? A. Not all the time. My feet were affected.

Q. How were they affected? A. With corns.

Q. With corns? A. Sure.

Q. And on account of your corns, you did not turn out with them, did you? A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. You did not turn out with the Democrats? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know the old Ninth Club there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you turn out with them? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know Mr. Kenney over there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you get a Captain's outfit from him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you get that for? A. To give it to some other person. I got a cap and shirt.

Q. What did you get that for? A. Just for instance.

Q. What do you mean by that? A. Just because I wanted to.

Q. Didn't you tell them you were going to turn out? A. I don't know as I did.

Q. Didn't you ask them for a uniform? A. I just got a cap and shirt.

Q. You didn't tell them you intended to turn out? A. I don't know whether I told them I intended to turn out or not.

Q. You didn't tell them you had any such intention? A. I did not.

Q. Was there any money paid to the election officers on the inside of the Board for services rendered by them to Mr. Banks? A. Not as I know of.

Q. Would you have known it if it had been paid? A. I would.

Q. Don't you know, as a matter of fact, that Mr. Banks gave each of the officers of the precinct you were in three or four dollars extra? A. No, sir.

Q. You don't know that at all? A. No, sir.

Q. You are positive, as you testified yesterday, are you, that at no time you spoke to or asked any one to vote on election day, nor did you give them any tickets? Did you give any one a ticket or ask any one to vote for any ticket? You are positive of that, are you? A. I asked my friends to vote for Banks.

Q. On election day? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then, when you swore yesterday you had not asked your friends to vote for Banks, or had not given them a ticket, your statement was not true, was it? A. I didn't testify no such thing.

Q. Do you say you didn't testify that way yesterday? A. No, sir. You asked me the people who I asked to vote for Banks, and I named them for you.

Q. Was this question asked you yesterday: "Q. What were you doing around there?" A. The County Committeeman gave me the challenge book for about half an hour until he sent a man up to take the book and challenge." Was that question asked you, do you remember? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was this question asked you: "Q. That is all you were doing?" Was that question asked you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you reply: "A. That was all I was doing. Yes, sir; I was standing there." Was that asked you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was this question asked you: "Q. You did not ask anybody to vote the Republican ticket?" A. Not the whole ticket.

Q. Was that question asked you? A. I believe so.

Q. How did you answer on that? A. It is a mystery to me. Read it and I suppose you will find out.

Q. I am not reading it. I asked you what you swore to. A. I don't know as I have asked anybody to vote the whole Republican ticket; I simply asked them to vote for one individual.

Q. I asked you how you swore yesterday on it. A. That I cannot recollect.

Q. You swore to the truth, didn't you? A. I did; I suppose I did, certainly.

Q. Did you ask anybody to vote the Republican ticket that day? A. Not as I know of.

Q. Don't you know if you did or not? A. Not the ticket.

Q. You didn't ask anybody to vote the ticket at all? Are you sure, now? A. I am pretty positive; yes, sir.

Q. Did you or did you not? I want to hear how you are swearing today. A. I can't say whether I did or not; I can't recollect.

Q. Was your recollection better yesterday? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ask anybody to vote the Republican ticket? A. I don't know as I did.

Q. Will you swear you did not? A. I wouldn't swear that I did not or that I did.

Q. You won't swear any way? A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't you say so when I asked you if you asked anybody to vote the Republican ticket? Didn't you say so? A. No, sir; not as I know of.

Q. Then, that is a mistake that is in the reporter's notes, is it? A. Probably.

Q. Did you swear that yesterday? Is that correct? A. I don't know as it is.

Q. Which is it? A. I am not positive.

Q. You won't swear whether you swore that or not? A. No, sir.

Q. You ain't positive at all about it? A. No, not on that question.

Q. Here are some more questions: "What were you doing around there?" Was that question asked you yesterday? A. I believe so.

Q. Did you answer: "A. I was doing nothing." A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was this question asked you: "Q. You were standing around?"
And did you answer: "A. That is all?" A. I believe so.

Q. Was this question then asked you: "Q. That was all you had to do, was it? A. That was all I had to do, and it was all I wanted to do?"
Is that the fact? A. Up until twelve o'clock.

Q. I ask you whether that question was asked you? A. That might be the fault of the reporter.

Q. That is two faults we have found on a page with the reporter? A. No, it is one; that is all I had to do in the forenoon.

Q. Then, you swear that you did not swear to that yesterday, do you? Do you swear you did not say that yesterday? A. I don't know whether I did or not.

Q. Don't you remember what you swore to yesterday? A. You people were talking a little bit hastily yesterday, and I am a little bit deaf, and probably I got tangled up on the questions.

Q. You got tangled on the questions? A. Probably, yes, sir.

Q. You did not understand them? A. Well, mostly. You had to repeat a good many of them, too.

Q. Then, you could not have been mistaken about the questions? A. Probably.

Q. Then, you swore you were doing nothing? A. I swore I was there during the forenoon and he relieved me. I took the afternoon shift and he took the forenoon.

Q. Can't you remember now? A. I can't.

Q. Was this question asked you: "Q. You didn't talk to anybody?"
Was that question asked you? A. I believe so.

Q. Did you answer: "A. I did not." A. I did not; no, sir.

Q. You did not answer that way; that is another mistake of the reporter? A. I have talked to considerable people.

Q. I think you did; and I think you were mistaken yesterday in your swearing. I want to find out whether you did or not. You didn't swear to that; is that it? A. I probably talked to fifteen or twenty of my friends on election day.

Q. I understand that; but did you swear in reply to this question: "Q. You did not talk with anybody?" and answer, "I did not." Answer that, yes or no. A. I don't know whether I did or not.

By MR. DORN: When you made that answer, did you understand the question? A. Probably I did not understand the question.

By MR. CLUNIE: You swore a minute ago that that question was asked you, didn't you? A. I don't know whether I answered it or not, to that effect.

Q. You don't remember how you answered it? A. No, sir.

Q. You understood the question, didn't you? A. I did.

Q. And you don't remember about having answered it? A. No, sir.

Q. There is no question about your understanding that you were asked that question? A. I suppose so.

Q. If that appears in the reporter's notes, your impression is that the reporter is wrong, is it? A. That is it.

Q. "You didn't mention politics that day?" Was that asked you? A. I didn't mention it.

Q. "You didn't mention politics that day?" Was that question asked you? A. I don't recollect.

Q. You don't recollect whether it was asked you or not? A. No, sir.

Q. And didn't you answer, "I couldn't say I mentioned politics?" A. I don't recollect.

Q. Who told you to say you didn't recollect to-day to all these questions, Mr. Banks? A. No, sir.

Q. You talked with Mr. Dorn, didn't you? A. I did.

Q. Did he tell you to get forgetful once in awhile and not recollect? A. No, sir.

Q. You are sure of that? A. Sure of it.

Q. How is it you recollected yesterday and don't recollect to-day? Did you get drunk last night? A. I did not.

Q. You are in just as good condition to-day as you were yesterday? A. No, sir.

Q. You are a little worse off? A. No, sir.

Q. What is it then? A. My memory is a little fresher to-day than it was yesterday.

Q. And still you forget things. How can that be? A. Well, it is a mystery.

Q. You say your memory is fresher to-day than it was yesterday? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you say you don't remember one or the other—how you swore it? How do you account for that? A. It is a mystery to me.

Q. You say you did have the Republican tickets on election day; you swore a minute ago, didn't you? A. No, sir; I didn't have the Republican tickets, but I had a man there attending to the Republican tickets.

Q. I asked you if you had any Republican tickets in your hand on election day? A. No, sir.

Q. You swear to that now? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are positive? A. Positive. I didn't have any but my own.

Q. Which one? A. The one I voted.

Q. And you are positive you didn't have any in your hand except the one you voted? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you didn't have any in your hand for Banks, to give to your friends? A. No, sir.

Q. When you and Mr. Maxwell had this conversation, you say you were under the influence of liquor, weren't you? A. I didn't say exactly I was; probably I was.

Q. You were pretty close to it, weren't you? A. I don't know whether I was or not.

Q. What was your condition? A. I couldn't explain it to you, probably.

Q. Couldn't you try? A. I have been in that condition often.

Q. You have been in that condition often? A. That is, I have had a few drinks in me often. I get a little boisterous when I get a few drinks into me.

Q. What condition do you get into when you get in that condition? A. In a jovial condition, and josh at everybody I meet.

Q. And you were in a jovial condition when you met him? A. Probably I was. I don't remember the time of day I met him, whether it was day or night.

Q. And you don't recollect anything about it? A. No, sir.

Q. You don't know what was said there? A. No, sir; I don't know that what Maxwell claims I said to him.

Q. You don't recollect anything, do you? A. Not what conversation Maxwell and I had, no, sir.

Q. And you don't remember anything about what was said there? A. I can recollect Maxwell walking up the street with me, that is all.

Q. Can you remember the conversation you and Maxwell had, and I ask you that direct question, and you can answer it yes or no. A. I can't recollect.

Q. Why do you swear you did not say that to him if you can't recollect and you were in that jovial condition when you met him? You say you were in a jovial condition and you don't remember the conversation you had? A. No, sir.

Q. And you get on the stand under oath and say you don't remember. Now, tell us why you swear you didn't say that to him if you can't recollect and you were in a jovial condition when you met him: I can't understand how you can do that? A. I don't know as I swore to anything of the kind. I believe yesterday—read that testimony. Read the question and answer, too.

[Here the reporter reads the last two questions to the witness.]

A. I testified I didn't recollect whether I had any such conversation with Maxwell at all on that question.

Q. You can't account for that, then, except you can't tell us how it is. You do not swear positively that you did not tell Maxwell this when you were in this condition? A. I swear I don't recollect ever having such a conversation with him at all.

Q. And that is the most you will swear; that you won't swear positive, because you were in this jovial condition? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when you are in that condition you are liable to josh? A. I am.

Q. Did you ask anybody to vote, on election day, for Banks? A. Not on election day; no, sir.

Q. You are sure of that? A. Sure of it.

Q. Didn't I ask you about ten minutes ago if you didn't ask anybody, any of your friends, to vote for Banks on election day, and you said no, you had not? A. Not to vote for him on that day. I asked them on the previous day.

Q. Well, didn't I ask you that? A. Not on election day; I asked them on the previous day to election day, and when they told me on the day previous "yes," I am satisfied.

Q. Didn't you tell me a moment ago you had asked lots of your friends to vote for him on election day? Didn't you swear to that a few minutes ago? A. Probably I didn't understand that question.

Q. Then, if you swore to that then, you are mistaken, ain't you? A. I guess so.

Q. When you talked with Feeney, were you in this jovial condition?

A. I was. I don't know whether I have talked to Feeney or not.

Q. You don't remember ever having a talk with him? A. I do not; no, sir.

Q. Do you remember having a talk with him that day when you were with Maxwell? A. No, sir.

Q. That same night? A. I don't recollect. I recollect that he was a barkeeper in that saloon kept by Ryan & Fleming on Montgomery Avenue and Broadway. I have talked with Feeney, yes; but not on politics or about Banks—not anything of the kind.

Q. The fact is, that you, Feeney, and Maxwell were together one night? A. Yes, sir; probably a great many. I don't know who was in the saloon.

Q. Wasn't Feeney there? A. Feeney was barkeeper there; he was supposed to be there.

Q. Maxwell was there, wasn't he? A. Maxwell; yes, sir.

Q. Some time, when Feeney was not tending bar, wasn't he there, and didn't you see him? A. I don't know as I did.

Q. Do you swear you did not? A. No, sir; but I won't swear I did?

Q. Don't you know, as a matter of fact, you saw Feeney and Maxwell at this saloon one night, and that you and they had a talk? Do you recollect that? A. I never talked by ourselves.

Q. You had a little talk? A. Not as I can recollect.

Q. Do you ever get in that condition so you cannot recollect anything? A. Yes, once in awhile.

Q. Once in awhile you get so bad that you cannot recollect anything? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you may have been in that condition, then? A. Yes; probably.

By MR. DORN: Did you ever meet Finney and Maxwell there in the saloon at the same time? A. I have been in there one evening when Finney was tending bar, and Maxwell was taking a drink with I.

Q. Did you ever have a talk there in which the people talking were Maxwell, Finney, and yourself? A. No, sir.

Q. You cannot recollect any such conversation? A. No, sir.

Q. If you had made any such statement, that you had Banks' money, and you were going to work for him, right to Maxwell or to anybody, you would remember it, wouldn't you? A. Yes, sir; I believe I would.

Q. And you don't remember making any such statement? A. No, sir.

By MR. CLUNIE: Are you sure you would remember it? A. I am pretty positive I would.

Q. And you wouldn't have probably remembered it if you had been in this jovial condition, would you? A. No, sir.

By MR. DORN: If you ever did make any such jovial statement in a josh, or any other way, would the statement be true? A. It would not.

Q. Is it true, then, whether you had any money of Banks, I ask you again? A. I didn't have a cent of Banks' money to do any work there, or anything of that kind.

Q. And if any statement of that kind was made there by you, or anybody else, it would be untrue? A. It would.

IGNATIUS CLINE.

A witness on behalf of respondent, was called, sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Mr. Cline, where do you reside? Answer—I live at 1414 Washington Street.

Q. How long have you lived there? A. Ever since I was about four years old.

Q. Do you know Mr. Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you known him? A. I have known him so long that I can't remember. He has known me before I knew him.

Q. You have known him, then, all your life? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have lived over there in the same section of the country? A. Yes, sir.

Q. On Sunday night before election, did you see Mr. Banks? A. Yes, sir; I did. I was with him.

Q. About the hour between five and eight? A. Yes, sir; I was with him then.

Q. Were you with him at the North End Social Club? A. Yes, sir; I was.

Q. How did you happen to be there? A. We were invited by two young men.

Q. Who were these young men, do you know? A. I was introduced to the young men; I think the name was Riley and Fay.

Q. Do you know whether they were members of the club or not? A. Yes, sir; they were members of the club, because they told us they were.

Q. They were members of the club? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they invited you to come in? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did they invite you in for? A. They invited us to come in and see a picture frame Mr. Morrow gave them.

Q. How did you come to meet them? A. We were going up Francisco Street, and one of them came across the street and said, "How do you do, Banks? Did you hear about the picture frame Mr. Morrow gave us?" and he said, "No;" and he said, "Come on down and see it;" and Banks said, "I have got an appointment to make, and I am late;" and he said, "Come on anyway;" and so Banks accepted the invitation, and we went in to see the frame.

Q. Were you going to that clubhouse when you were invited there? A. No, sir.

Q. And you went in because you were so invited? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you got to the clubhouse, what took place? A. We went in there, and he shook hands with a couple of the boys, and they lit the gas and went in the other room and took out the frame, and come out and showed it to Banks; and he looked at it awhile and said it was very nice, and somebody said they would like to have some pictures to put in it, but they didn't have the funds.

Q. Some of these gentlemen that invited you in there said they would be delighted to have their own pictures in it, but they didn't have the funds? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Give us the whole conversation, word for word, as near as you can. A. We stood there three or four minutes, I don't think much longer—not longer than five minutes we stood there—and Banks invited them across the street to have a drink, and before we went out they gave three cheers for Banks, and we were walking across the street, and I said to Banks, "These people are friends of yours," and he says to me, "Don't you fool yourself. These people will down me if they can; they will drink with me, and they will down me if they can."

Q. Then Banks knew just about how much he could trust these people? A. Yes, sir; he did.

Q. And he so informed you at the time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did anybody else go with you and Banks to that place? A. Yes, sir. Attridge went with us.

Q. Attridge, the witness who was on the stand? A. Yesterday.

Q. Did Banks give them any money to get their pictures taken with? A. No, sir.

Q. Did he make any promise to give them any money? A. No, sir.

Q. He made no response when they said they would like to have their pictures in the frame, but they didn't have any funds? A. No, sir.

Q. All he said was, "Well, come over and have a drink?" A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you made the suggestion that they were all friends of his? A. Yes, sir; that is what I thought, and I thought they were all friends of Banks.

Q. And he told you you were mistaken? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you go when you went over there? A. We went across to opposite Francisco Street to the saloon.

Q. What place is that? A. I don't know the name. It is on the south-west corner.

Q. Ain't it Lilkendey's saloon? A. Yes, sir; that is the man.

Q. Did you have any drinks there? A. Mr. Banks went in and ordered the drinks.

Q. What took place after you got in the saloon? A. We went in and he ordered the drinks. We got talking there for a couple of minutes, and he went up to the bar, and he has got a little glass he calls his mascot; it is a little bit of a glass, and he put that on the bar, and he says, "Give me some lager," and he put the glass on the bar, and before he drank it, these gentlemen said they would like to see him, and they took him to one side down by the billiard table.

Q. Which two gentlemen? A. Riley and Fay.

Q. After having invited him and after having suggested to him that they would like their pictures in the frame, and they were not good friends, after you got in the saloon, they pulled him to one side, and said, "We would like to see you?" A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Banks refuse to talk with them, or to walk one side, or why did they invite Banks? A. They invited Banks to one side.

Q. When you saw them invite Banks to one side, did that or did that not create a suspicion in your mind? A. That is what I thought. I thought these fellows were going to do him up if they could.

Q. What did you do? A. I walked to the end of the table; they walked down to the side of the table, and I walked to the end of the table, and I put my elbow on it, and I leaned there.

Q. That was a billiard table, was it? A. It is a square table; I couldn't say whether it was a billiard or pool table. They went down to the end, and I leaned my elbow on the table, and they were almost down—they were down within two feet of the end of the table.

Q. How far were you from them? A. I was about two feet and a half.

Q. Were you or were you not in such a position that any conversation which took place or which occurred between them would be audible to you? A. Yes, sir; it would.

Q. If anything was said there, then, or any conversation took place, you were able to hear it, and did hear it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was anything said between them, or could anything have been said by Riley, or by Fay, or by Banks, during that conversation, which you did not hear? A. There might have been some words I did not hear, but it was very few.

Q. Tell us, as near as you can remember, the conversation that did take place? A. When they got down to the end of the table they started in asking how everything was running in that district, and he said fine; and they said they were glad to hear it; and they said they were for him, and all the boys down that way were for him, and "as Mr. Morrow has made us a present of this frame, we would like now to have pictures to put in it," and they wanted money—and how much I don't know—from Banks, but I know at that time Banks couldn't give them any money, because Banks didn't have $10 in his pocket. We were going down Bay Street, and Banks put his hand down in his pocket and pulled out $5 and some silver, and said that his funds were getting pretty low. Maybe there was $8 50 there; something like that.

Q. What was the rest of that conversation? A. It all run in that strain.

Q. What did Banks say in response to the request for money? A. He didn't say yes or no.

Q. In other words, he stood them off? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he offer to get them any money? A. No, sir.

Q. Did he propose to give them any money? A. No, sir.

Q. If he had, don't you think you would have heard it? A. I would have heard it; yes, sir.

Q. Did he talk about $20 and say, "I will put $20 over the bar now, and I will give $20 more if I carry the precinct?" A. No, sir; he never raised his elbow off the billiard table.

Q. If he had held up $20 and said, "I will put up $20 over the bar," everybody could have seen it and heard it? A. No, sir; they couldn't.

Q. If he had done that, then, anybody else would have seen it? A. Some of them might have seen it if he did it.

Q. Did anything of that kind occur? A. No, sir.

Q. Neither that language nor any other language of similar import? A. No, sir.

A. And Banks didn't propose to give them any money, or didn't offer them any money? A. No, sir.

Q. Did Banks give them $10? A. No, sir.

Q. If Riley testified that Banks gave them $10, that was untrue, was it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. If Fay testified to such a conversation as that, that Banks took out $20, and said, "I will put $20 over the bar, and $20 more I will give you if I carry the precinct," then Fay's testimony in that respect is false, is it? A. Yes, sir; false.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: What is your business? A. I am a teamster.

Q. Where are you teaming now? A. I am driving for J. A. Brown, 270 Commercial.

Q. You are working for him now, are you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you go to work for him? A. I am working for him about three months.

Q. How did you come to go to work there? A. I have known the man for years, and I went down and he hired me.

Q. Where did you work before that? A. Before that I was working in Washington Territory.

Q. How long have you been in this State? A. I have been twenty-four years in the State.

Q. You were twenty-four years in the State, and you have been working for Mr. Brown three months, and before that you were in Washington Territory? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How could you do that? A. I left the State for five months.

Q. When did you leave it? A. I left it in April or the last of March.

Q. Where did you live at that time? A. Four hundred and fourteen Washington Street.

Q. The same place you are living now? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Your folks, I suppose? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What part of Washington Territory did you go to? A. I went to Seattle.

Q. What did you go there for? A. I got tired of the city and I went up to Seattle to go to work.

Q. What made you go away from Seattle? A. What made me go away from Seattle?

Q. Yes. A. What would make you go away from any place?

Q. I never got as far as that. They didn't drive you out of town, did they? A. No, sir.

Q. How did you come to leave Seattle? A. I left Seattle to go to Port Townsend.

Q. How long did you stay in Seattle? A. I stayed in Seattle three days.

Q. Then you didn't work there very long? A. No, sir; I didn't get nothing to do.

Q. What game were you working up there? What were you doing up there?

MR. DORN: One moment. You are not required to answer any such question.

MR. CLUNIE: I withdraw my question.

Q. What were you doing in Seattle three days? A. I was looking for something to do, and I couldn't find it, and I went to Port Townsend. If you will stop a minute, I will tell you the whole business all in a nutshell.

Q. Let me run it. A. No. I went up from Seattle to Port Townsend, and stayed there one night, and then I went to a place called Port Hadlick, and went to work there next morning, and worked about three months, and from there I went to a place called Quilicene Bay; I hired out to a logger.

Q. You ain't through yet, are you? A. No; I want to give you the whole business, so you will see where I am standing. From there I went to a place called Oak Home; I went to work there for a logger. I worked for him two months, and from there I went up to Seabeck; from there I went to Port Gamble; from there I went to Port Townsend; and from there I took the steamer for San Francisco; so now you have got the whole business.

Q. And at none of these places you were, would they keep you longer than two days? A. I didn't like the job in some places. Look here. You go out and rustle lumber, and you will see how long you hold it.

THE COURT: Answer the question, and don't argue with counsel.

MR. DORN: I will say to you, you have nothing to get excited about, and you can take your time to answer these questions.

By MR. CLUNIE: Leave out about the lumber; I have got a better thing than that. Go on. These people you worked for up there didn't let you work any longer than two days in any one place, did they? A. Certainly.

Q. How long did you work? Did you work three days any time? A. I worked one place three months.

Q. Where was that? A. Port Hadlick.

Q. When was that—the last time? A. No, sir; that was the first place I went to work.

Q. The first place you went to they kept you three months: they let you stay three months? A. They didn't let me; I left of my own object; if I didn't suit them they wouldn't keep me two days.

Q. The next place you worked two days? A. I worked two months.

Q. Two months in the next place? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was five months? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many other places did you go to in the remaining months? A. I came right straight through to San Francisco.

Q. You didn't stop in any of these places? A. I just had to come through those places to come this way.

Q. Just a sort of tourist? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You had to come through all those places to get to San Francisco?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you stayed in none of them two days? A. I stopped in one three days. I stopped in Seattle.

Q. You went there on the train? A. I didn't mention the train to you. If you got that down about the railroad train, all right. I didn't mention any train to you.

Q. You went to all these places? A. Some of the places I had to use my elbows and a pair of oars.

Q. Did you stop at those places? A. I had to stop there when I got there. I couldn't go through.

Q. How long did you stop at any of them? A. Long enough to get away from there; long enough to fill the inner man and get off again.

Q. How long did that take? A. One place it took five hours.

Q. That was the next place you stopped? A. That was the next.

Q. You didn't look for work there? A. No, sir; I wasn't looking for it. I was coming back.

Q. Had you been keeping house down here before you went away?
A. No, sir.

Q. Are you a married man? A. No, sir.

Q. You are a single man? A. I am a single man.

Q. You had been living with your folks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You went up to Washington Territory? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You had heard a good deal about that Territory, I suppose? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you thought it a good place for you to locate, a young man?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you thought you would locate? A. I thought if there was any good land in sight, I would file a preëmption on it.

Q. You thought if there was any good land in sight, you would file a preëmption on it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you went up there and staid five months? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Six months? A. Something like that; I couldn't definitely state.

Q. And you returned here when? A. I returned in September some time.

Q. Then you were away from the State about six or seven months?
A. No, sir; I was away from the State maybe five or six months.

Q. And when you left the State, you left it with the intention of going to Washington Territory? A. No, sir; I did not. I never left it with the intention of losing my residence.

Q. I didn't ask about your residence. A. I am talking about that.

Q. What makes you say that? A. Because you have got it I went up there to stay altogether, and I didn't do that.

Q. You told me that when you left here, you went up to Washington Territory with the idea of preëmpting a piece of land? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You knew you had to stay on the land? A. Yes, sir; if I could find a piece.

Q. If you could find a piece of land, you went up there to stay on it?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. And as a matter of fact, you had not been here a year before election? A. No, sir; I had not been here a year before election.

Q. Did you get on the Register? A. Certainly, I was on the Register.

Q. You swore you had been in the county here a year? A. Certainly, because I wouldn't lose my residence going away.

Q. You didn't consider that losing your residence? A. No, sir.

Q. You knew that in going to Washington and getting on a piece of land you would have to swear you were a resident and intended to reside on the land? A. Certainly, if I did that.

Q. But your intentions were that way? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you came back to San Francisco? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you swore you had been in the county a year? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you had not been here for five or six months? A. You know this, when a man is away five or six months—

Q. [Interrupting.] Just go on and answer the question.

MR. DORN: I ask your honors to allow the witness to answer the question. He has a right to give that explanation.

[Here the reporter reads the question and answer.]

By MR. CLUNIE: Is that your answer? Answer the question. A. I don't see the question there to answer.

MR. DORN: You were about explaining something. Now, finish your answer.

THE COURT: He says he has nothing to answer.

By MR. CLUNIE: You did swear, as a matter of fact, that you had resided in the city a year, in the county sixty days, and in the precinct thirty days, didn't you? A. Certainly, I did.

Q. What time did you get back? A. I couldn't state.

Q. What steamer did you come down on? A. I came down on the Umatilla.

Q. You are sure it was in the month of September? A. Yes, sir; the month of September.

Q. Was it in the last part of September? A. No, sir; the first part of September: the early part.

Q. Which is the first part? A. The early part.

Q. Did you get back on the first? A. No, sir; I didn't get back on the first.

Q. Did you get back on the second? A. I do not know what day I got back on, or what date.

Q. What did you swear you got back in the early part for, then? A. I got back on the eighteenth, I know.

Q. You won't swear it was the thirteenth? A. No, sir.

Q. You swore you had been in the county sixty days, didn't you; you swore you had been here ninety days immediately preceding the election, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You got back here in September? A. Yes, sir.

Q. September to October is one, October to November is two. Then, as a matter of fact, ninety days prior to election you were away up in Oregon hunting for a piece of land to preëempt, weren't you; isn't that the fact? A. Certainly, it is the fact.

Q. And still you swore that ninety days prior to the election you were a resident of that county? A. A man never loses his residence.

Q. You say you have known Mr. Banks a long time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he has known you longer than you have known him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How do you know that? A. He has lived there ever since I can remember, and he was there on that block.

Q. You don't want to swear that you did not know him longer than he has known you? A. Because when I was young I didn't know him.

Q. How do you know that? A. Because my folks told me it.

Q. What were you doing with Mr. Banks that night? A. I was taking a walk with him.

Q. What did you take a walk with him for? A. We were up to the corner; he was going off to take a walk, and he asked me if I would go, and I said yes.

Q. And you started off? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where were you going? A. We were just taking a walk around through the district.

Q. You didn't know where you were going? A. Not exactly, no.

Q. You swore a moment ago you intended to go down to the North End Boat Club? A. I didn't say a word about a boat club.

Q. You were talking about the North End Social Club? A. Well, that is no boat club.

Q. You swore when you started out you did not know where Banks was going? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Yet you swore a moment ago that he was going to the North End Social Club? A. I did not.

Q. Why? A. Because he did not tell me.

Q. You knew it, because he would have told you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you know that he was not going down there? A. I did not know he was going, I simply went with him.

Q. Then, as a matter of fact, you did not know whether he was going down to the North End Social Club or not? A. No, sir.

Q. And you went down to the boat-house with Banks? A. Yes, sir; I went down to the boat-house with Banks.

Q. From there where did you go? A. From there we went down Bay Street.

Q. Who did you see down on Bay Street? A. We went into a house on Bay Street.

Q. What house? A. A man named Brady.

Q. You listened while they talked, did you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. They talked about the election, did they? A. No, sir.

Q. They did not mention the election? A. No, sir; we were having just a good time; there was a couple of boys singing there.

Q. There was not a word said about the election, was there? A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. You wouldn't have heard two men talk without your going up to listen, would you? A. Well, we were all talking down there together.

Q. You wouldn't let Mr. Banks sit down without your going up and listening to it? A. Not if I could hear it.

Q. And you didn't hear any conversation there about the election? A. No, sir.

Q. Where did you go after that? A. Then we went out.

Q. How long did you stay there? A. Probably ten or fifteen minutes.

Q. Who is Brady? What does he do? A. I don't know. He is an ironmolder; something like that.

Q. And he had the boys in there having a good time, did he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you and Banks went in? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you did not say anything about the election at all? A. No, sir.

Q. And you stayed there how long? A. We stayed there maybe ten or fifteen minutes; I couldn't tell how long we did stay there.

Q. Then you came out and went where? A. We went down Bay Street and to Mason.

Q. Who did you see there? A. We didn't see anybody.

Q. Where did you go? Down Mason? A. No; we went up Mason to Francisco.

Q. Then you met these people? A. They were coming down to this saloon, and we were going across the street.

Q. Where was Banks? A. He was going down to meet Smith.

Q. How do you know that? A. Because he told me.

Q. When did he tell you that? A. He told me after we left the boat club.

Q. Prior to that he had not told you? A. No, sir.

Q. Where was he going to meet Mike Smith? A. Powell and Francisco.

Q. Did he meet Mike? A. No, sir; he was late in his engagement.

Q. You and Mr. Banks then met Riley and Fay? A. Yes, sir.

Q. They came out and took him in the place? A. They didn't come out: they were not in the place. We met a block away from the place.

Q. And they said, "Come on; let us go down to our club; we want to show you a picture frame?" A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they asked Banks for money to fill that? A. They did not ask him for money, but they gave him a gentle hint.

Q. What did they say? A. They said Mr. Morrow had made them a present of the picture frame and they would like to have the pictures, but they didn't have any money.

Q. They did not ask Banks for money? A. No, sir.

Q. They did not say a word about it? A. No, sir.

Q. Then Banks said, "Boys, come on and have a drink?" A. Yes, sir.

Q. Whereabouts did they go? To Lilkendey's? A. Somewhere in there.

Q. And they all had a drink? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is Fay a very bad looking man? A. No, sir.

Q. And was Riley, either? A. No, sir.

Q. They didn't look like desperadoes? A. No, sir.

Q. And they didn't look like they would cut Banks' throat? A. No, sir.

Q. And you all went in there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And had a drink? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they said to Banks they wanted to say something to him. A. Yes, sir; they went one side.

Q. And you were afraid they were going to say something to Banks, and you went to listen. A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you follow that occupation? A. No, not exactly.

Q. Do you think it is a nice thing to do? A. Everything is fair in war. I was working and doing all I could for Banks.

Q. Were you on a war? A. Yes, a sort of a war.

Q. Were you having a regular war? A. The way people are in politics, working against each other, I think that is war.

Q. What made you go and listen to their conversation to one side there? A. What he told me coming across the street made me go down to listen. He told me they were no friends of his. He said to me, "These people are no friends of mine; I am no fool; they will take a drink with me, but they will down me."

Q. And you were afraid they were going to down him right there? A. I was afraid they were going to try and bleed him.

Q. What do you mean by bleeding him? A. Getting money out of him.

Q. You were afraid they were going to try and get money out of Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Banks is a very able-bodied man, isn't he? A. Not very.

Q. He has not as much intelligence as you have? A. Yes, and a great deal more.

Q. And you were afraid these people were going to bleed him? A. That was my candid opinion. In politics a man is very foolish, sometimes.

Q. What did you think these fellows were going to do? A. I thought they were going to get some money out of him.

Q. Did you think they were going to get $100 out of him? A. No, sir.

Q. You had it put up, didn't you? A. No; I didn't have it put up at all.

Q. Did you think they were going to ask him for a twenty? A. No, sir; I didn't think any such sum at all.

Q. If you had been there, you would have given them a dollar or so? A. No, sir; I don't know as I would.

Q. You would still call that bleeding? A. Yes, sir, certainly; if a man took a five-cent piece away from a man, and told him he would work for him, and then turn around and not do it, I call that bleeding a man.

Q. If he takes the money and stays with him, that is legitimate. A. Certainly; if he comes up and gets money and says, "I want to work for you."

Q. And that is legitimate business? A. Certainly, it is.

Q. And that is the kind of warfare you were carrying on up there: if you give money to people, and they tell you they will work for you, it is all right? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You didn't see anything of that kind up there? A. No, sir.

Q. That would have been all right, and you would have done that? A. I may if I had seen the man.

Q. What did you determine to do if they had asked him for money? A. I was just going to tell him my candid opinion of him when I got him out.

Q. You were going to lecture Banks when you got him outside? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were going to play grandmother over him when you got out, and lecture him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you think they were going to bleed him very extensively? A. No, sir.

Q. You did not think they were going to bleed him of very much? A. No, sir.

Q. You knew at the time he didn't have very much on him? A. No, sir; at the time he didn't have very much on him.

Q. How much do you say he had when he pulled this out, and showed it to you? A. Something like $8.

Q. How did that occur? A. That was down at Lilkendey's.

Q. Before you went up there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you had that drink? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they had been beat out of it? A. No, sir.

Q. These two men that were playing against Banks, you thought might by some scheme get that $8 out of him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is what you want these people to believe? A. Yes, that was it.

Q. Don't you know that was put up there at the time? A. No, sir.

Q. Might there not have been such a conversation between them? A. No, sir; there might have been two or three words.

Q. Why do you say two or three? A. Because I listened to most everything except them few words.

Q. How many words did you miss? A. I couldn't state that.

Q. Why do you swear it was only two or three? A. It might have been only two or three.

Q. It might have been four, might it not? A. I don't know as it could.

Q. What three words could you have missed? A. I could not know the words I missed.

Q. Do you know what they said? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did they say? A. They told me that the boys were all there for him.

Q. Who said that? A. Mr. Riley, I believe; and he asked how things were running through the district, and Billy told him it was pretty fair.

Q. And what else? A. And then tackled him about this money for the pictures.

Q. Who tackled him? A. This tallest fellow, I think.

Q. Don't you know who that is? A. It was Riley.

Q. Then it was Riley that tackled him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Riley said, "Give us some money to get the pictures?" A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he say how much he wanted? A. No, sir.

Q. Mr. Banks did not say, "Boys, I have only $8 with me," did he?
A. No, sir.

Q. You didn't see him insulted? A. No, sir.

Q. He didn't say, "I am a candidate for office and cannot give you money?" A. No, sir.

Q. They said, "Give us money for the pictures?" A. Yes, sir.

Q. Banks did not say anything? A. Yes; he hemmed and hawed, and got out of it the best way he could.

Q. Tell us how he got out. A. He told them he would see about it, and he didn't know; and you know how a man will try to get rid of another man.

Q. You don't know how Banks will do. I have been trying to find out.
A. I don't know exactly the words Banks was saying.

Q. Then you cannot swear exactly the words Banks did say?

MR. DORN: Of course he cannot.

MR. CLUNIE: I submit that Mr. Dorn is not testifying.

A. Banks tried to get out of it the best way he could.

Q. Tell us what he said, trying to get out of it. Tell us just how and what he said. A. Some of the words that Banks said that I caught was that he didn't know how things were running yet, and he couldn't very well see, but he would see them later. Something like that.

Q. He couldn't do it now, because he didn't know how things were going? A. Yes, sir.

Q. But he wanted to see how things were running? A. He wanted to get out of it, you see.

Q. You did not know what he wanted, did you? A. No, I didn't know it.

Q. Are you a mind reader? A. No, sir.

Q. How do you know what a man wanted to do? A. I can know very near it.

Q. How do you do that? A. I just figure myself in the same position, trying to get away from two men without insulting them.

Q. Then all of your testimony, as to what Banks did, arises from what you would have done, had you been in his place? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then you swear by an imaginary conversation you had with these people? A. No; not exactly.

Q. Tell us what you mean by "not exactly." A. He told them he didn't know how things were going, and he would see them again: something like that.

Q. He told them he didn't know how things were going, and he would see them again? A. He wanted to get away from them.

Q. How do you know that? A. He said it when he came outside.

Q. He told you when he came outside he wanted to get away from them?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you give us all the conversation that occurred between Banks and these people? A. I can give you what these people said, because I walked over, and said, "Come on."

Q. Ain't it funny that you heard all they said and not all that Banks said? A. I heard, but I can't recollect all of it.

Q. You heard all Riley said distinctly? A. Not all of it; but I don't recollect, because there was some other I don't recollect.

Q. Then there was some conversation? A. There was: but not any conversation about him giving them money.

Q. How can you tell the conversation when you say you don't recollect it? A. I say I don't recollect it.

Q. Then you cannot tell what it was? A. Certainly if I could recollect, I could. I can only recollect some of it.

Q. You can only recollect some of it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. There is some of it you don't recollect at all? A. Some of it I don't recollect.

Q. You don't pretend to swear what the conversation was that you don't recollect, do you? A. I can swear that the conversation was nothing like that.

Q. How can you swear? A. Because I heard everything that was said; I don't recollect some parts of it.

Q. How do you know that this part you don't recollect is not the part that we say occurred? A. Because I know it.

Q. How do you know it? A. Because I know it.

Q. Tell us how you know it. Do you remember what did occur? A. Certainly, I remember.

Q. Then tell me what occurred. Tell me what occurred, and give it to me as short as you can. A. Say, Mr. Clunie, you go down street, and you would have a conversation with a gentleman yourself, and you would listen to a couple of gentlemen speaking. May be after you got through and you got up here, and I would ask, "What did those gentlemen say——"

Q. [Interrupting.] I would not remember? A. No.

Q. And you don't, either? A. Certainly, I remember some of it. I can't tell you, word for word, what these gentlemen said. I am just telling you the whole sum and substance of it.

Q. Just tell us the whole sum and substance of what Mr. Banks said. You have told me exactly, or almost exactly. You say there was some other part of it Riley said that you don't remember. But now tell us what Banks said. A. Mr. Banks was in an uneasy condition, trying to get away from these people, and he didn't want to insult the gentlemen, and he wanted to get away as easy as he could, and I hastened him some, because I was in a hurry, and I had to call him twice, and at last he did condescend to come over and take a drink and go out.

Q. Have you told me what he said? You have told me what Riley said, and what everybody else said, and not what Banks said, and what Banks said is what I want. You were there and heard the conversation, and I want you to tell me what he said. A. I told you Banks was uneasy.

Q. What did he say? A. He said he would see how things were going, and he said he would call to see their picture, and then he came away.

Q. And what else? A. That is all I caught on to.

Q. That is all you caught on to, is it? A. No; there was something, but I didn't catch on to it.

Q. You know there is something that you don't remember? A. Yes, there is something I don't remember.

Redirect Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: You heard what did occur, did you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there anything about money? A. No, sir; there was nothing about money.

Q. Then you have stated the substance of the conversation? A. Yes, sir: the sum and substance of the conversation I have stated.

Q. You cannot state the exact language? A. No, sir.

Q. Was anything else said there about money or about pictures that you did not hear? A. No, sir.

Q. Then the reason you say you don't remember all was that you don't remember the language that was used? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you did hear all the conversation, and you did state the substance of it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. If anything of the kind I asked about, $20 over the bar and $20 after election if the precinct was carried, did occur, you would have remembered it? A. Yes, I would have known it.

Q. And it would have been very distinct in your memory? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then the remark of Mr. Banks that these people were no friends of his, that they would drink with him and they would down him, made you suspicious of them? A. Yes, sir; it made me suspicious.

Q. And when you saw them taking him apart, you were afraid they were going to down him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were afraid they were going to do something you did not see? A. I didn't think that.

Q. While you were leaning on the billiard table, did Banks carry on a conversation in a tone which you could not hear? A. No; he talked in an ordinary tone of voice.

Q. And he did not say anything to them, did he, attempting to conceal from you or so you couldn't hear? A. No, sir.

Q. There was nothing which he apparently had any desire to hide and which he tried to hide? A. He didn't hide anything.

Q. And he went on in the conversation and tried the best way he could to get away from them? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And according to your opinion there were simply some people there trying to bleed him because he was a candidate, and trying to get money out of him, and they were not his friends at all, and he got out of it the best he could, without insulting them? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when you got out of there, he said that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you thought you were well rid of that gang? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they were on one side of the billiard table and you were on the other? A. No, sir: I didn't say that.

Q. Where was it? A. I was on the end and they were on the side.

Q. How far is that apart? A. The table is eight feet long.

Q. You were eight feet apart, were you? A. No, sir.

Q. How far? A. About two feet apart.

Q. That is all? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You got up that close to protect your friend Banks from these evil people? A. Exactly.

Q. This Fay is a great big man, isn't he? A. No; he is a little fellow, like Banks.

Q. He looks very dangerous, don't he? A. No; he don't look very dangerous.

Q. You voted at the last election? A. Yes, sir.

E. P. BUCKLEY.

A witness on behalf of respondent, was duly sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Mr. Buckley, where do you reside? Answer—No. 520 Lombard Street.

Q. How long have you lived there? A. About thirty-five years.

Q. Where were you at the last election? A. In the Third Precinct of the Thirty-fourth District.

Q. What were you doing there? I took a very active part for the success of the Republican party in the late election.

Q. And by whose special appointment were you there? A. Not by any particular special appointment. I always take an interest in the election, and have for a great number of years.

Q. You were not a member of the County Committee? A. No, sir.

Q. Who was the member of the County Committee for that district? A. Mr. Banks and Mr. Smiley.

Q. Mr. Smiley is the Chairman of the Republican County Committee, was he not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he could not be present on that day, and that left the whole district to Banks, didn't it? A. So I understood.

Q. As a matter of fact, you were called in or volunteered or were sent for to assist Mr. Banks in the absence of Mr. Smiley; isn't that the fact? A. Yes; I am generally acquainted with the voters there, and the Republican voters, and also take an active part in the election.

Q. On the morning of election day you were working around in the different precincts—yourself and Mr. Banks, for ticket peddlers and for people to look after the ticket challengers, stationing the different people, staying where there were vacancies, and getting things in proper shape? A. No; not Mr. Banks and myself. I attended to that myself in my own precinct.

Q. You attended to that yourself? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know a man by the name of Mascherini? A. Yes, sir; very well.

Q. How long have you known him? A. I have known him. My family trade with him probably $20 or $30 a month for groceries.

Q. He is your grocer? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You introduced Mr. Banks to him on election day, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What, if any, conversation took place between him and Banks, or between him, Banks, and yourself? First, why did you introduce him to Banks? A. Then it would be necessary for me to state the facts as they are?

Q. Yes, sir; go on and state them in your own way without questioning. A. During election day I always take a prominent and active part in that precinct, which I have for a great number of years, and many of the Italian citizens, whom I recognized as Republicans, I saw that they were working the Democratic ticket.

Q. You saw what? A. I saw that many of the Italians that I had known were of Republican proclivities were working for the Democratic ticket, and during the day, in a conversation with Mr. Banks, I stated that it was an unfortunate thing that Mr. Smiley was not around, that there ought to be some action taken to counteract the work of the Italians, and that I did not feel inclined to be responsible for it, and that he himself had better take some action on the matter. He asked me what I thought ought to be done. I said, "I can suggest a couple of Italians, lively Republicans, and men that I have got confidence in, to work and counteract this business." He asked me who I would suggest, and I suggested Demartini and Mascherini. He asked me and said, "What do you think it will be about the cost?" I said, "I suppose probably about $10 each." He said, "All right." I took him then to Demartini, he also had charge of the Republican tickets then. I told him to leave the place, and introduced Mr. Banks to him. I then took him into the grocery store and introduced him to the other.

Q. Did Mr. Banks arrange with him that he should work for the Republican ticket? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And to try and get his countrymen to vote the ticket? A. Yes, sir; that was my object.

Q. You say you had no special object or special motive for the election of Banks; it was for the entire ticket, and because you saw that other people were canvassing for the Democratic ticket, and you thought it was best, as a Republican, to see that somebody was canvassing for the Republican ticket? A. That, and in the afternoon because I took an interest in Mr. Banks personally, and my friend bet me $20 and I took it up.

Q. Who was that? Mr. Sullivan? A. No, sir; his friend Maxwell. There was $40 interested in the matter, and I then took more interest in Mr. Banks personally, but generally I was working for the ticket.

Q. Up to that time your fight and activity was for the Republican ticket, and the Republican ticket alone? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it was in pursuance of that that you introduced Mr. Banks as the Republican County Committeeman to Demartini and Mascherini? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you hear the conversation that took place between Mr. Banks and this man Mascherini? A. I was around, and present. I brought Mr. Banks to him.

Q. You were there with him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you heard the conversation which took place? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Of course you cannot give the exact conversation, but give us the substance of it? A. The substance is that I requested Mr. Banks to employ him on behalf of the Republican party, and I introduced him to Mr. Banks, and Mr. Banks asked me how much it would probably cost, and I told him probably $10, and I didn't want to be personally responsible for it.

Q. When you introduced him to Mascherini, he asked Mascherini if he would peddle Republican tickets, or something of that kind? What did Mr. Banks say to him when you introduced him? A. I am under the impression that I said to Mascherini, "Here is Mr. Banks, and I wish you to go out and assist us in this fight, and I will give you a list of your countrymen." I had a list of names of parties who had not voted, probably, and to use his influence to get their votes.

Q. Did you see Mr. Banks give him $10? A. I did.

Q. When Mr. Banks gave him that $10, did he use this language: "You need some coin to do something?" A. I don't recollect the use of that language.

Q. Did he use this language: "Do the best you can for me and treat the boys?" A. I certainly think he did not, unless there was some after conversation.

Q. If he had used any such language as that, you would remember it? A. Most unquestionably I would have heard

Q. In other words, you don't pretend to use the exact words, but simply hired him to peddle the Republican tickets? A. There was not over three or four words passed. It was simply my suggestion that two men should be employed, and I called him out of the store, and after Mr. Banks had given him the money he didn't go to work, and I went in and told him, on two or three different occasions. "Here, you must go to work on this thing. You know all of those parties will have voted, and you can be of no service to the party," because Maxwell and his friends were rushing them in very rapidly.

Q. Maxwell was voting them and rushing them in very lively? A. Yes, sir.

Q. For the Democratic ticket? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you thought it was necessary for that man to go out and earn his $10? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you thought it was necessary for him to go and talk with them and get them to vote the Republican ticket? A. I called on him and urged him to go out and work the Republican ticket.

Q. Did he do so? A. He did.

Q. In pursuance of that employment by Banks, the Republican County Committeeman, he did go out and work the Republican ticket after you had explained to him a time or two? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know a gentleman by the name of Levy who acted as a Clerk over in that district at the last election? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In what precinct? A. In the Third Precinct of the Thirty-fourth Assembly District.

Q. Did you have any conversation with him about election time regarding election matters? A. No, not specially.

Q. I mean with regard to the counting of the votes, which this young man Levy told you about? A. Mr. Levy called to see me in the evening; in fact, it was through my recommendation that he was appointed Clerk, and he stated to me that I should remain on watch that evening, as Mr. Maxwell and Mr. Hussey had called on him and that they had promised him favors in case that he would assist that evening in casting votes against our candidate for Senator and in favor of theirs.

Q. Did he say what the favor, or what the compensation which was offered, was? A. No, sir.

Q. He didn't name the figure? A. No, sir.

Q. Or didn't tell you what it was? A. No, sir.

Q. And he came to put you on your guard? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He said that that kind of thing was going to be attempted, he feared, and said he had been offered a consideration if he would assist in it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in pursuance of that warning you did stay on watch there, and look after things? A. I did, sir.

Q. Then, if this man Mascherini testifies that he did nothing with this money, except to treat the boys, he states what is not true, does he? A. If he did nothing but treat the boys?

Q. Yes. A. Well, he deceived me in the matter, because, at my solicitation and my urging him, I sent him out to go among his countrymen and try and drum up votes; and if he did not do it, I was deceived in the matter.

Q. You supposed that he did? A. I supposed that he did.

Q. And he left you saying that he would do so? A. He left me saying that he would do so.

Q. And that was the purpose for which he was employed? A. Precisely.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: Mr. Buckley, what is your business? A. Real estate and insurance business, sir.

Q. Where is your place of business? A. I am connected with the Home Mutual Insurance.

Q. Where is that office? A. Sansome Street.

Q. What position do you hold there? A. Nothing special, no more than one of the agents.

Q. What agent are you? You say you are one of the agents. A. Connected with the company; getting a commission.

Q. You are simply an insurance broker? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is all you do, is it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And your office is with the Home Mutual Company? A. Yes, sir; at the State Investment, I should say. I go to both companies, in fact.

Q. You are connected with both of them? A. Yes, sir; more or less.

Q. You are a Republican, you say? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are not a member of the Republican Committee? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you take a great interest in the Republican ticket? A. I have done so.

Q. That was Mr. Harrison, mainly, I suppose, was it not? A. No, not specially. I am generally a party man.

Q. You are mainly interested in national politics, are you not? A. I am principally in national, yes, sir.

Q. What precinct was that, did you say? A. In the Third of the Thirty-fourth.

Q. And you have lived there how many years, do you say? A. About thirty-five.

Q. And you say that that day you took a particular interest in Mr. Banks' fight; is that it? A. No, I didn't say so. I said I took a particular interest in the success of the entire ticket.

Q. First you took an interest in the entire ticket; is that it? A. I did, at all times. I have no preference for any one in particular.

Q. Then, if you said a little while ago that you took no interest in the Banks fight, it is not true? A. It makes no difference what I said a little while ago, it is a different proposition now. I take an interest at all times, and I have during that thirty-five years, in the elections. I am always there in the precinct from the time it opens until it closes; I was there, and I had no particular interest in Mr. Banks or any one; in fact, as a delegate to the Republican Convention, I voted against Mr. Banks, and for Mr. Hussey.

Q. You have nothing further to say on that? A. No, sir; that is about the sum and substance of that.

Q. If you swore a moment ago that you took a special interest in Mr. Banks' fight, you swore to something that is not so, did you? A. No, sir; that is not the way the question came.

Q. I don't ask you about that. A. But you have got to reduce it down into proper form.

Q. I am going to put my question myself. A. If you want an answer, you shall certainly put it in proper form. It is not your guess work over mine. I said this: that in the afternoon I had made a bet with a gentleman that represented the Senator opposed to Mr. Banks of $20, I betting on Banks, and he betting on Sullivan. After that bet had taken place, of course, I had more or less favoritism for Mr. Banks.

Q. That is it, and I did not quite understand it. Then that bet was made in the afternoon? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Up to that time, when that bet was made, you took a particular interest generally in the Republican ticket? A. Yes, sir.

Q. After that bet was made, it had more influence on you? A. I think I did take more interest.

Q. Then it was in pursuance of $40 that induced you to take the great interest in Mr. Banks? A. It had an influence, yes.

Q. And that was $40, was it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then the $40 was what induced you to take this great interest in Banks? A. I haven't stated that I took a great interest in Mr. Banks. You are putting in the word "great." I have not used the word "great." I simply took an interest for the whole ticket.

Q. That was in the morning, was it not? A. That was probably until two or three o'clock in the afternoon.

Q. Then you made this bet; is that right? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then you took a greater interest in Mr. Banks' fight, did you? A. I wanted to see him get every vote possible.

Q. Didn't you know it was a misdemeanor to bet on elections? A. I had voted the first thing in the morning.

Q. Didn't you understand that? A. I understand that. But having voted, I did not commit a misdemeanor.

Q. You understood when you committed it it was a misdemeanor? A. I knew it was contrary to law; but having cast my ballot, it was not contrary.

Q. I don't care about that. A. Well, I am doing my part of it.

Q. You did bet on the election? A. I did not bet previous to my voting.

Q. Will you answer my question? A. Certainly. I do, but I am qualifying it by saying I had voted before.

Q. I want you to answer it and not qualify it. Did you or did you not know that it was a misdemeanor to bet on election? A. I know that it is contrary to law.

Q. Ain't you a pretty good citizen here? You are not in the habit of doing things contrary to law, are you? A. Well, I do; but having cast my ballot, I thought I was all right.

Q. You thought you could violate the law then, did you? A. Yes, as thousands of others have done.

Q. And you did it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are a member of the Republican County Committee, are you? A. No, sir.

Q. You are not particularly interested in Republican politics, other than as a citizen, are you? A. That is all.

Q. You have known Maxwell a long time, haven't you? A. Ever so long.

Q. How long have you known this man Levy that came to you? A. Both Maxwell and Levy and the boys were probably born in the neighborhood.

Q. And you have known them, probably, all the time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are pretty friendly with Maxwell, ain't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you think he is a very nice young man? A. Yes; I have a very high estimate of him.

Q. You don't think he would lie, do you? A. Well, he is pretty impulsive.

Q. Did you think he would go and steal votes when Levy came to you and stated that? A. I only had Levy's statement.

Q. You knew Maxwell, didn't you? A. I knew he was in politics, and men do very foolish things when they are in that.

Q. You are in politics, are you not? A. Not to a very great extent.

Q. For thirty-five years, you said.

MR. DORN: He did not say he took a very great interest.

By MR. CLUNIE: Was it small, or great, or what? A. In my estimation it was great for me; not having the habit of staying out late nights, I took an interest during the day.

Q. As a matter of fact, you took a great interest in politics? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you knew Maxwell was interested in politics? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you knew, didn't you, he would steal votes? A. No, I didn't think that. I only stated what was stated to me.

Q. You said Levy came to you and stated what was going to be done? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that it was work that was going to take votes away from the Republican party? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that Maxwell was going to do it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you have known Maxwell ever since he was a little boy? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you knew him to be a good man? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you think he was going to steal votes, and commit the crime? A. I took the precaution.

Q. And did you think he would do that? A. I didn't give it a thought.

Q. And just on this man's say, knowing Maxwell as you did, you went in there and watched him, and sat around? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you think that is an honest part to play to a man that you claim to be a friend of? A. As honest people do? That was not the position I was in.

Q. That is the position I put it in. A. I said Maxwell was there as a spy on the Republicans, and I was very cautious, and I was there as a spy on the Democrats at the request of the County Committee, and watching his acts, and that is precisely that position.

Q. What did you think from this man Levy's testimony that Maxwell was going to do? A. Levy, from his statement, if I would believe Levy—I don't know whether it was a fact or not: I only simply give Levy's statement to me—I thought he was going to perpetrate a fraud, and was prepared to do it, and I went there to keep my watch on him.

Q. What kind of a fraud? A. A fraud in not giving Banks the ballots that he was entitled to.

Q. How was he going to do that? A. By probably having the name called off for his friend, when it was not on the ticket, and have the Clerks tally it.

Q. Who was going to do that? A. The Judges or Inspectors.

Q. Who were the Judges? A. I don't know who they were, but they were under the supervision of Mr. Maxwell; he had a great deal of influence with them; I know them personally, but I don't know them by name.

Q. Do you swear that you don't know who were the Judges of Election in that precinct? A. I did not so state. I knew they were Judges and Inspectors of Election.

Q. Do you know who they were? A. I cannot call them by name now. What business have I got to hunt them up?

Q. I ask you to swear. A. I don't want to swear anything about the matter.

Q. I ask you what Judges were going to commit the felony? A. I don't know. In the first place, I haven't stated any Judge was ordered to commit a felony.

Q. You said a moment ago that Levy said Maxwell was going to commit a felony. A. I didn't say anything of the kind. You asked me how it was going to be perpetrated, and I said I supposed it was going to be perpetrated in that way. I don't want you to put improper language in my mouth; and you can put the proper question to me and I will answer it with pleasure; but don't undertake to put words in my mouth.

Q. I asked you what Judge you thought was going to commit a felony at that election? A. I stated that I have not intimated, suggested, or given it a thought or consideration that there was any Judge that intended to commit a fraud, and there was nothing that would justify you in making that observation.

Q. Levy came to you and told you there were frauds going to be perpetrated? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What frauds did you think from Levy's statement were going to be perpetrated? A. That was a matter that would develop itself.

Q. Didn't you tell me a moment ago there was going to be a fraud perpetrated? You testified some time ago there was going to be a fraud perpetrated.

[Here the reporter reads the testimony from two pages back as follows: "What did you think from this man Levy's testimony that Maxwell was going to do." and the answer thereto.]

THE WITNESS: Now, is that what you call saying there was fraud going to be committed?

Q. That is what I think it was. That is your testimony? A. Yes, sir; that is what I thought could be done. That is all a supposition. That is no swearing, either. There is not a word in that language that will justify your observation in saying that it is sworn to; it is merely saying what I thought, and what I supposed could be done.

Q. As a matter of fact, you thought it could be done? A. Yes, sir; but that don't make it so.

Q. That is merely your way of thinking? A. Yes, sir; that is so.

Q. He called them the Democratic people? A. The Judges.

Q. Who were the Judges? A. I don't know. Maxwell can tell you the names.

Q. They are all friends of yours, are they? A. No; I know them by sight. Maxwell can tell you better than I can.

Q. I want you to tell me. A. He was Captain of the Democratic party.

Q. I know that, and he knows that. Why don't you tell me? A. It is not my business to know who the Judges are. I was a citizen, and cast my ballot. I didn't ascertain who the Judges were.

Q. Do you swear you do not know who the Judges were? A. I presume I know who they were, but I couldn't exactly call them; but I will name them now. I know that Mr. Burke was one; he was either a Judge or an Inspector. I know that Captain Pierce—Nelson Pierce—was one; and I know them all.

Q. Do you know Mr. Alvey? A. Yes, sir; I know Mr. Alvey.

Q. How long have you known Mr. Alvey? A. Oh, I have known him for fifteen or twenty years.

Q. He was one of the Judges, wasn't he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Captain Pierce was another one? A. Yes, sir.

Q. James Swain was another one, wasn't he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Medau was one of them? A. No, I don't think so. Mr. Swain I know. Mr. Medau I don't think—

Q. [Interrupting.] In order to carry out the forgery that might have occurred that night, it was necessary for one of the Judges to call the name wrong? A. I supposed that was the way it would be done.

Q. You must have necessarily thought that one of those men should call the name wrong, didn't you? A. I thought so; necessarily they must have a way it would be done.

Q. You knew now, under your oath, that one of those gentlemen would do that? A. I didn't think anything about it. The statement was made to me. I placed myself behind the caller and examined every ballot that was called off, and it was all right, and my mind was satisfied, and I didn't give the matter a moment's consideration.

Q. But you reported it to Banks, didn't you? A. I reported to him some time after the election.

Q. What did you want to report it to him for, if it did not turn out or amount to anything, and if you didn't think it would ever amount to anything? A. I don't know how; possibly in the natural course of conversation it came up.

Q. You don't remember about that? A. No.

Q. You don't remember about that? A. I talked about the political contest or like that; many of those instances come along, and no special attention was given to it.

Q. Who did you tell besides Banks? A. I haven't the remotest idea.

Q. Have you been out hunting testimony in this contest? A. No, sir; not at all. I had no more knowledge of it than to-day.

Q. Do you swear you did not go with Mr. Banks and with Mike Smith hunting up testimony in this case? A. No; but I might say this about that, don't you run away with that impression; you need not turn your head and shake your hand, but I say I did not participate in this matter until I was requested to come here yesterday afternoon, and I did not speak to a living soul about the matter. But in relation to the matter of Mr. Levy, I went with Mr. Banks and Mr. Smith to see Mr. Levy in his store to tell him what he stated to me.

Q. What did you want to tell him that for? He knew what it was. A. He was the proper one to tell.

Q. He wanted to know what he told you? A. That was the fact; that was the matter.

Q. What did you go down there for then? A. That is not the way it was exactly. I wanted to have him state if he remembered the circumstance.

Q. You wanted to refresh it with him? A. I wanted the whole thing refreshed in my mind, when I didn't take anybody's part in this fight, or have anything to do with it.

Q. Then Mr. Levy and you had a little talk about what occurred, didn't you? A. I simply asked him if he had stated so and so to me; if he remembered it.

Q. What did he tell you? A. He told me that it was not as serious as he represented at the time.

Q. Didn't he state that to Mr. Levy, and didn't Mr. Levy tell you that didn't occur at all? Didn't Mr. Levy tell you you were mistaken? A. No; if you put it in that language. I don't think he put it in that language. But myself, I can say to you now—

Q. [Interrupting.] Just tell me what you said to Mr. Levy and what Mr. Levy said to you, and that is all I want. A. I told Mr. Banks what Mr. Levy had said to me, and I went there with Mr. Banks to see Mr. Levy.

Q. You told me that seventeen times, and I know it just as well as you do. I want to know what Mr. Levy said. Now, state that, what you and Mr. Levy said when you went to that store that day? A. I am under the impression that Mr. Levy said it was not as serious as I viewed it.

Q. You won't swear that that is the language Levy used, will you? A. I don't know the language he used, word for word. It was not a matter of very great importance.

Q. Don't you know Mr. Levy told you that that did not occur at all, and told you not to go on the stand at all and swear to it, and that if you did you would perjure yourself? A. I don't recollect that at all.

Q. What did he say to you? A. I don't know.

Q. You don't know that he said, but you know he did not say that? A. No, sir.

Q. How long have you lived here? A. For a great many years.

Q. You have held public office here before, haven't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What were you? A. I was License Collector.

Q. How did you come to go out of that office? Were you asked to resign? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you come to resign? A. Because there was charges made against me that there was a default in the office.

Q. That was about $150,000 that was missing? A. No, sir.

Q. You were License Collector, and you had charge of the money, and they thought it suspicious that that money was missing? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was why you were asked to resign? A. This was something that occurred before you became such an eminent lawyer. I will state to you this: that that defalcation was a newspaper report. It was done for political purposes. There was a committee appointed by the Board of Supervisors to examine my books. They were found correct to a dollar. The matter was submitted to the Grand Jury. It was examined by the Grand Jury, and referred to another Grand Jury, and they reported and threw it out from lack of merit. Now, that is something that you know nothing about.

Q. Let us see if I understand your transaction right. What newspaper was it said you stole and you did not? A. A great many newspapers. It was political excitement during the time.

Q. Give us the newspapers, will you? A. I suppose about some twenty years ago, but you were in your diapers.

Q. You don't claim I got any of it? A. That was the sum and substance of it; that I was License Collector for ten years and over, and it was then in the Board of Supervisors a clique was anxious to get possession of the office and charges were brought against me for defalcation; experts were appointed to examine my books; they did so, and found them straight to a dollar. During the interim they had an indictment; I was held under an indictment, it was submitted to the Grand Jury, testimony was taken there, they reported that the next Grand Jury would take some action in the matter. It was reported to the next Grand Jury, and they examined it for months and months and the thing was thrown out as worthless, unanimously.

Q. You are all through now? A. Yes, sir; now.

Q. Just tell me the paper that got up this conspiracy at the time. A. It was universal at the time. It was probably all the press—the "Bulletin." I said it was all the newspapers, but I stated it was got up by a political clique of hooters who were anxious to get possession of my office.

Q. Who was the clique? A. There was the boss who was in power, the leader of it.

Q. Who were the leaders?

MR. DORN: I submit, if your honors please, twenty years ago has nothing to do here.

THE WITNESS: I understand his object, and he probably thought it would cast reflection on me and do me an injury, but he is welcome to all that. That is little capital.

By MR. CLUNIE: And you don't want to answer the question about it? A. Yes, I do; but I think it ungentlemanly and uncalled for. I view that as a matter that don't appertain to my evidence within the last election. That occurred twenty years ago, but a man brings that up. He is doing very small business—he is in very small business.

Q. That is your opinion? A. That is my opinion.

Q. Now tell us the newspaper? A. I will refer you back to the record, and I will say I am rather surprised to have both your honors sit here and listen to a matter of this kind.

JUSTICE STAFFORD: We have no authority in this matter at all. We do not sit here in a judicial capacity. We sit here merely as officers who were to take depositions, with no more power than a Notary Public. If we had the power, there would be a great deal of this testimony that has gone in that would be ruled out, but we have no authority to do it.

THE WITNESS: I will say this: Here is a matter referring only to my testimony on the election a few days ago, and the fellow goes to work and tries to cover me over with slime for an act that took place twenty years ago. It is contemptible, mean, and despicable.

By MR. CLUNIE: Will you tell me about it now? A. You go and find out from the record.

Q. What record is it? Indictment record? A. Go back twenty years and ascertain it.

Q. Where will I find it? A. Probably in the City Hall.

Q. What part of the City Hall? A. I don't like to insult you.

Q. That is impossible. A. No, I see that you are pretty callous, anyway; but I really think that I am prepared to answer any question that I can, but when a man is so low and despicable as to go back and try to draw my record out, it is too contemptible to take notice of it.

Q. You think that is an outrage? A. Yes, I do; and I think it is mean and low.

MR. DORN: I will say to you that there is no means of ruling, and that is the reason no objections are made to these questions, and the reason why this kind of testimony is not ruled out. The Justices in this proceeding have no power at all to rule an objection. I state that in defense of the Justices.

THE WITNESS: Well, I am very glad to hear it for the credit of the Court.

By MR. CLUNIE: Just tell me where I can get the record of this? A. You look back on the files of the newspapers twenty years ago.

Q. What newspapers will I find it in? A. You might take the "Bulletin," "Call," and "Chronicle," and all papers that were published at that period.

Q. The "Bulletin," "Call," and "Chronicle," they were the papers that trumped up this charge against you, were they? A. No, sir; I couldn't state that.

Q. The statement that I will find in this paper will be correct, will it? A. I stated they were not correct, but newspapers are not correct. What business have you to bring this up with me? What has that got to do with my testimony on this case? I want you to confine yourself to what is facts, and this thing is a matter that is of no interest in this case. You want to ascertain from me what took place at the last election. You want to sit there and cover me over with slime for an article that was published in a newspaper ten years ago.

Q. I don't want to cover you with slime at all. A. Then why bring this up? What business is it of yours what took place there? If you want any information, go to the record and get it. I tell you this now: I want you to stop this; I don't want you to drag me or this thing out; it is not in this affair, and it is none of your business, and it has got nothing to do with it.

Q. I want to tell you that I am here as Mr. Sullivan's attorney. One of Mr. Sullivan's witnesses came in here and swore to a state of facts, and you have come in and sworn to another state of facts, and it is my object to show that your testimony cannot be believed. A. But I have stated here that my books were correct; that it was proved so by a committee appointed to expert on that, that the case was submitted to the Grand Jury, and it was not acted on; and it was resubmitted to another Grand Jury, and it was unanimously thrown out. Now, that is the foundation, and you can go on, and I will gratify you, showing what your party is.

Q. Who were the Supervisors that put up this job on you—

MR. DORN [Interrupting]: If you can remember.

A. Yes, I can remember. I cannot think of the name, but he was President of the Odd Fellows' Bank, and was disgraced afterwards himself. He was Supervisor from the Eighth District. I don't recollect the name. I would recollect the name if I heard it. He was President of the Odd Fellows' Bank, and he broke the bank up and got in with Ralston, and he broke that bank up and got disgraced himself and went out of the city.

Q. Didn't Ralston have a hand in these charges against you? A. No, sir; this was the Chairman of the committee, and the principal man in the Board. I will probably think of the name before you get through, and give you the name.

Q. Did Ralston have anything to do with the charge? A. No, sir; he did not.

Q. Just tell us the specific-charge, as near as you can? A. The charge was for the mal-appropriation of the funds.

Q. What amount was stated? A. The amount was stated variously, but the amount was not a ten-cent piece.

Q. What was the amount they claimed you got away with? A. What was said in the paper at the time was a very large amount of money.

Q. Was it $150,000? A. No, sir.

Q. It was over $100,000, wasn't it? A. No, sir. I don't recollect what the amount stated was. It was on the verge of a political election—primary election—and there was a good deal of rumor about it.

Q. From your best knowledge, how much was the amount they claimed you got away with? What was the rumor about it? A. I don't recollect, but according to the facts of the case there was not a ten-cent piece.

Q. What did the newspapers say about it? A. I don't recollect. I read it. I think it is a shame.

Q. Well, we think it is a shame when you say one thing when another witness swears to a different thing. A. I appreciate your fine art business.

Q. Now, tell us again what the newspapers said—what amount? A. If you want anything further on that question, you will have to go and get the records, and you can't get it from me.

By MR. DORN: I ask your honor to instruct this witness that he is not required to answer any question which will hold him up to public disgrace or ridicule. That is the privilege of a witness in any tribunal.

THE WITNESS: No, I will withdraw that. I am willing to answer any question. If that is his object, I say there is nothing which could hold me up to public disgrace or ridicule, because it is a matter that has been finally settled, and settled in my favor, and if that is the case, I will withdraw the objection, and I will answer any question they ask.

[Here the reporter reads the last question of counsel for respondent, as follows: "Now, tell us again what the newspapers said—what amount?"]

A. There was various amounts; probably from $100,000 to $20,000, $10,000 or $5,000.

By MR. CLUNIE: That charge was made against you in the newspapers? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where were you at that time? A. In the city.

Q. You didn't leave the city at all? A. No, sir.

Q. And after it was made you did not leave? A. No, sir.

Q. It was claimed that you did that as License Collector? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When the charges came out in the newspaper, the Grand Jury was then in session, was it not? A. No; I don't know whether it was in session or not; no, I think it was not. It was a long time after that before the Grand Jury was empaneled.

Q. Who were the experts that examined your books? A. The Board of Supervisors.

Q. Who were they? A. I don't know the names now, but I think Col. Wiggins was one.

Q. And you don't remember the other one? A. No, sir; I do not. I know they were appointed by my enemies in the Board.

Q. You were a Republican then, weren't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was a Republican Board, was it not? A. No, sir.

Q. It was a Democratic Board? A. No; it was a Board of the People's party.

Q. The People's party? A. Yes, sir.

Q. They had a reformation here then, hadn't they? A. Yes; something of that kind.

Q. And this was the reform ticket that put up this job on you; is that it? A. That I don't know. It was principally from one man in that party; I forget his name, and though I had it in my mind a moment ago that that was the gentleman from the Eighth District. He was anxious that I should make some appointment which I refused to make for him.

Q. How long was it after those charges were made that you resigned as License Collector? I think probably it jogged along a month or two.

Q. A month or two after this, then, you resigned? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You hadn't taken anything? A. No.

Q. There was nothing in the charges? A. Nothing.

Q. And you gave in your resignation? A. Yes; I think that is about the substance of it.

Q. Don't you know? A. Well, now, that is a long time ago and it is a matter—

Q. [Interrupting.] It was a matter of great importance to you, wasn't it? A. It was a matter of great importance to me at the time, and everything pertaining to it was then fresh in my memory, but it is a matter I have forgotten all about.

Q. Do you remember how you come to resign? A. I am under the impression that my resignation was asked for. That I cannot positively say, whether it was asked for or whether I tendered the resignation.

Q. Whether you tendered it or whether it was asked, you cannot swear? A. No. I cannot say positively.

Q. Don't you know, as a matter of fact, that these people came to you and told you that if you did not resign they would go at you and prosecute you criminally in this matter? A. I don't know anything of the kind, because the thing did not take place, and because that is entirely voluntary on your part.

Q. That did not take place? A. That did not take place.

Q. How do you know? A. I simply say to you again that that is twenty years ago, and I was twenty years younger then, and my memory was better then than it is at the present time.

Q. The only thing is I want to get these people here. A. The most economical thing is, you can hunt it up, and you can interview me tomorrow, and you will have an opportunity of getting it to your own satisfaction.

Q. I only want to get your statement of it. A. I can say that on matters of that kind my memory is a little treacherous. Not on facts, but on newspaper squibs it may be.

Q. But you know there were charges, and that the newspapers published those charges, and then you answered? A. I think it was on account of those charges, and I don't think I would have resigned if it hadn't been for those charges.

Q. Don't you think if the Grand Jury ignored the bill, and threw it out, and you were exonerated and you resigned, that it was a little strange? A. This is some time when it was ignored, and the Grand Jury had decided that there was no merit in the case; this occupied months and months, and it went before two Grand Juries, and that embraced probably six or eight months.

Q. Then without waiting to find out whether the Grand Jury would ignore it or not, or whether the public would sustain you, when the charges were brought you resigned; is that it? A. Whether, as a matter of fact, I did resign, or whether I was requested to resign, I don't recollect.

Q. There was a resignation about it, was there? A. There was a resignation, because the Board of Supervisors at that time had the appointing of the officers, and a majority of the Board were against me.

Q. What time did that occur? What was the year? A. Really I cannot call it to mind now. I think it was about twenty years ago.

Q. And this is all you remember? A. Yes, sir.

Q. At this conversation you had with Mr. Levy, wasn't this what was said: Didn't Mr. Levy tell you that Maxwell didn't make any proposition to count Banks' vote for Sullivan, but that he (Levy) had several disputes about votes with the other party, and he came near coming to blows, and he asked you to send some one or get some one to watch, as he was afraid they would count Banks out? A. No, sir, that was not the conversation as it occurred.

Redirect Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: As a matter of fact, didn't Mr. Levy, when you had this conversation with him, tell you that he was afraid to come here and testify, because he was afraid of that crowd, and that they would do him some harm? A. No, sir; he did not.

Q. You knew this precinct was one where Mr. Maxwell had charge, wasn't it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is a precinct which, on the recount, the Republican candidate for Recorder gained eighteen votes, was it not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And out of which he had been defrauded? A. Yes, sir. I heard so; I don't know it. I saw it in the paper.

Q. That precinct was under Mr. Maxwell's special guardianship, was it not? A. I could not say.

Q. He was the Democratic Captain there? A. Yes, sir; he was a very active man, and appeared to have charge of the interests of the party there.

Q. Do you know a man named Hussey? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He was also in charge there, wasn't he? A. Mr. Maxwell and Mr. Hussey were always together, and appeared to watch for the party.

Q. He was a Democratic watcher there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were asked if you had any reason to distrust Maxwell. Now, I ask you if you had any reason to trust Hussey? A. I don't know as I can answer that question very well. I had no reason to distrust either. I only simply heard this stated to me, and I thought I would take the necessary precautions to do it, but I neither had distrusted Hussey nor Maxwell.

Q. As a matter of fact, you did not say or understand that you mistrusted either one of them, but you were put on your guard, and you thought it well to take steps to look out for it? A. Yes, sir; that was it.

Q. As far as it fixed the criminal or the crime? A. No, sir.

Q. But you thought to use an ounce of precaution was better? A. Yes, sir; I hadn't any suspicion of Mr. Maxwell or Mr. Hussey.

Q. As a matter of fact, Mr. Levy, that gave you this information, was only a Clerk? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And for any pretext which was considered proper by the majority of the Election Board, he could have been discharged at any time, and some one else put in his place; that is the rule, is it, for Clerks in the election precincts, isn't it? A. I don't know. I haven't examined into the power of the Board to act on that matter.

Q. Without distrusting any of the watchers, or without distrusting any of the callers, wouldn't it be possible that the wrong could have happened by the collusion of the Clerks tallying wrong, even if Maxwell were honest, and even if Hussey were honest, even if the Inspectors were honest, and the Judges were honest? Couldn't a wrong have occurred by collusion among the Clerks tallying wrong? A. Certainly.

Q. So you were afraid of connivance, by which the wrong could have come? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And there might have been a number of ways by which a fraud could have been committed? A. Certainly.

Q. And, as I said before, without specifying the person, or the exact name of the crime, you thought it your duty as an active Republican to go down there and see what happened, and you did so? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You heard Mr. Maxwell's testimony here, did you not? A. No, sir.

Q. I will state to you that Mr. Maxwell testified that this Mr. Hussey was a volunteer at that place, and that he was not paid anything for his services. What was the political record of this man Hussey, with regard to a change of base? Two years ago he was a Republican, wasn't he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. At the nominating convention Mr. Hussey was a candidate for the position of Senator against Mr. Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And upon being defeated for the nomination he became immediately an enthusiastic Democratic worker? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you therefore had no special reason to confide in his integrity, would you? A. No. I would like to state that as a delegate to the convention and a candidate, I voted for Mr. Hussey against Mr. Banks in the convention.

Q. Isn't it supposed if a man is honest, and if he is an honorable man, and he comes up in a convention, and is a candidate for nomination, and another man secures the nomination, that that man, at least if he does nothing for his rival, will not turn around and work against him? A. Most certainly. I think that is a very dishonorable transaction myself.

Q. Isn't such a thing a very dishonorable transaction? A. I view it in that light.

Q. Isn't it at least the part of an honorable man to acquiesce and be silent, at least, if he did not assist his successful candidate? A. I wouldn't countenance it myself.

Q. In political circles, and among people generally, isn't that regarded as a dishonorable transaction? A. Certainly; I would not countenance any man that pursued that course.

Q. And as a matter of fact, this Mr. Hussey was there without compensation, and a free giver of charity, as Mr. Clunie said, he was there without compensation, and giving his time for the benefit of the Democratic party? A. I don't approve of it.

By MR. CLUNIE: You don't claim to be an expert on honor, do you? A. Well, I am only speaking my own feelings about the matter. I don't speak for anybody else.

[Here the further hearing was continued until to-morrow morning at ten o'clock.]

SEVENTH DAY.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA,)
WEDNESDAY, January 9, 1889—10 o'clock A. M. }

ALEXANDER CAMPBELL, JR.

A witness called for respondent, was duly sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Mr. Campbell, where do you reside? Answer—No. 1415 Mason Street, in this city and county.

Q. How long have you lived there? A. About fifteen months.

Q. How long have you lived in this city? A. Somewhere about thirty-seven years; thirty-six or thirty-seven.

Q. You have a voting residence? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where were you on election day? A. I was in the Thirty-third Assembly District, Precinct No. Six.

Q. What were you doing? A. I voted there and represented the interests of the Republican party.

Q. Whom did you find there on that day representing the interests of the Democratic ticket, if anybody? A. You might say their name was legion. One in particular was Mr. Doran.

Q. Do you know what his first name is? A. I think they called him Fancy.

Q. He is a deputy in the Sheriff's office, isn't he? A. He was; yes, sir.

Q. Who else did you see there? You say their name was legion. Just give the name of a few of the legion of Democratic hosts there corraling voters? A. I don't know anything about any of the others corraling voters there. I know nearly everybody around there, but don't know them by name.

Q. What did you see Mr. Doran, this Deputy Sheriff, do in the way of corraling voters? Just give us the whole thing. A. I went to the polling place about half past-six that morning; Mr. J. J. Lynch, representing the Republican side of the house, was there attending to his duties as challenger.

Q. Is that the Mr. J. J. Lynch who testified on the stand here? A. I am so informed; yes, sir. About half past-six that morning I went there, and I relieved Mr. Lynch, and I remained there some time—probably two or three hours. Subsequently I went away, and I am living right around the corner from the polling place, and I made my house headquarters for the day. I received reports from our friends who were working in our interest, doing whatever was necessary.

Q. What were the reports that you received? Give us the reports that you received. A. About eleven or half-past eleven in the daytime, the report came to me that Mr. Doran was buying votes. I insisted in knowing then whether that was simply a report or whether it was true that he was doing that. I had received a report from my brother, whom I had there representing me and helping also the County Committee as a ticket peddler. I had him watch the matter and see that there could be no mistake about it. He reported to me, and called my attention to it. I opened the blinds of my house, which was just within fifteen or twenty feet of the polling place—probably thirty feet from the polling place—and I took my station at the window there, and saw Mr. Doran, saw him bringing men along, taking them into the side place, furnishing them—furnishing, I would say, one with a ticket—a man whom I knew that I had never seen in that precinct or in that district before. I saw the man go around the corner and come back in a few minutes—go in some place, and Mr. Doran handed him some money.

Q. Did you see him hand him the money? A. I saw him put his hand in his pocket, take out something, and the man went away with it. Then I left.

Q. As soon as he put his hand in his pocket to take something out, the man went away with it, did he? A. Yes, sir; of course, he did.

Q. What else did you see on that day about votes? A. That is all. I then became satisfied it was not a square fight, and I didn't know in what interest Mr. Doran was, except in the interest of the Democratic County Committee.

Q. You knew that he was a Democrat? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You knew that he was representing that County Committee there? Yes, sir.

Q. It is so testified here on the stand? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What else did you see in that precinct on election day? A. That is all. I made my house my headquarters and remained there most of the day, because you can readily understand, while you have got the management of any particular thing you are moving from one place to another and bored to death, and you get pretty tired by the time the polls close.

Q. Mr. Doran was very active about the polls there during the day, was he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Whether you saw him giving money or any other consideration, did you see him bringing any other voters to the polls? A. That is the only one.

Q. How did this J. J. Lynch that you mentioned happen to be acting for the Republican primaries there, acting for the Republican party? A. At my request Mr. Lynch was appointed Inspector of the primary election in the Sixth Precinct of the Thirty-third, where I was a candidate as a delegate to the convention.

Q. At whose solicitation or by what influence did he receive his appointment as Sergeant-at-Arms of the Republican Convention held in this city? A. At mine.

Q. You made his nomination and secured him the place? A. I obtained the place for him; yes, sir.

Q. He has also testified on the stand that he acted as a Republican challenger on election day, and I believe you also confirm that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was that obtained by? A. That was obtained by the Republican County Committeeman and myself.

Q. Had Mr. Banks anything, either directly or indirectly, to do with securing Mr. Lynch these places, or any one of these places? A. I know Mr. Banks was trying to get another man, particularly for Sergeant-at-Arms of the convention, solicited from me another man, but I put Mr. Lynch in, because I recognized Mr. Lynch's service previously to the Republican party.

Q. Then Mr. Lynch had no reason to be grateful to Mr. Banks there because of any help he had for any position? A. Not as I know of.

Q. On the other hand, hadn't he reason to be resentful toward Mr. Banks for having favored some other candidate for the place? A. I should think so, decidedly.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: I understand you that Mr. Banks had been against giving Mr. Lynch any representation at the primary at all? A. Not at all. Mr. Lynch's friends asked me to get him the appointment of Sergeant-at-Arms of the Republican Convention. Mr. Banks came to me and solicited me to have James Gallagher appointed as a Sergeant-at-Arms. I took both names, and I handed in Mr. Lynch's name to the member of the Committee on Permanent Organization, and I did not hand in the other man's name.

Q. Did you tell Mr. Banks that Mr. Lynch was your man? A. I did not.

Q. Why did you have any reason to support Mr. Lynch in preference to the other man? A. From the fact of knowing that he had rendered me very valuable services at the primary previously.

Q. Then you would have thought, as a reasonable man, after the holding of that convention and after the nomination, that he should have felt resentful to Banks. A. I should not think he would feel as friendly as if it had never happened.

Q. You didn't think he would have got out and worked against him? A. Under the circumstances, I would say Mr. Lynch would have no reason to expect anything from Mr. Banks.

Q. If you had been in Mr. Lynch's place you would not have felt like going about and doing anything for him, would you, after he tried to beat you? A. I should feel that way myself a little.

Q. You would have felt resentful? A. Yes, sir.

Q. After all that happened, wouldn't you think if Lynch went around and did all he could for Mr. Banks, that something had happened since? A. Not at all, because my relations with Mr. Lynch were that he would do anything he could for me, and as I was very much interested in Mr. Banks, that he would naturally be the same way.

Q. You asked him (Lynch) to help support Banks? A. There is no doubt about it. We had a great many consultations as to what to do to get the opposition vote.

Q. You had an interest in Mr. Banks' fight? A. I was the Chairman of the convention that nominated him and put him in nomination, and I ought to.

Q. You were a member of the Republican County Committee? A. No, sir.

Q. You were in charge of the precinct for the Republican County Committee? A. No, sir; I was not. I was there doing whatever I could.

Q. Who put you in charge? A. I did myself.

Q. You put yourself? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And everybody recognized you? A. There were several of us there; there were half a dozen there.

Q. I understood you were recognized as the chief there? A. Not at all. I had charge of my precinct, the same as any other Republican would that would exert any influence at all, that would interest himself on behalf of the Republican ticket.

Q. Don't you know that people appointed by the Republican County Committee would naturally be in charge? A. There is no doubt about that.

Q. Was there anybody appointed up there by the Republican County Committee? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who were they? A. Mr. Lynch was one and Mr. Campbell, my brother, was another. Those are two that I know of. Mr. Jones, the County Committeeman, had charge of that precinct, as he did of that district—that end of the district particularly—three precincts.

Q. Yet you took the whole charge of it? A. Not a bit. I used whatever influence I had, and whatever was necessary I would do, and I was doing it entirely in the interests of the entire ticket from top to bottom.

Q. Mr. Lynch stated, when he was on the stand, that he asked his friends particularly to vote for Mr. Banks. I understand that whatever he did he did it for you. A. No. I understand what he did for Mr. Banks he did for me.

Q. And whatever you did, you did at the request of Mr. Banks? A. It was not understood, but whatever we did, we were for the whole ticket.

Q. Were you all just working for the whole Republican ticket? Was Mr. Jones? A. Jones was speaking about everybody.

Q. Did you say to Lynch, "We want to make a particular fight for Mr. Banks?" A. That was understood.

Q. How was it understood, if you didn't say it? A. I was running in the interests of Mr. Banks for Senator.

Q. Was it understood, after the nominations in the Republican party had been made, that you would support every nomination, and that you would get out and take a special interest in Mr. Banks' fight? A. I took a special interest in Mr. Banks' fight, and I asked Mr. Lynch to do the same. I didn't say to Mr. Lynch: "Here, stand in for Mr. Banks;" but simply, "coöperate with me."

Q. I understand you; you had never asked Mr. Lynch particularly to vote for Mr. Banks? A. No, sir.

Q. Nor to work for him? A. No, sir.

Q. You did ask him on behalf of the whole ticket? A. I did ask him on behalf of the ticket, and, as I say, special attention to be paid to the Banks vote.

Q. You did say that? A. Yes, sir, we did, and we frequently met in the State Central Committee rooms and other places and talked it over.

Q. Did you meet him at the State Central Committee? A. Well, that and other places.

Q. How frequently did you meet him there? A. I can't say that, of course. Of course I was interested in it, not that I was an office-seeker or anything of that kind.

Q. And you met Mr. Lynch frequently at the State Central Committee rooms? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you in the habit of meeting him there? A. Oh, yes, sir.

Q. He was in the habit of consulting with Mr. Estee and others? A. He was not. He was there and I presume they had some use for him.

Q. You don't know what he was doing there? A. I do not.

Q. On election day you say he went up to the precinct? A. To the Sixth.

Q. He was a member of the Board there, wasn't he? A. He was a challenger.

Q. Wasn't he a member of the Board? A. He was, partly. I think he was.

Q. Wasn't he one of the members of the Board of Election? A. I think he was.

Q. Wasn't it at your solicitation, and didn't you see that he got it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever ask to have Mr. Lynch appointed a member of the Board of Election? A. No, sir. The only thing that I was consulted about was as to whether he should be put on as a challenger with Mr. Jones, the County Committeeman. That was all.

Q. That was all you had to do with it? A. That was all.

Q. What had Mr. Lynch to do up there? Do you say he was looking out for the interests of the Republican party? A. I saw him there attending to his duties as challenger, excepting a little while I relieved him in the morning.

Q. He was there as challenger? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And all day? A. Whenever I saw him.

Q. You were there all day, weren't you? A. No, sir. I was there after half-past eleven or twelve o'clock. I returned home and remained there.

Q. And you didn't come out again to see what was going on? A. I didn't come out until after the polls closed.

Q. And you were in charge as the head manager of the Republican party until the polls closed? A. I was not the head manager of the polls at all in any sense of the word. I was simply there in the interest of the ticket, and had an interest in Mr. Banks, and I was looking out for that district.

Q. You were there in behalf of Mr. Banks? A. I was there, yes, sir.

Q. Wasn't it on behalf of Mr. Banks? A. No, sir; I said I was there on behalf of the ticket. I said I had a special interest in advocating Mr. Banks.

By MR. DORN: Hadn't you also a special reason for advocating Mr. Morrow at the time of election? A. I had; yes, sir.

Q. You were Chairman of the Morrow Invincibles? A. Yes, sir.

By MR. CLUNIE: You are pretty well acquainted up in that precinct, ain't you? A. No, sir; I was not.

Q. You don't pretend to know every man in the precinct, do you? A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Then you didn't think it strange that a man should come up to vote with Mr. Doran and you not see him before? A. I was there for the last fifteen or eighteen years, and know just as well as you do what it was, probably.

Q. Did you think it very strange that you should not know a man that came up and voted at that precinct? A. If I didn't know anything of how the thing was done, I would say it is an ordinary thing.

Q. Answer the question again. Did you think it strange for a man to come up there and vote, that you didn't know? A. Not a bit.

Q. You watched Mr. Doran pretty carefully, didn't you? A. Only in that one instance.

Q. Only in that one instance? A. That is all.

Q. You just saw him doing it with one man? A. That is all.

Q. How long did that take? A. Probably not more than a minute or so.

Q. You didn't hear what he said? A. Oh, no. I was in my house and he was right below.

Q. You are right underneath there, ain't you? A. Right underneath. The polling place was, I think, about thirty feet away from my home.

Q. Do you know Mr. Doran very well? A. I am not personally acquainted with the gentleman, but I have known him for years by sight.

Q. You thought he was committing a felony buying votes, did you? A. It looked that way to me; yes, sir.

Q. Then you are willing to swear Mr. Doran committed a felony at that time, are you? A. I was satisfied he was doing something that was not entirely legitimate.

Q. What made you think that? A. From the fact that he was doing it in such a secret manner, and not letting everybody see what he was doing.

Q. Haven't you frequently called people out down at the Police Court, and talked with them privately? A. Not frequently.

Q. Haven't you frequently taken men out and talked with them down there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You don't think there is anything particularly wrong in taking a man out and talking with him privately, do you? A. No, sir.

Q. Then you saw him go down in his pocket? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you don't know what he took out? A. No.

Q. You don't know what his object was? A. No.

Q. And all you know is that he went down in his pocket and afterward the man left? A. I know that he went with something around the corner and got it.

Q. How do you know what he went for? A. I don't know.

Q. You said he went for something. A. I said he went with something and got something; something that looked to me like an election ticket.

Q. You thought in your own mind Mr. Doran was trying to bribe him?

A. I had been informed that Mr. Doran was buying votes in that precinct, and from information I received I thought it was true.

Q. And you now think from his conduct it was so? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you have told us all about it? A. Yes, sir; that is all.

Q. What was Mr. Lynch doing besides challenging? A. While I was there he was not doing anything else.

Q. You saw him all the morning? A. From eleven to twelve.

Q. And you didn't go back there at all? A. No, sir.

Q. And didn't come back until the polls closed? A. No, sir.

Q. Was Mr. Lynch paying any attention to the Republican ticket? A. When he was not on duty as Republican challenger I don't know what he did, but while acting as challenger he did nothing, I know, but acting as challenger.

Q. You saw him have the Republican tickets in his hand? A. No, sir.

Q. You went, as I understand it, and asked Mr. Jones to put Mr. Lynch at work as challenger, did you? A. In making up the names of the persons who were to be designated for that purpose, I suggested it to Mr. Jones. I was consulted about it.

Q. You named him? A. We had considerable talk about Mr. Lynch.

Q. What was that for? A. I wanted to know for what position he would be best fitted; whether inside or outside. I came to the conclusion that he would be best fitted for challenger, and that was what Mr. Jones thought.

Q. What did Mr. Jones say? A. I know he put him on his list, and he subsequently appointed him.

Q. Did Mr. Jones tell you that he intended to appoint him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He told you that he had intended to appoint him? A. There was no question about Mr. Lynch being a proper man to act on that day.

Q. Jones knew Lynch, didn't he? A. Mr. Jones knew Mr. Lynch before I knew him.

Q. Yet you thought it was necessary to recommend him to Mr. Jones? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you say Mr. Jones knew him before you did? A. Mr. Jones didn't know the work Lynch did in the primary.

Q. What did he do? A. He took the whole management of my fight for delegate to that Republican Convention, and won it very handsomely.

Q. What did he do? A. He got men to come there and vote. That is all I know about it.

Q. That is not anything, is it? A. It is a very hard thing to get good men to vote at the primary.

Q. You wanted good men, did you? A. I expected the legitimate vote. I know what I wanted.

Q. You were a candidate, you knew, and you did not know how it was conducted? A. Not that at all. I am not a green hand myself. I have been at the business a long time, and I know something about the business.

Q. You left it in the hands of Mr. Lynch? A. I was working there all day.

Q. When you were making that fight it was understood you were making it in the interest of Mr. Banks? A. It was so understood; yes, sir.

Q. Wasn't that the reason Mr. Lynch made the fight for you? A. He made it for me; yes, sir.

Q. And you were for Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are an attorney at law? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And have been for how long? A. Fifteen or sixteen years.

Q. And you have lived here how long? A. Thirty-six or thirty-seven years; all my life.

Redirect Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: I understood you to say in response to a question just now, that Mr. Lynch made this fight for you at the primaries, because he knew you were for Banks. Did you so state? A. He knew that I was there in the interest of Mr. Banks; yes, sir.

Q. Did he make the fight for you because you were for Banks or for yourself? A. He made it for me, at my request, of course.

Q. You knew what it was necessary for Lynch to do at the primaries, and it was necessary to get people to come and vote for the ticket? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it was necessary to get all of your friends and all of your friends' friends to come out and vote, in order to beat the other fellow, wasn't it? A. There is no doubt about that.

Q. You mentioned about going over the list with Mr. Jones. As a matter of fact, it is necessary for the County Committeeman to appoint a considerable number of men, some five or six from each precinct, isn't it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And sometimes it is difficult to get good men who will do their duty honestly and faithfully at the general election, isn't it? A. Very hard, indeed.

Q. And in going over the list with Mr. Jones, that was your attempt—to get that kind of men? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was the reason you went over the matter a considerable number of times and went back and forth relative to each person seeking appointment? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say you heard Mr. Doran was buying votes at the election? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you hear how many, or did you hear whether it was a general or common thing, or whether he had only bought one or two? A. I can't tell as to the number. I say it was simply reported to me that Mr. Doran was doing that business.

Q. It was reported to you by people who were there on the committee, and whose business it was to attend to anything of the kind? A. No, sir; my brother told me, but it was common talk there that that thing was being done.

Q. It was common talk there that that thing was being done, and that Mr. Doran was the man that was doing it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say you were active up there for the Republican party and active for Mr. Banks, and in the interest of Mr. Morrow in the last campaign. Did you receive any money from Mr. Banks?

MR. CLUNIE: I don't claim that he did. I will admit that he did not. I don't think that Mr. Campbell did. It can go on record that I don't think Mr. Campbell was paid for his services at all.

THE WITNESS: I want to say another thing, that Mr. Lynch never received anything at all.

MR. CLUNIE: I don't want you to go any further, but as to Mr. Lynch I am the least bit doubtful about him.

LOUIS PISTOLISI.

A witness on behalf of respondent, was duly sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Where do you reside, Mr. Pistolisi? Answer—I live at 1126½ Filbert.

Q. How long have you lived there? A. Going on about six months now.

Q. How long have you lived in this city? A. All my life.

Q. You were born and raised here? A. I was born and raised here.

Q. Where were you on election day? A. I was in the Fourth Precinct of the Thirty-fourth.

Q. What position, if any, did you occupy there? A. Additional Inspector.

Q. As Additional Inspector, what duties did you perform there? A. I attended to the ballot boxes there certain parts of the day.

Q. About what part of the day? A. About half, I guess.

Q. It is the duty of the Additional Inspector to relieve the original Inspector and to take the ballots when he was absent? A. Yes, sir.

Q. The duty of an Inspector at an election is to receive the ballot from the voter and to deposit it in the box in the presence of everybody? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Judges examine the name while that is being done? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is the duty which an Inspector discharges at the polls? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What time of day were you acting as Inspector? A. I was acting sometimes in the morning; sometimes in the afternoon. I don't remember the hours.

Q. Who was there when you were not there? A. William Harman.

Q. Do you know a man by the name of George Ryan? A. Yes, sir; I do.

Q. How long have you known him? A. I don't know exactly how long I have known him. I have known him a pretty good while.

Q. You have known him a number of years? A. Yes, sir; I have known him a number of years.

Q. How long have you seen him there? A. Pretty often.

Q. He was a man whose face you are very familiar with, and about whom you would not be likely to be mistaken? A. No, sir; I would not.

Q. You were present in this Court when George Ryan testified, a few days ago, were you? A. I was; yes, sir.

Q. He is the same one? A. He is the same man.

Q. Were you present at the polls, acting as Inspector, about three or four o'clock? A. I was in the afternoon, but don't exactly know what time it was. I know I was there certain hours in the afternoon.

Q. How often was Ryan around the polls during election day? A. I am positive I saw him around there three times anyway, during the day.

Q. What was he doing? A. I don't know exactly what he was doing, except in one instance I am pretty positive of.

Q. He was a pretty active Democrat around there, was he not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And one of his duties was rustling up voters during the last election? A. That I am pretty sure of.

Q. That was what he was around there for? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And about three or four o'clock in the afternoon, but you can't be positive as to the exact time, you saw him at the polls? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was with him? A. The first time I saw him there, I didn't see anybody with him. He came around and looked around and walked off. The next time he came down again and I saw him standing around, and I am pretty positive Mr. Maxwell was there also.

By MR. CLUNIE: Which Maxwell do you refer to? A. This William Maxwell over here [indicating William Maxwell], and there was a gentleman come up and I believe his name was Thomas Barry. I looked at him, and he didn't strike me as being the gentleman, because he had on a hard working suit of clothes, and it was just the hour he should be working, and he was a baker and I didn't notice flour on him, and he come up to the polls there, and I saw Ryan and Maxwell standing there.

Q. You think Maxwell was there? A. Yes, sir, he was there; and I saw him standing there; and I thought, "This man cannot be Thomas Barry."

Q. Had you known Thomas Barry? A. No, I didn't know him: so I asked him, "Are you sure your name is Thomas Barry?" so that created a giggle among the Clerks in the room there, and Mr. Ryan poked his head up and said, "That is all right; that is Mr. Barry; that is all right; he is Mr. Barry." I said, "All right, if you say so, in she goes," and I put the ballot in the box.

Q. Was the man challenged? A. No, sir; he was not.

Q. Did Mr. Ryan, when he said, "This is Mr. Barry," say anything about his living in his house? A. No; he didn't say anything about his living in his house. He said, "That is all right; his name is Barry."

Q. That is all he said? A. That is all.

Q. You say you are not positive whether Maxwell was present or not? A. No, I am not positive.

Q. What is your best impression about that? A. My best impression is that he was there, and I know one time he came in the morning.

Q. What was that occasion? A. One of the Marshals' brothers was there, and he came up to vote, and I saw Maxwell with him too, and that struck me as strange, Maxwell rushing those fellows around.

Q. You thought it was a little bit peculiar Maxwell was rushing fellows up to vote? A. Yes, sir; and I thought he had voted already, and I said in a joke, "You have voted already, haven't you?" And his brother happened to come down, and stood there a few minutes, and I had the man's ballot in my hand, and I said, "You have voted already, haven't you," and he turned around to the Clerk, and just as he gave the name to the Clerk, his brother came up and pulled him away, and said, "You have voted already," and so he pulled him out.

Q. And Mr. Maxwell brought him up? A. I don't know whether he brought him up, but I see him come down with him.

Q. Did he talk with him? A. I didn't see him talk with him.

Q. The fact that his brother took him away the second time, and the fact that he said he had voted already, raised your suspicion, did it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then, in the afternoon, when Ryan appeared and went away, and the person came back, you thought it was a circumstance sufficient to cause you to ask him if his name was Barry? A. Yes, sir; the reason I did that was because Mr. Smiley told me to particularly look out for Maxwell and Ryan. Those two, in particular.

Q. You had instructions to look out for Maxwell and Ryan? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that they were liable to do this kind of business? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were on your guard against them? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were present in Court the other day, you say, when Ryan testified? A. I was.

Q. At that time, the question was asked Mr. Ryan whether you were present at the time this occurrence transpired, was it not? A. I don't think it was asked him about my being present. I don't think you asked him the question if I was present.

Q. Your name was mentioned and Mr. Maxwell's name was mentioned in the testimony. Did you have any conversation with Maxwell immediately upon adjournment of the Court and before you got out of the room? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Tell us what it was, will you? A. I suppose he surmised I was going to testify from the question you asked Ryan, because I was sitting alongside of you, and he come up to me and said, "Look here, Pistolisi, if you go on the stand and testify, I am going to have you arrested for perjury," and I said, "You cannot do it, because I will tell the truth and what I know is positive," and he started in to say he would bet $20 that he was not around there, and I said, "I am positive you were there." Then Mr. Smith came up and said, "That is right, Pistolisi, don't stand any bluff," and they walked out in the corridor and had it out.

Q. In other words, the attempt was made to bulldoze you from giving your testimony? A. I guess that was what it was done for.

Q. And it was done in the Court-room before you got out of the place? A. Yes; I don't know what it was done for.

Q. You didn't get intimidated very extensively? A. No, I don't think I did.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: What is your business? A. I am solicitor for my brother Frank at present, in the coffee and tea business.

Q. Where is his place of business? A. I think it is 1310 Stockton and Broadway—a tea store.

Q. You don't know the number of your brother's place of business and you are working for him? A. I think it is 1310 Stockton Street, but it is not necessary for me to know his number if I went to solicit for him.

Q. What do you do? A. I go to them and find out whether they want coffee or not, and then I take them up to my brother and introduce them.

Q. Then you know where his store is? A. Certainly, but I don't know the number.

Q. How long have you been soliciting for your brother? A. About two months.

Q. What were you doing before that? A. In business for myself.

Q. What business? A. In the coffee and tea business.

Q. How long? A. About eight years.

Q. In the same place? A. No; higher up the street.

Q. How long were you in that place? A. About three years.

Q. Where were you in business? A. Across the street.

Q. You have been a pretty active politician, haven't you? A. Oh, no.

Q. Except this last time? A. This last time I took an interest in politics.

Q. You didn't take a bit of interest in the world before? A. Not a bit in the world.

Q. How did you come to get in the polling place? A. I was going to try to go to the convention on the Republican ticket as a reform candidate—as reform party; and Mike Berry came to me—that was why I wanted to get—and he was fighting for the nomination, and he said Banks wanted to get the nomination, and he said Banks was the old party, and he was the reform party, and I told him I would run—I was a pretty strong man down there, and I would run. I got my tickets out and Frank Hussey was in that precinct, and he said he was in favor of Barry and had withdrawn for him, and Hussey said, "I will go down and get your tickets, and we will go down and make a fight, and we will win the precinct." I said, "All right," and still I hadn't any suspicion of him, and I went up and told Barry, and Barry said, "I would not go a cent on him; I wouldn't trust him, on account of some things I heard before." He came down on primary day about twelve o'clock—

Q. All I want to know is how you came to get in the polling place? A. I am going to explain the whole business to you—just exactly how I got in. Mr. Hussey said, "You need not go down until about half-past twelve;" so I went down and found that Pete Rector was running, and he was away home, and Hussey was running Rector. And I said, "How is Pete Rector running?" And he said, "I cannot help you; it is the orders from headquarters." I said, "From where?" He said Mr. Smiley and Higgins and Banks, all had ordered. I said, "You promised to support Mike Barry always;" and he said, "Well, I cannot help it." I said, "Who is going to get this nomination?" He said, "Well, Banks will get it. I think." And I said, "You let Banks get it and I will get out and do all I can against him." I started in as soon as Banks got the nomination for Senator, and I got all my friends I could see and speak to, to vote against Banks on the day of election. So Schottler was running on the Republican ticket for the Assembly from the Thirty-third District, I believe, and I met him in the stable of Arata, I believe; and I told Hussey then we were going to get out and knife Banks. So he said, "Well, you don't want to go in and do that." I said, "I am going to do it, all the same." A couple of days after that, George Williams came up to me—and he is a personal friend of mine, and belongs to the Druids with me, and the Legion of the West, and other orders—and he said, "I have done favors for you and I want to have you do a favor for me." I said, "What is that?" He said, "Banks is a particular friend of mine, and I want you to do all you can for him." I said, "I have got out and done all I could to cut him." He said, "Well, get out and do work." And I said, "Look at the work he did against me down at the Republican primary." So he said Hussey did that, and he would bring Banks up and explain it. So next day he did bring Banks up, and I said I did not go much on Banks. So I let that go, and Mr. Smiley came up next day, and he explained the whole thing to me, and told me it was not Mr. Banks' fault, but it was Hussey's fault.

By MR. DORN: Mr. Smiley lives up in that precinct, does he? A. Yes, sir; Mr. Smiley lives up in that precinct. So he says, "Pistolisi, I have relied on you to go down there to the polls as Inspector and watch the polls, because they are going to defraud the Republican party out of votes down there." And I said, "I don't know whether I will do it or not, Mr. Smiley; I will let you know next day." So when Mr. Smiley came in the store—I don't know whether it was in the store or I went down to his office or not—so he said, "How is it going to stand?" So I said, "I guess I will get in and work for Banks and try and undo the work I did against him." So he said, "All right; you come down to my office to-morrow." So I did that, and he told me he would put me in the place as Additional Inspector, and he gave me instructions then, "You want to watch not only Maxwell and Ryan both, but watch them all—watch the whole business." So I said, "I will go down and get Banks and introduce him to my friends." And he said, "All right," and I went after Banks, and I fixed a day, and I took him up and introduced him personally to all my friends and asked them to vote for him.

By MR. CLUNIE: Now you are through, are you? A. No, sir. Are you satisfied?

Q. If you are through, I want to ask you a question. At the Republican primary, you say you never mixed in politics? A. No, sir.

Q. You were not taking an active part? A. No, sir.

Q. That is not taking an active part? A. You said I was an active politician, and I said no.

Q. You wouldn't call that that you have been telling us here—this string for the last half hour—as taking an active part? A. No, sir.

Q. What do you think is taking an active part? A. I don't think a man is fit to take an active part in it unless he knows all about it, and I have only been in it a few days, and don't know anything about it.

Q. You expected to become experienced in two or three years? A. Well, in three years I thought I would be experienced. I thought I would know the ins and outs of the thing three years from that.

Q. And it is in pursuance of that ambition, isn't it, that you have been hanging around this Court-room for the last couple of weeks? A. I had nothing particular to do, and I thought I would come around and listen to these cases. I was told I would be a witness, and I didn't know what time I was going to be called.

Q. Didn't you know you wouldn't be called until my case was done? A. Well, how did I know when that was? You were going to end it one day and then you were going to end it another.

Q. You have been following me around two or three times, haven't you? A. No, sir.

Q. Weren't you in Judge Burke's Court when I was in there? A. Wasn't I in there before you got in there, too?

Q. You were in there two or three times, weren't you? A. I was in once when you were there.

Q. You were in there twice? A. Twice: yes, sir.

Q. Did you have any object in watching me? A. I think there is lots of other men I can watch besides you.

Q. Then you are always busy soliciting for your brother and find time not only to stay when this case was going on, but two or three days when this testimony was not going on you were in the other Court-rooms? A. Did I tell you I was busy soliciting?

Q. Yes. A. No, I didn't say anything of the kind. You asked me what I was doing and I said I was soliciting for my brother.

THE COURT: Just answer the question properly.

By MR. CLUNIE: How often did you solicit? A. I might not for a week, and then I might get out and rustle for all I was worth.

Q. When did you solicit last? A. About three weeks ago.

Q. Whom did you solicit from then? A. I went up and got a couple of families up on Filbert Street for my brother.

Q. Who were the families? A. Skivo.

Q. Where does Skivo live? A. On Filbert Street.

Q. Whereabouts on Filbert Street? A. Between Dupont and Kearny.

Q. Was there anybody else? A. There was a lady upstairs, and her daughter.

Q. What are their names? A. I don't know.

Q. Did they buy some coffee? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much did the two families get? A. We get a customer and they buy a week from them.

Q. How much did they buy? A. Each one of them bought a pound of coffee. I just answered that question to accommodate you. That is all.

Q. Three weeks ago those people bought two pounds of coffee, did they? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was your commission on that? A. I got a dollar apiece on them.

Q. Then in three weeks you made a dollar off from them? A. I made two dollars.

Q. You made two dollars in three weeks? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you get any others? A. That is none of your business.

THE COURT: You will be kind enough to remember you are in Court and answer the questions properly.

MR. CLUNIE: What other business are you engaged in? A. I won't tell you what other business I am in.

THE COURT: Answer the question. A. Well, in common language, surveyor of the public streets.

Q. A sort of a street-walker? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much have you made as street-walker?

MR. DORN: I object to that question.

THE COURT: That is hardly a proper question. The witness did not say that he was a street-walker. That was not his language, and you were hardly justified in using the language to him. You need not answer that question.

THE WITNESS: I can answer that question. I have saved ten cents in car fare.

By MR. CLUNIE: I want it noted that I except to your honors' ruling. You have not ruled up to this time.

THE COURT: No; I won't say that he need not answer. He declines to answer, and you asked us to instruct him to answer.

MR. CLUNIE: I want it to appear on the record that your honors have instructed the witness he need not answer, and that was the ruling and we excepted.

THE COURT: We have not so ruled. It is not a proper question. The witness declines to answer the question and you ask us to instruct him and we have refused.

MR. CLUNIE: Then you don't decline to answer? A. No, sir; I told you I saved ten cents every day; I saved car fare.

Q. Then that was your object walking around the street? A. I didn't say that.

Q. How much did you make in the last three weeks as surveyor of public streets? A. Do you want me to tell you how much?

Q. That is it; yes, sir. A. I don't know. All I made was saving car fare. That is all.

Q. Then all that you have really made in the last three weeks is two dollars? A. Oh, no. I guess I have saved a good deal more in car fare.

Q. Then all the money you have earned in three weeks is two dollars; is that right? A. Yes, sir; while I was doing nothing.

Q. Prior to the three weeks, where had you taken orders? A. I was going around getting orders in different restaurants for my brother.

Q. Does your brother keep an account of all the moneys he gives you? A. I don't know whether he does or not.

Q. Did you give him receipts for it? A. No, sir.

Q. You have received no money from anybody else? A. Yes, sir; I guess I have.

Q. Who else? A. My father.

Q. How much have you received from him? A. In the last three months about $400.

Q. As I understand it, from your statement here a little while ago, after the Republican primaries, you were opposed to Mr. Banks; is that right? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You went around telling people you intended to knife him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you did proceed to knife him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And your friend Williams came to you and asked you to stop? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you did not stop? A. Oh, yes, I stopped right there at the time.

Q. You stopped with Williams, did you? You stopped going against Banks for Williams, did you? A. Not exactly for that.

Q. Didn't you, in a long statement a few minutes ago, say that Williams came to you, and you told him you couldn't stop, and you wouldn't, and you said Mr. Smiley came to you afterward? A. I don't think I told him I couldn't stop.

Q. What did you say? A. I said I would see about it, George.

Q. What for? A. To find out whether it was Banks' fault that I was defeated down there.

Q. Did you investigate that? A. Oh, yes.

Q. How long after that did Mr. Smiley come and see you? A. The next day.

Q. Did you investigate it by the next day? A. Certainly; I can investigate it in two hours.

Q. Did you investigate it in two hours? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then Mr. Smiley came to you the next day? A. Yes, sir; Mr. Smiley was the last man to see—excuse me; I believe I saw Mr. Smiley a couple of days afterward, or the day after.

Q. Did you see Mr. Banks in the meantime, after Mr. Williams had been to see you? A. Before I saw Mr. Smiley?

Q. Yes, sir. A. No, I don't think I did.

Q. Don't you know whether you did or not? Will you swear that you did not? A. I don't think I did.

Q. Didn't you swear in this statement a moment ago that you had, and then Williams came to you, and then Banks came? A. Did I swear Banks came with Williams?

Q. Yes; in this long statement. You have not forgotten that already, have you? A. No, I don't think I have. Yes, sir; Banks did come up to me next day. The day after I saw Banks I saw Mr. Smiley.

Q. Then you saw Mr. Banks the day after you saw Williams? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You and Banks had a talk then? A. We had a talk just how that primary took effect—just how it was done.

Q. Just tell us what Banks said? A. When Banks came up Williams introduced me and said, "Pistolisi, this is Mr. Banks," and I commenced to laugh. I was told he was small, you know, but I didn't think he was that small. I commenced to laugh, and George Williams says, "Now, Pistolisi, he has been explaining the whole business, just what was done; say whether it was his fault or not." I said, "Well, if Banks can explain to my satisfaction that he had nothing to do with the precinct down there, I will stop right here." I might not go any further. Then Williams says, "It ain't that. Pistolisi: now if he explains to your satisfaction, just promise me right here that you will get out and do work for him." I said, "George, I won't let you know right away." He said, "Why," and I said,

“There is another party concerned in it.” Then he said, “Who,” and I said, “Mr. Smiley.” So Mr. Banks told me and explained to my entire satisfaction that he had nothing to do with it. So I said, “I will see Mr. Smiley now and see if he can explain it to my entire satisfaction.” So next day Mr. Smiley came up to the store, I believe it was—or I don’t know whether I went to see him—and I asked Mr. Smiley about it, and he told me Mr. Banks had nothing to do with it, and I said, “Mr. Smiley, I will go down and tell Mr. Williams I will help Banks.”

Q. You told Mr. Smiley the day he came to see you that you would see Mr. Williams and tell him you would help Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then you were a little wrong in this long statement you made a little while ago, where you said Mr. Smiley came to you the next day, and you said you told him the next day, and the next day you would go down to his office? A. No, I don’t think I did.

Q. You don’t think you said that? A. No, I don’t think I did. I don’t think I told him. I am pretty positive I told Williams I wouldn’t give him an answer that day, but I would see him another day.

Q. But I asked you about the conversation between yourself and Mr. Smiley. You testified a moment ago that you and Mr. Smiley had a conversation, and one day another? A. Mr. Smiley didn’t ask me to take charge of the precinct the first day; no, sir.

Q. Didn’t you swear a moment ago he told you that? A. On the first day I met him? No, sir.

Q. If the record shows that you made that statement it is wrong then, is it? A. Yes, sir.

By MR. DORN: That is, it is wrong, if there is any such statement? A. Yes, sir; if there is any such statement, because I told him he did not the first day.

By MR. CLUNIE: What did Mr. Smiley say the first day he came to you? A. He explained to me how that precinct was conducted down there—how that it was not Banks’ doings, but it was Hussey’s own doings, and that he wanted the nomination.

Q. Did he ask you to get in and help Banks? A. He heard I was out knifing him, and he told me that it was wrong to do that.

Q. Then Mr. Smiley told you what? A. If you will let me get through, I will explain the whole business to you.

Q. Go ahead. A. He said: “It was wrong, Pistolisi. Now you can see there is a man that is innocent of the whole business. He had nothing to do with it. It was Frank Hussey’s fault, and here you have been out knifing that man.” I said, “Well, it is done;” and he said, “The only thing you can do is to get in and undo the whole business.” So I said I would go down and see Williams, and get in and undo the whole business.

Q. So there was nothing said about the Republican precincts at that time? A. No, sir; I don’t think there was.

Q. If you swore to that a few minutes ago, you are mistaken? A. I guess I was. I might have been mistaken.

Q. Did Mr. Smiley tell you to come down to his office? A. I don’t remember now whether he did or not.

Q. If you testified to that a few minutes ago, were you mistaken? A. No; I am confident if I testified to the fact it is the truth. If I testified to the fact it is the truth.

Q. How will you testify on it now? Did he tell you to come down to his office? A. He told me quite a number of times to come down to his office.

Q. In the conversation with him that day regarding Banks, did he tell you to come down to his office next day? A. Yes, sir; I think he did.

Q. Did he, or did he not? A. He either told me to come down to his office or he was coming up to see me.

Q. Which did he tell you? A. I guess he did tell me to come down to his office.

Q. That is right, then? A. Yes, sir; that is right.

Q. Then you were mistaken a little while ago when you said that was all that occurred? A. A man can't remember every bit of the conversation. You asked me what Mr. Smiley told me, and what Mr. Banks, and you didn't ask me about my own business and Mr. Smiley's business.

Q. Did you and Mr. Smiley have any private business? No; not to amount to a row of pins.

Q. What was the private business with you and Mr. Smiley? A. The most that could have been private must have been to come down to his office.

Q. He told you to come down there on private business? A. On private business, exactly.

Q. What did he tell you to come down to his office for? A. Probably he told me to come down to his office so as to put me in this precinct, or something.

Q. Didn't you know what you were going down to his office for? A. I think he told me to come down to his office after I told him I would go down and see George Williams and tell him what I did do—no, I think he told me to come down to his office after I saw him.

Q. What did he tell you to come down there for? A. How do I know what he wanted me for?

Q. Did he say anything about the precinct? A. I don't remember.

Q. Can't you remember that? You remember all the other conversation. Why can't you remember that? A. I don't know exactly whether he told me that or not.

Q. You swore a moment ago that he did tell you he wanted you in the Precinct Board. Did he tell you that, or not? A. If I testified to the fact, he must certainly have told me.

Q. I ask you now, and you must remember it now as well as before, did he tell you that? A. If I testified to that fact, it must be so.

Q. Did he, or did he not, tell you he wanted you to go on the Republican Precinct Board?

MR. DORN: You mean at that particular time, when he had the first conversation, whether he asked him to go in the Precinct Board, the first time he had the conversation?

MR. CLUNIE: No. Just ask the question the way I asked it.

[Here the reporter reads counsel's previous question as follows: "You swore a moment ago that he did tell you he wanted you in the Precinct Board. Did he tell you that or not?"]

MR. DORN: I ask you to explain to the witness at which time you refer to.

MR. CLUNIE: I ask the Court to instruct the witness to answer that question.

MR. DORN: I ask that the witness' attention be directed to which of the conversations.

THE COURT: The question is susceptible of an answer in that form.

[Here the reporter again reads the question.]

A. Certainly he told me that.

By MR. CLUNIE: You are sure of that? A. Positive of it.

Q. You swore a few moments ago, didn't you, that he did not tell you anything about it the time of this first conversation? Which is correct?

A. This last statement I testified to is perfectly correct.

Q. The statement you made a few minutes ago about the first conversation is wrong? A. You didn't ask me about the first conversation.

Q. Will you swear you didn't say a few minutes ago he didn't say anything about the Precinct Board? A. You asked me the question—

Q. [Interrupting.] Did you say a few minutes ago that nothing was said between you and Mr. Smiley about the Precinct Board? A. No; I don't think I did.

MR. DORN: That is what he swears now; he swears it was the last conversation.

MR. CLUNIE: No, he don't.

Q. Just answer the question; you don't think he swore to that? A. No.

Q. If you did swear to it, you are mistaken, are you? A. To my saying that he didn't ask me about it?

Q. Yes. He did ask you about it, didn't he? A. He must have asked me about it.

Q. If you swore he didn't ask you about it, then you are mistaken, are you not? A. I don't know whether I would be mistaken or not.

Q. Don't you know whether you were mistaken or not if he did say it? If he did say it, and you swore that he did not, you must necessarily have been mistaken, must you not? A. In the conversation I had with Mr. Smiley about Mr. Banks at that time, he didn't say nothing about the Precinct Board.

Q. He didn't say it? A. No, sir.

Q. Now, you say he did not? A. No, sir; that is in the first conversation, right there.

Q. A minute ago, in response to the question read to you by the reporter, you answered that Mr. Smiley then spoke to you about going into the the Republican Precinct Board? A. The question you asked me then was, you said, "Didn't Mr. Smiley speak to you about going in the Election Board?" and you didn't ask me what day or anything else.

Q. You are positive, now, that nothing was said in the first conversation about the Precinct Board? A. Not what I call the first conversation.

Q. What was the first conversation? A. At the time I explained about Mr. Banks and everything else. He went outside, and I think it was ten or fifteen minutes, and he came back again.

Q. Then, it was the Precinct Board? A. Yes, sir, then.

Q. It was during the same day, wasn't it? A. Yes, sir; it was during the same day.

Q. And at the same place? A. No; I think it was not in the same place; I think it was outside the store.

Q. But outside the store? A. Well, all around the store.

Q. Don't you know that, as a matter of fact, that was what caused you to let Banks alone: the promise of Mr. Smiley to put you in the Precinct Board? A. No, sir; it was nothing of the kind.

Q. Wasn't it that? A. No, sir; I am not positive of that.

Q. Before that, you had been out hollering for Sullivan? A. No, sir; I was not hollering. I just told my friends not to vote for Banks.

Q. Hadn't you been a Democrat before that? A. No, sir.

Q. You never had anything to do with Democrats before that? A. I never had anything to do with politics.

Q. Did Mr. Banks promise you anything? A. No, sir; Mr. Banks never made a promise to me.

Q. Did he agree to do anything for any member of your family? A. No, sir; he did not.

Q. You are positive of that? A. I am positive of that.

Q. Not at all. A. Not at any time.

Q. Did he promise to do anything else for you? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you go up to the Governor with Mr. Banks? A. No, sir.

Q. Are you sure of that? A. I am positive.

Q. Did you ever suggest to Mr. Banks that you had a favor you wanted from the Governor? A. No, sir.

Q. And that you are positive of? A. I am positive.

Q. You never suggested it to anybody? A. No, sir.

Q. You say Mr. Maxwell was there with this Ryan that you referred to? That is the gentleman sitting there [indicating]? A. That is the gentleman, yes.

Q. And you swear positively that Maxwell was there with that man Ryan when he voted? A. I didn't swear positive, did I?

Q. I understood you to. You swore the statement he made there was wrong? Do you swear positively, under oath, that Maxwell and that man over there were there? A. I am. I swear positively that Ryan was there, and I am sure of it.

Q. You are sure of it? A. Yes, sir; I am sure of it.

Q. Are you sure Maxwell was there? A. I am not sure; but, in my opinion, I think I glanced at his face when he was standing there.

Q. You were acting as Clerk at the time? A. Yes.

Q. Who were the Clerks? A. The only clerk I know was a Republican, and that was Corbett.

Q. What time of day was that? A. I don't remember what time of day it was. I had been off and on, and sometimes I would stay half an hour, and then Harman would come back, and he would stay half an hour, and I would come off.

Q. In the afternoon or the morning? A. I don't know. I am inclined to think it was afternoon.

Q. The only reason that caused you to think it was Barry was that he had on no baker's clothes? A. I saw Ryan and that was what aroused my suspicion first, and it seemed to me as if he was a bricklayer, the kind of clothes he had on, and I was a baker myself one time, and I knew very well I couldn't come right out of the shop without having some flour on me.

Q. Who employed you to work as Inspector there, Mr. Smiley? A. Mr. Smiley; yes, sir.

Q. Was he the County Committeeman? A. He was the County Committeeman; yes, sir.

Q. Was he attending to all that business there? A. I don't know what Mr. Smiley's business was.

Q. What agreement did he make with you with regard to pay? A. He didn't make any agreement.

Q. How much did you get? A. I got six dollars, and I sold my warrant and got five dollars.

Q. Did you work longer than three days? A. I worked longer, but that was all the law allowed.

Q. And you received no money from any candidate? A. No, sir.

Q. And you received no money from Banks? A. No, sir.

Q. And you received no money from any one on his behalf? A. No, sir.

Q. And no money was paid? A. I stayed there on behalf of the Republican County Committee. No, sir.

Q. There was a promise to give you a place? A. No, sir.

Q. Banks never made any promise of that kind to you? A. No, sir.

Q. Did anybody on his behalf? A. No, sir.

Q. He didn't take you up to the man that had the power to fill the places? A. He took me up to the man, but he didn't make me any promise.

Q. What did he take you up for? A. He took me to Mr. Higgins and he said, "Now, if you want to watch at the precinct, Mr. Higgins will tell you how to work."

Q. Then the County Committee didn't give you these instructions? A. No, sir.

By MR. DORN: Where was that? A. Down at the State Central Committee rooms. Mr. Banks took me down and introduced me to Mr. Higgins, saying, "This is one of the men that was out knifing me before, and now he is going to try to help me out, and the reason he came down is that he wants to get a few instructions;" and I said, "I am a green hand at this business, and I don't know how to do this business, and the best way I know is to take Banks around from house to house and introduce him to each one of my friends."

Q. Banks told you he didn't know how? A. I didn't know Banks before, or know what he was.

Q. You didn't take your instructions from Mr. Smiley, then? A. I certainly told you Mr. Smiley told me to look out particularly for Maxwell and Ryan.

Q. These were the only instructions you got from Mr. Smiley? A. Those were the only instructions I got from Mr. Smiley.

Q. All the rest of your instructions you got from Mr. Higgins? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Mr. Higgins was the man in charge of the whole business? A. I don't know. I heard of Mr. Higgins for years and that he was pretty smart, and I thought I would go down and get information from him.

Q. And Mr. Higgins was the one that instructed you what to do? A. He told me what to do, some, yes. Then I could go round and see what votes I could get for the whole ticket from top to bottom.

Q. Banks didn't tell you how to get votes? A. No, sir.

Q. But he told you Higgins would tell you how to get them? A. No, sir; he didn't tell me anything about Higgins at all. I told Banks I wanted to go up and see Mr. Higgins.

Q. What passed between you and Mr. Higgins? A. He just told me how to go from house to house and make an honest fight, and that I was not like the balance of them to go round and make a saloon fight, and he said, "The best thing you can do is to go out and get the register—one of the old ones will do, and go from house to house, and if Banks is with you introduce him from house to house, and if Banks ain't with you, speak to them about him and praise Banks up a bit." So I said I could do that; I was pretty well acquainted in the precinct. And I took Banks up to the store in the precinct, and I introduced him to some of my Italian friends, and I said, "Now, I will go down in some of the alleys where they speak Italian, and they wouldn't like to be interrupted, so I will go down there." And I took Banks' cards down there and I spoke to these Italians, and I went then, when I got through there, to my precinct, and I went to most of the houses there, and especially round where I live, and Maxwell was around several, and especially Ward, making a fight for Sullivan, and they were seeing the old Republicans especially, and I got in and got them to promise to vote for Banks. That was all, and that was the reason I wanted to see Mr. Higgins.

Q. So you didn't think Banks was competent to give you instructions? A. I didn't know; I didn't know Banks at the time. I heard he was a candidate, and that was all.

Q. And you didn't say anything to Mr. Higgins about there going to be some vacancies to fill? A. No, sir.

Q. And that was not stated by Banks or Higgins to you? A. No, sir.

Q. And it was not mentioned that you were to be taken care of in case of victory? A. I might have stated that to get around those Italians. You have got to state anything to them to get a vote. All I told them was, I said, "Here, my friends, you want to vote for this man here, and you will do me a personal favor, and it will yield to my interest; now, you vote for him."

Q. You didn't tell them you were going to get a place? A. I don't know whether I did tell them I was going to get a place or not. If I did, I lied.

Q. Will you swear you didn't tell numerous Italians up in the Twenty-first District that you had the promise of a place to work if Banks was elected, and you wanted them to get in and help you work? A. No, sir; I never told them I had promises.

Q. You did not? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you tell them you were to be put to work? A. I might have told them I was, in order to get the votes.

Q. You had no foundation for that? A. No, sir; I had no foundation for it.

Q. You went around falsifying to these people to get votes for Banks? A. You have got to tell them most anything in politics.

Q. And you did do that? A. Well, perhaps I did. I didn't say I did or I did not.

Q. You went around doing it for Banks? A. Not Banks, exactly.

Q. Did you tell them to vote for the whole Republican ticket? A. Not specially.

Q. Why did you select Banks? A. Because Williams asked me to do it, and because I had got out and started in to knife Banks, and went to all these friends before and told them to vote against him. When I see the man was innocent of all wrong I accused him of doing, of course, it was natural for me to get out and do all I could.

Q. You had no promises? A. No, sir.

Q. Williams never made you any? A. No, sir.

Q. He never told you that he would take care of that contract you had made? A. No, sir.

Q. He never at any time told you that? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know Guinassa, that lives up in Bannon Place? A. No, I don't know the name; I don't know the name. I might know the man.

Q. He lives at No. 11 Bannon Place? A. I don't know that place. I might know the street but I don't know the name of the street.

Q. You called off some ballots in that precinct when they were counting, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You didn't make any mistake, did you? A. I made one mistake.

Q. What was that? A. I think it was McIntyre's name I skipped. I was pretty sleepy and I happened to skip it.

Q. You didn't skip Russell, did you? A. No, sir; I don't think I did.

Q. It was just accident that you happened to skip McIntyre? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Kelly, who was running for Sheriff, have an accident up there? A. That might have been the name; I told you I was not there. I told you there was only one name I skipped.

Q. Didn't you skip it a couple of times? A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. Didn't you skip Mr. Kelly's name twice? A. On the same ballot?

Q. Yes, sir. A. No, sir.

Q. Wasn't your attention called to it? A. Attention was called? They were trying and getting me to read that wrong. We had no Board to call off our ballots; we had no Board, rules, or anything else, and all we had to do was to take the ballots in our hands.

Q. Then the count up there is liable to be very inaccurate? A. No, sir; not as far as I am concerned.

Q. How do you know, if you had no Board? A. Because my attention would have been called to it if I had skipped any names.

Q. Then you were pretty correct in your count? A. Certainly I was pretty correct. I only made one mistake that I know of, and my attention was called to that.

Q. And your attention was called to that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You remember only one name? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you are sure he was a Democrat? A. Yes, sir.

Redirect Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Was your attention called to that? A. Yes, sir; just one name.

Q. Somebody read out that name and you looked and it was rectified? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you do that intentionally or accidentally? A. No, sir; it was accidentally.

Q. And there was no other name skipped? A. No, sir.

Q. You didn't intend to skip that name? A. No, sir.

Q. You had no desire to defraud him out of any vote? A. No, sir.

Q. And you called the votes out honestly? A. Yes, sir. There was another thing I noticed. In fact, as I read the law all through pretty near, the ballot was marked "O. K." on the bottom, and I paid no attention to it at the time, and the law said, if you can identify the caster of the ballot—and I didn't know him—and I started in and read it out and got a few of the electors out, and they said, "You can't read that ballot," and I said, "I can," and Maxwell went to make a snatch for the ballot and took it off and I got it again.

Q. Maxwell was not an officer at all? A. He was in the other precinct.

Q. And he had no right to touch that ballot then? A. No, sir.

Q. He was a United States Marshal? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he have a United States Marshal's badge on? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He and most of the firemen in that district had United States Marshal's badges on, didn't they? A. A good many of them did.

Q. As a matter of fact, wasn't it the habit of most all of the firemen in that district to have United States Marshal's badges on? A. I don't know that.

Q. There was a good many of them? A. Yes, sir; there was a good many firemen there.

Q. About how many people were there in the room at the time? A. One time there was when the room was packed, and one gentleman said he would throw them out?

Q. And they were creating a disturbance? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it was difficult to go on with the business? A. Yes, sir. One time Mr. Corbett and myself were about the only Republicans in there, and I don't know what they were trying to do with the ballot box, and I sent off word for Williams, and he didn't come up, and I sent out again, and so Williams and Captain Smith came up, and as soon as they came up and all the Republicans, why all the Democrats went right out.

Q. The second morning after election about how many of these gentlemen connected with the Fire Department congregated in that precinct there? Did you see Pete Fleming there? A. Oh, yes; he came up there.

Q. Did you see George Maxwell there? A. George Maxwell? I don't know whether he came up the second morning or not.

Q. Did you see Denny Sullivan, District Engineer? A. I don't know their names, but there were quite a number of firemen up there that I know by sight, but I don't know their names.

Q. Didn't Mr. Sullivan and Denny Sullivan drive up in a buggy, and didn't they see a disturbance going on, and get out? A. There was somebody came up, and somebody stood——

Q. You saw John J. Sullivan, the contestant in this case, there, didn't you? A. Oh, yes, sir.

Q. And William Maxwell? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was the crowd that was raising the disturbance? A. They did not create a disturbance, because I kept my temper down, but they tried to. Once in a while they would nudge me, and say I was calling the ballot wrong, and there was one young man that I saw round here, and he was in the place quite a while, and it was pretty difficult to get him out of the place.

Q. Wasn't Mr. Callaghan, the one who has been round here, the one? A. I don't know the gentleman's name. He is a stout young fellow.

Q. Heavy set? A. Yes. He is around here every day.

Q. You live at home with your father and mother, do you not? A. No, sir; I am living with my wife, up at 1126½ Filbert street.

Q. You have a father living over in that same district, have you not? A. On Hyde and Vallejo, yes.

Q. And you have a brother in business over there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. For him you worked? A. Yes, sir; I worked for him, going around soliciting whenever I want to make anything.

Q. You say one of the reasons why you were active trying to help out Banks, as well as the Republican ticket, was because you felt you had done him an injustice? A. Yes, sir; as I felt.

Q. How did you discover you had done him this injustice? A. It was through Mr. Schottler.

Q. You started in to knife Banks, or to do all you could against him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Because you thought he had assisted in defeating you at the primary election? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were a candidate for the Republican Convention? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were not successful? A. No, sir.

Q. And you believed Mr. Banks and Mr. Smiley had defeated you, and for that reason when Mr. Banks did receive the nomination, you started out to get even on him, in other words? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then Mr. Williams said to you that you were doing wrong; is that it? A. Mr. Arata and I were out knifing Banks; we were at the Union Restaurant—

Q. [Interrupting.] Well, you were told that you were mistaken? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that Banks had done nothing against you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Afterwards Mr. Banks came to see you, as I understand, and explained the fact to you, and assured you that he had not had anything to do with that precinct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. As a matter of fact, you afterwards discovered, and now know, that Banks had nothing to do with that precinct, one way or the other? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did not interfere with you or with any other man? A. No, sir.

Q. And Mr. Banks explained to your satisfaction, and you had a suspicion Mr. Smiley might have defeated you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you would not make any promise at all? A. I wouldn't make any binding promise to Mr. Smiley until it was explained to my satisfaction.

Q. Afterwards Mr. Smiley came to see you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Smiley lives up there, don't he? A. I think he lives up on Chestnut. He lives in my precinct, anyhow.

Q. He was the Republican County Committeeman at that time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He then came to you and explained, and then you were satisfied you had done wrong by Mr. Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was why you were anxious to undo the wrong and straighten the business out, as if you had done nothing against him? A. That is it.

Q. You are not hunting anything, are you? A. No, sir.

Q. You don't want any office? A. No, sir.

Q. You have no desire for office, and you have no candidate for office? A. No, sir.

Q. You simply took part in the election because you were not doing anything else? A. That is all.

Q. You were asked if the inducement that changed you from opposing Banks to favoring him was the appointment as an Inspector of Election. At the time you got that appointment you knew that the salary was only two dollars a day, didn't you? A. Certainly; that didn't change it at all.

Q. And you knew in all human probability you wouldn't get more than six dollars for your services? A. Certainly; I knew all that.

Q. You did not consider that as an inducement to change your position and support Banks? A. No, sir. I guess I just sold my business out, and I was not hard up.

Q. And Mr. Smiley saying he wanted you on the Precinct Board didn't have any influence on you, one way or the other, working for Banks? A. No, sir.

Q. The reason you worked for Banks was because you discovered you had done him a wrong? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are a Republican, are you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And have been all your life? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Ever since you voted? A. Yes, sir. Only when Mr. Smiley got my name—Rector took it in, I think—somehow he got it; out there at the Register Board he took my name.

Q. You say that in making your mind up there you discovered other people making their rounds for Sullivan? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were they going from house to house? A. No, I don't think they were, exactly.

Q. What were they doing? A. Asking some in the barroom to fight for Sullivan.

Q. Only walking around the barrooms asking people to vote for Sullivan? Hanging around? A. No, not hanging around; but they would be there and come up and ask people.

Q. You were not hanging around there; but you happened to be there? A. I know they happened to be there whenever I came in.

Q. You said you had a conversation with Mr. Higgins? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you happen to have that conversation? A. I saw Mr. Banks and told him I wanted him to take me up and introduce me to Mr. Higgins. He said, "what for?" I said, "well, I want a few explanations: I am a green hand in this business; I want to find out something about that."

Q. You had been up to the State Central Committee's rooms, had you not? A. Oh, yes; once in a while I had.

Q. And you had seen Mr. Higgins there in company with other Republicans? A. I had seen him up there, yes, sir.

Q. And you wanted to get some information as to how you should proceed? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you considered Mr. Higgins was posted in such matters and would tell you the best way to canvass that district? A. Yes, sir.

Q. It was at your request then, that you were introduced to him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And had this conversation? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you tell Mr. Higgins you wanted any office? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you tell Mr. Higgins you wanted any appointment? A. No, sir.

Q. Or that you wanted any for anybody? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you tell him you would go and do this work because you wanted it? A. No, sir.

Q. You thought the best way was to proceed and do what you could to undo what you had done against Mr. Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he gave you this advice? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I understood you told him that you did not desire to make a bar-room fight? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you didn't want to do it? A. No, sir.

Q. You wanted to know what was the most gentlemanly way to do it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he told you to go and introduce Mr. Banks where you could, and if he was not with you to leave his card? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever talk with any voter, or promise them anything for voting for Mr. Banks and the Republican ticket? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever tell them it would be to your advantage in any way? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever pay any money for voting the Republican ticket? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you have any money to do anything of that kind? A. No, sir.

Q. The only thing you did was to speak to your friends? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was to vote the Republican ticket? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And especially to vote for Banks, because you thought you had wronged him? A. Yes, sir.

Recross Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: You say this six dollars you did not care about. You were not hard up? A. I was not, sir; no.

Q. Yet you got this warrant and cashed it for five dollars. A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were not hard up? A. No, I was not hard up.

Q. Were you there on the day of election when the polls closed? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long did you wait before you got counting the ballots? A. Probably about five minutes.

Q. Did you at any time take a recess during the count of the ballots? A. At the time I was counting the ballots, the most recess we had was about five minutes.

Q. Did you ever hear that any recess was taken there in the Board? A. Yes, sir; I heard the Democratic Inspector there had a recess for about three hours in the morning.

Q. He is the one that took the recess? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I want to know if the Board took it? A. All I know is that the Democratic Inspector declared a recess and it was three hours before they went ahead.

Q. Then you do know that as a matter of fact? A. No, sir; not as a matter of fact.

Q. It was a rumor, then? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was the Democratic Inspector? A. Mr. Harman.

Q. And that occurred under him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You said a while ago there was Democrats in there creating trouble? A. I said they were trying to create trouble.

Q. How do you mean trying to? A. Jumping around, talking here and talking loud, so they couldn't hear in calling out names.

Q. Do you say you called in a policeman? A. No, sir; I did not. I said, "Boys, I don't want so much noise; I can't hear the names," and the policeman said, "If you want them thrown out, Mr. Inspector, I will throw them out."

Q. Give us the policeman's name? A. I don't know his name.

Q. Don't you know, as a matter of fact, that the law says you cannot do that, and they must be counted in the presence of the public? A. No, sir; the book didn't say that. These people disturbed the caller.

Q. What book did you read that in? A. There was a little book there.

Q. Did you act on that? A. No, sir.

Q. And you didn't throw anybody out? A. No, sir.

Q. And you can't tell me the policeman's name? A. No; I can bring him out.

Q. I wish you would. A. All right. One time he was going to throw somebody out, and I said, "Hold on: let him stay in here." I was not calling at the time, but Mr. Harman was calling at the time.

Q. Who said, "Let the boy alone?" A. He wanted to throw the boy out, and I think it was a Republican boy he wanted to throw out, and I said, "He is all right; leave him alone."

Q. Then you are the one that said that? A. Well, I think a whole lot of other fellows said that.

Q. When you said, "Leave him alone," he did it, didn't he? A. He didn't on mine particularly. Everybody said, "He don't want you to call off," when I was calling off, but they told me Harman was Inspector. When Mr. Harman was in, he went by Mr. Harman's orders.

Q. How do you know he did? A. I am pretty sure he did.

Q. You don't know whether Mr. Harman wanted anybody thrown out?
A. I don't know whether he did or not.

Q. You saw Mr. Banks there during the count, didn't you? You said you saw Mr. Sullivan there. Mr. Banks was there during the count, was he not? A. I don't know whether he came in the room.

Q. Wasn't he there? A. I know Mr. Banks was there.

Q. Wasn't he in the room? A. I don't know; I guess he was.

Q. Don't you know he was? A. I don't know. He was a candidate; I guess he ought to have been there.

[Here a recess was taken until two o'clock p. m.]

AFTERNOON SESSION.

LOUIS PISTOLESI.

Recalled for further Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: You swore this morning that you never met Governor Waterman, didn't you? Answer. Yes, sir.

Q. You didn't go around with him through the Italian quarter? A. No, sir.

Q. You are sure of that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Just as sure as you are of anything else you have testified to? A. Yes, sir.

Redirect Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Do you know a man named Mike Barry? A. I do.

Q. What are his politics? A. I don't know exactly. At one time he is a Democrat, then a Republican, then a Democrat again, and I don't know exactly what he is.

Q. At the last election, he was a Democrat, was he not? A. I don't know exactly. I know for one party he was intensely Democratic.

Q. What was that? A. The Senatorial fight.

Q. What did you see him do in the Senatorial fight? A. A couple of days before election he told me he was going to try and help Banks out, and the night before election I happened to be sitting up in the grocery store there, playing euchre with the boys, and Barry he walked in and he said, "Pistolesi, how is your fight?" And I said, "My work is finished," and he said, "Well, come on boys, let's go up and have a drink on Sullivan," so he threw a dollar on the table and we had a drink.

Q. On the day of election, do you know whether Barry was working for Sullivan or not? A. I don't know; I know he was that night, because he come in the bar.

LOUIS A. CAMPBELL.

A witness on behalf of respondent, was duly sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Q. How long have you lived in this city, Mr. Campbell?

A. Thirty-three years.

Q. Where were you at the last election? A. I was stationed on the west side of Mason Street, north of Pacific.

Q. In what capacity? A. I had charge of a table from which the Republican ballots were distributed.

Q. What was your business there? A. Simply to deliver to people that solicited ballots to them.

Q. To deliver Republican tickets? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had you any reason or any instructions to deliver anything but the straight Republican ticket? A. None whatever.

Q. You were employed there as what we call ticket peddler? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it was your business to supply persons who desired them with Republican tickets? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know a gentleman named Doran, a Deputy Sheriff? A. Perfectly well acquainted with him.

Q. He lives up in that precinct, and he is a pretty active politician? A. So recognized.

Q. He is a deputy in the Sheriff's office, is he? A. As I understand.

Q. You know him well, do you? A. For many years.

Q. If you saw him on the street or at any place, you would not be at all likely to be mistaken in his identity? A. I couldn't possibly be mistaken.

Q. You would recognize him and could not be mistaken? A. I could not.

Q. Did you see Mr. Doran on election day? A. I did.

Q. Where? A. About five or ten feet from where I was stationed.

Q. What was he doing there? A. He was speaking to three or four parties.

Q. What was he speaking to them about? A. I couldn't overhear the conversation.

Q. What did he do? Just give us in detail what he did exactly as it happened. A. I was sitting there quietly, and I saw a tall young man whom I don't know by name, with a white hat on.

Q. Would you know him if you saw him? A. I would.

Q. Look around the Court-room and see if you can find him. A. No. I have endeavored to find him, but he is not here. He come up with what we recognize in the vicinity as rounders. He told them to wait. He left their place and came back with Mr. Doran. Mr. Doran had a very brief conversation with him.

Q. The impression was that Mr. Doran was what he had gone for? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he came back and they were conversing together? A. It appeared to me so.

Q. He brought Doran to these people? A. He did.

Q. At the place where he told them to wait? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Go on. A. I saw Mr. Doran place his hand in his pocket; I couldn't see which pocket, because his back was turned to me, and perhaps there were one or two behind him, and he handed, to my best knowledge and belief, money, because I heard the clink of it.

Q. You say Mr. Doran put his hand in his pocket, and you saw him take his hand out, and reach it in the direction of these rounders, as you call them? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you heard the sound of money—coin? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he hand something to one or to all of them? A. I wouldn't undertake to say whether two or three.

Q. Did he hand something to more than one when he took his hand out of his pocket? A. He did.

Q. What did they do then? A. Two of them went with this same party that had brought them around where I was, and they went in the direction of the polls. They had ballots in their hands.

Q. Who furnished the ballots to them? A. I cannot undertake to say that. I don't know whether Mr. Doran or the other party.

Q. At the time this musical click of the coin was heard, and after Mr. Doran had taken his hand out of his pocket, you say he or the other party furnished them with a ticket? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they were taken to the polls? A. They were taken to the polls.

Q. That happened in this city and county? A. Yes, sir.

Q. On election day? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In what precinct? A. In the Sixth Precinct of the Thirty-third District.

Q. What sort of men were these? A. They have the reputation in the neighborhood of being these regular beer-rounders; they never work to my knowledge.

Q. They were not a very high-toned class then? A. No; they were intoxicated at the time.

Q. They were brought there, and this interview took place, and they were marched to the polls? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you do when you saw that? A. According to instructions, I informed my brother what I had seen.

Q. You thought that was circumstant enough to go and tell your brother? A. I thought so.

Q. You went then and informed your brother? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who is your brother? A. Alexander Campbell, Jr.

Q. The gentleman who testified on the stand this morning? A. So I am informed.

Q. This is the gentleman, is it [indicating Alexander Campbell, Jr.]? A. That is the gentleman.

Q. Do you know what your brother did then—what action, if any, he took in the matter. A. He told me to go back where I belonged, and remain there, that is all.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: You say these men that came up were rounders. How do you know that they were rounders? A. They have that reputation in the vicinity.

Q. Who did you ever hear call them rounders? A. I couldn't designate any particular person, but that is the general expression that is used.

Q. Tell me one that ever called them that? A. Mr. Bullwinkle, that keeps the grocery store on the corner of Pacific and Powell.

Q. He told you those men were rounders? A. It is a subject of conversation every day in that grocery store.

Q. That they are rounders? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Those four men that came up to vote on that day? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What do you mean by rounders? A. I mean the men that live without any visible means of support, and that drink.

Q. What is your business? A. Clerk.

Q. For whom? A. For Mr. Campbell.

Q. For how long? A. For fifteen or sixteen years.

Q. Isn't it a fact that you are a runner around the Police Court? A. No, sir.

Q. Don't you go there? A. My brother practices there, and I belong to his office and have for many years.

Q. You don't stay around the Police Court as a runner for your brother? A. I stay there and attend to his business in his absence.

Q. Don't you stay around there as a runner for your brother? A. No, sir.

Q. And not for anybody else? A. No, sir.

Q. And you have no connection with anybody else? A. No, sir.

Q. Ain't you one of these fellows that hang around, getting bail for people? A. No, sir.

Q. You don't go in the jail and see these people? A. No, sir; never without instructions from my brother.

Q. Did you ever go into the jail and talk to people? A. I do, under my brother's instructions.

Q. With those people? A. With his clients, only.

Q. Don't you talk to people before they become his clients? A. No, sir; if that is my reputation, it is a wrong one.

Q. Don't you know that that is your reputation—as runner around the Police Court? A. I don't know it is such.

Q. You swear that? A. I swear, positively.

Q. You say you were a Republican there, representing Republican interests on election day? A. That is what I said.

Q. And you were representing that party when Mr. Doran bought these votes? A. I was.

Q. You had these Republican tickets? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Doran wanted to buy Republican votes; he bought them right there in front of you? A. I don't know what his intention was.

Q. Doran wanted to buy these votes, and knowing you to be a Republican in charge, he brought those men around in front and bought them, did he? A. I told you just what occurred, and you can draw your own inferences.

Q. That is what you would make people believe from your testimony, wouldn't you? A. I would lead them to infer that; yes, sir.

Q. And he brought them around in front of you, and let you see him buy them? A. I think the facts bear me out that way.

Q. If you were buying votes, would you do that way? A. I ain't in the practice, sir.

Q. How long since you have been out of the practice? A. I have not been in it.

Q. You never run around, working people for election? A. Never.

Q. And you never asked a man to vote, and tell him you knew where he could get money? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know a man named Jackson? A. I know quite a number of people of that name.

Q. Do you know Fred Jackson? A. Yes, I know Fred Jackson that lives up on Stockton Street, near Greenwich.

Q. That is in the Twenty-first Senatorial District, isn't it? A. I don't know.

Q. You don't know what the Twenty-first Senatorial District is? A. No, sir.

Q. And you don't know what places are in it? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you have any talk with Mr. Jackson about the situation before or after the election? A. Never in my lifetime.

Q. Since this contest, have you taked with Jackson? A. Never in my lifetime.

Q. About this contest. A. No, sir.

Q. Have you talked with him at all? A. Oh, he is a friend of mine, but I have not talked with him for the last six or eight or nine months.

Q. You are just as positive you did not talk with Jackson as you are that you saw Doran buying votes? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You never take a drink, do you? A. I indulge in the flowing bowl occasionally.

Q. You drink to the extent that the rounders do, don't you? A. No, I don't drink the stuff they do.

Q. Isn't it the fact that you are most always intoxicated? A. No, sir.

Q. Ain't you more often drunk than sober? A. No, sir.

Q. You ain't? A. No, sir.

Q. How did you happen to come out here? A. At the solicitation of my brother.

Q. You were not subpoenaed? A. No, sir.

Q. Your brother has taken quite an interest in this? A. He has taken quite an interest in Mr. Banks' fight.

Q. In this contest? A. Not so much so as having Banks elected formerly.

Q. How did he come to ask you to come out here? A. He simply asked me.

Q. Where is his office? A. No. 636 Clay Street.

Q. That is up in Merchant's Block? A. Court Block.

Q. That is where you were? A. That is where I belong, and I was there in his absence.

Q. And he came in and told you he wanted you to come out? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he didn't want to know what you would tell? A. He knew what I saw.

Q. Did he tell you that he wanted you to tell what you saw? A. No. I have a judgment and will of my own.

Q. Tell us the conversation that occurred between you and your brother. A. He simply told me: "I may want you to go out to the Hall and testify in the Banks contest this afternoon."

Q. Did he mention Mr. Dorn's name? A. Mr. Banks? He did.

Q. He didn't talk with you about it, so you wouldn't clash at all? A. No, sir.

Q. You wouldn't think of talking over such a thing as that? A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever been arrested in this city and county? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What for? A. Some two years ago.

Q. What for? A. Petit larceny.

Q. Have you ever been arrested since then? A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever been arrested for common drunk? A. Never in my lifetime.

Q. Have you ever been locked up in jail as a drunk? A. No, sir.

Q. But you were arrested for petit larceny? A. Yes, sir; and the case was dismissed in the Police Court, by motion of the Prosecuting Attorney.

Q. Who was the complaining witness? A. R. M. Swain.

Q. He was your brother's former law partner, was he not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where is Swain now? A. He is in Santa Rosa.

Q. And the case was then dismissed? A. It was. He subsequently—

Q. [interrupting.] Where do you reside? A. I live at 1415 Mason Street.

Q. How long have you lived there? A. Probably a year and a half or two years.

Q. Don't you live at 1720 Stockton Street? A. No, sir; I haven't resided there for four years—five years.

Q. You did live there at one time? A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. Are you a married man? A. No, sir.

Q. You lived there with your wife at that time? A. With my mother.

Q. You are not a married man? A. No, sir.

Q. You say you have not been at Stockton Street for a long while? A. I have not been up in that neighborhood for a year and a half, or two years I will even say.

Q. Are you quite sure of that? A. Quite positive. I have been no further than Stockton and Union Streets.

Q. Do you know a very charming young lady up there that they call the Comet? A. I do not know her.

Q. Are you acquainted with the young lady that lives on Stockton Street, whether they call her that or not? A. I am acquainted with quite a number of young ladies on Stockton Street.

Q. Do you know this particular one? A. I do not.

Q. Do you know the young lady called the Comet? A. No, sir.

Q. You know they said "a rose by any other name"—do you know her by any other name? A. I don't know any by that or any other name.

Q. Do you know her, I want to know? A. No; I haven't been there for a year and a half.

Q. You used to reside on Stockton Street? A. I resided there.

Q. You used to go to this house? A. I resided in the same house.

Q. Since the election, have you been drinking? A. Oh, yes, sir.

Q. You didn't drink on election day at all; one solitary drink? A. A glass of beer, from the time of the opening of the polls until the close.

Q. You got along with just one? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was something unusual? A. It struck me that way. I was invited many times.

Q. Since the election haven't you met Jackson at the Comet's house? A. Most decidedly and emphatically, no.

Q. Haven't you met him at any house, at 1720 Stockton Street? A. I never in my lifetime met any lady that bears the name of the Comet.

Q. You never heard that name before in your life? A. I never did, I assure you.

Q. Do you know any lady that lives there? A. Why, certainly.

Q. Who is it? A. There are two floors attached to that house I occupied. I occupied the lower floor with my mother—

Q. [Interrupting.] Don't drag your mother in here; give us that one? A. Mrs. Howard and Miss Howard resided on the upper floor. I resided on the lower floor.

Q. Mrs. and Miss Howard lived up above. Miss Howard is the lady I refer to, isn't she? A. I don't know whether you do refer to her or not.

Q. Do you know she is called that name? A. I never heard her called that name.

Q. In company with Jackson, since the election, did you call there? A. Never.

Q. You are sure of that? A. Most positive.

Q. You didn't have any conversation with Miss Howard? A. I don't know that Miss Howard resides there or not.

Q. Have you ever had any conversation with Jackson since this contest was commenced with regard to it? A. Never.

Q. Have you had any conversation with him with regard to his testimony? A. Never.

Q. Have you ever told him his testimony was wanted? A. No, sir.

Q. Have you been engaged picking up evidence? A. No, sir: I never was expected to come here until this morning.

ALEXANDER CAMPBELL, JR.

Recalled as a witness on behalf of respondent.

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: How did you happen to request your brother to come out here? Answer—I was requested by you to send him here at two o'clock. In addition to that there was a notice or summons placed on my desk for him.

By MR. CLUNIE: Who issued the summons? A. I don't know.

Q. You don't know who issued it? A. No, sir.

Q. They didn't leave the two dollars? A. No, sir.

JOHN CORBETT.

A witness called for respondent, was duly sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Where do you reside, Mr. Corbett? A. No. 1014 Lombard.

Q. How long have you lived in this city? A. Sixteen or seventeen years.

Q. Where were you last election day? A. In the Fourth Precinct of the Thirty-fourth District.

Q. About how long were you there? A. I was acting as one of the Clerks; I was in and out; there were two of us that relieved each other at different times.

Q. Were you on in the afternoon? A. Yes, sir; I was a portion of the time.

Q. Do you know a gentleman by the name of George Ryan that lives over there in that section of the country? A. Yes, sir; I think I do.

Q. Did you see him about the polls in the afternoon of election day? A. I don't remember having seen him.

Q. Do you know a gentleman by the name of William Maxwell? A. I do.

Q. This gentleman here [indicating William Maxwell]? A. I do; yes, sir.

Q. The assistant council for the contestant. Did you see him about the place on election day in the Fourth Precinct of the Thirty-fourth Assembly District? A. I saw him once, and I cannot say now when it was—what time it was. I saw his face.

Q. Do you know a man by the name of Barry, who lives up in that section of the country, and who recently died—who died before election? A. No, I think not.

Q. Do you know whether the name of Barry was voted at the last election? A. I don't recollect. I think it was. I am not sure.

Q. Do you remember the circumstance that occurred at the time Mr. Barry's name was voted? First, Mr. Pistolesi was one of the Inspectors, was he not? A. He was.

Q. And a man came in in the afternoon and offered to vote the name of Barry? A. I don't recollect the name that was called.

Q. Just tell us the circumstance that did occur that afternoon, and what you saw? A. I was sitting at the writing desk or table inside. I don't know whether I was writing down the names or checking on the precinct register, when somebody comes at the window to vote, and I don't recollect what name was called—whether it was Barry or not. There was a little delay and an altercation, and I heard Pistolesi ask the party, "Are you sure that is your name?" That is about the only thing I distinctly recollect, and I laughed and remarked to the party sitting next to me—it was a party sitting next to me—"It was a hell of a question to ask a man, if he knew his name."

Q. When I mention the name of Barry, does that refresh your recollection as to the name? A. No, sir.

Q. You cannot state? A. No, sir.

Q. You do remember, though, that a person who presented himself during the afternoon, and he was asked by Mr. Pistolesi, the acting Inspector, "Are you sure that is your name?" A. Yes, sir.

Q. What next occurred? A. I heard somebody outside—I didn't raise my head to look—say, "He is all right; he is all right."

Q. You heard that said? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You don't know who said it? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know whether the ballot was then deposited in the box? A. I think it was.

Q. And you are quite positive you wrote the name down, or checked it off? I did either one or the other; I can't recollect which it was.

Q. Then, whatever the name was, Mr. Pistolesi did ask him, "Are you sure that is your name?" A. Yes, sir."

Q. And some one on the outside answered, "He is all right?" A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was the language that was used, and you are positive? A. I am pretty positive.

Q. Wasn't this language used: "He lives in my house;" or, was it, "He is the man?" A. I don't recollect any such language that "He lives in my house."

Q. Did you see Mr. Maxwell there at that time? A. I cannot say whether I did or not.

Q. What is your best impression? A. I can't say whether it was just at the time, or not.

Q. Was it very near that time? A. I think it was.

Q. As a matter of fact, wasn't Mr. Maxwell there at that time, and didn't you see him there at that time? A. No, I wouldn't like to say so.

Q. Do you know whether anybody accompanied this man that offered to vote? A. There were two or three men at the window.

Q. There were two or three men at the window, but you won't now state who they were? A. No, sir.

Q. This conversation did take place though, and the man voted. A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are unable to state just what the name was? A. I am unable to state.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: What attracted your attention was that you heard Mr. Pistolesi asking the question, did you? A. Asking the man if he was sure that was his name.

Q. And that was such a foolish question you looked up; was that it? A. I think it was more than anything else.

Q. Then when Mr. Pistolesi asked it, and when you found who asked it, you were not surprised; is that it? You know George Ryan, don't you? A. I do know him, yes.

Q. You did not see him at that time? A. I don't recollect; I don't know; I might have seen him. If I did, I did not recognize him, looking against the light, and parties standing with their backs to the light looking in I would have to look sharp.

Q. After Mr. Pistolesi asked this question, you heard some one on the outside say, "He is all right?" A. Yes, sir.

Q. You don't know whether they were talking to Mr. Pistolesi, or to whom they were talking? A. Well, I don't know.

Q. You don't know whether there was some one on the outside addressing some one else, or whether it was addressed to Mr. Pistolesi? A. I think it referred to Mr. Pistolesi.

Q. But who made it, you don't know? A. I do not.

Q. That is all that occurred at that time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you don't recollect seeing Mr. Ryan there, or anybody else? A. I don't recollect seeing Mr. Ryan there.

Q. And you did not hear the words said, "He is all right; he lives in my house?" A. I remember hearing the words, "He is all right."

Q. Do you know who lived in that house? A. I do not.

Q. How long did you stay there? A. About an hour or two hours.

Q. Do you know when this Board took an adjournment? A. No, sir; I don't recollect.

Redirect Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: What time were you on the count of the votes? A. I was on from the closing of the polls until about midnight, or near it.

Q. Then when did you go on again? A. In the morning.

Q. How long did you remain? A. During the forenoon.

Q. Then you went away, did you? A. I went away and stayed away.

Q. How long did you stay away? A. I stayed away in the afternoon, and come again in the evening and stayed until midnight.

Q. When did you come on again? A. Next morning.

Q. And following on? A. The same hours the next day again.

Q. Was Mr. Pistolesi on the same watch with you? A. He was.

Q. During the same time? A. Yes.

Q. You divided up into shifts, did you? A. Two shifts; yes, sir.

Q. You worked six hours? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That day and the next day? A. After the close of the polls.

Q. Who was acting as Inspector at the time you were there? Was it Mr. Pistolesi, or was it the other Inspector? In other words, who called ballots while you tallied there? Which one of them? A. I think that Mr. Harman was the first one.

Q. How long did he call; do you remember? A. I don't remember.

Q. There are two Inspectors, are there not? A. Yes; Mr. Harman and Mr. Pistolesi.

Q. And you don't know which was on watch with you? A. I know they were both on some times. I know that Mr. Harman stayed there beyond the allotted time.

Q. He stayed there more than his time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. During the time you were in the Board, and during the time you were acting as Clerk there, was there any adjournment of the Board at any time for any length of time—when the Board took an adjournment and went away and left the ballots in somebody else's charge? A. No, sir.

Q. Was there any adjournment when the Board left the room? A. No, sir.

Q. Was there any such thing happened? A. Not during my watch.

Q. If it had happened, you would have known it? A. I would have known it, and I would have objected to it if it had been done.

GEORGE HESKETH.

A witness called for respondent, was duly sworn, and testified as follows :

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Mr. Hesketh, where do you live? Answer—No. 327 Filbert.

Q. How long have you lived there? A. I should say about nine years.

Q. Do you own the property there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct and Assembly District is that? A. It is in the Second of the Thirty-third.

Q. At the last election, did you act in any capacity in the Election Board? A. I was additional Inspector; I was appointed as such.

Q. Why do you say you were appointed as such? A. Because very frequently, when I was on duty, I was hustled out, and told I had no business there as an Inspector.

Q. Who told you this? A. A man by the name of O'Neill. That is what I understood his name was. He told me he was the Inspector of that precinct.

Q. He told you you hadn't any business there? A. Not when he was there.

Q. He told you you hadn't any business there, and hustled you out? A. That is about it.

Q. What is this man in politics? A. I couldn't tell you.

Q. He was the other Inspector there? A. He acted as such.

Q. He run things, and when he was on deck he took charge? A. Yes, sir.

Q. As a matter of fact, on all the Boards at the last election there was one Republican and one Democratic Inspector, wasn't there, and he was the other Inspector at that precinct, wasn't he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say you were appointed, but you were not allowed to act? A. I was allowed to act occasionally, when it suited him; when it suited him and his party.

Q. After the polls closed, who took charge of the ballots, and who started in to attend to their counting? A. I think it was me, and I think it was the Democratic Judge; I think so. We each put our names on the ballots.

Q. Wasn't it the Democratic Inspector and yourself who put your names on the ballots? A. I don't think so. I think he was not in a condition to do so.

Q. You think not? A. I think not.

Q. That is this man O'Neill? A. The man O'Neill, I am most positive it was not he.

Q. You think that he was not in a condition to put his name on them or anything else. Was he troubled of mind, or had he got religion, or what? A. I couldn't say.

Q. To put it in plain Anglo-Saxon, he was drunk, was he not? A. I don't know. They all seemed to take so much in there. If I had taken a fair proportion I would have been over at Lone Mountain now.

Q. Who called the ballots there? A. Who read them off?

Q. Yes. A. The Democrats.

Q. Did this O'Neill call the ballots off? A. Not many, I think; very few.

Q. Who did call them off? A. I don't know his name; I did not know any of the names scarcely, only John Brown. When I was there for about an hour I came to the conclusion I didn't want to know any of them—in one hour.

Q. In one hour you concluded you were not anxious to form their acquaintance? A. No, sir.

Q. Describe to us how this Democratic Inspector or Judge called these ballots. Did he hold them up with a calcium light on them, or did he hold them down in his pocket? A. In the first commencement, it seemed to run along very well; the thing seemed to go all right for probably until two or three o'clock in the morning; then there was a little dissatisfaction commenced; for some reason the Republican watcher vacated his seat and a man they called Jim Butler took his place, and he spread himself out so that nobody could get near.

Q. He you call Jim Butler other people call "Brick Butler," don't they? A. I cannot tell you what they call him. I have heard him called "Brick Butler" the last few days. I cannot call him.

Q. And he is another man you are not anxious to know? A. No, sir; I don't want to know him.

Q. You say about two or three o'clock he got in there and spread himself out, and what else did he do? A. He spread himself out and I protested, and I tried all I could to get him out, and they called me a crank and said I was the only one interrupting the business, and I was insulted, and I did all I could do to get him out, but it was no use. About four o'clock in the morning there were two young men come in there that seemed to know these parties very well, because they tried to straighten him, and they seemed kind of humble, and they found out they had met their match, but still it was referred to the Republican watcher to see where he was—whether he should come out of there, and whether he should see, and he said he could see, but he could not; so I concluded he was either a coward or a knave; that was the Republican watcher. It went on so until morning, when I went off.

Q. What did you do when you found things going in that condition? A. Me and Mr. Brown took a walk down town; I went home and got some breakfast, and we took a walk down to see how the election was going, and Mr. Brown left me—that is, the Republican Judge—and I called in and told them the state of things—

Q. [Interrupting.] Told whom? A. I told them what I guessed it was; I don't know much about their affairs anyhow; it was the Republican County Committee: I think it was on Kearny Street, near Market. I went up stairs, and I told them the state of affairs: I told them I was sure—

Q. [Interrupting.] As a matter of fact, that was the headquarters of the Republican County Committee? A. Yes, sir. I went up and explained to them: I told them everytning was not running satisfactory; there was every chance for them to do what was not right, and although I could not swear that such was the case, I was under the impression that they were not doing right.

Q. That was your impression? A. That was my impression.

Q. Why were you under the impression that they were not doing right? A. In the first place, Dr. O'Donnell's name run out very often, and after a while it came out very, very seldom, and when it did come out there was a kind of a slight yell at it.

Q. That is whose name? A. Dr. O'Donnell's. It did not come out very often for three or four hours.

Q. Do you think everybody's else was counted squarely except Dr. O'Donnell's? A. No, I don't think they were.

Q. About the Senatorial fight, what was your experience with regard to that in that precinct? A. I had kind of made up my mind when the Republican watcher did not take his proper position that he was not doing his duty, and he would neither go in, or he was afraid or something, and of course I was afraid, and I stated so at the rooms on Kearny Street.

Q. In other words, you were terrorized? A. Yes, sir; I was terrorized, and not only myself, but others as well.

Q. They were conducting themselves in that way, and not conducting themselves as respectable citizens, and things were in their own control? A. I dont know exactly that it was in their own control, but it seemed it was in their own control, but they didn't listen to what I said.

Q. And you were one of the members of the Board? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were appointed as Inspector? A. Additional Inspector; yes, sir.

Q. Tell us what you discovered about the vote for Senator? A. There, after two or three ballots or so—I think it was about three o'clock in the morning—of course when two of them called and a straight Democratic ticket came out it was brought out with a flourish, but when any other ticket came out it was kept covered—nobody could see it. All you could find out about it was what was read off.

Q. You were not allowed to see the ticket? A. No, sir.

Q. Anything except the Democratic ticket, and that was waved? A. That was understood "straight Dem."

Q. Were those covered up with a blanket? A. No, they were not covered up with a blanket, but a man was holding his hands so [indicating], so that there was no distance.

Q. You mean the hands were held with the arm bent? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And one hand on one side, and the other hand on the other side? A. It was held so I don't think anybody could see three feet off, and you would have to get right over him to see it.

Q. Supposing this piece of blotting paper to be the ticket; the Inspector would hold his hands out that way, one on each side? A. The man that was read off, yes, sir.

Q. So nobody could see except he got right over? A. I couldn't see where I was, about five feet off.

Q. And you made the effort to see? A. Yes, I made the effort to see.

Q. And you protested against that? A. I told Mr. Brown to keep a sharplookout. I called the Republican watcher, and I told him the thing didn't look to be running right, and I said, "You see there what I supposed straight Republican tickets go in with Sullivan's name on them?" and he says, "No, I didn't see it: I was watching close and I didn't see." It was said loud enough that almost everybody in the room might hear. So he waited a minute, and he got up and said; "Here, do you think I am doing any trick," and I said, "I don't know," but it looked very peculiar to me. He says, "Well, come here. I have got a little bottle in my pocket, and come and take a drop." So I just touched it to my lips; I didn't take three drops scarcely; I just merely touched it, and he says, "Now, I will keep a good lookout." Those were his words.

Q. As soon as you accused him of doing wrong he produced the bottle? A. Not immediately; it was after. He said, "Here, I keep a little of my own stuff, and take a drop."

Q. He hadn't offered you a drink until you accused him of robbing the Republican party of votes? A. I didn't accuse him of robbing them; I said it didn't look straight to me. I didn't swear that they were doing any robbery. I couldn't swear that.

Q. It didn't look straight to you when Sullivan's name was called three successive times on three Republican tickets? A. If it had come out occasionally I wouldn't have noticed. I had got interrupted once before, and I thought it was going far enough.

Q. When they worked it so strong, and called Sullivan three times on Republican tickets, you thought it had gone far enough. A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you protested? A. I protested to the watcher. Of course there were others heard it all. Mr. Brown heard it, and the Republican did that was handing out the ballots, and I guess some of the Republicans. I am confident that the Republican Clerk heard it, and I guess that all heard it that were there, if they wanted to. They could hear the dissatisfaction.

Q. This is the precinct where, upon the recount, O'Donnell gained eighty votes, is it not? A. I believe so. So I see in the paper.

Q. Then it was evidence, if O'Donnell gained eighty votes on the recount, that something was wrong in that calling, at least? A. Yes, sir: it was evident to me that something was wrong. When my attention was first called to it, I said I was not the first particle surprised.

Q. Why do you say that? A. Because there was every chance, and it looked to me exactly as if such business was being done, and there was every opportunity for it.

Q. That was while the Democratic Inspector was calling the ballots? A. I don't know whether the Inspector was calling them or not; it was a frequent change with them.

Q. It was one of the Democratic officers? A. Yes, sir; no Republican had a hand on the ballots, except handing them out of the box. When he first started, he opened out the ballots; but after a while he said he shouldn't do it, and it was handed across.

Q. You say for a little while the Republican Inspector opened the ballots? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And after a while they stopped him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they announced that he should not touch them? A. I don't know that they announced that, but they took very good care that he should not touch them, and one of them after the other jumped in, and there was no use to say anything about it.

Q. Why wasn't it necessary to say anything? A. Because they jumped up immediately when any question was raised, and they stormed and carried on, and of course they had their own way.

Q. Whenever any objection was raised, they would raise a fuss and attempt to thrash everybody? A. No, they didn't attempt to thrash everybody, but it was made in such a way that you were to understand that you were to keep quiet.

Q. Where did they keep this crowd that created this disturbance? A. It was an old broken building, and I believe there were two or three rooms over there, and they were in and out there.

Q. This man whom you have called James Butler, and that you have recently learned was called "Brick Butler," did he call off any ballots? A. Not while I was there; no, sir. I didn't see him read any ballot, and in fact he never read a ballot while I was there.

Q. He simply confined himself to spreading himself out? A. He took the ballots from the man that read them, and put them on the file for a while, then he kind of fell over, and went off in a dose.

Q. He took the ballots and put them on file? A. Yes, on file.

Q. Was there any member of the Election Board there that did that? A. They were all members in turn, and they all seemed to have about equal power.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: You were appointed from the Registrar's office, were you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You got your instructions, in case any trouble occurred, to report them to the Registrar? A. No, sir; I got no instructions. When I was appointed, I went to ask instructions, and they told me I would receive them when I got there, and that is all the instructions I got. I don't know anything about politics.

Q. Did you receive any instructions when you got there? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you get none? A. Excepting I took up the Code, and tried to find out what my duty was.

Q. Did you find it out? A. No, I couldn't say that I could go right through it in a few minutes, but I tried to find out what I could of my duty.

Q. You didn't think your duty was to go there and tell the whole Board what to do? A. No, sir, I did not.

Q. I understand you went there and you wanted the Board to do something, and they refused to pay any attention to you, and called you a crank, and you got insulted? A. No, sir; they didn't call me a crank then; they called me it afterwards.

Q. They did not know you very well, then? A. Yes, I am tolerably well known here in the city.

Q. I mean the Board, there? A. No, because I didn't go around in that neighborhood. That is a neighborhood I always shunned.

Q. They didn't hunt you, did they? A. No, sir.

Q. They didn't seem very anxious to meet you? A. Yes, they were anxious I should know Butler, and wanted I should do something for them, and they said, "You have got your living, and I have got my living to make." And I said, "What do you want me to do?" He said he wanted me to vote for so-and-so.

Q. Who did he ask you to vote for? A. He asked me to vote for Mayor Pond, and several of the heads of the tickets, and I said "no." flatly, and went away.

Q. As soon as you found he wanted you to vote for Mayor Pond, you refused, and went away? A. No, sir; he asked me would I assist him, and I said in what way, and he asked me to vote for several parties.

Q. He asked you to vote for Mayor Pond? A. Yes; he mentioned three or four names at the head of the ticket.

- Q. He asked you to vote for Mayor Pond for one? A. He asked me, as a general thing, to vote for the head of the ticket.
- Q. Didn't you say he asked you to vote for Mayor Pond? A. I believe Mayor Pond was one.
- Q. Who else? A. I couldn't say; but he run over the head of the ticket, and I told him flatly "no," and I walked away from him.
- Q. You would not vote for the head of the ticket? A. He asked me to kindly help him. He said it was his bread and butter.
- Q. To get you to vote for those people? A. I suppose that was his meaning.
- Q. And you told him you would not vote for them at all? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. That was because you were a Republican? A. Yes, sir; I was a Republican.
- Q. And as soon as you found out that Butler was a red-hot Democrat, and wanted you to vote for Democrats, you didn't want to get acquainted with him? A. He asked me to do so-and-so, but I most decidedly made up my mind if I could vote for anybody in place of Strother I would have done so.
- Q. You voted for Strother, did you? A. No, sir; I did not.
- Q. You scratched him on the Republican ticket, did you? A. He was not there that I am aware of.
- Q. You are a Republican, are you not? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. You never intended to vote for him, did you? A. No.
- Q. What did you want to talk about voting for him for? A. I would have voted for any man on my ticket, that is for the place, except Strother.
- Q. I don't understand you. You were willing to vote for any man on your ticket Butler asked you for, except Strother? A. No, sir, I was willing to vote but for the heads of the ticket for him, if he would scratch Strother on his ticket.
- Q. That is the basis. A. That is the basis.
- Q. You were an officer of election, and you went to Butler, and you had been sworn to perform your duties faithfully? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And you went there on election day, and you asked and did you get Butler to scratch Strother? A. I did not.
- Q. You stated you wanted him to? A. No, I didn't say I wanted him to.
- Q. Didn't you swear a minute ago you wanted him to? A. No, I did not.
- Q. Didn't you swear a little while ago you would have voted—— A. I swear I would have done——
- Q. [Interruptingly.] Wait a minute. Didn't you swear a minute ago you would have voted for anybody on your ticket that Butler would have asked you for, except the head of the ticket, if you could have got him to scratch Strother? A. I said I would have done so, but our conversation came to an end before it got that far.
- Q. You intended to ask him that if you ever got the chance? A. I would have asked him, and I wouldn't have been aware that I was doing wrong. I wouldn't have been aware that I was doing wrong as an officer of election; that I was doing anything wrong.
- Q. Did you ask anybody up there to vote against Strother? A. Yes, I might have asked one or two, and they promised me to do so.
- Q. On the day of election? A. No, it was a week or two.
- Q. You were talking with Butler? A. Yes, I believe it was in the morning, just before the polls were opened.

Q. You talked with Butler about Strother, didn't you? A. No, I never mentioned anybody but it come so far I got disgusted with him asking me to vote against the head of my ticket, and I got disgusted and went off and left him.

Q. As soon as he asked you to vote against Harrison and for Cleveland, or for Pond, you became disgusted and went off and left him? A. Yes, I left him.

Q. I understood you to say you were so disgusted with Butler. A. I don't know that I said I was disgusted.

Q. I know it. A. I might have said it, but I don't know about being disgusted. I wouldn't give the heads of my ticket for anything—for anybody.

Q. You are a pretty strong partisan, aren't you? A. No, sir; I have no part in politics at all. I am an individual, but still all my sympathies are with the Republican party.

Q. You always vote the head of the ticket, don't you? A. I always vote the straight ticket; that is. I have always done that.

Q. You were going to change this time? A. Well, I would—

MR. DORN: [Interrupting.] One moment. I ask the Court to instruct the witness that he is not required to say how he voted at any time; and he need not tell that unless he wishes to. I ask your honors to give the witness that instruction for his information.

THE COURT: He has not been called upon to do so yet.

THE WITNESS: Your honor, I am not much acquainted with either the Court or Justices or politics, I may be led into little errors.

By MR. CLUNIE: You say you did not want to become acquainted with Butler or any of those people, is that it? A. That is about the way it stands.

Q. What was the reason of that? A. Because I have no business with that kind of people.

Q. Did you have any business with him that day when you went there? A. I don't know as I had any business with Butler; I didn't know he was an official.

Q. You said in your direct examination you did not want to become acquainted with them. Did you go there with the idea of not becoming acquainted with them? A. I did not.

Q. When did you commence to want to tell them what to do? A. I didn't want to tell them what to do.

Q. You got up and wanted to tell them what to do, and they didn't let you, and you got insulted? A. No, sir; I didn't get insulted.

Q. Didn't you testify that you got insulted? A. I don't know particularly that they insulted me, but I saw things were not going to please me.

Q. And because you could not run the whole business? A. No, sir; I didn't go to run the whole business. When a man don't understand a thing he doesn't try to run it.

Q. You said you went there and made suggestions to them, and they wouldn't do it, and you didn't like it, and you thought something was going wrong; isn't that it? A. I am not sure particularly that I made any suggestion to them.

Q. You said in your direct testimony every time you made a suggestion they would tell you they would throw you out? A. No; when I was taking ballots, when it suited them, I was of course relieved immediately and told I was only an additional Inspector and the Inspector took my place.

Q. That was the fact, wasn't it? A. I suppose it is, but I don't know whether I had the right to still hold my duty or not. I was not satisfied on the question and am not now, for I never asked.

Q. Then you became dissatisfied because they told you you were only an additional Inspector, that the regular Inspector was there and would read the ballots? A. I was not dissatisfied.

Q. You liked it, did you? A. No, sir; I did not like it.

Q. When did you first become dissatisfied? A. The first I was dissatisfied was about an hour after I was taking in the ballots, I was hustled out without any ceremony, and of course I didn't know then whether the men had the actual right to put me out or not.

Q. Who put you out? A. O'Neill.

Q. Who took your place—the regular Inspector? A. The regular Inspector, O'Neill.

Q. What was said at that time? A. There was not much of anything said; of course I retired; I was on the other side of the ballot box.

Q. And you became dissatisfied? A. No, I was not exactly dissatisfied. I might not like it very well, but I was not positively certain whether I had a right to be put out of there or not. I was under the impression that we would have a certain length of time each there, but I was undeceived.

Q. You were requested to step out? A. I did so.

Q. And the Democratic man stepped in? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then that went along how long, there? A. I suppose that went along until they retired and I took the position again.

Q. And you went in again? A. Yes, sir; I went in again about three or four o'clock in the afternoon and stayed in until the last ballot was in.

Q. You stayed three or four hours? A. Well, probably three hours; something like that.

Q. You stayed there, then? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was all right, wasn't it? A. Yes, sir; there was no complaint.

Q. You didn't make any objection at all up to that time? A. I don't know as I made any particular objection anyway. I said I didn't very well like it because I didn't know how it was when I went there.

Q. Then it was your fault, wasn't it, that you got in this trouble? A. Probably it was. I didn't say any trouble.

Q. But you are coming on the stand and trying to make the public believe that there were great frauds there by the Democrats? A. No, I aint; I merely tell you what come under my observation. Before going any further, I haven't one single cent's interest anyway. I never wanted office, or wanted any position or office or anything else.

Q. But you are liable to change? A. No, I don't think so.

Q. You went there in the morning, and took your place as Inspector? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You stayed there a while, and they came along and put another man in your place? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you retired and sat by the ballot box? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Nobody told you to get out of that place, did they? A. No, sir; I was near the box.

Q. Nobody raised any objection to that? A. No, sir.

Q. And you retired voluntarily when they asked you; is that it? A. I didn't interfere with anybody, nor I was not a great deal interfered with, except, as I have told, Butler got angry.

Q. Let us get during the day. During the day you retired when they asked you to, is that it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You stood by the side of the ballot box all the rest of the day, up to four o'clock in the afternoon, is that it? A. No; I was there in the neighborhood.

Q. But you didn't stand at the ballot box all the time, did you? A. I was there by the ballot box, taking ballots.

Q. You did not stay there all day? A. I was there in the commencement.

Q. You were there in the commencement, for how long? A. For half an hour or an hour.

Q. Then you were asked to retire? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You went to the other side of the ballot box? A. Yes, on the other side; and I asked questions sometimes of the parties that came to put in their ballots.

Q. They let you do that, didn't they? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And there was no objection to that? A. No, sir; there was no objection to that.

Q. And the other man took the ballots up until about four o'clock in the afternoon? A. I couldn't say.

Q. Well, around that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you took ballots from that time up until the polls closed? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And there was no trouble up to that time? A. There was no trouble at all until after the polls closed.

Q. Then the polls closed, and you signed your name on the ballots? A. Yes, sir; I put "G. H." on them.

Q. You put the number down on them? A. No numbers were put on.

Q. Didn't another man put the numbers down? A. No, I think our initials were put on; that is my impression.

Q. That is all you think was done? A. I can't be positive.

Q. You are an election officer? A. I told you I was an election officer without any instructions, and I didn't know my duty, but once in a while I would take the Code and try to find out.

Q. If anybody had numbered these ballots, you would have seen them, wouldn't you? A. I don't know. I was there, but I will tell you the Democrats had two of the smartest penmen that there are in the city and they were very rapid in their work; it took me all my time to get my initials on them and they put more writing on. They were pretty quick, and I put my initials on as fast as I could lay them aside.

Q. To the best of your knowledge and belief, those ballots were not numbered at all? A. No, I am not positive, because they may have been numbered.

Q. Do you think they were? A. I was under the impression he put his initials on, but still they might have been numbered; it was so rapid it kept me going so fast I didn't have much time.

Q. Is your eye-sight good? A. It is good at a long distance, but not very close. At a long distance I have got a pretty good sight. I can see better at ten or twenty feet than I can at one foot.

Q. Or five? A. Or five.

Q. You can see better twenty feet off than five feet; is that it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. The ballots were all signed and put back in the box? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Nobody tampered with them? A. Nobody tampered with them.

Q. The man that was taking the ballots out sat in a chair didn't he? A. No; he stood by, at the ballot box.

Q. Who was it stood by? A. It was Mr. Brown.

Q. Was he one of the bad Democrats? A. No, sir; I don't know whether he is a bad Democrat or not.

Q. Mr. Brown didn't do anything wrong, did he? A. I didn't see him do anything wrong. He handed me the ballots.

Q. He was the Republican was he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then he didn't do anything wrong, of course? A. He did nothing that I saw.

Q. Mr. Brown stood by the ballot box and took the ballots out. What did he say? A. In the first place, as he was taking them out he opened them and looked at them, as I say, and then he handed them over to the man across and read them.

Q. He handed them over? A. Mr. Brown read the ballot and then passed it over.

Q. Then the ballot was passed by you? A. No, sir; I never handled a ballot after they went into the box.

Q. Who was the ballot handed to? A. It was handed to one of the Democrats, whoever happened to be there.

Q. The man that was sitting down, it was handed to, wasn't it? A. I believe it was.

Q. Who was that? A. It might be O'Neill, and it might be somebody else.

Q. Will you swear it was O'Neill? A. No, sir.

Q. Will you swear it was any Democrat? A. I was under the impression they were Democrats.

Q. You wouldn't swear it was a Democrat? A. No, I wouldn't swear anything. I couldn't be positive enough to swear.

Q. You wouldn't be positive enough to swear to anything a Democrat did? A. I wouldn't say that, because I know some very good Democrats.

Q. Whatever was done, he started in to read the ballots? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He opened them? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you looked at them? A. I was looking at them and at the books, alternately.

Q. And you watched them as good as you could? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was a watcher for the Republican party? A. I don't know, sir. There was another one they called young Nelson; but the other portion of the time I was distrustful.

Q. I ask you whether or not that was a man sent by the Republican party? A. Yes, I had a card from one—I had a card from two different ones; it was handed me. That is, through the time it was counting; not both at once.

Q. Was there a man handed you a card and told you he was a Republican watcher, at the time you commenced counting? A. No, sir.

Q. That was a man that you knew to be a Republican watcher? A. They say young Nelson was a Republican, of course.

Q. He was there for the Republican party? A. I don't know.

Q. He suited the Republican party well enough, didn't he? A. I think young Nelson did his duty faithfully.

Q. He was there how long? A. I can't say how long; he was there probably one watch.

Q. What is one watch? A. Five or six hours.

Q. You had it divided up into watches? A. That is the way it was.

Q. Did you? A. That was the way it was next day, for I would go on at six and come off at twelve. And in the night again, but sometimes we were not very punctual to half an hour.

Q. Young Nelson was there when you started? A. Oh, I can't say that; but he was there some portion of the time.

Q. But there was no fraud at all while Nelson was on the watch, was there? A. I don't think there was.

Q. Then you were satisfied of that, were you? A. I seemed to be satisfied until in the morning.

Q. In the first watch you were all satisfied, then? A. Yes; I didn't know much—I was probably there only a portion of the watch, because I remember coming on at twelve and staying on until six, so I may have only been on a portion of it before twelve o'clock. I may have been there the greater portion before twelve.

Q. Won't you swear whether you were there or not? A. Yes, I was there.

Q. What watch were you there? A. I was there taking the ballots out.

Q. They were taking them out on every watch, weren't they? A. I saw the men reading them, and I saw the Clerks putting them down.

Q. On which watch? A. I was there a great deal of the time; I was there a portion of the time.

Q. How long? A. I might have been there two, or three, or four hours, but I couldn't tell you definitely how long I was there.

Q. During that time there was a Democrat calling, was he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That took up until twelve o'clock, and the first watch finished then, did it? A. Whatever time the Inspector come on, I went off.

Q. Don't you know the time? A. That was when I was supposed to go on. I would go off at six at night and come on at twelve o'clock.

Q. Then between six and twelve you were not there? A. Yes, sir; I was there a great portion of the time.

Q. But you were not there as a regular Clerk or watcher? A. No, but I was there.

Q. There was a member there in your place? A. Yes; I was standing looking on most of the time.

Q. Wasn't there another man there in your place? A. Yes, I was relieved.

Q. And you were there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he find any fault? A. No, I don't think he found much fault; never in my presence.

Q. This thing ran along all right up to twelve o'clock? A. No; probably two or three o'clock. It might be two or three o'clock when Mr. Butler got in between, and wouldn't come out of the place.

Q. Everything went right up to two or three o'clock? A. I should judge that.

Q. And Mr. Butler got in between? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who did he get in between? A. He got between the ballots they were reading and what was supposed to be the Republican watcher.

Q. Then somebody says to the Republican watcher, "You cannot see up there?" That remark was made to the Republican watcher, wasn't it, by some one: "You cannot see there?" A. No. When Mr. Butler got in there, I tried all I could to get him out.

Q. Will you just answer the question: Did anybody say to the Republican watcher and ask him if he could see the ballots after Mr. Butler got in? A. That was in the morning; that was some hours after.

Q. At two or three o'clock did anybody ask the Republican watcher if he could see? A. I cannot say that they did in the early part of it.

Q. Did the Republican watcher make any objection? A. No; he didn't make any objection. I asked him to take his place, and he said he could see, and I felt confident that he could not see; and then I wrangled and tried to get the man out.

Q. Then Mr. Butler went in between, and the Republican watcher said he could see, and you said he could not see? A. I was under the impression that he could not see; I felt confident of it.

Q. He knew better than you did, whether he could see? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you got in a wrangle? A. I wanted Mr. Butler out, because I thought it ought to be a different way. I was under the impression that the Republicans had a right to a watcher next to the reader, as well as the Democrats.

Q. Don't you know, as an officer, that every citizen has a right to watch the count? A. I don't know; I understood that under certain circumstances they could put all out, only one watcher.

Q. That is your idea of the duties of an election officer—that if the Board wanted to they could put everybody out except one watcher? A. On each side.

Q. Where did you get that information from; did you get it from the Republican County Committee? A. I am most confident that the policeman read that off one time.

Q. Who was that? A. He was the policeman there.

Q. Did he get up and read that off? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did he want to do that for? A. Because there seemed to be some trouble; there was a man by the name of Hefron.

Q. The Republican watcher said, while Butler was in there, he could see? A. He said so.

Q. And he read right on and you had no complaint? A. That was about it; he was satisfied, but I was not satisfied.

Q. And you informed the Republican watcher that you were not satisfied? A. No, I did not; I tried to get him out, and they asked him and he said he could see. I did all I could to get him out, and it was all confusion, and he wouldn't come out.

Q. You wanted to locate him in a different place? I don't know if he had any business in the rooms. I was rather under the impression that Mr. Butler was not an officer there at all; of course he might be.

Q. You wanted to get alongside? A. It was but right that he should be alongside them when they were reading the ballots.

Q. You wanted to get the best of it? A. I didn't want anything but justice.

Q. You thought the Democratic boys had the best of it? A. I think so. They will have the best of everything where it is.

Q. That is the way you felt towards the Democratic party when you went there, isn't it? A. No, I can't say; at least it seemed to look to me that way, as far as it went.

Q. And you just learned that since the last election; is that it? A. I think if there is anything within reach they will get it.

Q. Did you think that when you went there as an officer of election? Did you feel that way then? A. I couldn't tell you how I felt.

Q. Did you feel that the Democratic party would take anything within reach, when you went there? A. It was my impression that they did all they could, to make the best they could out of it.

Q. You thought the Republican party would make the best of it? A. I don't know much about politics.

Q. But you did know the Democratic party would take everything within reach? A. I think they will.

- Q. You think the Republican party won't refuse anything? A. I don't know.
- Q. You knew they got it away from Tilden? A. Well, I heard it, but I didn't believe it.
- Q. You wanted Butler removed from his position? A. I wanted to see the thing run off smooth.
- Q. You asked him to come out? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And he declined to do it? A. Yes, sir; I got angry because he didn't—because it was not enforced that he should come out. My anger didn't do any injury to anybody. I think if it had injured anybody it would be to myself, because when I get nervous I get sick, and it affects me very easily.
- Q. Butler didn't get out, and he sat there right along? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. You and your friend Brown went to take a walk, didn't you? A. After we went off we went and got breakfast, and then we went down town.
- Q. You went to the Republican Committee? A. I did, but I don't know whether he did or not.
- Q. Did you live home? A. Yes, sir. He said he wanted to meet a boilermaker friend, and went off and left me.
- Q. You went down to the Republican County Committee, and told them you did not like things there? A. I told them it did not suit me.
- Q. Did they send up and change the watcher then? A. I believe they did send a man down there to come there to try to straighten out things.
- Q. Did they take this watch away? A. I don't think they did.
- Q. Even the Republican party didn't get in and conform to your views, is that it? A. I don't know as I saw anybody that was particularly interested.
- Q. Didn't you go down and tell the Republican party you were not suited? Didn't they seem to feel sorry when they found that out? A. I don't know; I didn't ask them.
- Q. They didn't make any changes? A. They didn't seem to.
- Q. They were perfectly satisfied with that man? A. I guess they were: he was there pretty much all the time I was there.
- Q. What was his name? A. I couldn't tell you his name.
- Q. You didn't want to know his name, either? A. No.
- Q. You didn't want anything to do with him? A. All I know about him he said he come, I think, from Twenty-eighth and Harrison. That is what I understood.
- Q. And he was watching there for the Republican party? A. That is what I understood from the conversation I heard him speak several times.
- Q. What time did these three ballots come out that you tell about that were straight Republican ballots? A. I believe they came out probably about half past two in the morning.
- Q. Where were you then? A. I was alongside of the ballot box, and between the ballot box and and the Clerks—the Republican Clerk.
- Q. That is on the other side of the table, isn't it? A. No; the table is along here [indicating], and the ballot box was on the end, and I was there [indicating].
- Q. Were you close to the clerks? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. You were on the end of the table, as I understand you? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And the ballot boxes were here [indicating]? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And the Republican Clerks were over there [indicating]? A. Yes, sir; and I was next to them.
- Q. And the Inspector was here [indicating]? A. Yes, sir; he was two thirds of the way up the table.

Q. You were over here [indicating]? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Butler was over behind? A. Butler was not there at all on the second morning; he was not in between—there was nobody in between the Republican watcher and the man who was reading the ballots. There was nobody then between, and of course he had a fair show then.

Q. He had a fair way to see there at the time that was called? A. He had a fair show to see there at the time that was called; that is, if he wanted to.

Q. This was the same man you had reported to the Republican County Committee? A. No; I did not report that man to the Republican County Committee; I never reported him.

Q. You swore a minute ago that you did, did you not? A. No; I said things were not running right up there. Butler had got in there, and there were various other things that I didn't like, and for that reason I reported it. I did not report the Republican watcher at all.

Q. You don't know whether he was watching right or not? A. No; I don't know whether he was or not; but I became satisfied on the second night that he was either a coward or a traitor.

Q. Because he did not do as you told him? A. No; I considered he was not doing his duty.

Q. Then you thought because he was not doing his duty as you thought, that he was a coward or a traitor? A. I got it in my mind that the way the ballots were running that there was every chance.

Q. You are a Dr. O'Donnell man, are you not? A. I never said I was; but I am so much a Dr. O'Donnell man that I would give him justice.

Q. In fact, you looked out for his interests? A. No, never.

Q. Didn't you vote for him?

MR. DORN: You are not required to state. A. I will state that I did not vote for him.

By MR. CLUNIE: You swear that this acting Democratic Judge called off three names for Sullivan where Banks' name was on the ticket? Did you swear that? A. I did not swear that. I swear the names were called, but I don't know whether they were there or not.

Q. You know it was a felony to do that, don't you? Didn't you know if an officer of election sat there and called out a name and it was not on the ticket, it was a felony? A. I don't know whether it was on the ticket or not.

Q. You were standing right there, weren't you? A. No; I was such a distance away I couldn't see.

Q. How far were you? A. About five feet.

Q. You could see, couldn't you? A. Not for a good sight. If the ballots were left plain open so anybody could see them, I might see it.

Q. Wasn't the ballot open? A. No, sir; they had their hands in between, reading them off.

Q. Did he have the ballot down this way [indicating]? A. He had it first and the ballot down, and he put his hand across it—so.

Q. In this way [indicating], an open hand held on each side of the ballot? A. Yes, sir; but his hands were in such a position that I couldn't see.

Q. Did you ask him to remove his hand? A. No, I didn't ask him.

Q. Why didn't you do that? A. Because I don't think he would have done it.

Q. And you didn't take the trouble to ask him to do it? A. I believe Mr. Brown—

Q. [Interrupting.] I didn't ask you about Mr. Brown? I asked you what you told this man? A. Those three ballots were counted and strung, and gone.

Q. Don't you know as an officer of election you had the right to look at it? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you swear that as an officer of election, if you thought a ballot had been called wrong, you had no right to look at it? A. I swear I was in doubt about it.

Q. And you didn't attempt to look at it? A. I didn't know I had a right to look at it after it was gone.

Q. Did that occur? A. Something of the kind was running through my mind that I did not know. When I went there I was perfectly ignorant of politics in all ways, I told you.

Q. Yes, you have told us that a dozen times. It occurred to me that you are just a little bit against the Democratic party and always throw dirt on them? A. No: I don't want to throw dirt on them.

Q. This ticket came up, and it was all called out straight down to Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then Sullivan's name was called? A. Yes: it was called.

Q. He is pretty well up on the ticket, isn't he? A. I couldn't tell you.

Q. Don't you know the relative positions on the ticket? A. No, sir; I couldn't tell you any of them, except I believe Mr. Morrow was near the head of the ticket.

Q. Mr. Morrow was right at the head of the ticket, wasn't he? A. I believe he was, but I couldn't tell you.

Q. Don't you know, as a matter of fact, that the Senator comes right under Mr. Morrow? A. I couldn't tell you.

Q. You never read the ticket? A. I have observed it a number of times, but still I couldn't tell you in what rotation it come out.

Q. The ballot was called, and Mr. Sullivan's name was called, and you were there representing the Republican party? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You don't think it anything strange that Mr. Sullivan's name was called? A. I believe that there were many tickets scratched, and I didn't think it anything strange, until the third one came, and then I thought there was something wrong, and I took the watcher to task about it, and asked him did he notice that, and he said he hadn't seen anything wrong.

Q. He told you he had been looking at the ballots, didn't he? A. Yes; he told me he had kept a close watch.

Q. He had a clean opportunity of seeing it? A. Yes, sir; he had a clean opportunity of seeing it.

Q. And if you had wanted to walk from here around the table: why you could have seen, couldn't you? A. I suppose so; but it didn't strike me at the time.

Q. Don't you know you were just waiting to get something of this kind to testify to? A. No, sir; I didn't; for it is the last thing in the world I want to go into Court.

Q. You swore three times you were there in the interest of the Republican party, and you expected treachery, and you didn't walk around three feet to look at the ballot? A. No, sir; before I had hardly made up my mind the ballot was removed and put on the string.

Q. How long did it take to count off a ballot? A. Some of them in a minute, and they were running through very quick.

Q. They run a ticket off in a minute? A. Well, two or three minutes.

Q. Was it a minute, or two minutes, or three minutes? A. Well, it was run very fast.

Q. Tell me how fast they run a ballot off there? A. It was very rapid.

Q. You wouldn't swear they called a ballot in a minute? A. I don't suppose it was two or three minutes, but it went off very straight.

Q. As a matter of fact, don't you know it took them four or five minutes to count every ballot there? Don't you know that in your heart? A. No; I think there were some of them counted over quicker than that.

Q. How many ballots were cast in that precinct? A. There were two hundred and ninety-six, I believe, out of three hundred and four.

Q. How long were you counting them? A. We were from probably seven o'clock—

Q. [Interrupting.] How many? A. I think there were two hundred and ninety-six in the box.

Q. You started in at seven o'clock at night to count? A. Somewhere about that.

Q. About eight o'clock, maybe. It took you about an hour to get ready? A. Yes, sir; probably we were about an hour getting ready; about eight o'clock, probably.

Q. Eight o'clock election night you commenced to count ballots? How long did you continue to count? When did you finish? A. I don't know. There were two or three little recesses.

Q. Did you adjourn two or three hours at a time? A. Sometimes they would take a recess when the reporters would come and examine the books.

Q. You took no long recesses? A. There was one long recess of about two or three hours.

Q. What did you do during that time? Where did you go at that recess? A. It was my time off when the recess was taken at six o'clock, and I went home; I went home about five o'clock, and I came back.

Q. How do you know there was a recess taken? A. I went home, and I come back again.

Q. What time did you come back? A. I come back when they changed.

Q. You were there when they declared the recess? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there a vote taken? A. No, sir; it was a generally understood thing with all hands to take a recess.

Q. Where did that occur—what precinct? A. It was in the Second of the Thirty-third.

Q. That was on what night? A. It was on the last night of the reading.

Q. You took the recess for over two hours, did you? A. I guess there was a recess of something in the neighborhood of two hours.

Q. Was there any objection made by any member of the Board? A. No; no objections by anybody.

Q. It was universally agreed? A. It was universally agreed.

Q. There was no bad Democrat got in and declared a recess, was there? A. No, sir.

Q. You were there at the time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. If any Democratic Inspector got in and declared a recess, you would have objected, wouldn't you? A. I didn't know but it was all right.

Q. You were there and there was no objection? A. No, sir.

Q. And no body questioned it? A. No, sir.

Q. What became of the ballots during that time? A. The ballot box was locked.

Q. Who locked it? A. I believe McPherson told me to lock it and put the key in my pocket.

Q. For two hours you had this key in your pocket, did you? A. I believe the key was in my pocket.

Q. You didn't know what became of that, did you? A. Oh, yes; I knew some portion of the time I had it in my pocket.

Q. You went out of the room, didn't you? A. No, they were in the room pretty much.

Q. Did you go out then? A. No, I was not out then.

Q. Didn't you go out? A. I might have walked to the door.

Q. Didn't you go any further than that? A. No, sir; not outside of the place—not through the recess. I went home about five, and I came back again about six, and about the time of changing at six there was a recess.

Q. And they let you lock the ballot box? A. Yes, they never interfered.

Q. And took the key? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Yet you say they were trying to rob you, a Republican candidate there? A. I don't say they were trying to rob me.

Q. Well, robbing the candidates? A. No, I don't say that they were.

Q. You have not intimated that in your examination pretty strong, have you? A. I couldn't swear that there was anything fraudulent in it.

Q. Don't you know, as a matter of fact, that there was not any fraud in it, and their letting you, a rabid Republican, take the key and carry it around? A. I don't know as there was anybody that has known, as you say, that I was a partisan.

Q. You knew you were a Republican, didn't you? A. Well, they knew that; but they didn't know I was as extreme as you think I am.

Q. And they let you carry that key around there, and you didn't think there was any fraud there? A. There was one standing at the back, and I believe he had his elbow on it, and a man by the name of Hefron come, and he said, "Here, there are two boys around those ballot boxes."

Q. That was the longest recess you took during that time, wasn't it? A. Yes, I believe that was the only recess of any consequence—the only one while I was there, except when the newspaper reporters wanted to get figures.

Q. That didn't take long? A. No.

Q. You finished counting, when? A. I should judge it was in the neighborhood of five o'clock.

Q. You finished when? A. In the neighborhood of five o'clock.

Q. You finished what day? Was that the eighth or the ninth, which? A. It was the eight, I guess; in the neighborhood of the eighth.

Q. If it took all that time for you to count two hundred and ninety-six ballots, how do you account for the statement that one was counted in a minute, or two or three minutes? A. Some of them were run off there very rapidly.

Q. And some of them were not called so rapidly? A. Some of them were not. Sometimes they read off very well, and sometimes they read off very quick.

Q. Will you swear that there was any ballot counted in two or three minutes? A. I wouldn't swear to any such thing.

Q. You swore to that a minute ago, didn't you? A. Well, I suppose there was some of them read off in two or three minutes.

Q. You won't swear what time? A. No; of course I didn't have my watch with me, or time any of them, but it seemed to me very quick.

Q. You were there during the time they were counting the ballots from State Senator down, and you didn't have an opportunity to come around and look at it? A. I suppose I could have.

Q. Nobody asked you to do it? A. No, sir.

Q. You had every opportunity to do it if you wanted to? A. Yes, sir.

Q. After these ballots got on the string, you were very suspicious? You thought something wrong had been done? You didn't ask anybody to look over the ballots? A. No; I didn't think I had a right to do so.

Q. Didn't that occur to you? A. Yes, sir; I wondered in my mind whether I had the right to do so or not.

Q. Are you bashful? A. No, I am not very bashful.

Q. If you thought a felony had been committed, and you thought Banks had been robbed, why didn't you ask somebody to look at the ballot? A. Because it didn't strike me to do so.

Q. That never occurred to you? A. No, sir; it did not occur to me to ask anybody to do so.

Q. Don't you think, as a reasonable man, that the thing would have occurred to you to ask somebody to have looked at them? A. Yes; I do think now it would have been right to have done so; I do.

Q. Do you swear that Mr. Banks' name was on any one of those tickets? A. I can't say that there was any name.

Q. Will you swear that there was a ticket called wrong there? A. No, sir; I cannot. It was only in my own mind.

Q. Then all the testimony you have given us on the stand was your own imagination as to what had been or might have been done? A. I said when everybody was in the room and they were keeping the Republican watcher back, there was an opportunity for anybody to do anything they wanted.

Q. You won't swear that it was done, will you? A. No. I don't know Mr. Banks or know a single man on the ticket. The only men I know in town directly in politics is Mayor Pond and Strother.

Q. You are well acquainted with Strother, ain't you? A. I was in the Election Board there, and I saw some of this kind of business, that I wouldn't be very much flattered to belong to the same party that he was working for. It struck me so that I felt kind of uneasy about the matter.

Q. You were uneasy about Strother, were you? A. Yes, sir; he was on the floor and uneasy, and he said he was afraid it would make him sick, and I was only sorry it didn't make him sick.

Q. You were sorry it didn't make him sick? A. Yes; I wanted to see the thing go along smooth.

Q. Were you interested in this business? A. No, sir; no interest at all.

Q. How did you come here? A. I was asked to come.

Q. Who asked you? A. I don't know who asked me.

Q. Do you swear positively you don't know who asked you? A. I swear positively that I don't know—I might have to give you, I suppose, the whole of it before I can get at it fairly; I told Mr. Dorn when I commenced I am nervous, and it is easy to start me astray, for I am not used to this kind of business.

By MR. DORN: Just stop a minute and calm yourself. A. About a week or ten days ago, McPherson, who lives next door to me, asked me if I would come down; there was a meeting; something about—he didn't state exactly what it was about—but there was a meeting for the Republicans down there, and I didn't know anything about it; but I went down and saw Mr. Smith, and he asked me several questions about it, and I gave him my views; and he said that was all right, and he asked me what time I would be home, and I said most any time from twelve to two I would be home; so he said he would call on me when I was wanted. And I think it was last night two young men came up to my house, me and my wife and the children were at the door, and he said he was going to have a meeting down there again to-night, and Mr. Smith wanted to see me; and when I went there he asked me would I come here, and what time I should come: so I told him two o'clock.

Q. Where was this meeting? A. It was corner of Dupont and Union.

Q. Who were there? A. I couldn't tell you who were there. Me and McPherson was there.

Q. Who is McPherson? A. McPherson, I believe, is the Republican Judge. I don't know.

Q. Who is this man Smith? A. I don't know; I couldn't tell you who he is.

Q. How do you know his name is Smith? A. Because I heard them call him Smith.

Q. Who did you hear call him Smith? A. Parties there.

Q. You went up to the man you didn't know anything about? A. They told me to come there, and when I got there they introduced me to that man as Mr. Smith.

Q. They introduced you to Mr. Smith, and that was why you knew who he was? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did't you know before who he was? A. No, sir; and I don't know now who he is.

Q. Didn't they say what they wanted? A. They said there was a little investigation going on about the business up in that precinct.

Q. Smith had set up an investigation, had he? A. I don't know. I was introduced to him, and I don't know Smith, or anything about him, and I couldn't tell you what he was doing.

Q. He heard your statement, did he? A. Yes, sir; he heard a portion of it, but not one twentieth part as much as you have brought out of me.

[Here the witness was temporarily withdrawn, and the further hearing was continued until to-morrow morning at ten o'clock.]

EIGHTH DAY.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA,)
THURSDAY, January 10, 1889—10 o'clock A. M. }

GEORGE HESKETH.

Recalled for further cross interrogatories:

By MR. CLUNIE: You told us fully yesterday, on cross-examination, did you, in reply to my questions, all that was said to you by those people at the polls; one of them hustled you out, as you call it? Answer—Yes, sir; I believe it was full.

Q. Then you testified all that occurred was that this man asked you to get out, and you got out without saying anything; is that it? A. Yes, sir; I kind of thought I had some rights. I said I thought I ought to have some rights, but of course it was decided I was only additional Inspector, and as he was Inspector, he took the place that was there.

Q. The Board acted on it, did they? A. No, I don't know as the Board said anything about it.

Q. Did you appeal to the Board in any way? A. I did not.

Q. How was it decided? A. When he came there and took the place, I always gave the place to him.

Q. You don't call that hustling you out, do you? A. He insisted that it was his right, and that I had no right.

Q. Did he say you had no rights? A. He said I had no right; that while the Inspector was there I had no rights.

Q. You said he said you had no rights. A. He said I was an additional Inspector.

Q. Just tell us what he said. Did he say you had no rights there? A. No, I won't swear that he said I had no rights there; and he said that I was an additional Inspector, and he said that when he was there he would take the position, and he did take it.

Q. You swore yesterday, on cross-examination, that if you had wanted to, you had full opportunity to see these tickets, didn't you? A. No, I don't know that I had.

Q. Didn't you have full opportunity to see them if you wanted to go there behind the man, to see every ticket? A. If I had wanted to go there, I could, I suppose. I suppose if I had went there and made a demand to see them, I could.

Q. Did you have to make a demand? Couldn't you, by going behind the Inspector, see every ticket? A. I suppose I could.

Q. Don't you know you could? A. I believe when the ballots were on file I said I didn't know as I had any right to question them.

Q. I ask you if, as a matter of fact, you had wanted to have gone and seen the tickets, you could not have seen every one of them? A. I believe I could when they were in the man's hands, of course.

Q. What do you mean when you swear to this: "Q. You were not allowed to see the tickets? A. No, sir?" A. How do you mean?

Q. You swore that way when it was not the fact? A. Of course, if I swore that I was not allowed, it should have been that I could not see the tickets from where I was.

Q. [Reading], "You were not allowed to see the tickets? A. No, sir." That is the way you swore. Is that wrong? A. Of course, I suppose it is wrong to that extent. I couldn't see from where I was—only occasionally get a glimpse of them.

Q. If you had wanted to go around the Inspector, you could have seen every one of them, couldn't you? A. I suppose I could.

Q. What do you mean by that? A. I suppose he would have given me the privilege of seeing them.

Q. You were giving a private conversation that occurred at this little interview you had with Captain Smith. When you got before this court of inquiry, what occurred? A. I don't know as there was anything occurred any more than they said there was some trouble up in the precinct, and they wanted to see how it could be arranged.

Q. Who said there was trouble in the precinct? A. They said the precinct was in some trouble, and of course I knew that it was.

Q. Tell me who "they" were. You said, "They said there was some trouble up in the precinct." Tell me who "they" were? A. I think that originally it was Will McPherson that told me, when he asked me to go see them, and that is the first.

Q. Then, when McPherson came to see you, he told you that there was some trouble in that precinct? A. Of course, he told me something was wrong there, and they wanted to have some understanding among themselves.

Q. Now, tell about Captain Smith. What occurred between you and him when you got down to this court of inquiry? A. There was very little said; only, that he might want me in a day or two, and asked me could I stay home, or where could he find me. I said I was not doing anything, and I could be home most any day from twelve to two; and he wanted me to come and give my evidence.

Q. That was all that occurred? A. That was all that occurred of any importance.

Q. Then, all that occurred between you and Captain Smith, was that he said he wanted you as a witness? A. He probably asked me what I had seen there.

Q. What did he ask you? A. He asked me about the evidence I would give here. He asked me what I had seen.

Q. What did you tell him? A. Partly as to the evidence. Just about as it is, I guess. It may have been altered in the telling of it.

Q. But did you tell him of it as you have given it in your evidence? A. As I have given it here.

Q. Then you left Captain Smith, did you? A. Yes, sir; I don't know that I left him. He asked them up to take a little something at the bar. I believe they took something a couple of times. They asked me what I would take, and I said I would take a little brandy.

Q. I don't care about that. There was then nothing further about the case? A. Nothing further.

Q. And you went home? A. I went home.

Q. When did you go to see Captain Smith again? A. I went to see Captain Smith again, I believe, the night before I was called; I think it was the last night.

Q. What did you want to see him again for? A. Because two men came up and asked me to see him.

Q. To go and see Captain Smith again? A. Yes, sir; to go down there.

Q. They didn't ask you to come out here and testify? A. No, sir; they did not ask me to come out here and testify. They asked me to go down there; that Captain Smith was down and wanted to see me down there.

Q. You went down again? A. Yes, sir; I went down.

Q. And you talked this matter over again, did you? A. Yes, sir; just about the same the second as the first.

Q. You repeated again for fear Captain Smith might forget it? A. It was just about a repetition of the first.

Q. It was not done for fear you might forget anything? A. Oh, no. I couldn't say what Captain Smith thought.

Q. You don't know why you repeated it? A. He merely asked questions, and I don't know that he even made any note of it.

Q. Was he questioning you there the second time? A. He kind of talked a little, and might have asked a question here and there.

Q. He had other people there besides you? A. There were several others.

Q. And he asked them questions? A. I suppose he did.

Q. Then did he ask you about coming out here and testifying? A. He asked me if I could come out here, and I told him I could.

Q. And then you came out here the first day and testified? A. I came out and testified.

Q. You were served with no subpoena? A. No subpoena.

Q. And no fees were paid you? A. No fees.

Q. Then you did not see Captain Smith again until you came into Court? A. No, sir; I didn't see him until I was in Court. I was in Court an hour or two before he came, and then he came in.

Q. Did you then talk to him? A. No, sir; I was sitting alone over there.

Q. From the night you left this court of inquiry the second time until the time you got in Court at Captain Smith's request to come, you hadn't seen him? A. I had not seen him.

Q. You are just as sure of that as of anything else you have testified to? A. Just as I live.

Q. You didn't talk with him down in the Registrar's office? A. I never saw him but three times in my life.

Q. Weren't you down in the Registrar's office, having a consultation with somebody? A. With Captain Smith?

Q. With anybody. A. I might have spoke, but I don't know that Captain Smith was there, or anything about it, for I never was introduced to him in my life. I might have spoken to Captain Smith some time in my life and not known it.

Q. Who did you speak with that day about your testimony? A. I had no consultation in the Registrar's office, or words about it.

Q. You didn't speak about what you were going to testify? A. No, sir; no such matter was before me.

Q. You are just as sure of that as you are of anything you have testified? A. Yes, sir; I am sure that there was not anything talked of what I would give in the testimony.

Q. And you swear now that you, Mr. Banks, and Mr. Dorn did not have a talk down in the Registrar's office, at which you told Mr. Banks and Mr. Dorn about these transactions? A. In the Registrar's office?

Q. Yes, sir; in the Registrar's office. You know where I mean, don't you? A. If I did, I don't know anything about it.

Q. Don't you know where the Registrar's office is? A. I believe it is on the lower floor.

Q. You have been in there several times, haven't you? A. Of course I was in there.

Q. You went in there when you were appointed an officer of election? A. Yes, sir; I went in there to get my papers.

Q. You know where that office is? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You went in there with Senator Banks and Mr. Dorn? Were you down there talking? A. Not to the best of my knowledge. I might have spoken in there, but I never spoke to Mr. Dorn or Mr. Banks. I never knew the gentleman until yesterday. I might have seen him, but I never knew him.

Q. And you never talked in the Registration office? A. I might have, but I didn't know them. I know I saw Mr. Dorn in the Registrar's office before the election took place.

Q. But you didn't talk with Mr. Dorn down in the Registrar's office? A. Not that I am aware of.

Q. Wouldn't you have remembered it, if you had? A. I think I talked with him and Mr. Smith right at the corner, standing, before I came into Court.

Q. But you didn't talk with him down in the Registrar's? A. Not that I am aware of.

Q. Wouldn't you have remembered it if you had talked with him down in the Registrar's office? A. I think I would.

Q. Then you swear positively you did not, do you? A. It is very strange to me. It surprises me if I ever did.

Q. Your memory is not very good, is it? A. Everybody that has ever known me tells me I have a very good memory.

Q. Then you won't swear whether you talked with Mr. Dorn or Mr. Banks down in the Registrar's office, the other day? A. If I was sure I had, I would swear to it.

Q. And yet you won't swear you were down in the Registrar's office, the other day before nine, and talked with them there. That is all.

Redirect Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: I did ask you what you knew about this case, didn't I? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you did give me a statement of what you knew, and I did make some notes on this paper, didn't I? A. Yes, sir; at the corner here.

Q. Where did that occur? A. It occurred right at the bend where I come in this room.

Q. It was not down in the Registrar's office? A. No, sir; it was here.

Q. After the Court adjourned a couple of days ago and when several gentlemen and myself went down in the Registrar's office because this Court-room was closed, didn't you go along down there with me? A. No, sir: I was not here several days ago. I never was this way.

Q. Where was it that you told me what you knew about the case when I asked you? A. Right at the corner here, as you turn around to come into this room.

Q. In the corridor? A. In the corridor, yes, sir: at the corner.

Q. And if I went to the Registrar's office during the adjournment of Court a day or two ago with some other gentlemen, you were not one of them? A. No, sir: I was not one of them, for I never was here only day before yesterday and yesterday. I was never in this Court and so how could I have ever seen or talked with you, I don't know.

Q. You said on cross examination that you thought the Republicans ought to have had an equal show up in that precinct. What did you mean by that? A. Well, I am not quite sure that there was such a conversation took place.

Q. You don't understand me then, probably. You told Mr. Clunie that while the votes were being counted there, you didn't think the Republicans were getting a fair show, because Brick Butler was on one side spreading himself out and taking so much space, and you were rather led to say, I think, that there was a Republican on the other side. Was that the case? A. No, sir: it was not the case. There were Democrats all right around the line on the other side.

Q. Tell us how they were located there. Here was the caller in the center [illustrating]. A. Allowing that this reporter's table is where the Clerk sat, and here [showing] was a man reading the ballots, and the Democrats, say, all around that side right up to him. Then Mr. Butler got on the other side where I said that the Republican watcher had a right to be.

Q. And you thought if the Democrats occupied one side, that the Republicans ought at least to have a show on the other side, without looking through Brick Butler? A. That was all I did.

Q. That was what you meant to say? A. Yes, sir: that was what I meant to say.

Q. You were asked something about what the police officer told you, and you said he read some instructions? A. Yes, sir.

Q. As a matter of fact, wasn't that a circular that he read, issued by the Chief of Police, and issued from the office of Chief of Police, by Chief Crowley, informing each Election Board that there were to be duly acce-dated representatives from the Democratic County Committee and from the Republican County Committee, and instructing the police officers at each precinct to allow the representatives with cards from the two County Committees to have access to the rooms there at all times, and if necessary, and there was no room for anybody else, to put everybody else out, and to keep them in: wasn't that the gist of the circular from the Chief of Police's office? A. The principal portion of it was that he said that he had a right to put them out if there was any disturbance, something to that effect, because at the time there was a little dispute, and the other man was not to go in there and take the place that Butler had, and there was a little dispute there, and he got up and brought a card, and read it off about what has been spoken. But there was nothing in question about it.

Q. You said something about there being a recess one day during the counting of the vote, I believe the last day. By a recess do you mean that you went away from the polling place? A. No, sir; I didn't go away.

Q. Did you go from the polls during the recess? A. No, sir.

Q. Were you out of sight of the ballot box during the recess? A. No, sir, I never was out of sight.

Q. Were the Republican and Democratic Judges in the polling place during the recess, as you call it? A. Yes, sir; I am positive that he was there some portion of the time, I think they took the recess about six until probably half past seven, or seven and eight some time.

Q. By recess you don't mean they quit the business of the Board, but you simply mean that they took a recess? A. They took a recess.

Q. You didn't go away and leave the ballots in charge of anybody but the officers of the Board, did you? A. No, sir.

Q. You didn't walk out of the place? A. No, sir.

Q. You kept charge of it all the time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you, as Inspector of the box, say that it was not interfered with in any way? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you kept the key of the box in your possession? A. Yes, sir; there was a gentleman in the room with me all the time.

Q. You mean simply you took a recess? A. Took a recess; yes, sir.

Q. And quit counting votes for that time, in order to take a recess? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the only other recess was when the reporters wanted information, or somebody from the Registrar's office, you would stop counting then long enough to give them the information? A. Yes, sir; there were stops, but there were other little stops. It was not brought out in evidence sometimes. They would bring in a little something to drink.

Q. We don't presume they kept counting without stopping to draw breath. What Mr. Clunie meant was if, during the recess, you stopped counting the votes. A little interruption of that kind he didn't refer to.

Recross Examination.

By MR. CLUNIE: Then I understand you that the Board did not take a recess. They just said, "Take a recess," is that it? A. It was an understanding with all hands to stop counting votes.

Q. Wasn't there a recess declared? A. There was nothing declared about it. It was a general understanding that we would stop a little while, and we stopped counting.

Q. And you know, as a matter of fact, that the Republican Judge and yourself were in the room all the time? A. I don't know about the Republican Judge being in all the time, but there was one of the Republican Clerks there, and the Republican Judge might have been there all the time, but I couldn't possibly say.

Q. You think the Republican Clerk and yourself were there all the time, do you? A. I couldn't swear that he was at the box with me, but I know he was there all the time.

Q. Where were the Democratic Clerks? A. They were around.

Q. Were they in the room? A. In the room?

Q. They didn't go out at all? A. Some of them might, and they might not.

Q. Don't you know they were all out of the room? A. No, sir.

Q. Would you be willing to swear they did not all go out of the room? A. Yes: I would be willing to swear they did not all go out of the room.

Q. Who staid in the room? A. I couldn't say; but I think the room was crowded all the time, as previously.

Q. How many people were there sitting around shutting you out? A. I was on the opposite side of the table, on the corner this way [showing], angling, and of course, the way I sat I could not—even if a ballot was laying plain—I could not have seen it fairly from where I was.

Q. Who was sitting around that were keeping you out, and wouldn't get up and give you your place? A. I didn't attempt to go in there where the man was that read the ballots.

Q. Did you ask Brick Butler to get up and let you sit down there? A. No, I did not ask.

Q. You didn't ask the gentleman sitting next to him? A. No, sir.

Q. How do you know they were all Democrats? A. Most of them all had ribbons on, and they showed it in various ways.

Q. What ribbon did they have? A. They had the United States Deputy Marshal's ribbon, and one thing and another.

Q. They were Marshals, sitting around, were they? A. I think it was them that was not Marshals.

Q. Do you swear to that now? You know you are under oath now. A. I know they passed those ribbons around pretty freely whenever one wanted to leave.

Q. You disagreed with Marshal Franks about appointing those people, did you? A. No, sir.

Q. You didn't want him to appoint them, did you? A. No, sir.

Q. You thought he appointed too many? A. No.

Q. You said he passed the ribbons around freely? A. There were so many different ones coming and going all the time you could not keep track of them.

Q. And you wanted Mr. Franks to appoint a sufficient number for you to keep track of them, was that it? A. No; there was a number to be there—two at a time, I think.

Q. And you thought there were too many? A. No; not too many.

Q. Didn't you say there were a great many there? A. To the best of my impression they shot off once in a while through the same shell.

Q. These people sitting around there were all Marshals and had these Marshal's badges on, or else they were members of the Board of Election? A. Yes, sir; they might be.

Q. And you thought it was unfair that they did not get up and let you sit down? A. No; I thought it was unfair they were not allowed the privilege on one side.

Q. And they did not voluntarily get up and ask you to come and sit down? A. No, I did not ask to sit down; but I tried to get Mr. Butler out and to get what was supposed to be the Republican watcher in his place. I tried frequently, and I tried my best to do so.

Q. But you say your reason for saying it was unfair was that these men all stood around there. They were all Democrats and the Republicans were not there. Isn't that what you said in reply to Mr. Dorn? A. It kind of struck me it was not right that the man should sit alongside the one that was calling off.

Q. You didn't ask to sit there? A. No, sir.

Q. Yet they did not voluntarily get up and allow you to sit down? A. No, I was not referring to that.

PAUL BOUGRAND.

A witness on behalf of respondent, was duly sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Where do you reside? Answer—No. 115 Jasper Place.

Q. You acted as Clerk in the same precinct—the Second of the Thirty-third, did you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know a man by the name of Brick Butler? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see him there at that election? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you see him doing? A. I saw him sitting around there most all the time, and the last morning he called off ballots.

Q. About how many ballots? A. I couldn't say. From one to about five, I guess.

Q. Do you know whether he was an officer of the Board? A. No, sir; I do not. I thought he was all the time, being that he was sitting there all the time.

Q. But you are positive that on the last morning he called off some of the ballots, are you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you state how many? A. No, sir; I couldn't state exactly how many.

Q. You heard the testimony of Mr. Hesketh, with regard to the manner in which the ballots were held by the man who called them. Tell us whether the Republicans had a fair show there or not. A. To my knowledge there was one Republican on one side and a Democrat on the other, and there was a Republican sat behind him on another table, but the man that sat behind could not hear very well, and another thing, he was hard of hearing and he could not hear a man, and the way the young man was calling off the ballots, he had his table like that [showing], and it was leaned over that way.

Q. He held the ballots on a board which they used, didn't he? A. Yes, sir; on a sort of slant.

Q. And he put that board down in his lap? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did he hold his hands? A. He had to hold them that way [showing], to hold the rule.

Q. Did you see him holding his hands on the side of it, so these people could not see it? A. Not to my recollection.

Q. You didn't pay especial attention to that? A. No, sir; I could not.

Q. You were tallying, were you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You heard the testimony that during the time of the calling Democrats occupied one side of the caller, and Butler occupied the other portion, and he refused to give way? A. He did at one time, but he gave way afterwards.

Q. How long did that last? A. I don't know; but I was busy all the time.

Q. You are positive that he called ballots, then? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many, did you state? A. From one to five. I cannot exactly remember.

Q. Why did he quit calling them? A. The other Clerk came in.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: Where do you reside? A. No. 115 Jasper Place.

Q. How long have you lived there? A. I have lived there just one week to-day.

Q. Where did you live before that? A. No. 12 Virginia Place.

Q. How long have you lived there? A. Two years.

Q. Where did you live before that? A. I lived at No. 338 Vallejo Street—some number like that—between Powell and Mason Streets.

Q. How long did you live there? A. I lived there about two years.

Q. Where did you live before that? A. Scott Place, No. 21.

Q. Whereabouts is that? A. That is between Broadway and Pacific, and Powell and Mason Streets.

Q. How long did you live there? A. I lived in Scott Place about a year and some months.

Q. You lived with your father prior to that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you a member of this Board of Election in that precinct? A. I was up there as a watcher.

Q. And you watched the tallying, did you? A. I did for about half an hour, and they put me in Mr. Galleano's place as Tallier.

Q. Who put you there? A. One of the County Committeemen—I believe he was the County Committeeman—Mr. Jones.

Q. Did he do that himself, without a vote of the Board? A. I believe so. They were all willing; nobody made any dispute.

Q. They didn't vote on it? A. No, sir; they saw Mr. Galleano could not very well hear the name, and it took him a very long time to tally out one or two names, or hunt up the name, and finally they asked me.

Q. Who asked you? A. Mr. Jones.

Q. Mr. Jones displaced Galleano and put you in his place? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Jones is a member of the Republican County Committee? A. And he put Galleano in my place.

Q. As watcher? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He did that, did he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were there most of the time, weren't you? A. No, sir; I would go on at twelve and go off at six in the morning.

Q. Was Mr. Hesketh on with you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you notice up there any time any of the Democratic members of the Board take any advantage of anybody? A. I never saw him take any advantage.

Q. Did you see anybody take any advantage of Mr. Hesketh? A. They would laugh at him, and one thing and another.

Q. Did you laugh at him? A. Of course; we all had to laugh. We couldn't help ourselves.

Q. Did you call him a crank? A. I didn't hear them call him a crank.

Q. If they had called him a crank, you could have heard it? A. Of course I could.

Q. Then he was mistaken when he said they called him a crank? A. I don't think they did.

Q. It could not be possible they called him a crank and they laughed at him, could it? A. They just laughed.

Q. If you were there taking down the tally, at any time did you observe anything on the part of the Democratic members of the Board of Election that was wrong or improper? A. Not that I could see.

Q. You were there all the time? A. I was on my watch.

Q. And you were there for the Republican Committee? A. I was.

Q. And if anything had been wrong you would have tried to have seen it? A. Yes, sir; certainly.

Q. From the time you were there everything was conducted fair and square? A. As far as I could see. I know my tallying corresponded.

Q. With the other Clerk? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And there was no trouble? A. No, sir.

Q. On his part either? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you notice anything wrong? A. Not that I could see.

BENJAMIN GALLEANO.

A witness on behalf of respondent, was duly sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories:

By MR. DORN: Mr. Galleano, where do you reside? A. No. 21 Valparaiso Street.

Q. You are the Clerk who was displaced, and Mr. Bougrand put into your place? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you do after that? A. I was behind, and I was in his place.

Q. Do you know a man by the name of Brick Butler? A. I do.

Q. Did you see him at the last day of the calling in that precinct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he call any ballots? A. Well, he did.

Q. About how many? A. Now, I couldn't say.

Q. You can't say how many? A. No, sir.

Q. Are you positive that he called any? A. Yes, sir; he may have called one or more. I don't know because I thought that he was one of the officers of the Board and paid no more attention.

Q. Do you know whether he was an officer of the Board? A. No, sir; I do not. In fact, I did not know the officers except one Republican Judge and another—

Q. Were you present on the last morning when they stopped counting votes for a while? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was the Democratic Inspector there? A. I don't know who the Democratic Inspector was—yes, I think I do, but I don't believe he was there.

Q. Was the Democratic Judge there, or either of the Democratic Judges? A. The Republican Judge was there, I know.

Q. How about the Democratic Judge? A. I don't know.

Q. Was there ever a time during the whole count when all of the Democratic officers went away and left the Republicans in charge of it? A. Oh, no. I think they were there, just the same as we were.

Q. On this morning that they stopped counting, did the officers of election go away or did they just simply stop counting and take a rest? Which was it? A. After the count they took a rest, and then we said to fix the books—ballot books.

Q. This rest was after the ballots had been counted, was it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. After all the ballots had been counted? A. Sure.

Q. Are you positive about that? A. Now I come to think, there was a rest before the ballots were counted, so they would not get through, because they said we would not get out to the City Hall before such a time.

Q. Did the officers of election go away and leave the place and desert it, or did they stay there and take care of the ballots and remain in charge of the room? A. Yes, sir.

Q. All the time? A. To the best of my knowledge they did.

Cross Examination.

By MR. CLUNIE: You ain't sure about what the officers of election said at the time this adjournment occurred? A. No, sir; I am not.

Q. You know you were there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you know Mr. Hesketh was there? A. No.

Q. Do you know Mr. Jones, or do you know Mr. Brown? Was Mr. Brown there? A. Mr. Brown, I believe, went away in the morning after they were all through with the count.

Q. You are not sure whether the Democratic men went away or not, are you? A. There were some there.

Q. But you don't know how many? A. No.

Q. Did you see any of the Democrats there abuse Mr. Hesketh? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see anybody there attempt to deprive Mr. Hesketh of any of his rights as a member of the Board? A. No, sir. The only question I saw there was between that gentleman writing there—they had an argument once in a while—once in a while it would happen. He insisted that Mr. Hesketh was an Assistant Inspector, and Mr. Hesketh insisted he was Inspector; and they wouldn't have it that way, so I didn't know which was which.

Q. Mr. Hesketh labored under the impression that he was the Inspector? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was the dispute that was going on? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were there all the time, were you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were a member of the Board? A. Yes, sir; I was a member of the Board.

Q. Did that Board do anything improper that you know of? A. Not as I know of.

Q. And they tried to do everything fair, as far as you saw? A. Yes, sir.

Q. They didn't try to deprive Mr. Banks of any votes, did they? A. No, sir.

Q. Or to give any benefit to Mr. Sullivan? A. No, sir.

MR. DORN: Will you admit that James Butler, alias Brick Butler, referred to in the testimony of the last three witnesses, was not a member of the Election Board on the day of election, having been removed on the last day of precinct registration, which was some fifteen or twenty days prior to the holding of the general election?

MR. CLUNIE: Will you admit that Mr. Butler was a member of the Precinct Board of Election two years ago, and appointed by Mr. Smiley?

MR. DORN: That I do not know.

MR. CLUNIE: Then I will ask the question of Mr. Jacobs, the Deputy Registrar, when he comes.

LOUIS N. JACOBS.

A witness on behalf of respondent, was duly sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Mr. Jacobs, what position, if any, do you hold? A. Deputy Registrar.

Q. Where were you at the time of the contest of election for Mayor was being tried? A. Where was I employed at that time?

Q. Yes, sir. A. In the County Clerk's office; Clerk of Department Ten. Q. At the time the Twenty-first Senatorial District was being canvassed in Judge Finn's Court, in the contest over the office of Mayor between O'Donnell and Mayor Pond, did you take off any tally? A. One precinct.

Q. What were your opportunities for taking off a correct tally? A. I sat right at the head, where the ticket was placed on the needle.

Q. And where you could see the ballots as they came out? A. Not as they came out but as they were being strung.

Q. Were you able to see them well enough to take off an accurate tally? A. I wouldn't call it an accurate tally, no. One that would satisfy my own mind in the counting.

Q. What tally, if any, did you take off? A. Mr. Banks and Mr. Sullivan.

Q. What precinct was that? A. The Second of the Thirty-third.

Q. You took a tally of the Second Precinct of the Thirty-third Assembly District. How did you happen to take that tally off? A. Mr. Williams was in the room and was sitting in a chair in front of the table, and some parties came in—

Q. [Interrupting.] I don't care about that. Was the reason why the tally was taken off that it was the opinion of people who had observed things that the count was wrong? A. I don't know what the reason was. I merely relieved Mr. Williams to go see some parties, and I took that tally of that one precinct.

Q. What was the result of that tally? A. Do you mean what were my figures?

Q. Yes, sir. A. Mr. Banks one hundred and twenty-two and Sullivan one hundred and sixty-six.

Q. What was the official figure there? A. If I recollect right, I think after looking at the record, it was eighty-six and one hundred and ninety something. I don't remember what they were.

Q. Can you state whether Mr. Banks gained or lost by the actual ballots as you tallied them from the official tally? A. I should judge he gained.

Q. What was it he gained? A. The difference between eighty-six and one hundred and twenty-two—that is, thirty-six votes.

Q. Did Mr. Sullivan gain any? A. Mr. Sullivan lost, I think, in the neighborhood of thirty votes.

Q. That is the total change in the vote for Senator in the Twenty-first Senatorial District, the Second Precinct of the Thirty-third Assembly District, which Mr. Banks should have received, or sixty or sixty-odd more than the amount which was given him by the official tally? A. Not that he should have received. It would have made the difference. In loss and gain it would have been sixty-odd.

Q. By the official tally, as it now appears, Banks has a deficiency of sixty-odd votes? A. I should judge so.

Q. And had the votes been accurately and honestly tallied and counted for Senator in that district, Mr. Banks would now have some sixty-odd more votes than he has now, according to your tally? A. According to my tally.

Q. You say your tally could not be absolutely accurate. About how far do you say it might vary from the fact? A. I couldn't say anything in regard to that. The ballots taken later made the difference some five or six votes, and I might possibly be in error or they might be in error.

Q. Was your tally ten out of the way from this? A. I don't think they were.

Q. Would you swear that it was not as many as ten? There could not have been as many as ten mistakes in your tally? A. No; I won't swear to that; but I don't think they were five out of the way. I might be mistaken, from the fact that at the beginning I relied upon their being called off, and possibly they have been called off wrong; but I found after the first eight or ten votes I could take it off more accurately and surely by looking at the ballots myself. In the first eight or ten ballots, I relied upon the caller.

Q. Then it is possible you tallied right by some of it, and the mistakes were trifling? A. I don't think they exceeded five.

Q. Then, if it has been claimed here and been testified to, that the ballots were correctly and honestly counted in that precinct for the office of Senator, whoever testified that is mistaken? A. I should judge that.

Q. What is that? A. Do you mean to say if they testified that way they are mistaken?

Q. Yes, sir. A. I think they are; yes, sir.

Q. Then, from your observation of those ballots, would you be able to say that Mr. Banks did get a fair, honest count of the votes that he was entitled to in that precinct? A. I don't know what the condition of the ballots were or anything of the kind; I only testify from my own observation.

Q. From your observation, then, and having counted and tallied the votes as they were gone over in Judge Finn's Court, you are able to say that Mr. Banks did not get his full vote there? A. I should judge not.

Q. And that he was either mistakenly or fraudulently deprived of some sixty votes that he was entitled to? A. I should judge that.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: You don't swear that your tally was within ten of right there, do you? A. Not positively. I swore I don't think it could have been that many out of the way.

Q. Don't you know it was impossible to get a correct tally in Judge Finn's Court? A. Yes, sir; I think so.

Q. Didn't you state so repeatedly, that it was impossible? A. That it was impossible to get a correct one.

- Q. You were near Mr. Dunn, and he was Bailiff of the Court, wasn't he? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Did you so tell him? A. I don't think I did speak to Mr. Dunn.
- Q. Will you swear you didn't speak to Mr. Dunn? A. Yes, sir; I will swear I didn't speak to Mr. Dunn of the correctness or incorrectness of the tally.
- Q. And there was another gentleman sitting right by Mr. Dunn? A. No, sir.
- Q. Don't you know Mr. Connolly? A. I don't know the man.
- Q. Were there any gentlemen sitting there together? A. There were ten or fifteen sitting around there.
- Q. Did you tell him afterwards it was impossible to get an accurate ballot? A. I say it is possible that I made that remark, that it was impossible to get an accurate ballot; but I didn't say it to Mr. Dunn.
- Q. What caused you to make that remark? A. I don't know.
- Q. You told it? A. I told it at the time.
- Q. You are rather in favor of Mr. Banks here, are you not? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. You are a politician? A. I don't pretend to that.
- Q. You have held office under the Republicans a great many years, haven't you? A. Three years and a half.
- Q. And you are holding office in the Registrar's office now? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And you won't swear that these ballots are in the same condition that they were on the day after the election, will you? A. Certainly not.
- Q. In whose possession have they been? A. I presume they have been in the possession of the Registrar.
- Q. He is the man that Governor Waterman removed. A. I don't know whether he was removed or not.
- Q. You swear that? A. I don't know whether he was removed or not.
- Q. You swear that? A. I don't know whether he was removed or resigned.
- Q. You have seen Mr. Smiley's commission, haven't you? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And it don't appear in there that Mr. Prindle was removed or not? A. I didn't read it.
- Q. You haven't seen it? A. I stated I have seen it, but I didn't read it.
- Q. You have made the entry of it in your minutes, haven't you? A. Not yet. I have rough minutes.
- Q. You have rough minutes? A. I have rough minutes.
- Q. Haven't you an entry in there that Mr. Smiley was appointed and Prindle resigned? A. I said that Mr. Smiley presented his commission to the Board of Election Commissioners.
- Q. Where are your minutes? A. They are downstairs. It said that Mr. Smiley presented his commission to the Board of Election Commissioners, and it was ordered spread upon the minutes.
- Q. It don't say anything about Mr. Prindle? A. I don't know.
- Q. It didn't say that as Mr. Prindle resigned or was removed? A. It was not necessary.
- Q. It don't appear in your minutes? A. I haven't written up my minutes yet, I say.
- Q. And that don't appear in any place on your minutes about Mr. Prindle? A. No, sir.
- Q. And it won't appear? A. No, sir.
- Q. Haven't you made up your minutes? A. They are rough minutes.
- Q. Do you write up rough minutes at the Board? A. Yes, sir; I do at the Board.

Q. Aren't the rough minutes the regular minutes? A. Rough minutes don't constitute full minutes.

Q. When did that occur? A. Day before yesterday.

Q. And you are relying on your memory? A. My memorandums will show what that ought to be.

Q. You said you went in there at the request of Mr. Williams. Who is Mr. Williams? A. Ed. Williams.

Q. He is a Republican, isn't he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Didn't he tell you he was taking the tally for Mr. Banks? A. No, sir; I saw it.

Q. Didn't you know who he was in there for? A. No, sir, I did not. I took it for granted he was taking it for Mr. Banks.

Q. You don't think he was taking it for Mr. Sullivan, do you? A. I would just as lief take it for Mr. Sullivan as Mr. Banks. I was taking it for both of them, I tell you.

Q. Then you were in a little doubt who you were taking it for? A. No, sir; there was no doubt about it who I was taking it for.

Q. And you knew Mr. Banks wanted to get every vote he could, didn't you? A. No, sir.

Q. You knew he had a contest, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you knew there was a contest, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you knew he wanted every vote he could get? A. No, sir; I didn't know it.

Q. You knew there were other people there taking tallies? A. I knew Mr. Maxwell was there also.

Q. Wasn't there a great many snap tallies being taken around? A. I didn't notice anybody taking any tally except Maxwell and myself.

Q. You sat right by Mr. Dunn? A. Yes, sir; I sat at the left hand side.

Q. You had an ample opportunity to see everything? A. What do you mean by that?

Q. Every ballot that came out? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you get it? A. I relied on Mr. Dunn's calling them at the start, and I found I couldn't understand him very distinctly, and I found by looking at the ballots I could get them more accurately.

Q. And any mistakes you made, you only made them on the first day of taking the tally? A. No, sir.

Q. How could you have made a mistake? A. I might have put down Banks for Sullivan or Sullivan for Banks in a hurry. I don't claim I did it accurate.

Q. Didn't he take them off pretty fast? A. Just about as fast as that [showing]; he took time to look at it himself.

Q. He called off each one of them? A. Yes, sir; he called off each one.

Q. All the way through? A. Yes, sir; I couldn't understand half the time what he called.

Q. Did he call both names off? A. He started off on the proposition of calling both names.

Q. Did he call it all the way through? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he call it correct? A. I don't know; I didn't pay any attention.

Q. If Mr. Dunn says it was impossible to take a snap tally and get any where near correct, he is wrong, is he? A. I don't know that he is wrong.

Q. If Maxwell says it was impossible to take a snap tally, and get any where near correct, he is wrong, is he? A. I don't say that, either; I haven't said it was accurate.

Q. You said there was not a variation of more than ten? A. I don't call that an accurate tally; if I did, I would call it a tally without a mistake.

Q. These ballots were facing you? A. No, sir; right from me.

Q. It was done this way [showing]? A. Yes, sir.

Q. It was facing right toward you? A. No, sir; it was not.

Q. How was it? A. If that was the ballot [showing], I would be here in a position this way [indicating], to see the name: I would sit there and take the name. I was on the left hand of the ballot, the head of the ticket was at what would be my left hand, and I could see all those names. Mr. Maxwell was sitting here [indicating] and looked the length of it.

Q. He had a better chance than you had, didn't he? A. I don't know whether he had or not. You can judge for yourself. I thought I could see better, because I was on the line of the name, where he had to follow up the line of the names to find it.

Q. And you thought your position was better? A. I thought so; yes, sir.

Q. Did you swear your tally was correct within ten? A. I told you I wouldn't swear positively.

Q. Do you swear it is within twenty? A. Yes, sir; I would swear it was within twenty of right.

Q. You will swear positively? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That your tally was within twenty of right? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it within fifteen? A. I wouldn't designate any number beyond that.

Q. Why do you think it comes within twenty? A. Because I don't think I made twenty mistakes.

Q. Why? A. Because I don't think it would be possible.

Q. Why? A. I couldn't tell you why. You asked me to swear to a positive figure, and I swear I don't think I made twenty mistakes.

Q. Why wouldn't it be twenty? A. Because I saw those names, and I don't think it was possible to put them down without seeing them.

Q. And you swear you made twenty mistakes? A. I don't swear I made twenty mistakes.

Q. But you will swear that it was twenty? A. You are putting words in my mouth.

Q. Will you swear your count was not in front of your eyes? A. I said I thought I could swear that with safety.

Q. Well, you didn't. A. I say so now. Then you asked me if I could swear positively that I did not make twenty mistakes, and I swear I think so.

Q. You don't swear positively to it? A. You were asking me to swear positively that there were no mistakes, and it was impossible. I am stating now that I do not believe that. You are asking me to swear to a positive proposition, and I can't do it.

Q. And you decline to swear positively how many mistakes were made? A. I won't state when I don't know.

Q. Didn't it occur frequently that Mr. Dunn would put three or four ballots on a string at once? A. No; I don't think he did.

Q. Will you swear to it? A. I won't swear to it, but he might have done it and I not noticed it. I only saw the ballots as they faced up, and if he put two or three there, I didn't see it.

Q. If he did that, all you saw was the top of the ballot? A. If he did that, I can't swear to it.

Q. If Mr. Dunn did that, you only took the top? A. I didn't see him put two or three ballots.

Q. If he did do it, independent of your seeing it, then you only took the top of the ballot? A. If he did it, then I certainly couldn't have seen underneath.

Q. Now, just turn to your minutes of the Board of Election Commissioners, and see when Brick Butler was removed — the last day of precinct registration. A. October nineteenth.

Q. Does it say anything about Brick Butler there? Just read it. A. [Reading.] "A communication from Thomas J. Smiley, Chairman of the Republican County Committee, received, asking that James J. Butler, Inspector of Precinct Registration in the Second of the Thirty-third, be removed. By unanimous consent, the Secretary of the Democratic County Committee was directed to substitute another man in his place."

Q. Is that all that appears? A. That is all.

Q. Are there no remarks by Mr. Strother there — no motion made by him? A. Not on that date; no, sir; that was the only motion made.

Q. Was there anything said there by Mr. Strother, as the records show, about Butler having been a Republican Inspector two years before? Does that appear anywhere in those minutes? A. Under the date of October twenty-second, I find the following: "Commissioner Strother moved to amend the minutes of the last meeting in relation to that clause referring to James Butler so as to read, 'That said James Butler acted as a Republican Judge in the election of 1886, both in the Precinct Registration Board and upon the Election Board.'"

Q. That was adopted, was it? A. It don't say whether it was adopted or not. That is all the minutes.

Q. There is a resolution preceding that, is there not? A. It don't say on those minutes whether the resolution was adopted or not.

Q. Who was the Clerk of the Board? A. It is signed, "Benjamin A. Prindle, Registrar of Voters."

Q. Wasn't it Fred Fowler? A. Fred Fowler occupied the position of Deputy Registrar.

Q. He was a Republican, wasn't he? A. He is so called.

Q. And it don't appear what action of the Board was taken? A. That is all. If there is anything in this, I have not been able to find it.

Q. That was proposed by Strother as an amendment to the previous minutes, wasn't it? A. I don't know what the understanding was. I will read it again to you. [Reading.] "Commissioner Strother moved to amend the minutes of the last meeting in relation to that clause referring to James Butler so as to read, 'That said James Butler acted as a Republican Judge in the election of 1886, both in the Precinct Registration Board and upon the Election Board.'"

There was no action taken upon the motion. It is a motion.

Q. There was no action taken? A. The minutes show none.

Redirect Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Are you the only person that was taking off the tally in this precinct in behalf of Mr. Banks? A. No, sir.

Q. Who else took off a tally? A. Ray Falk.

Q. Where was Ray Falk situated relative to the ballots? You described Mr. Maxwell as being here and you here [illustrating], and where was Ray Falk? A. Ray Falk was behind the gentleman that was calling the ballots off.

Q. That is a better position to see the ballots from than at the stringer, isn't it? A. I couldn't say whether it is better or not. I didn't occupy it.

Q. Did you compare your tally of the vote in this precinct on the Senatorial vote with Mr. Falk? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did they come out? A. They came out within two votes.

Q. Did you compare with Maxwell? A. No, sir, I did not. I don't think Maxwell and I spoke about it.

Q. You were asked something about the question whether Dunn, the Bailiff, strung two or three votes at one time, and you took the check of the one. As a matter of fact, Dunn was assisting Maxwell to take off the tally, and spreading out the votes especially for his benefit, and calling the name for him, wasn't he? A. I don't know. When I came in there I hadn't taken any tallies there, and I merely relieved Mr. Williams, as I said before, and I was informed that Dunn would call off both Banks' and Sullivan's name, and I didn't know that Maxwell was keeping the tally, and at first I tallied both votes. As soon as that precinct was over I got up and Williams came back.

Q. As a matter of fact, the Bailiff there was assisting yourself and Maxwell to take off those tallies? A. I so understood it.

Q. And he didn't string two ballots at a time? A. I didn't see any.

Q. In case he had strung two ballots, when you came to add up your totals, was there a deficiency in the vote such as would be indicative of having strung a number of ballots at one time and you not having counted them for the candidate? A. My recollection is that my vote compared exactly, but I don't know whether it is my vote or Falk's vote that was twenty-six short of the total vote that was cast in the precinct; I mean of the official vote—eighty-six and one hundred and ninety.

Q. As a matter of fact, the official vote showed the Senatorial vote to be short of the total vote, didn't it? A. Yes, sir. I don't remember the amount.

Q. Then, your tally showed the same shortage in the Senatorial vote that the official tally showed. A. In the same proportion.

Q. It is a very common thing, isn't it, to take any office in the precinct, and find that the votes for the two candidates don't come up to the head of the ticket? A. There are frequent cases of that kind.

Q. Isn't it a very common thing that the total electoral vote will be larger than any other vote for any particular office you happen to pick out? A. I have seen the thing very often.

Q. They scratch the electoral vote less than any other person on the ticket, don't they? A. Generally, sir.

Recross Interrogatories

By MR. CLUNIE: You have noticed that frequently, haven't you? A. Not frequently, but I have noticed it.

Q. Whereabouts? A. I have noticed it in my precinct.

Q. Where did you notice it? A. I noticed it in the Salomon-Maloney fight, and there was quite a discrepancy.

Q. You have noticed it in the district before, haven't you? A. I know an instance of it here two years ago.

Q. What was that? A. That was in the O'Connor and Le Blanc fight.

Q. That was all in the Forty-second District? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have not noticed all around town? A. I have not noticed particularly.

Q. You have not noticed out in the Twenty-first? A. No, sir.

Q. You know that out in the Forty-second District, a great many people scratch and don't vote for Assembly? A. No, sir; I don't know that either.

Q. You know it is done? A. You have asked me to give cases, and I stated those that I knew. I don't know that it is a general rule.

Q. You said it was a general thing? A. You asked me if I had noticed it before, and I said yes.

Q. You said it was a general thing? A. No, sir; I did not say that.

Q. Then all your observation has been in the Forty-Second District? A. Particularly; yes, sir.

Q. That must have been because people refused to vote? A. I don't know.

Q. That is because the people scratch the Senator, and don't vote at all, though? A. I don't know.

Q. Is that the way it can occur? A. I don't know.

Q. How could it be done, then? A. I suppose it might be done by omitting the writing of the name.

Q. Admitting that everything is proper and there is a shortage in the vote, the only way that could have occurred would be by the name being scratched off, wouldn't it? A. I should judge so; yes sir.

MILTON CONLEY.

A witness on behalf of the respondent, was called, sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Mr. Conley, what part, if any, did you take in the last election? A. I did not take any.

Q. Do you know the Second Precinct of the Thirty-fourth Assembly District? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you there during the election? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you happen to go there? A. I generally vote in that precinct for eight or ten years, and I passed there after twelve o'clock, after I left my place of business.

Q. Well? A. I was met on the street by Mr. Callahan—in the middle of the street; he come out. He was standing over there.

Q. Who is Mr. Callahan? A. He is a young man that lives down on the beach there.

Q. Go on and tell us about it. A. He come across and met me in the middle of the street, and said, "Do you vote here?" I said, "I don't know whether I do or not." They had just changed the polls from Lilkendey's, so he went over and looked at the books, the Register. He said, "You don't vote here; your name ain't here." I said, "All right," and I walked away. In a few minutes I came back to the corner of the street and there was a little jangle about something. It appeared to be a laboring man; he wanted to vote, and he had some papers in his hand. This man come up and spoke to me about the papers, and I asked him to look at his papers. When I took his papers to look at them, there was some one else, a fellow they call "Old Man"—I don't know his name—he come up to me and said, "What right have you to look at those papers. Are you an officer?" I said, "No, but I have got the right to look at them if I choose," so I left the place and didn't stop there any longer. I got on the cars and went up to the Committee Room, and when I was there, I met some one I had seen, but was not personally acquainted with him, and he told me to go back down there, and gave me some papers.

Q. He gave you a card from the County Committee? A. Yes; to go down there.

Q. What instructions, if any, did he give you? What did he tell you to go down there to do? A. None at all. Just to go down and look after things.

Q. When you got down there, what reception did you get? A. I got a grand reception.

Q. Describe what occurred. A. I went in, and I sat down by Mr. Hawkins. He was taking the tickets from the window. I hadn't sat there more than a second or so, as near as I can remember—

Q. [Interrupting.] Did you show your card when you went in? A. I don't remember whether I did or not.

Q. Did you show it afterwards? A. I did.

Q. Go on. A. I sat there a few minutes, and Mr. Coleman came to me—

Q. [Interrupting.] Who is Mr. Coleman? A. He is a boatman, I think, that lives over Mr. Hawkins.

Q. What had he to do with this election? A. I don't know; I don't know that any.

Q. What are his politics? A. I can't say for certain, but I think he is a Democrat.

Q. He was a Democratic officer of election there, wasn't he? A. Probably he was. He had a good deal to say there. I don't know whether he was an officer or not.

Q. What did he do? A. He came to me and said, "You Grand Army ———, what are doing here?" He said, you ———, ———, if you have got that cane, I don't care for you." I didn't resent it. Of course, I got up and walked away from him. I walked toward the door where I came in. He got after me, and demanded to see my authority for being in there. I took out this card [indicating], and there was a policeman sitting there writing—a young policeman; not the one that was in front, but a stranger to me. I said, "I will not show you this card; I will let the officer look at it," and I handed it to the officer, and the officer said that was all right. That was the last said. I spoke a couple of words there, and walked away.

Q. Just tell how the counting of votes was conducted there. A. I had no time to see.

Q. How do you mean, you had no time to see? A. I didn't stop. I wasn't there more than two or three minutes. I thought there was too many there for me, and I got out of the place very quick. I knew the crowd; I know the boys, so I knew it was best for me to take a walk.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: How did you come to come here? A. I was subpoenaed.

Q. Who subpoenaed you? A. I was subpoenaed, I think, by Mr. Collins.

Q. Who is Collins? Is he a friend of yours? A. No, sir; only an acquaintance.

Q. You know him very well, don't you? A. I only have seen him a few times in the place of business where I am.

Q. Where are you in business? A. Clay and Powell.

Q. What business? A. Saloon business.

Q. How long have you been there? A. Three years and a half.

Q. You are a Republican, are you? A. Yes, sir; I am.

Q. You had an application in to have the polls in your place, didn't you? A. No, sir; I never was there.

- Q. You never asked anybody to get it? A. No, sir.
- Q. You don't know that now? A. I don't know anything about it.
- Q. You didn't want them to come in your place at all? A. Why should I? I am working for another man.
- Q. Didn't he want to get it in? A. Not that I know.
- Q. You didn't make any endeavors to get it there? A. No, sir.
- Q. What induced you to come out here? Somebody called you a ———
———, and you wanted to come out here and tell it? A. Acting for Mr. Banks.
- Q. Did Mr. Collins ask you to come here? A. No, sir.
- Q. Did you tell Mr. Collins you knew about this? A. No, sir; Mr. Hawkins told me.
- Q. What does Mr. Hawkins do? A. He has got a house there and property. He was the one I spoke to inside, that was taking the tickets.
- Q. He was the man you went to watch; is that it? A. Oh, no.
- Q. You didn't want to watch him? A. I didn't want to watch anybody.
- Q. What did you want to go up there for; just for fun? A. I went up there because I had an interest.
- Q. You went up there to take charge? A. No, sir; I did not take charge.
- Q. Didn't the Republican party tell you to go up there and take charge of the whole business? A. They told me to go up and look at it.
- Q. And you went inside where they were taking tickets at the ballot box? A. I didn't go to the ballot box.
- Q. You went in the room? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And started to take charge? A. No, sir; I never said a word.
- Q. Those were your orders, to go and take charge? A. Yes, sir; but I didn't take charge, for I didn't say a word, and I didn't attempt to do it.
- Q. When the Republicans told you to take charge of the precinct, you went up to do it? A. No, sir. I didn't want charge of that place. I was glad to get out of there.
- Q. Your object in going in was to take charge? That was it, wasn't it? A. Not particularly. My object was to go there and kind of look around at the business.
- Q. You were not an officer of election, were you? A. I know I was not.
- Q. Didn't you know you had no right to appear at this election? A. No, sir; I did not.
- Q. Don't you know that they don't allow anybody but the officers themselves to go in there? A. I don't know, only Mr. Dimond gave me this card and told me to go in.
- Q. And you thought Mr. Dimond had a right to set aside the election laws and give you a card to go anywhere you wanted to? A. I didn't know anything about it.
- Q. Don't you know, as a matter of fact, that the officers of election are the only ones that had a right to go in there during the time the election was going on? A. I didn't know anything about it.
- Q. Did you see anybody else there besides the officers of election? A. Yes, sir; I did.
- Q. Who did you see? A. I see the man that owns the saloon.
- Q. He was in there getting orders for drinks? A. I don't know that.
- Q. Didn't you know, as a matter of fact, that he was? A. I don't know what he was there for.
- Q. That was the only person you saw in there? A. No; I don't recollect seeing any one only just this one.

Q. And you went in and sat down in there? You went up to the Inspector, didn't you? A. No, sir.

Q. You went up to where Mr. Hawkins was taking the votes? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was right up where people were voting, wasn't it? A. Back about ten or fifteen feet, probably, from where he was sitting. That is about as near as I got to the window. I just spoke to him two words; I said, "How do you do, Mr. Hawkins?" and about two words, and then Mr. Coleman he came up and talked that way.

Q. Come up and what? A. Called me these names; abused me.

Q. What is that? A. I say Mr. Coleman came up, and just as I spoke to Mr. Hawkins called me a ———, a ———, and I can't remember all.

Q. You have told us that four or five times. This is not a title to the Grand Army. Were you going around as a Grand Army man? A. No, sir.

Q. Why did he say that? A. He knows me to be one; that is it.

Q. To be a Grand Army man, you mean? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was Mr. Coleman? A. Mr. Coleman is a man that appears to me to be a runner for some boarding house—sailor boarding house.

Q. And he didn't ask you what you were doing in there? A. I think he did not.

Q. Do you swear he did not? A. He said the words I mentioned, "What are you doing here, and so forth?"

Q. Didn't Mr. Coleman come up to you and say, "What are you doing in there; you are not an officer of election?" A. No, sir; he did not.

Q. No one asked you that? A. No, sir; he did not.

Q. And didn't you pull out this great pass from General Dimond to admit you anywhere, and that you came up to take charge? A. No, sir.

Q. And didn't he tell you neither you nor General Dimond could take charge? A. No, sir.

Q. And didn't you go out? A. No, sir.

Q. And didn't you decline to go out? A. No, sir. I don't remember that. I remember this card.

Q. All you remember is this ———, and so forth? A. That is enough to remember. I didn't show him no card.

[Here a recess was taken until 2 o'clock P. M.]

AFTERNOON SESSION.

[Mr. Dorn, of counsel for respondent, did not appear until 2:30 P. M., and when he appeared, the following occurred:]

MR. CLUNIE: I want to have it noted on the record that I protest against this delay. We have waited here over half an hour, and if it occurs any more, I shall ask that the testimony be transmitted to the Legislature.

MR. DORN: I apologize to the Court and to you, and if the fact is going on the record, I want it noted that I was not a minute after half-past two, and the clock will verify what I say.

R. J. BELLINGHAM.

A witness called on behalf of respondent, was sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Where do you reside, Mr. Bellingham? Answer—No. 1723½ Jones Street.

Q. Did you occupy any position in the Precinct Board at the last election? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was it? A. I was Inspector of the Fifth Precinct of the Twenty-fourth Assembly District.

Q. There were two Inspectors, were there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. They were of different politics, were they not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was your politics? A. Democrat.

Q. You were the Democratic Inspector? A. I was the regular Democratic Inspector.

Q. After the close of the polls, did both of the Inspectors remain there at all times, or did you divide it up into watches? A. Mr. Barry, the additional Inspector—the Republican, was on with me after twelve o'clock at night. We went on at twelve, and stayed on until we were relieved in the morning.

Q. You did? A. Mr. Barry and I; yes, sir.

Q. On the first night of the count, which Inspector was in charge from twelve o'clock at night until six o'clock next morning? A. I was.

Q. And what election officers were with you—what Judges? A. Mr. Barry was the additional Inspector, Mr. Chebucker was the Judge.

Q. On your watch after twelve o'clock, who served with you? A. Mr. Barry was the Republican, and Mr. Chebucker, he was the Democratic.

Q. During the time then, on the night of the sixth of November, which was election night, from twelve o'clock at night until six in the morning, you were in charge? A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Inspector is what you might call the chief officer and has charge of the polls? A. The boss of the job.

Q. Then, you were the boss of the job from twelve o'clock at night until six o'clock the next morning? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see a man there by the name of Chadwick? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know Chadwick? A. I am very well acquainted with him.

Q. He was present at the polls at times, was he? A. He was.

Q. Were you absent at any time during that period from twelve o'clock at night until six o'clock the next morning? A. For about ten minutes.

Q. Where were you absent? A. To answer a call of nature. I was gone ten or fifteen minutes.

Q. How long were you absent? A. Not over fifteen minutes.

Q. Is it your impression that you were gone fifteen minutes? A. At the time I had no idea I had to make notes of things, or that there would be any hereafter to it, and I have no idea I was gone over fifteen minutes.

Q. When you were out of the room, who did you leave in charge? A. Mr. Chebucker. I never left the room unless there was a Democrat in charge, because I couldn't conscientiously leave it in charge of the Republicans.

Q. Who did you leave in charge? A. Mr. Chebucker. I never went out unless there was a Democrat in charge.

Q. When you went out, you say you left a Democratic Judge in charge? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What instructions did you give to this Democratic Judge when you went out and left him in charge? A. I told him at the time I left that we would take a recess for about ten minutes. I would like to go outside, and it was rather tedious, and I was doing all the calling off.

Q. You did all the calling off during that whole time? A. I did, from the time I went on until the morning I went off.

Q. And you told him to do nothing in your absence? A. I told him we would take a recess for about ten minutes.

Q. Have you any reason to know whether he obeyed that instruction or not? A. No reason whatever.

Q. What did he say? A. He said he would, yes, sir; and I believe he was Democrat enough to keep his word.

Q. When you returned to the room what did you find them doing? A. I found them sitting there, apparently waiting for me.

Q. You found them sitting there, apparently waiting for you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did they say whether they had counted any ballots or not? A. They did not say, but I am positive they did not.

Q. The appearance was that they had been waiting for you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you came in you were evidently what they had been waiting for? A. I was what they were waiting for.

Q. During the night did Chadwick call any ballots? A. No, sir; he did not.

Q. Was he allowed to sit down in the caller's chair and go over any ballots? A. He started to sit down and did it, and there were objections by several watchers that were there, and I sustained the objection.

Q. You are positive he never did it? A. He never did it while I was there.

Q. If he did it, he did it in the ten minutes while you were out? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is there any probability that he did it while you were out? A. No, sir; I don't think so.

Q. How many ballots could have been counted while you were out, if he did call? A. At the extreme, there could not have been over three.

Q. It took some time to take it out, open it out, and call it? A. There were so many ballots frightfully disfigured, you couldn't read it.

Q. During the time you were out, could any ballots have been called, and could they have got themselves back into the easy position which you found them in? A. I don't think it could.

Q. Judging from what you know and all the circumstances, aren't you able to state that in all human probability, not a ballot was counted while you were out of the room? A. I am satisfied of it; yes sir.

Q. As nearly as a man can be, that don't see the thing with his own eyes? A. That is the idea.

Q. And you say this Chadwick didn't call a single ballot there? A. He did not.

MR. DORN: Will you let me take that letter?

MR. CLUNIE: I didn't introduce it, and I will not produce it.

MR. DORN: I ask that that be noted.

Q. An anonymous letter has been read here, and if a letter was sent by anybody, whether he had the manhood to sign his name or not, which said that between the hours of twelve o'clock at night and six in the morning on election night, Chadwick called off twenty-six ballots, and marked them, and defaced some other five or six candidates' names on them, using a gold pen to do it; is there a particle of truth in that statement? A. Nothing whatever, and I think the man who said so, to use a vulgar phrase, is somewhat rattled. It is teetotally impossible.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: Are you sure that that could not occur when you were away? A. I am satisfied it could not occur.

Q. Why? A. There was not time enough for twenty-six ballots to be counted while I was gone.

Q. I ask you about the time you were gone? A. I was only away ten or fifteen minutes. I was there at the time the last ballot was counted, and I signed my name along with John Barry, and he and I signed our initials to each ballot, and I stayed there until the first ballot was laid on the board to count, and Barry and I left together. We went out and came on together at twelve o'clock, and the only time I was off then until I was relieved in the morning by Captain Durkee, was at the breaking of day.

Q. That is the time we are talking about now. A. And I didn't leave there only for the ten minutes, just before mentioned.

Q. Didn't you leave there one day, and weren't you relieved by Captain Durkee, and didn't you come away with Stephen Potter? A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. You say you are a Democrat, do you? A. Yes, sir; I am a Democrat, and as good as you are.

Q. Who put you on the Board? A. The Democratic County Committee.

Q. What Democrat put you on? A. The County Committee.

Q. To what man did you go to get on the Board? A. Mr. Johnny Lynch was the man who put me on the Board.

Q. Was that the Lynch who was up there for the Republicans? A. No, sir.

Q. Who is he? A. A member of the County Committee.

Q. Where is he from? A. He is from the Sixth Precinct of the Twenty-fourth Assembly District.

Q. And he put you on here in the Fifth? A. He is a member of the County Committee.

Q. Did he put you on in the Fifth? A. He did through a friend of his.

Q. Who? A. Mr. Potter.

Q. Then it was through Mr. Potter you went on, did you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Stephen Potter? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been living up there? A. I have been living up there twenty-three years.

Q. Do you know Mr. Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you known him? A. Ever since I have been up there—twenty-three years.

Q. How long have you known him? A. Twenty-three years ago. I wasn't able to pronounce my name when I first knew him.

Q. How did you come to come out here as a witness? A. I come out here; I wanted to be subpoenaed in regard to this letter sent to Mr. Sullivan, and there was a person come down to my shop and asked me to come out here.

Q. Who was that? A. Nobody that you know.

Q. Just tell me who it was. A. It was a particular friend of mine.

Q. Tell me who it was. A. It was a man by the name of Charles Welch.

Q. What does he do? A. He is working down at some business.

Q. Whereabouts is he working? A. I don't know, in fact, where he was working.

Q. You said he was working? A. He was until lately.

Q. Where is he working? A. Down in some wholesale house.

Q. Where was he working? A. He was working down town.

Q. Where? A. I don't know where he was working. He was working the last time I knew.

Q. How do you know he was? A. Because he told me so.

Q. Did he tell you where he was working? A. No, sir; he did not.

Q. Where did you see him? A. I saw him on Stevenson Street, between Third and Fourth.

Q. Did he come down to see you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you work down there? A. I do.

Q. Whereabouts do you work down there? A. I work at 256 Stevenson Street.

Q. What did he ask you to come down and testify for? A. He said I wanted to come out to the City Hall and testify.

Q. Is Welch a Democrat? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he asked you to come out and testify for Banks? A. Did I say I came out to testify for Banks?

Q. You know you are testifying here for him, don't you?

THE WITNESS (addressing the Court): Your honor, am I compelled to listen to this man's insinuations?

Q. What did Welch ask you to come out here and testify? A. He asked me if I would come out here and testify; and I said, "What for?" and he said, "Because your name is in that letter," and I came out here and testified.

Q. When did you last see him? Did you see him again after that? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you tell him (Welch) what occurred there? A. What occurred where?

Q. Did you tell him what you were going to testify to? A. I did not.

Q. You didn't tell him anything about it? A. I did not.

Q. You didn't tell him anything about it? A. I did not.

Q. If Stephen Potter said you left that place with him, he is mistaken? A. If Stephen Potter said I left that place with him, yes, sir, he is mistaken.

Q. And if Mr. Dunn says you left that place with him he is mistaken, too? A. Yes, sir; he is mistaken, if he says that, too. Any more than ten minutes recess that was taken.

Q. Then Mr. Welch asked you to come out here and testify, did he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he tell you who he was acting for? A. No; he simply said, "You should go out there and testify," and I asked him what for, and he said, "Well, your name was in this letter and it has been published in the paper as being drunk and going off and leaving the polls there so the Republicans would have a chance to scratch ballots."

Q. He asked you that? A. Yes, sir; that I should come out and testify, and he said, "Will you come out?" and I said, "Yes, I would."

Q. He told you your name was mentioned in the letter? A. Yes, sir; in the letter then published in the paper.

Q. And published as being drunk; did he say that? A. As being one of four or five.

Q. You swore a moment ago he said you were drunk? A. He told me to come out here, that my name was mentioned in the letter as being one of the men that were drunk.

Q. You are sure of that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Welch is not in the Court-room? A. No, sir.

Q. When did you last see him? A. This morning.

Q. And you say he is a Democrat? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he mention Banks' name? A. No, sir.

Q. You swore he did mention Banks' name? A. No, sir; nor Sullivan's name either.

Q. You took quite an interest in the Banks' fight, didn't you? A. I didn't; I took an interest in the Sullivan fight.

Q. How did you do that? A. I voted for him.

Q. You are sure of it? A. I am positive.

Q. Will you swear? This vote closed on the sixth of November, didn't it? On the sixth of November the counting of votes commenced, didn't it? A. It did.

Q. When did the polls close? It closed about ten o'clock the next night, and it was one of the first precincts that were through, too.

Q. And from the time you started until it stopped, you never left there, except ten minutes, until it was counted? A. I didn't say that.

Q. You said so. A. I said when they got ready to count the ballots, we left there, and came back at twelve o'clock, and Mr. Barry and I came back at twelve o'clock, and I stayed on until Captain Durkee relieved me, and Mr. Nixon relieved Mr. Barry; then we come back again, and then I come back again, and it was five minutes to eleven, at this Hall that I had the ballots already returned.

Q. After you and Barry wrote your names on the ballots, you went off? A. After we signed each ballot with our initials.

Q. How long were you gone? A. Until twelve.

Q. You left about seven? A. That was about seven or half-past seven.

Q. And you are positive Chadwick did not call off ballots? A. Positive. How could he when our names were signed to them?

Q. You went away? A. Well, I left Captain Durkee in charge.

Q. Do you swear that during the time Captain Durkee was not there this man Chadwick didn't call a ballot? A. How could I swear it?

Q. You did swear it. A. You are mistaken.

Q. Then you don't swear to what happened during the time Captain Durkee was in charge? A. I am swearing to what occurred after twelve o'clock.

Q. But how about before twelve o'clock? A. Before twelve o'clock I swear about nothing, for I was not there.

Q. You came back at twelve o'clock? A. We came back at twelve o'clock.

Q. And you commenced to call then? A. And I commenced to call then.

Q. How long did you stay then? A. Until six or half-past six in the morning.

Q. You went off then? A. I went off then.

Q. And Captain Durkee came on again? A. And Captain Durkee came on again.

Q. When you went off that time, didn't Mr. Potter go away with you? A. No, sir; he didn't.

Q. Who did you leave with? A. I left with John Barry.

Q. What is he? A. He is a Republican. We live within half a block of one another, and we went off together after the last ballot was counted, and we went off together.

Q. On the first watch, you and Barry, this Republican, went off together? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And on the second watch you went off together? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when the ballots were finished you went off together? A. No, sir; he did not. He left, and I came out to the City Hall, here.

Q. You passed on every ballot that was counted there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Board didn't vote? A. The Board did vote; there was a scratch for Reynolds and Sullivan, and I allowed it for Sullivan and Reynolds; and I don't believe Judge Finn did, if it ever come to that.

Q. You knew you were doing wrong? A. No, I didn't know it was wrong.

Q. What made you say Judge Finn would cast it out? A. He cast one out for Russell and McIntyre.

Q. Did you reject any ballot? A. Yes, sir. Strohmeier sent in a ballot voting for McIntyre, and I rejected the ballot on account of the man having his name and address on the bottom. This one-eyed Republican, that sleeps with his eye open, said he saw twenty-six, and it is not so.

Q. How do you know? A. Because I was there.

Q. You were not there all the time? A. I was there with the exception of ten minutes.

Q. You were not there when Mr. Durkee was there? A. No, sir.

Q. This man don't charge that you were the one that was there? A. Well, he couldn't very well.

Q. I will read you the letter. It says: "This man Chadwick worked hard to get votes for Banks. Well, all right still," [etc., reading from the letter]; he is right there, ain't he? A. Yes; that is right. I laid the first ballot under the rack, and Mr. Durkee took it and put it under the rule, and Mr. Durkee called it.

Q. He is pretty near right up to that point? A. Yes; he is right there.

Q. [Reading] "Then a man named Bellington or Bellingham called out until three P. M." How is that? A. That is me, yes.

Q. That is pretty near right, isn't it? Until three P. M.? A. No, sir; that is wrong. That man is rattled that wrote that letter, or he is a rogue.

Q. You are rather familiar with those terms "rattled" and "rogue," aren't you? A. I think any man in that precinct acting as an officer, as I did, would certainly know from the tenor of that letter that it is impossible to be so.

Q. You did not read the letter, did you? A. I read the synopsis of it in the paper.

Q. You never read it? A. I swear I read my name in it; that Potter and I went off at three and returned at five. I read it in the "Daily Examiner."

Q. Where he says you and Potter went out at three P. M., and returned about five—that is correct, is it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What time did you leave? A. It must have been in the neighborhood of between two and three when we took a recess for ten minutes, and it is rather tedious to call off ballots.

Q. You went on until two or three, and you took this recess? A. We took this recess between two and three, for about ten minutes.

Q. Then you kept on how long? A. Then we kept on until my relief came.

Q. When did he come—what time? A. He came about six or half-past six in the morning.

Q. But you are sure you were on until six or half-past six? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then who came on? A. Then Captain Durkee came on.

Q. Who were Clerks during the time you were there? A. There was Mr. Williams and Mr. Simpson.

Q. This man says that when this dirty work was going on a young man named Frank Dunn, and Fred Conway were Clerks. A. Yes, sir; those were the two Clerks there.

Q. You weren't there then? A. I was there after twelve o'clock.

Q. Were you there when the young men named Frank Dunn and Fred Conway were Clerks on that night? A. I was present while they were Clerks, certainly.

Q. After twelve o'clock? A. No, not after twelve o'clock.

Q. When were they Clerks? A. Before twelve.

Q. What time did they commence? A. As soon as the ballots commenced.

Q. What time was that? A. Seven or half-past seven.

Q. And you came away? A. I came back at twelve.

Q. What time did you go away? A. I went away at twelve.

Q. I thought you said you went away at seven and came back at twelve. A. Yes, sir; I went away at seven and came back at twelve.

Q. You swore a minute ago you were there when they went away. A. I said Simpson and Williams were Clerks when I was on calling off the ballots.

Q. A moment ago I asked you if Conway and Dunn were Clerks from seven until twelve, and you said they were. A. Well; they were.

Q. You don't know whether they were, do you? A. They were sitting in the Clerk's chairs, ready to act as Clerks, ready for the ballot to be called off, and I saw them there, and I must know they were there.

Q. You don't know what they did after you left? A. No, I do not.

Q. You don't know what occurred? A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. And you don't know what occurred when Mr. Durkee was calling off, and Conway and Dunn were Clerks? A. No, sir.

Q. You know nothing about it? A. No more than you do.

Q. This man says you went off at three p. m. and remained till six, and you think that is wrong? A. Yes; I think he is off altogether.

Q. You don't know what this man did, do you? A. What man?

Q. When you weren't there. He says, "During that time, while Durkee was calling and Conway and Dunn were acting as Clerks, this work went on." Now, you were not there? A. If you read on down, you will see. Does he say anything about drunks coming in there and sleeping?

Q. While you were off, you don't know about that, do you? A. Yes, I was there when those drunks came in. Whoever wrote the letter wasn't man enough to tell Mr. Sullivan or sign his name. He was not man enough to mention their names and say who it was that was drunk. He simply said there were four or five men come in there. Those men they were outsiders, and he didn't say that.

Q. Yes, he does: "Then Chadwick sat down again to call off ballots and there were four people asleep in the room." Now, he don't say the Board of Election were drunk? A. No, sir; but he don't say they were outsiders.

Q. You are certain that during all that count, you have such confidence in yourself, that you know you didn't make a mistake; is it impossible? A. No, it is not impossible for me to make a mistake.

Redirect Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: What do you mean by saying that it is not impossible for you to make a mistake? A. I believe it is not impossible for any man to make a mistake. Every man is liable to make a mistake, the same as this man has that wrote this letter.

Q. Even Mr. Clunie might make a mistake? A. I think he has made a mistake now.

Q. You say it is possible that a mistake might have been made. Is it at all probable that in calling off the ballots you did make a mistake? A. No, sir; it is not probable. I used the ruler and I was perfectly sober, and I defy any man to say different; and I had several men sleeping with one eye open, but this man that has written the letter wasn't there, and I will swear that. And I called off and ruled off every name.

Q. If a man had been sleeping with one eye open, he couldn't have looked over your shoulder? A. This man wrote so many votes were called, and the names. He called, among other names, Russell's name, and you can notice in the Fifth of the Thirty-fourth there was one mistake made, and that was through Strohmeyer writing his name on the ticket, and Judge Finn allowed it, and that was one vote. Now, I am satisfied if Mr. Sullivan had a recount, there wouldn't be that difference.

Q. Then in all the counting of ballots you tried your best to call them accurately and properly? A. I did, sir; as a genuine first-class Republican—or Democrat, rather. I made a mistake.

By MR. CLUNIE: Which is it? A. Democrat, sir; and always been and always will be, I hope.

By MR. DORN: And you tried to call them accurately and honestly, and even if you hadn't, you think there were enough men watching there with zeal to detect mistakes? A. I think it would have been impossible for me if I had wanted to call off names differently, there were so many Republicans looking over me.

Q. If a man asleep on a bench, with one eye open, had ruled the ballots with such accuracy that he could say that the Sheriff, the County Clerk, the State Senator, and the Recorder, were scratched with a gold pen between the first and second fingers, and called wrong— A. [Interrupting.] It is a natural impossibility, the way these were laid out, for any man to do it, even if he had second sight.

Q. In other words, that letter is tomfoolery? A. It is, sir. I believe the man that wrote that letter is imposing on Mr. Sullivan, or is a crank.

Q. You have no idea who wrote it, have you? A. No, sir.

By MR. CLUNIE: You didn't write it? A. No, sir. I will give you a specimen of my handwriting, if you want it.

Q. No; I will take your word for it. A. You need not do that.

P. C. HAWKINS.

A witness on behalf of respondent, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Mr. Hawkins, where do you reside? Answer—I live 309 Bay Street.

Q. How long have you lived there? A. I have lived off and on in that end of town for thirty-six years.

Q. Where were you located in the last election? A. I was in the Second of the Thirty-fourth.

Q. Were you present while the votes were being counted at any time?

A. I was; yes, sir.

Q. Were you an officer of election there? A. I was, sir.

Q. What office did you hold? A. I was Judge of Election.

Q. You were Judge of Election? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was the Inspector there? A. Mr. Callaghan.

Q. What politics is he? A. He is a Democrat, I guess.

Q. Don't you know that he is? A. I know that he is; yes, sir.

Q. When the polls closed who was in charge; what Inspector? A. Callaghan.

Q. What did they do? Give us the manner in which the proceedings were conducted. A. He ordered the hall cleared, and of the balance he ordered me out, and said I should have gone out.

Q. Why did he say you ought? A. I don't know.

Q. What did he say? A. He said I should have gone out.

Q. Did you go? A. I didn't much.

Q. Why didn't you? A. Because I was there to represent the Republican side of the house, and I was going to stay there.

Q. When you went on with the count, who called the ballots? A. There were three: Mr. Callaghan, Mr. Waterman, and Mr. Coleman, taking turn about. They would spell each other.

Q. Give us the manner in which they called them. A. Part of the time they were calling them too fast for the Clerks. The Clerks would be better judges of that than I would, but they were calling them too fast for the Clerks to keep tally.

Q. Whenever, in turning backward and forward on the pages, there was a difference in the tally, and one Clerk had it four, and another tally or one Clerk had it two, and another one one, what did they do? A. There was a difference twice.

Q. What did they do? A. They counted the votes.

Q. You say there were mistakes sometimes about their calling them too fast for the Clerks to get the votes? A. Yes, sir.

Q. If the mistake was against the Democrats, how did they change it? By giving the Democrat the extra vote? A. I don't know.

Q. You don't know? A. No, sir.

Q. When you saw how business was being conducted there, what did you do? A. Mr. Banks came along, and I told him he must get another man. I told him I thought there was something wrong, and he must get another man there to assist me watching.

Q. Did they do that? A. He did, sir.

Q. After that, things went better, didn't they? A. After that, the police officer come and told me that there was too much noise on the outside, and that the Tally Clerk should repeat the word after the man that was calling the name, and I, as officer of election, of course, told them that the outsiders must not do so much talking.

Q. After that you had no fault to find with the way the matter was conducted? A. No, sir.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: You are a Republican, are you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been a Republican? A. I have been a Republican for a good many years—conservative.

Q. How many? A. I think it must be nineteen or twenty years.

Q. You have just been a conservative Republican? A. No; I used to, be a Democrat at one time, but I thought I would go over on the strong side—on what I considered the best side.

Q. Did you study the tariff? A. The tariff had nothing to do with my being a Republican.

Q. You had nothing to do with the tariff? A. I was in favor of high tariff—protective tariff.

Q. In the last election were you in favor of high tariff? A. I was.

Q. You were pretty high? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were pretty high tariff the last election? A. Yes, sir; I was.

Q. Are you a friend of Mr. Banks? A. I am a friend of the Republican party.

Q. You are a protector of the Republican party? A. No, I was a friend of Mr. Banks. I didn't claim any special fight for Mr. Banks, any more than the rest of the Republican ticket.

Q. You had been a friend of Banks, hadn't you? A. I don't see why I should.

Q. You and Matt. Collins here are great friends? A. I am not a graduate of Mr. Collins.

Q. He has no graduates, has he? A. I don't know. He has accused me of being one of his friends.

Q. You were not one of his rock-rollers in the last campaign two years ago, were you? A. No, sir.

Q. You told him the other day you were out here guarding him. A. I don't know; give me the doubt, though.

Q. You told him that, did you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you held that position? A. There is nothing in that.

Q. When did you first determine to go on the Republican Board? A. I didn't know anything about going on the Election Board. I had postal card sent to the house about on the Register Board, and then I was wanted on the Election Board.

Q. You never asked to get on? A. No, sir.

Q. And you never had any talks with anybody about getting on? A. No, sir; I didn't.

Q. You just got the postal card? A. I just got the postal card sent to the house.

Q. And you were put on? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You went down election morning, did you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you found everything all right? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Everything went along all right? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Any trouble there? A. No, sir.

Q. And the polls closed? A. Yes, sir.

Q. The counting of the votes commenced? A. Yes, sir.

Q. No trouble then? A. No; the only trouble I noticed was calling the name too quick; the Tally Clerks couldn't tally as quick as the names were called. There were mistakes two or three times there.

Q. Were you trying to keep run of the Democratic Clerks? A. No: I was there to see no bulldozing was going on.

Q. Who was doing it; this man [indicating]? A. No; but I think they were calling them too fast.

Q. Who was "they?" A. There were three men.

Q. What were their names? A. Callaghan, Waterman, and Coleman.

Q. Who was the most rapid? A. Coleman was.

Q. The Democrats were the most rapid? A. They were; you bet they were.

Q. You didn't notice the rapidity of the Republicans, did you? A. I did.

Q. You compared the speed as they went along, did you? A. I did.

Q. The Democrat was a little bit more intelligent, was he not? A. Yes; I think he called three or four names to the one, because Mr. Waterman is a very fine gentleman, and he called rather slow—too slow.

Q. He was too slow and the other man was too fast? A. No. I have served on Election Boards in this city before you were born, I think, and I had pretty good experience in that, and from the manner in which they called them——

Q [Interrupting.] You are a sort of professional server on them, are you? A. No, sir.

Q. You said you had been on them before I was born. A. You ain't thirty years old.

Q. And you have been on Election Boards for thirty years? A. No, sir; not in San Francisco.

Q. Well, where? A. Well, up in the country.

Q. What is your business? A. I am not doing anything in particular now.

Q. How long have you been in that business? A. I was laid up two years with rheumatism.

Q. For two years you have been doing nothing? A. I never do a day's work if I don't want to.

Q. You are a capitalist? A. I have got enough to keep the wolf from the door. I was not able to work, or I would have done it.

Q. That was the reason? A. That was the reason.

Q. You have been taking quite an interest in politics in this city, haven't you? A. No, sir.

Q. How long have you been here? A. The last time I was here was nineteen years ago. I come here in '52, the last time that I lived here, in '53 and '54, and I lived down the country and come in here in '59.

Q. Haven't you been taking an interest in politics all that time? A. No, sir.

Q. You have been a Republican? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long long have you been a Republican? A. I voted for Democrats and Republicans.

Q. You have scratched your ticket? A. A good man if he is a friend of mine.

Q. That night in the Board, did the Tally Clerks complain of going too fast? A. Yes, sir.

Q. They said that, did they? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did they tell Callaghan that? A. They didn't tell Callaghan that in the Board; they complained about calling the names too fast.

Q. Who did they complain to? A. To the Board, not one certain man alone.

Q. Whenever they complained, did they stop calling fast? A. That didn't stop them.

Q. Then the Tally Clerks would go right on, would they? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then they complained they were too fast? A. Yes.

Q. What did Mr. Callaghan say to him? A. He would wait until they would rectify the mistake.

Q. Then he would go slow? A. Yes, sir; he would go on a regular trot—call them fast.

Q. Do you think he was doing that to defraud anybody? A. I don't know that he was.

Q. Do you know that he was? A. I don't know that he was. I didn't like to have the names called fast, but I don't think he did it to defraud anybody.

Q. Were you being paid there by the day? A. By the city and county.

Q. You were paid by the day, weren't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You didn't want the job to get over too quick, did you? Was that it? A. Yes; if you would put me there again for $200 I wouldn't go there.

Q. That was not the reason, then? A. No, sir.

Q. Why didn't you go there again? Did you have anything unpleasant? A. I don't want it, sir.

Q. You know John Sullivan, don't you? A. I do.

Q. Do you know him pretty well? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have been against him ever since he was nominated first, haven't you? A. I have not. I never raised my voice against him.

Q. You were a Republican? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were against him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you asked your friends to vote against him? A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. And you asked them to vote the Republican ticket? A. That is a horse of another color.

Q. You knew Mr. Banks was on the Republican ticket, didn't you? A. I did.

Q. And you asked them to vote the Republican ticket? A. Well, I didn't ask them to vote for Banks or against Sullivan.

Q. You asked them to vote the ticket, though? A. That is different.

Q. You know Billy Maxwell, don't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have known him since he was a little boy? A. Yes.

Q. He is a pretty good fellow, ain't he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have any talk with him before election? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you go to lunch with him one day before election? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you talk about stuff there? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you talk about stuff? A. I had some pie there, but no money.

Q. Didn't you tell Mr. Maxwell one day when you were eating lunch, that you had been training with Bill Higgins, but that there was nothing in Banks or that crowd for you, and that you were for Sullivan? A. I did not.

Q. Are you sure of that? A. Sure of it.

Q. Tell us what conversation you and he had. A. I couldn't tell you what conversation we had. We never had that conversation, I know.

Q. How do you know you didn't, if you don't know what conversation you had? A. I know if I made any such remark I would remember it.

Q. You don't know what remarks you made? A. I tell you he insisted I should go with him, and during the time I was there I had lunch and he paid for it, but I didn't wait to get lunch, and my wife was waiting for me at O'Brien's store, and he insisted very kindly that I should have dinner.

Q. You did have a talk? A. Yes; but not politics.

Q. Did you mention Sullivan's name? A. I did not; he might have done it.

Q. Did you? A. I have in conversation with him.

Q. What was that conversation about the Sullivan and Banks business? A. I don't remember mentioning Banks' or Sullivan's name.

Q. Did Maxwell mention it? A. He might, but I don't remember it.

Q. And you don't remember mentioning it yourself? A. No, sir.

Q. And you don't remember what conversation occurred? A. No, sir.

Q. No one has told you to get a little forgetful on the stand? A. No, sir; I am here to tell the truth and shame the devil.

Q. You have a son, haven't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He is on the police force? A. He is.

Q. How long has he been there? A. Not long.

Q. How long? A. I guess about a month.

Q. You got him on, didn't you? A. I didn't, sir.

Q. Who got him there? A. I give it up.

Q. You don't know? A. I don't know.

Q. You swear positively you don't know how he got on the police force?

A. Yes, sir. Mr. Maxwell knows very well that I don't know who put him on.

Q. Do you know Mr. Banks? A. I do.

Q. Did you have any talks with him? A. Any talk with him?

Q. Yes; did you and he talk before election? A. Probably two or three days before election I was introduced to Mr. Banks. I never knew Mr. Banks or talked with him before election.

Q. Then you did meet him three or four days before election? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you and he have any conversation then? A. No.

Q. How did you come to be introduced to him? A. Somebody introduced me to Mr. Banks.

Q. Who was that friend? A. I don't know.

Q. Was it Matt. here [indicating]? A. It might have been; I can't say.

Q. Don't you know it was? A. I can't say, sir.

Q. Just think for a minute, and try and refresh your memory on that, and see if it was not Matt. Collins that introduced you to Banks. A. No; I don't think it was. It might have been.

Q. Will you swear it was not? A. No; I will not.

Q. Where did you meet him? A. I think I met him on Union Street first; and there was some friends with him.

Q. Union and what? A. Union and Powell. I met him on the sidewalk, and I was introduced to him, and I didn't know Banks previous to that.

Q. How did you come to be introduced to him? A. I met him, and he was introduced to me on the street.

Q. He was out hunting candidates, wasn't he? A. No; I don't know. Probably he told me "This Banks is a candidate for the State Senate, and we want you to vote for him."

Q. Did he say that? A. I don't know that he did. I am only supposing.

Q. That is another time you forget? A. I don't know.

Q. You forget about that, don't you? A. It might have been; yes, sir.

Q. Then, as a matter of fact, you know you were introduced to Mr. Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you don't know what Banks said? You forget on that again, don't you? A. I don't know what he did say.

Q. Where did you and Banks go then? A. I went down town; I don't know where Banks went to.

Q. Didn't you go with Banks? A. I did not.

Q. Did he and you arrange for another meeting? A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. Didn't he arrange to go down to the Mint Saloon with you, afterwards? A. No, sir.

Q. How often do you go down to the Mint Saloon? A. Very seldom.

Q. How often? A. I don't believe in a year I was in there three times.

- Q. Haven't you been there very often before election? A. I don't think I was. If I was there, I think I would remember it.
- Q. Then you were there? A. What difference is there going in the Mint Saloon than any other saloon?
- Q. You were in there before election, then? A. I was.
- Q. Have you been in there since? A. I have.
- Q. Did you see Banks there? A. No.
- Q. Did you have any talk with him? A. No; no more than having a drink.
- Q. And he didn't say anything about your valuable services, did he?
- A. No, sir.
- Q. Either before or after election? A. No, sir.
- Q. Do you know Mr. Higgins? A. I do.
- Q. Did you go to see him in the Mint Saloon? A. No, sir.
- Q. Where did you see him? A. I saw him in the State Central Committee Rooms.
- Q. What were you up there for? A. My business was a Republican.
- Q. What were you going up there for? A. I went up to see what was going on.
- Q. Was there anything unusual up there? A. Nothing unusual.
- Q. What do you mean by you were going up there to see what was going on? What do you mean by that? A. When I was down town once in awhile I would go down there to see what was going on.
- Q. Did you and Mr. Higgins have a talk? A. I did.
- Q. Do you forget that? A. No, sir.
- Q. What was it? A. "How do you do?"
- Q. That was all: "How do you do?" A. That was all.
- Q. Your conversation was not very lengthy? A. No, sir.
- Q. Mr. Banks was not there at the time? A. I might have seen Mr. Banks there.
- Q. Mr. Banks didn't say anything? A. That is all. I didn't go there to solicit anything from him.
- Q. You wouldn't do that? A. No, sir; I asked nothing.
- Q. Do you know the Governor of the State? A. I do not.
- Q. You never met him? A. I might, and not have known him.
- Q. He is a little fellow with a great beard over his face. Do you know him? A. I don't know him.
- Q. You never had any talks with him? A. No, sir.
- Q. How long before election did your son go on the police force? A. I think he went on the force after election.
- Q. How long since? A. I guess it aint a month since he got there.
- Q. And you used no efforts to get him on at all? A. No, sir.
- Q. And you didn't ask Mr. Higgins about it? A. No, sir.
- Q. You say Mr. Banks came into the place there on the day of election. What was he doing? A. He and all the candidates that come around set them up for the boys; and God help the candidate that did not.
- Q. Mr. Sullivan didn't do that, did he? A. He did.
- Q. Mr. Sullivan set them up? A. He did—whenever he come there.
- Q. You said if a candidate come around and didn't set up the drinks, God help him. Did Senator Sullivan come in there once and set them up? A. I think he did set them up during the counting of the votes.
- Q. Will you swear that he did? A. I would ask him if he was in the room. I think he did. He is a liberal candidate; he was about as liberal a man as come around during the election.

Q. You don't know whether the candidates were liberal or not, do you?

A. I mean about setting up drinks for the boys.

Q. Were you around hunting up liberal candidates? A. No, sir.

Q. And you know they were all setting them up for the boys? A. Any candidate that didn't set them up—

Q. [Interrupting.] God help him. A. He'd better stay home.

Q. Will you swear Mr. Sullivan came in there and set up the beer at any time? A. To the best of my knowledge I think he did. I know he treated several times during the election.

Q. I mean during the count? A. I don't know whether he did or not.

Q. Won't you swear he treated several times there? A. I think he did.

Q. To the best of your recollection he did? A. Because these were boys that were very anxious and only too glad to have him come around often. Mr. Banks was a liberal fellow, too. So all the candidates were liberal; and those that were not liberal, they were no good, I tell you.

Q. That was the way you felt up there against all the candidates? A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't you say, "God help the candidates that come in and didn't beer up?" A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is the way you felt? Didn't you say before election you were for Sullivan? A. I did not.

Q. You never stated that to anybody? A. No, sir.

Q. You never saw the Governor to talk to? A. No, sir.

Q. Your friend Matt. never took you up and introduced you to his friend the Governor? A. He did not, sir.

Redirect Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: You said your son is on the police force? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Don't you know, as a matter of fact, that he was put there by the influence of a Democratic State Senator? A. I heard so, but I couldn't swear to that, though.

Q. Who was the man? A. Senator Goucher, I think. put him on.

Q. Isn't Senator Goucher the man who recommended him, and interested himself, and got the position for him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You, at least, had nothing to do with getting it for him? A. Not a thing.

Q. You said something about the candidates coming around there, and setting up the beer for the boys. Did you see the contestant in this case, during the time votes were being counted, around there? A. I think I did.

Q. From the time the polls opened until you were through counting the votes. Mr. Sullivan was around to see you, wasn't he? A. He was.

Q. And if he came around to see you, he didn't go away without making his contribution to the poor box? A. No; he always contributed.

Q. Mr. Sullivan was a liberal fellow, and whenever he come around during the election and during the count, he was always willing to set up the beer for the boys? A. Always willing.

Q. About the time the polls were going to close, a little before six on the afternoon of election day, you were inside the polling place, weren't you? A. I was.

Q. What proposition was made to you to stand aside while they got in a few votes for Sullivan? A. There was a gentleman come along before the polls closed and told me to stand back, that he had some boys that were going to vote for Johnny Sullivan, and he said, "You will have to stand back."

Q. When was that? A. That was the evening of election, the sixth.

Q. Just about the closing of the polls? A. Yes.

Q. What did you do? A. I told him it wouldn't go.

Q. You told him that kind of business wouldn't do? A. I told him if they didn't belong there they couldn't vote there.

Q. And they were not allowed to vote there? A. No, sir; they were not. The polls closed at that moment.

Q. He told you to stand aside, that they had a few votes they wanted to put in for Sullivan? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you told him that kind of business didn't go? A. That is what I said, yes.

Q. Who was with the man that made that proposition to you? A. I think Mr. Maxwell I saw there.

Q. Wasn't Billy Maxwell right there at the time, and didn't he come up with him? A. I think he was in the buggy with him, and I was right by the window. I think I saw Maxwell's face, but he didn't make the proposition.

Q. Mr. Maxwell didn't make any proposition. Was he there with the man that did? A. Mr. Maxwell didn't make any proposition, but he was there with the man that did.

Q. Who was the man? A. Mr. Daugherty.

Q. You say you had a conversation with Maxwell in the restaurant. A. I did.

Q. As a matter of fact, didn't Mr. Maxwell propose to you that if you would drop the Republican ticket, or at least, if you would drop Banks and let Banks go, and stay in with Johnny Sullivan, he would give you $100. A. No, sir; he did not.

Q. He didn't make any such proposition as that to you? A. No, sir.

Q. He didn't offer you any money to stand in with Sullivan? A. He did not. He knew better. That is a get-up he got on me.

Recross Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: Just before the polls closed, or as they were about to close, three or four young men came up, didn't they? A. Two in a buggy, and he said, "Stand back, Hawkins, I have got some men I have got here I want to vote for Johnny Sullivan, and don't you say anything."

Q. He said, "Stand back, Hawkins, I have got some men I have got here I want to vote for Johnny Sullivan, and don't you say anything?" A. Yes, exactly. I was then receiving the tickets.

Q. And you shut the box, didn't you? A. I did not.

Q. What did you do? A. They announced it was seven o'clock. They didn't try to vote.

Q. You told him they couldn't vote there? A. Not without they lived in that precinct.

Q. Don't you say they came up and said they wanted to vote for him, and you told them they could not? A. Without they lived in the precinct. I said, "They will vote here if they are entitled to vote."

Q. You didn't say that a minute ago? A. I did.

Q. Didn't you say, "They cannot vote here, and they can't do that kind of business?" Didn't you stop electors from voting for Mr. Sullivan? A. I did not. I said, "If they didn't live, and they were not on the register there, they couldn't vote."

Q. Who is this Daugherty? A. I guess he is in the Fire Department.

Q. How do you know his name was Daugherty? A. Because I know him.

Q. How do you know? A. I have known him; he was raised in my neighborhood.

Q. And you don't know what he does? A. He is in the Fire Department.

Q. Daugherty came up and said, "Get out of the way," he had some men he wanted to vote for Sullivan? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you told him they couldn't do it without they lived in the precinct? A. No, sir.

Q. And they didn't attempt to vote? A. They did not. I knew how many names we had on the register, and we were waiting for one or two names at the time, and I knew we had pretty near all voted on that.

Q. How many did you have on the register? A. I forget.

Q. You knew a little while ago? A. I did not.

Q. You said you knew the number that was on the register? A. These men were in there all the time—

Q. [Interrupting.] Didn't you swear a few minutes ago that you knew how many men were on the register? A. I did not.

Q. You did not swear you knew how many were on the register? A. No, sir.

Q. How many were on there? A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't you tell me a few minutes ago you didn't know how your son got on the police force? A. I did.

Q. You just told Mr. Dorn you did? A. I said this: I didn't know who got him on; it is on hearsay. If you go and tell me something out doors, I am not supposed to swear to that.

Q. Didn't I ask you who got your son on the police force, and didn't you say you didn't know? A. You asked me if I helped to get him on. I don't know for certain that Senator Goucher put him on. He said he would put him on. I didn't speak to my son three times since he went on the police force.

Q. But you only told your son Goucher was going to put him on the police force? A. Is that the reason I would say so?

Q. You swore so when Mr. Dorn asked you. A. I simply answered him.

Q. Do you swear Mr. Maxwell was there? A. No, sir.

Q. At the Second Precinct, where you were, when these men came up? A. Yes, sir: I think he was.

Q. And you are sure of that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you are just as sure of that as you are of anything else you testified to? A. I think he was in the buggy.

Q. His brother and he look alike? A. I don't know.

Q. And you are sure of that now? A. Yes.

Q. And you are just as sure that Mr. Maxwell was in that buggy as you are of anything else you testified to? A. He was at the time.

Q. You are sure of that? A. I am sure of that.

Q. A moment ago you wouldn't testify positively on that. You said you didn't know, you just saw his face. A. You are coming on cross fire, aint you?

Q. I asked you the question, and a few moments ago you couldn't swear positively Maxwell was in the buggy, and now you swear positively to it. How do you account for that change? A. A man will refresh his memory sometimes.

Q. Then your memory has suddenly been refreshed, is that it? A. That is it.

WILLIAM McNEIL.

A witness on behalf of respondent, was called, sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Where do you reside, Mr. McNeil? Answer—No. 439 Union Street.

Q. You did no work on election day? A. No, sir; the shop was closed.

Q. You have lived in that district for a long while? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are pretty well acquainted up there? A. Yes, sir; I was born up there.

Q. This man that offered you $2 50 was a stranger to you? A. No, sir; he lived up there. I don't know his name. I see him coming up Dupont Street pretty often.

Q. Did you ever see him around the district? A. I saw him passing up.

Q. And he came up to you and asked you that? A. He asked me what ticket I was going to vote.

Q. And what did you tell him? A. I told him the Republican ticket.

Q. You told him the Republican ticket? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you tell him you were in charge there? A. No; I told him nothing.

Q. And you told him you wouldn't do it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he walk off? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he mention Mr. Sullivan's name? A. No, sir.

Q. Did he mention Banks' name? A. No, sir.

Q. Did he offer you $2 50? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he have it in his hand? A. No, sir; he didn't have it in his hand. He had his hand in his pocket.

Q. Where was that? A. Corner of Union and Montgomery Streets.

Q. What precinct was that? A. The Second of the Thirty-third.

Q. What time did you go there that morning? A. At the time the polls opened, six o'clock.

Q. Whom did you see there? A. I saw Fred. Jones, and he told me to place myself, and I went and got at the table.

Q. Did you see Jones vote? A. No. I don't know whether he voted in that precinct or not.

Q. You voted there? A. Yes, I voted there.

Q. What time did you vote? A. I waited until about half-past three or four.

Q. Why did you wait until that time? A. Because I felt like it.

- Q. Why did you wait until that time if you were there at half-past six?
A. I had from six to seven to vote.
- Q. Didn't you wait to see what you could get? A. No, sir.
- Q. You went there at half-past six in the morning? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And you had a splendid chance to vote? A. Yes, sir; if I had wanted to.
- Q. And you delayed until the afternoon? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Without any object? A. Yes, sir; without any object.
- Q. And that was all you got up there? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. That was $5? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Who paid you that? A. The County Committee.
- Q. What County Committee? A. Down Kearny Street.
- Q. Who paid you that? A. I don't know the party's name.
- Q. How did you get it? A. I showed him the receipt I got from Jones.
- Q. What did Jones say when he told you to go to work? A. There was another party brought him up, and he asked me if I wanted a job and I said yes.
- Q. Who brought him? A. Mr. McPherson.
- Q. Where does he live? A. Up on Filbert Street.
- Q. You never spoke to him before? A. I worked in the same shop before, and I asked him if he could get me a job that day, and he said he would try.
- Q. Do you know Mike Smith? A. No, sir.
- Q. How did you come to come out here? A. Parties asked me to come out, and I thought I might as well come out to-day, and they might subpoena me.
- Q. What parties asked you? A. Parties I am acquainted with.
- Q. What party? A. Mosey Lee.
- Q. Who is Mosey Lee? A. He is a friend of mine.
- Q. What does he do? A. I don't know.
- Q. He is a pretty good friend of your's if you don't know anything about him. A. I used to keep company with him when I was small.
- Q. And he asked you to come out here, did he? A. He heard about my knowing something about it, and he asked me to come, and I come.
- Q. How did he know? A. I don't know.
- Q. Did he hear it? A. I don't know. I suppose I might have told somebody about it, and the party told him.
- Q. Who did you tell? A. I told McPherson.
- Q. When did you tell McPherson? A. Right after the fellow offered me the money.
- Q. The same day? A. The same day.
- Q. You are sure of that? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Just as sure as of anything else you have testified to? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. What did McPherson say? A. He only laughed.
- Q. He thought it was a joke? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And you didn't intend to buy anybody? A. No, sir.
- Q. And you thought he was fooling, and didn't mean it? A. No; I thought he meant it, the way he talked.
- Q. Didn't you think it was a joke? A. No, sir.
- Q. You said so a little while ago. If a man asked you to vote for money, you knew that was against the law, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. You knew it was a State Prison offense? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Why didn't you report it to the police? A. I didn't think it was any use; it wouldn't benefit me any.

Q. And you went right around and told McPherson? A. He just happened to be with me, and I told him of it.

Q. Did you ever think that would benefit you? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you tell Mosey about it? A. No, sir; I didn't.

Q. Did you tell anybody else about it? A. I might have told six or seven about it. A lot of Republicans and Democrats were talking there together, and we got off such talk.

Q. Then if Mosey heard it he got it from some person down in the factory? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you are sure you told it to McPherson on the day of election? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are sure Mosey did not tell you what to testify when you came here? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have been offered no money? A. No, sir.

Q. Nor any place? A. No, sir; I have been offered no place.

Q. Mr. Banks offered you nothing? A. No, sir.

Q. And Mosey didn't offer you anything? A. No, sir.

Q. And Mosey and you have been friends for years, and you renewed your acquaintance with him? A. We were always friends, and we happened to meet once in awhile.

Q. You swear you don't know what Mosey does now? A. No, sir.

Q. You are sure of that? A. Sure of it.

F. R. FOWLER.

A witness called on behalf of respondent, was duly sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Mr. Fowler, were you present in Judge Wilson's Court at the time of the recount for the office of Recorder and Superior Judge was going on? Answer—Yes, sir.

Q. Before that had you heard any reports about the Seventh Precinct of the Thirty-third Assembly District? A. Yes, sir.

Q. With regard to the Senatorial fight? A. Yes, sir. I heard that there were forty or fifty scratches on the Democratic ticket where Mr. Sullivan's name was scratched, and no name put opposite to it. They said there were forty or fifty of them.

Q. What precinct was that? A. The Seventh of the Thirty-third.

Q. Did you take off the tally there? A. Yes, sir. The Bailiff and I talked about it, and I said I didn't think such a thing would happen, and he said: "Let us take it off for fun, for our own sake," so when they were counting the ballots, we stood right there and counted the scratches.

Q. How many scratches were there? A. Seven.

Q. That is, scratches where Mr. Sullivan's name was erased and no one's else substituted? A. Seven scratches.

Q. And the Bailiff and yourself made that? A. Yes, sir; we agreed on it.

Q. Then if anybody else testified that there were—if Mr. Maxwell testified as follows: "Q. What was it? A. I noticed a good many Democratic tickets come out straight. There were names had one or two scratches on them, and I noticed a waving line and the name of Mr. Sullivan facing, and it was not a straight line, but a waving line, and sometimes it went through to the others. Q. How often did it occur? A. To the best of my knowledge, forty or fifty times." A. I didn't see it forty or fifty times. We counted it.

Q. I ask you if Mr. Maxwell or anybody else testifies in that way, then they must have been mistaken in the number of times that Mr. Sullivan's name was scratched? A. In that precinct, they were.

Q. I talk about the Seventh of the Thirty-third. A. That is it; that is the only one I looked at at all, and the way I came to look at it was out of curiosity.

Q. And if Mr. Dunn or anybody else testified that in the Seventh Precinct of the Thirty-third District, Mr. Sullivan's name was scratched about thirty times with the pencil, and no one's name was substituted, is it not correct? A. No; it was seven times, and we counted and agreed on it afterward.

Q. You were the Deputy Registrar? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was the other gentleman that made this tally with you? A. Mr. Magner.

Q. He was Deputy Sheriff? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And your tallies agreed? A. They agreed; yes, sir.

Q. And there were about seven scratches there? A. Yes, sir.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: Mr. Fowler, you are sure Mr. Magner agreed with you, did he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What caused you to do that? A. It was talked of, and I said I didn't believe anything of the kind.

Q. Who talked with you about it? A. I don't remember; four or five talked with me about it.

Q. And you paid particular attention to it? A. That is the only one I did look at, except afterwards I looked at something, and I had no object in it.

Q. Do you say you and Mr. Magner compared? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And if he states he did not agree with you, he is mistaken? A. Well, I don't think he can say that, because I think Mr. Burdett, the Clerk of the Court, heard him say that.

Q. If he and Mr. Dunn say that there were thirty or forty scratches, they are not correct? A. They were not in that Court at all. I didn't know anybody else that had taken it, or anything of that kind. I heard this remark had been made, and I didn't know it had been taken in the other Court.

Q. How do you know they got it? A. Somebody in the precinct, I supposed.

Q. You knew the ballots had not been changed at all, didn't you? A. Of course I knew that.

Q. You were in charge of that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. They were pretty busy up in Judge Wilson's Court. Wasn't your attention attracted there? A. No, sir; I just stood right there though.

By MR. DORN: As a matter of fact, you were not very busy, and you had nothing to do but to tie up the ballots? A. Yes, sir; that and to take care of them.

Q. And to see that they were not altered or changed? A. That is all.

MAX WARSCHAUER.

A witness called on behalf of respondent, was duly sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories:

By MR. DORN: Mr. Warschauer, did you take off any of the tallies for Senator in the Twenty-First Senatorial District? A. I took off one precinct: the Second of the Thirty-fourth.

Q. Have you got your tally here? A. No, sir; I have not.

Q. Refresh your memory as to the Assembly District. Is it the Second of the Thirty-fourth? A. Yes, sir; it is the Second of the Thirty-fourth.

Q. Did you try to tally what was made from the actual votes cast and shown there, with the official tally? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That precinct was the one concerning which Mr. Hawkins, the witness on the stand, has just been testifying, has he not—the Second of the Thirty-fourth? A. I don't know: I didn't hear what he said.

Q. Did you compare the result of your tally, as taken from the ballots cast, with the official tally, as announced? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the difference, if any? A. The difference was about sixteen votes.

Q. In what way? A. Mr. Banks gained six votes and Sullivan lost nine or ten; something like that. About sixteen votes there were.

Q. That is the difference that was made? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you in such a position that you could take that tally off accurately? A. Yes, pretty near; within one or two votes.

Q. Your position was such that you could take it off, so you could swear you couldn't have made a mistake in more than one or two votes? A. I think so; one or two votes is the highest.

Q. You think you didn't make any mistake at all? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you are making allowance for a possible mistake? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And your allowance is to be made on the right side? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And your impression is that you made none? A. My impression is that I made none.

Q. Had you any interest in taking off a false tally? A. None.

Q. Or a tally that would give Mr. Sullivan less votes or Mr. Banks more? A. None.

Q. As a matter of fact, wasn't your tally taken off for the purpose of giving this information to Mr. Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Wouldn't your purpose in giving honest information to yourself and Mr. Banks be to give the benefit of the doubt against Mr. Banks than in his favor? A. I don't know that.

Q. Suppose you had come to a ballot which you were uncertain about, and you had to put it down or omit it, and you didn't know whether it was Mr. Banks' or Mr. Sullivan's vote, what column would you have put it in? A. It would depend on what ticket it was. If Banks' name was on there, the chances are I would give it to Banks, and if Sullivan's name was on there, the chances are I would give it to Sullivan.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: You were a Deputy Registrar of the city and county then, weren't you? A. No, sir; I was not. I was not working anywhere.

I was in the County Clerk's Office, and left to take part in the Russel-McIntyre count there.

Q. Did you take any other count there? A. I took the Phelps and Clunie.

Q. You were a professional counter there, weren't you? A. No, sir.

By MR. DORN: Who is your assistant in the count there? A. Mr. Clunie.

Q. Andy Clunie? A. Yes, sir.

By MR. CLUNIE: Mr. Clunie did not agree with you, did he? A. No, sir.

Q. What was the difference? A. I will not say it. The Clunie and Phelps fight has nothing to do with this.

Q. You say you stood in the same position to take this other one as you did the Clunie and Phelps, did you? A. I do.

Q. In the same position? A. No; I was where you were. That is a better place.

Q. What was the difference between the Phelps and Clunie tally? A. No; I will not tell the difference in the Phelps and Clunie.

Q. I want to show how reliable you are as a snap tallier. A. I refuse to answer the question.

THE COURT: You are instructed to answer the question.

MR. DORN: That is, if you can remember? A. I don't remember, then.

By MR. CLUNIE: Do you swear you don't remember? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you swear that positively? A. I don't remember.

Q. Do you remember how near you were to the official count in the Phelps-Clunie case? A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you swear to that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you sure of that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you within one hundred of it? A. I can't swear to that.

Q. You don't remember how many you were of it? A. I don't remember how many I was within the Phelps-Clunie count.

Q. You swear positively to that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you do with that count? A. I give it up next day that the count is over.

Q. Don't you know it was matter of impossibility to take that count accurately any place? A. There was never a difference in any one precinct of but one or two votes.

Q. Don't you know, as a matter of fact, it was impossible to take a snap tally correctly? A. No; it was not impossible.

Q. And you thought you got it right in this Sullivan-Banks case? A. I know I did within one or two votes.

Q. You think these other snap tallies are not correct? A. I do.

Q. You still think you were right? A. Yes, sir.

Q. There were three or four other people taking them? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you think they were wrong? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why did you think you were right and they were wrong? A. Because I had a better position to see the ballots.

Q. Who took them? A. In what contest do you mean?

Q. Any contest; just to show how reliable your figures are. A. In any other contest I took off one tally, and somebody else took off the other tally. Two parties took off the same tally.

Q. You took the Banks and Sullivan, didn't you? A. Yes, sir; we didn't compare figures, though.

Q. There was no other person took them at all? A. No, sir.

Q. And you did not compare figures? A. No.

Q. Do you think you might have made a mistake in one or two? A. I might have made a mistake of one or two.

Q. Why do you say one or two? A. They may have been a mistake, and put one tally down wrong, and it may never have occurred, and it may be exactly correct.

Q. You rather think it may be exactly right? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have no prejudice against Mr. Sullivan, because he is a Democrat? A. No, sir; not at all.

Q. You never tried to give the Democrat any of the worse of it? A. I don't give him any of the worst of it in a snap tally.

Q. Didn't they tell you they were going to have you as a witness here? A. No, sir.

Q. You knew there was going to be a contest going on? A. If I had known it I would have brought my memorandums with me; I have got them over at the house.

Q. And you have not got them with you? A. No, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Banks ask you to take that? A. Yes; he asked me to take it.

Q. What reason did he give? A. He wanted to see what the actual vote was.

Q. Did he tell you he wanted it for the contest? A. No, sir.

Q. You knew there was going to be a contest? A. I knew there was going to be a contest, but I didn't know whether he wanted it for that or not.

Q. You are sure of that, are you? A. Sure of it.

Q. You are deputy now in what office? A. The Recorder's.

Q. And you swear you don't know the figures in the other contest? A. No, sir.

Q. Or within one hundred? A. No, sir.

Q. Or within two hundred? A. No, sir.

Q. Or within three hundred? A. I may remember within three hundred.

Q. What are the figures? A. I don't know.

Q. You know you are under them now, do you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Don't you know you don't forget, but you won't state it? A. No, sir.

ROBERT W. DURÖSE.

A witness, called on behalf of respondent, and having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Mr. DuRose, where do you reside? Answer—No. 1117 Poplar Street, Oakland.

Q. How long have you lived there? A. Since Thanksgiving.

Q. Where did you live before that? A. No. 915½ Mission Street.

Q. On election day, where were you? A. I was in the Twenty-first District.

Q. Where were you the second night after election; on November seventh? A. In the Third of the Thirty-fourth.

Q. The Third Precinct of the Thirty-fourth Assembly District? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What were you doing there? A. Watching.

Q. Who for? A. The Republican party.

Q. You were there for the Republican County Committee, watching the count? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What, if anything, did you observe there with regard to the count? First let me ask you, who was calling while you were there? A. I don't know the gentleman's name; I know he is a Democrat.

Q. You inquired and found he was a Democratic? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he was calling ballots? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who were there? A. Captain Smith was in and out. He was there, and the rest were strangers to me.

Q. Did you see this gentleman there [indicating William Maxwell]? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Maxwell. Tell us how this Inspector, or whoever it was, called those ballots, and what he was doing? A. He was calling them off; he had the board slanting in his lap this way [indicating], with his hand over the ballot that way, and was calling off this way, with a lead pencil in his hand.

Q. And he had a lead pencil in his hand? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What, if anything, did you do? A. I spoke about it.

Q. What did you say? A. I said I didn't think it was a square deal.

Q. In what way didn't you think it was a square deal? A. I didn't believe it was right to be using a lead pencil.

Q. About how long did he continue to use a lead pencil in that way? A. Shortly after I spoke of it.

Q. You don't swear, and I don't understand that you did swear, that he marked any ballots? A. No, sir.

Q. You don't know whether he marked any or not? A. No, sir.

Q. You only know he had a pencil in one hand and the ballot in another, and he was moving it over from one to another. A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you protested against his using a lead pencil? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he stop it then? A. No, sir.

Q. Notwithstanding your protest he continued using the lead pencil? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What time of day was this? A. This was in the morning.

Q. What time? A. I couldn't tell exactly, but it was along early in the morning.

Q. About what time in the morning? Do you mean between twelve and six; or after six? A. Between twelve and six.

Q. It was what we call the morning watch, then? A. Yes, sir.

Q. As a matter of fact, that is the watch of the whole twenty-four hours at which the bystanders is reduced to the lowest, is it? A. I couldn't say.

Q. As a matter of fact, there are generally more people around the polls where the ballots are being counted from six o'clock in the morning until twelve in the day, and from twelve o'clock in the day until six o'clock at night, and from six o'clock at night until midnight, than there are between midnight and six in the morning? A. Yes; I think so.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: Why do you think so? What makes you think so? A. Because most of the people are asleep.

Q. How do you know that they are? A. I don't suppose they stay up all night.

Q. This is only your supposition, then? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are just guessing at this, aren't you? A. I didn't say I swore to it.

Q. You are trying to intimate that this man was doing something wrong, are you not? A. No, sir; I didn't intimate any such thing.

Q. Don't you know that that man didn't do anything wrong? A. No, sir; I won't swear that he did.

Q. Won't you swear that he did not? A. No, sir; I won't.

Q. You were there as a watcher? A. Yes, sir; I was there as a watcher.

Q. You saw the man with the lead pencil? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were looking at him all the time? A. No, sir; not all the time.

Q. You were hired to do that? A. No, sir; I was not hired to do that.

Q. What were you doing? A. I was there as a watcher.

Q. What does a watcher do? A. Well, watch.

Q. And you did not watch? A. Yes, sir; I watched.

Q. You would have seen him if he did anything? A. No, sir; I could not; because he had his hand over the ballots.

Q. You saw what he had. You could see that it was a lead pencil? A. I could see that it was a lead pencil.

Q. How far were you away from him? A. I guess about three or four feet.

Q. How long were you in that place? A. Five or six hours.

Q. And you don't know the man's name? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ask anybody what his name was? A. No, sir.

Q. How do you know it was a Democrat that was doing this? A. When I first went in there was a recess, and the Clerk that sat opposite me I got talking with him, and I asked him who was calling off the ballots, and he didn't give me the name but he said he was a Democrat.

Q. Who was this Clerk you asked? A. I don't know his name either.

Q. You know whether he was a Democrat or not? A. By the way he talked I guess he was a Republican. I don't say he was, but I judge by the way he talked he was a Republican.

Q. Did you call his attention to the lead pencil? A. No, sir.

Q. You say you made a protest? A. Yes; I said I didn't think it was a square deal.

Q. Whom did you say that to? A. I said it to the man calling off.

Q. What did the man say? A. He didn't pay any attention to me.

Q. How long before he stopped it? A. A short time afterwards.

Q. After you came in, how long had he been using the pencil? A. After I came in he started in then: they started in to count then, and they were having a recess when I came in.

Q. This man was calling off? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he had this pencil in his hand? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which end did he have down? The sharp end? A. I couldn't say there was a sharp end up, or I couldn't say there was a sharp end down.

Q. Don't you know this man simply had the point of the pencil in his hand so you and the other men could see down? A. I don't know anything about it.

Q. You were looking at the ballots, weren't you? A. Yes, sir; what could I see of that?

Q. You could see it? A. No: I couldn't see much of it.

Q. He had a whole ballot? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you call his attention to that? A. No, sir.

Q. Why not? A. It wouldn't do any good, when I saw what he did when I spoke about the lead pencil.

Q. You saw that shortly afterwards he put the lead pencil down? A. Yes, sir. After he put it down, you could see your way clear.

Q. How long did he use that? How long was it after he started that you called his attention to it? A. I suppose about twenty minutes or so.

Q. How many ballots did he count? A. I wouldn't swear. It is about five, I guess.

Q. Then the whole fraud that could have been committed while he held this lead pencil was about five ballots? A. I don't say he had any opportunity to commit it.

Q. If he had wanted to do it, that was the time he would have done it, on those five ballots? A. I don't know. He might have been doing it long before I went in there.

Q. I can imagine just as well as you can. Tell us what he did when you were there? A. I told you.

Q. That is all he did—on five ballots? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see the pencil move when he was calling? A. I saw the pencil move, but I couldn't say he was writing.

Q. You thought he might be writing on a ballot, and you were four feet away? A. I said three or four feet away.

Q. Which was it? A. I said it was three or four feet.

Q. Well, three feet, say. You could have come nearer, couldn't you? A. No; I couldn't.

Q. Why couldn't you? A. Because I had my head in between the shoulders of two men standing in front of me.

Q. Who were the men in front of you? A. I don't know.

Q. Did you ask? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ask to have them let you in? A. No, sir.

Q. But you didn't see what he was doing with the lead pencil? A. I didn't see what he was doing with the lead pencil.

Q. And you didn't ask these people to let you get in and see? A. No, sir.

Q. Weren't there any Republicans down there besides you? A. No. And I know I relieved one man there, and as soon as I come down there he went home.

Q. Wasn't there any other Republican there? A. There was Captain Smith in and out.

Q. Did you tell Captain Smith about this lead pencil? A. No, sir.

Q. You know Captain Smith pretty well, don't you? A. No, sir.

Q. How did you know he was a captain? A. I have seen him at San Quentin.

Q. You knew he was a very prominent Republican, didn't you? A. I don't know as I did. I knew he has held several offices; I don't know he is a prominent Republican.

Q. How long have you known him? A. I have known him by sight a good many years.

Q. Did he come in while this man had the pencil? A. I think Captain Smith was sitting at the end of the table when this man had the lead pencil. I wouldn't swear positively whether he was in or not.

Q. You think, to the best of your knowledge, Captain Smith was there all of the time this man had the pencil? A. I wouldn't swear to that.

Q. What is your best knowledge on that? A. Captain Smith was in and out, and to my best recollection he was there. I am not sure.

Q. And Captain Smith saw that pencil, and he didn't make any objections? A. I don't know whether he did see it or not.

Q. Where was he sitting? A. At the end of the table.

Q. Is it a big table? A. It is a pretty long table.

Q. Is his eyesight bad? A. I don't know whether it is or not.

Q. Are you a relative of Mr. Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you take a pretty active part in his fight? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What relation are you of his? A. Cousin.

Q. You didn't vote over in that district? A. No, sir.

Q. And you went up there to look out for his interests particularly, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you would have noticed if this man scratched Banks' name with a pencil? A. I couldn't see the names, I told you.

Q. You were a relative of his, and you went up and watched his interests, and you were a relative of his, and it would have been better for him if you had let some other man go? A. I don't know whether it would or not.

Q. Do you think it was helping him, if there was something wrong going on, as you thought, and you didn't stop it? A. I supposed if I didn't mention it, it would have continued.

Q. As a matter of fact, during the whole time you were there, do you think there was any fraud committed with that pencil? A. I couldn't say there was or was not.

Q. Do you know Mr. Buckley—this old gentleman there [indicating Mr. Buckley]? A. No, sir.

Q. He wasn't there during the time you were there at all? A. Not that I know of.

Q. Wouldn't you have known if he had been? A. I don't know. I never took any particular notice of any of them; they were strangers to me.

Q. You didn't notice who was there? A. No, sir. I noticed Captain Smith; that was about all. That was the only one I knew.

Q. And the only reason you say this man that was calling was a Democrat was because the Clerk told you? A. The Clerk told me.

Q. What kind of a looking young man was he? A. A smooth face young fellow.

Q. And you didn't hear his name all the time you were there? A. No, sir.

Q. Was his name Smith? A. I couldn't tell you. I told you I don't know his name.

Q. You never heard his name? A. I never heard his name; I don't remember hearing it.

Q. Did you hear of Swain? A. I couldn't tell you his name if you went over forty names.

Q. You went back and told Banks about this fraud, did you? A. No, sir.

Q. You did not tell him that? A. No, sir.

Q. How did you come to come out there? A. I have been out here since the contest has been going on.

Q. Every day? A. No, sir; the last four or five days, I suppose.

Q. What did you come out here for? A. What did a good many of the others come out for?

Q. What did they come out for? A. Just to listen and see what was going on.

Q. And you never told anybody about this before you went on the stand? A. Yes, sir; I told somebody.

Q. Who did you tell? A. I told about it the night afterwards.

Q. Who to? A. Several parties.

Q. Who? A. Up on the corner of Washington and Leavenworth.

Q. Who? A. The groceryman who keeps the place.

Q. You told him about it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was Mr. Smith doing while you were there? A. He was sitting there.

Q. There were no weapons around there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who had the weapons? A. Captain Smith was sitting in a chair with his foot upon a table, and he went to get off the chair to go out, and the pistol fell out of his pocket.

Q. Accidentally? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He didn't take it out? A. No, sir. It is not likely a man will lay his pistol down, and lay it on the back of the chair and walk out.

Q. That is the only reason he didn't do it, that you think it is not likely? A. I don't think so.

Q. Do you know Roddy Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He is a relative of yours, too, is he? A. Yes, sir; he is a cousin of mine.

Q. Where did he live? A. He lives on Merchant Street, I think it is.

Q. Merchant and what? A. Between Kearny and Montgomery.

Q. He lives there, does he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long has he lived there? A. I don't know how long he has been there.

Q. Is it a month? A. I couldn't tell you.

Q. Is it two months? A. I have never been to his place.

Q. How do you know he lives there? A. I don't know. He has told me he lived there.

Q. When did he tell you? A. I have seen him down on Merchant Street several times.

Q. When did he tell you he lived there? A. Not more than two or three days ago.

Q. He told you he lived down on Merchant Street? A. Yes, not more than that.

Q. Ain't you pretty friendly with him? A. I haven't seen him for some time.

Q. How long? A. I used to meet him occasionally. Perhaps I would see him once in three or four months.

Q. Did you ever call on him? A. No, sir.

Q. You never went to see him? A. No, sir.

Q. You never called at his residence? A. No, sir. If I ever met him, I met him accidentally.

Q. Where did he reside before election? A. I couldn't tell you.

Q. You swear you don't know? A. I don't know.

Q. You don't know whether he lived down on Merchant Street? A. I told you I don't know. I only see him once in three or four months—perhaps five or six months.

By MR. DORN: At the time this occurrence took place which you have narrated, Mr. Maxwell, this gentleman here [indicating William Maxwell], was sitting there? A. Mr. Maxwell was sitting at the door.

Q. At the time you told him you objected to some one using the pencil over the ballots, this gentleman, Mr. Maxwell, was sitting there, was he? A. Sitting at the door.

Q. How far from the person who was using the pencil—or caller? A. Well, the table is in between Mr. Maxwell, and the caller was sitting on the other side of the table.

By MR. CLUNIE: If you had made this remark, Mr. Maxwell could have heard it, couldn't he? A. What?

Q. Asking the caller to stop? A. If I had made the remark?

Q. Maxwell heard you, didn't he? A. I don't know whether he did or not.

Q. He could have heard it? A. He could have heard me?

Q. And everybody in the room could have heard you? A. Yes, sir.

[Here the further hearing was continued until to-morrow morning, January 11, 1889, at 10 o'clock.]

NINTH DAY.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA,)
FRIDAY, January 11, 1889—10 o'clock A. M. }

M. A. SMITH.

A witness called on behalf of respondent, was duly sworn, and testified as follows:

. Redirect Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Where do you reside? Answer—No. 1010 Vallejo Street, San Francisco.

Q. How long have you lived there? A. About fourteen years.

Q. Were you in Court at the previous session of this case, when a gentleman named George Ryan, testified? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you hear his testimony? A. No, sir; I didn't hear his testimony. I was not in Court that day. I heard of the testimony.

Q. I read from page one hundred and thirty-four, from the testimony of George Ryan:

“Q. Do you know a gentleman by the name of Michael Smith? A. Yes, sir. Q. Captain Michael Smith? A. I know him very well. Q. You have known him for some time? A. Yes, sir. Q. Did you have any conversation with him prior to or since the election on the sixth of November, in regard to Mr. Banks and his efforts in his behalf with a convict in San Quentin? A. Yes, sir. Q. Who was present at that conversation? A. He and I. Q. There was nobody else there? A. No, sir. Q. Proceed. A. He and I had a conversation in the Fourth Precinct. There was a barroom adjoining; I think it was the ninth of November, the last day of the count of that precinct. I think it was the ninth of November.

“By Mr. Dorn: That was after the election? A. After the election. He told me that Mr. Sullivan's defeat was owing to his influence in San Quentin.”

Then there is an objection. Then Mr. Clunie asks this question: “Go on and tell the conversation. A. He and I had been together all the night before and all that day.” Then, after some other matters: “A. Owing to his influence at San Quentin, and I asked him how he accounted for that, and he said, ‘Don't you know that there is twenty-seven convicts in San Quentin that lived in this Senatorial District?’ and he said, ‘Those twenty-seven convicts befriended us. I was there, and I had letters from them to their friends, and went to their friends when I happened to be away from there, and sought their influence, which I thought I had.’”

Q. Did you have any such conversation as that with Mr. Ryan? A. No, sir; I never had any conversation of that kind with Mr. Ryan. I will relate all that happened in this saloon with George Maxwell, who was on the stand in this case.

Q. Go on and tell us the conversation you had with him. A. I had no conversation about that with George Ryan.

Q. If Mr. Ryan testifies that you had a conversation with him in the barroom at that place named in his testimony, and that no one else was present, his testimony, then, is untrue in that regard? A. Yes, sir; his testimony is untrue.

Q. You never had a conversation at or about that time with Ryan, or concerning the subject named? A. He was in the barroom, I think, when I was talking with George Maxwell. There were several in there.

Q. But you had no conversation with Ryan alone? A. No, sir; I had no conversation with George Ryan alone. I don't know that I ever had a conversation with him alone in my life; I don't think I ever spoke to him about it.

Q. Just give us the conversation as it happened. A. With Maxwell?

Q. Did you ever have a conversation like that at all? A. I never had a conversation like that at all.

Q. And you never made any such statement as that to Ryan? A. I never made any such statement as that to Ryan.

Q. Were you in Court when Henry McLaughlin testified in this case? A. No, sir; I was not. I was not here the day McLaughlin testified. I came in afterwards, while Murray was testifying.

Q. I read from page two hundred and two, after some preliminary matters, the following: "Was the tall gentleman there" [meaning in the county jail.] "A. Yes, sir; the big man with the beard. He said his name was Mike Smith. Q. Did Smith and Murray have a talk? A. They had three or four different conversations. Q. Did you hear any of the conversations? A. A friend of mine was speaking to me. I heard the two of them conversing, and I heard Smith asking Murray if he had those letters burned up, and Murray said, 'They are all all right.' Like that."

Q. Did you ever have a conversation with Mr. James Murray in the city prison of this city and county in the presence of Henry McLaughlin? A. I suppose by relating the circumstances of the whole case I could tell.

Q. Just answer the question. A. There was no one present that I know of at all. I was standing at the end of the desk talking to Mr. Murray; Mr. Cohen, the prison keeper, was at the desk in the first conversation, writing, and Murray stood there talking to me. I never sat on the bench; I never was down on the bench at all. So McLaughlin was not there.

Q. At any conversation which you ever had with James Murray in the city prison, was this McLaughlin present? A. No, sir.

Q. Was he within hearing of the conversation? A. I don't know about that. I suppose the seat is as far as from here to that chair [indicating].

Q. About how far in feet? A. About five or six feet—may be four feet. I couldn't say.

Q. Did you have any conversation with James Murray in the city prison in which you asked him the question something like this, without pretending to repeat the exact language: "Have you got those letters burned up?" or "What have you done with those letters?" and he answered "They are all right"? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever, at the city prison, ask Murray anything about any letters at all? A. I will relate the conversation, and how I come to go there.

Q. Very well; just give us the whole business? A. I received a note from James Murray—I suppose it was maybe seven or eight or ten days before he was in the city prison—telling me that there had been three parties calling at his house. Let me see what the note said. [Pausing.]

Q. Have you got the note? A. I don't know. I may have it, but I looked and haven't found it yet.

Q. Have you looked for it? A. Yes, sir. I may have torn it right up at the time; but I have not been able to find it.

Q. Just tell us what the conversation was? A. He said there had been some parties after his brothers and him about the hand he took in the Sullivan and Banks fight, and that he wanted to see me at 306 Lombard or Filbert Street, I don't know which; I think that was the number, 306 Lombard Street.

Q. Where did you get that note? A. It was left at the Mint Saloon, Commercial Street.

Q. Did you get any response to that? A. No, sir.

Q. Come down to this conversation. What was the next thing? A. The next thing, I was going along Stockton Street and I met his brother—I think it is Charles Murray. I was with Mr. Banks at the time—and he said, "Jim is down in hock." And he says, "They are jobbing him." I said, "For what?" He says, "Well, the way us boys acted in this case of Banks," and he said, "There ain't anything in it, and he wants to see you." I said, "What is the charge against him?" He said, "I don't know; battery or something; I think there is an assault to rob against him now."

Q. Did you go down? A. I went down and he went on to tell me all about the case. He said, "There have been two or three parties here that want me to give up."

Q. Did he give you their names? A. Yes, sir: he told me Collins was one of them.

Q. What else? A. I think that is the only name he mentioned, was Collins.

Q. Did he say Sullivan had been down to see him? A. No, sir: he did not.

Q. Did he say Maxwell had been down to see him? A. No, sir: he did not.

Q. He did not mention the names? A. No, sir.

Q. Go on. A. He said: "They want me to produce the letter I sent over here." I said: "Whatever is in the letter, you can give it to them. There is nothing in there we care anything about." I said: "I never told you to write any letter." He says: "All right; I don't know whether I have got it or not." He then spoke to me about getting him bail, and I told him I couldn't do anything of that kind.

Q. You told him you couldn't do it? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ask him if the letter was burned up? A. No, sir; I didn't say anything about the letter.

Q. To go back into the history of that letter: was that letter written at your request or did you have anything to do with the writing of it. A. No, sir; I never saw it. I will commence right now by saying that I never asked any convict over there to write any letter to any of their friends to support Banks or support Sullivan or support Banks against Sullivan.

Q. You never made any request of that kind? A. No, sir.

Q. Then any statement of that kind, that you did so, would be wholly untrue? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are positive you never asked any convict at San Quentin to write any letters or interfere in any way with the Senatorial election in San Francisco, at the last election. A. No, sir; I never asked them to write any letters, and I never knew there were any letters written, if there were any written.

Q. Do you know a man commonly called Yankee Sullivan? A. No, sir; I don't know him.

Q. Have you ever heard of him? A. I heard some talk that there was a man testified here by the name of Yankee Sullivan, but I don't know him and never saw him.

Q. Don't you know that the man is known about town by the name of Yankee Sullivan, and commonly known as such, is a convict, and that he is from San Quentin? A. I know there is such a fellow, but I was not here when he testified.

Q. There is a man named Yankee Sullivan who has been a convict at San Quentin? A. Yes, sir.

Q. But you didn't see him. A. I didn't see him either on or off the stand.

Q. Do you know any such man around town? A. There might be and I not know him.

Q. "Yankee Sullivan" is a nickname, isn't it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. It is a nickname which the man who bore it got over in San Quentin? A. I think he got it before he went over there.

Q. Do you know a gentleman by the name of George Maxwell? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you known him? A. I have known George Maxwell a good many years.

Q. Did you have any conversation with Mr. George Maxwell on, I think, the evening of the eighth of November last? A. Yes, sir.

Q. At the Fourth Precinct of the Thirty-fourth Assembly District? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you at that time say that there were twenty-seven convicts who had lived in the Twenty-first Senatorial District, and that they had sent letters to their friends in the district, and that it had helped Banks to succeed, and that those letters had been sent through your instrumentality or request? A. I said there were letters sent, but I didn't say that I had them sent.

Q. As a matter of fact, you say you didn't have them sent? A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. Did you then pretend to fix any number of letters which had been sent, or do you know? A. I don't know the number of "cons" now in San Quentin that lived in that district. I couldn't tell probably within ten or fifteen of the number.

Q. Do you know the number that were there at the last election? A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Do you know of any letters having been sent at all, except what you have heard in the testimony in this case? A. I am satisfied that there were letters sent, but I had nothing to do with them.

Q. Do you know that there were letters sent? A. I didn't see them.

Q. Then all you know is what you have heard? A. What I have heard.

Q. Just give us the conversation with Mr. George Maxwell. Tell us how it occurred and everything. A. I believe there was Mr. Rainey, and Mr. Denny Sullivan, drove up to the precinct—

Q. [Interrupting.] Who are Mr. Rainey, and Mr. Denny Sullivan? A. Denny Sullivan is one of the District Engineers, and Mr. Rainey is, I think, Superintendent of the engine.

Q. Then there were some of the firemen who were taking an interest in the fight in the Twenty-first Senatorial, were they? A. Well, they drove up there.

Q. They didn't drive up there to collect a bill, or to put out a fire, did they? A. No; they drove up in a buggy.

Q. They drove to the election precinct, and they drove as if they knew where it was, and as if they knew where they were going? A. Yes, sir; they were there, and I had just come to the precinct.

Q. Go on. A. Mr. Sullivan was there, and Mr. Banks was there, and quite a number. I guess there were fifteen or sixteen went in together and had a drink in the saloon.

Q. You were drinking with Mr. Sullivan, weren't you? A. I think we had three or four drinks. I don't know whether Mr. Sullivan treated or not. I believe I did, and I think Mr. Maxwell treated, and I know there were three or four drinks taken around there, and whether Mr. Sullivan treated at that time or not. I couldn't say. After we had two or three drinks they were all talking, and Mr. Maxwell and myself stood at the end of the billiard table, and we went on talking about what led up to the defeat of Mr. Sullivan and what led to the election of Banks. Mr. Maxwell was blaming some people for going back on him, and speaking about what led up to it. I gave my version of what I thought was the reason, and we spoke about several things there, and in it he said something about—he said, "You didn't lose anything on the convicts over there." I said, "I don't know whether I did or not." I said, "I will tell you one thing; you made a mistake in trying to get a pardon for somebody and you didn't get it; it didn't do you any good." I was speaking about this Murray boy. He said, "That is what a man gets; I did the best I could to get the pardon and I couldn't get it, and they thought, I suppose, I didn't try." That was what led up to this convict talk.

Q. And that was the conversation with regard to convicts, was it? A. Yes. Then I spoke about everything in general, and it was a general conversation.

Q. Did you say you had got twenty-seven convicts over there to write letters to their friends? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you say you had got one to write to his friends? A. No, sir, and I didn't understand Mr. Maxwell to say that when he was on the stand.

MR. CLUNIE: He is contradicting him all the way through. He has contradicted five or six already.

THE WITNESS: I heard his testimony, and it was pretty correct pretty near all the way through; and I don't think there was anything said about the number. He may have got that in his head by talking with some other people about the number. I will say that Mr. Maxwell testified very nearly what was said there.

MR. DORN: He testified as follows, after asking if there had been a conversation: "Q. On the eighth of what? A. On the eighth of November, two days after election, I believe, about eight o'clock, we were all in the Fourth Precinct of the Thirty-fourth, talking about the election, and it looked then like a victory for Mr. Banks; and we had virtually given up the fight for Mr. Sullivan, and were talking about the battle, and Mr. Smith and I got to talking about things, and about this fight, and he told me he thought he had got the best of us on one or two occasions, and that was that we had neglected some of the convicts over at the prison." I don't find it. A. I heard Mr. Maxwell's testimony. I don't remember him saying that.

Q. Afterwards from Mr. Clunie: "By Mr. Clunie: Q. Just go on and tell the conversation that occurred; what he told you about these convicts.

A. About the convicts; he told me in a general conversation that there was some twenty-seven people, I think, in the Penitentiary, that had friends and relatives in that Senatorial District, and that they were quite a factor in that fight, and that they had sent letters to their friends and relatives in that district, and that they had helped Banks considerably in his fight.

Q. Did he state who requested those convicts to send letters? A. No, sir."

A. I think there was some such conversation as that happened.

Q. Did you hear anything about twenty-seven convicts? A. I don't think I did; but still I would have had no reason to have said that number. I will say that if I had such a conversation as that with Mr. Maxwell, it was a general conversation there with Mr. Maxwell. I want to say this: There were a whole lot of things that led up. This conversation was not all in one breath after the other. There was a good deal of talk about the different people in these precincts, why they had went back on Mr. Sullivan.

Q. Mr. Maxwell said that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did he say about men going back on them? A. He said they were men that ought to have been his friends that were against him.

Q. Who did he name that were against him? A. I can't exactly call the names. I remember him calling to some people up on the hill that he claimed had gone back on him.

Q. Did he name those Murray boys and their relatives? A. Yes; there was some talk about it.

Q. Why did Maxwell say they ought to have been for him? A. I suppose he thought for trying to get a pardon for this boy, they ought to have been his friends.

Q. When you said Maxwell said his friends went back on him, Maxwell was not a candidate for any office, was he? A. No, sir.

Q. He was making Mr. Sullivan's fight over there? A. He was looked on as making his fight. He was a kind of Democratic Captain over there.

Q. You know Mr. Maxwell over there for years? A. Yes, sir; I have known Mr. Maxwell for years.

Q. As a matter of fact, Mr. Maxwell's especial and particular fight over there was for the election of Mr. Sullivan to the Senate, was it not? A. I suppose he was very much interested in Mr. Sullivan's fight. He is a member of the Confidence Club, and I understood that Mr. Sullivan was President of the Confidence Club, and naturally they were very much interested in the success of Mr. Sullivan for the Senate.

Q. You have occasionally met the assistant counsel for the contestant, William Maxwell, haven't you? A. I know him. I saw him through the election.

Q. Did you ever see William Maxwell up to the day of election and until after the votes were counted, that he was not talking Sullivan. A. I couldn't say whether I had or not. I have been in some saloon where perhaps Billy was on one or two occasions. He might have said something or other; I don't know. I know Maxwell would know it would be no use to speak Sullivan to me, the same way I know it would be no use to speak Banks to him.

Q. On the night of election, or rather on the sixth day of November, where were you? A. In the Sixth Precinct of the Thirty-fourth Assembly District.

Q. What were you doing there? A. I was looking out for the interest of the Republican ticket there.

- Q. Do you know a gentleman by the name of Chadwick? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Did you see him around that precinct on that night? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Do you know a gentleman by the name of R. J. Bellingham, who testified here yesterday? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Did you see him around there? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Who was the Chief Inspector? I will designate him so. I want to know who the Inspector was, and who the additional Inspector was, if you know. A. Bellingham was an election officer, John L. Durkee was an election officer. Mr. Nixon was an election officer, and Mr. Doucher was an election officer.
- Q. What time did you go there? A. I was there after the polls closed.
- Q. How long did you stay? A. I stayed all night at that precinct.
- Q. What time did you leave? A. About six o'clock next morning—between six and seven.
- Q. Between the hour of twelve o'clock at night and six o'clock in the morning, who called the ballots? A. Mr. Bellingham.
- Q. Were you present in Court yesterday when Mr. Bellingham was on the stand? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Did you hear his testimony with regard to that matter? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. How is that testimony with regard to being true or false? A. It is true.
- Q. In respect of the person who called the ballots out or the name? A. That is true.
- Q. Just tell me who did actually call the ballots, and who was in charge of the polls from twelve at midnight until after six in the morning? A. After they put their initials on the back of the ballots Mr. Durkee called them, starting in from the first of the night; then Mr. Bellingham called off and then Mr. Durkee called again in the morning.
- Q. Do you remember at any time between midnight and six o'clock in the morning, Mr. Bellingham going out of the room for a few minutes? A. I will relate that circumstance just as it happened. Mr. Bellingham got up to go out of the room, and about that time Chadwick, who was a United States Supervisor of Election, sat in the chair to count, and Stephen Potter objected to his reading the ballots, and I sided with Potter and said he had no right to count; that he was a United States Supervisor; then the young man who was a Clerk up there—
- Q. Before passing from that, had Chadwick counted any ballots? A. No; he had not counted a ballot—not one ballot.
- Q. Then he got up from the chair? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Did he occupy that chair at any other time between midnight and six in the morning? A. Not between midnight and six in the morning. That is, he did not sit down to count the ballots. I don't know whether they changed chairs or not. Then there was a witness here who was a Clerk—Conway—he went to read, and Mr. Potter objected to him, and while the objection was going on, Bellingham came in and sat down and commenced to count.
- Q. Then neither Conway nor Chadwick counted or called any ballots? A. No, sir.
- Q. Or handled any? A. I know they didn't count; whether they handed them out of the box at any time—I am satisfied that Mr. Doucher handed out all the ballots.
- Q. At any time between the closing of the polls and six o'clock the next morning, did Mr. Chadwick call any number of ballots, or did he call a single ballot? A. No, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Chadwick sit down in the caller's chair and take a gold pen or pencil between his fingers and mark off the office County Clerk, and Sheriff, and Senator, and some three or four more on the Democratic ballots, to the number of twenty-six? A. No, sir; nor he didn't read off nor mark off one.

Q. If he had read or marked a ballot, you would have seen it, would you? A. Yes, sir; I was there to look out for that.

Q. This gentleman you mentioned, Stephen Potter, who is he? A. He is Official Reporter of Judge Levy's Court, and was there in the interest of the Democratic party, as I understood it.

Q. You were looking out for the Republican party, and Stephen Potter was looking out for the Democratic party; and if anything of that kind had occurred, you would have seen it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Potter go away between midnight and six o'clock in the morning? A. He went away.

Q. What time? A. I cannot specify. Then Charles McCarthy was there.

Q. When Potter left, Charles McCarthy took his place? A. McCarthy was there the whole evening; but when Potter left, he took his place.

Q. What time did Potter leave? A. I don't know whether it was four or five or six.

Q. Did he leave at three? A. I am not positive.

Q. When he left, did he come back? A. I don't know. I saw him there again, but I forget whether it was after daylight or not; but Charley McCarthy was there.

Q. Whatever time Potter went away, McCarthy was there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was McCarthy? A. Charles McCarthy is now Guard in the House of Correction.

Q. What was he there for? A. I understood he was looking out in the interests of the Democratic party.

Q. He was a Democrat? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he and Potter were there together looking out for the interests of the Democratic party, and both of them never went away? A. No, sir. Furthermore, in the Fifth of the Thirty-fourth it never varied any in all the official counts in Patterson for Sheriff, Bonestell, or Russell. Two years ago it did not in the Siebe and the other contest.

Q. How did it turn out in the contest for Superior Judge, which has just been counted in Judge Wilson's Court? A. I was not up there at the time, but I understood that there was one ballot that was allowed by Judge Wilson that was not allowed by the election officers.

Q. And that is the only change? A. That is the only change.

Q. How did it come out for the office of Recorder? A. The same thing, I think.

Q. There was one ballot which had been rejected by the Board because "O. K." was written on the ballot? A. I don't know: I wasn't there.

Q. Something of that kind occurred? A. I heard so.

Q. And the ballot was counted? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that made a change of one? A. That was what I understood.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: You were up there watching all these times? A. Yes, sir; I have been up in that precinct a great number of years.

Q. You have watched all these counts, and you know just how they were had? A. I only tallied one precinct.

Q. Where did you tally? A. I tallied in Judge Wilson's Court; one precinct.

Q. You were up there at the time, that was the Fifth of the Thirty-fourth? A. Yes, sir.

Q. If Chadwick says he called off any ballots, he is wrong? A. He is wrong.

Q. Do you know he is mistaken? A. I know he is mistaken.

Q. You are sure he did not call off any at all? A. I will swear he did not call off any at all through the daytime or night I was there. I was in another precinct the next day.

Q. After the polls closed and when the vote was commenced to be counted, you were in the Fifth of the Thirty-fourth? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were not in the other precincts? A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't another young man testify you were down in the Third of the Thirty-fourth? A. That was the second night.

Q. You were there then, weren't you? A. No, sir. The counting was done in the Fifth of the Thirty-fourth at that time. I was not there through the day the next day at all.

Q. You know you went down to the Third of the Thirty-fourth. A. Yes, sir.

Q. You heard this young man testify, did you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were there during the time of the count that night a long time? A. I was there.

Q. You did not go there for fun, did you? A. I went down in the interest of the ticket.

Q. You were pretty sleepy, and you didn't go down for fun? A. No; there were other watchers there.

Q. But you were there watching, too? A. Yes, sir; I was around there.

Q. You know this young man that was on the stand, Mr. DuRose? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You heard his testimony? A. Yes, sir.

Q. About somebody having a pencil in their hand? Did that occur? A. Just as they commenced to count there was a gentleman there, and I don't think they had counted a ballot then, and he had a pencil in his hand, and DuRose objected to his having any pencil, and he put the pencil in his pocket.

Q. Then Mr. DuRose was wrong when he said he used the pencil? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then you don't think he used it marking the ballots? A. I don't think there was any counted when he had that. I am satisfied in my own mind they hadn't counted any ballots, because he said something about it, and this man back to him, and there was a few words, and I think George Maxwell and myself were talking at the door, and we stepped in there and the pencil was put up, and there was nothing more done about it.

Q. You will swear that there was nothing wrong done with that pencil? A. Yes; I will swear that there was nothing wrong done with that pencil at that time.

Q. Then you swear Mr. DuRose's testimony was wrong when he said he used the pencil in counting four or five ballots? A. When he first spoke to him he might have made a mistake in counting off something wrong, and maybe Mr. DuRose made a mistake.

Q. You said he didn't use it on the ballots? A. I said they hadn't started to count off any ballots. They might have counted an elector.

Q. Didn't you say you were there and saw it? A. I said George Maxwell and myself were there, standing at the door.

Q. Wasn't William Maxwell there, too? A. I think William Maxwell and Hussey were there, because Maxwell was in and out.

Q. You don't know that he was not there, as a matter of fact, do you—William Maxwell? A. I don't remember whether he was there at that time or not.

Q. Who was standing by the man that was reading the ballots? A. I think Mr. Hussey was looking out for the Democratic end of it, and I think Mr. DuRose was looking out for the Republicans there.

Q. Don't you know that Mr. Buckley was there? A. He had gone home at that time.

Q. You are sure of that? A. Yes, sir; positive that he went home about that time. He went home a little after twelve o'clock.

Q. You say you saw Rainey and George Maxwell up in this precinct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You thought that was queer for them to be up there? A. No, sir, I didn't think so.

Q. You knew they were connected with the Fire Department? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you think that was out of place? A. No, sir. I think Maxwell had a right there and Rainey had a right there.

Q. During the campaign, did you see Maxwell around? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you think that was wrong? A. No, sir.

Q. You knew he was a public official, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You didn't think that was wrong for a public official to do that, did you? A. I think a public official has a right to look out for his interest the same as any other person.

Q. Then you don't think it is anything wrong for a public official to take an interest in politics? A. To take an interest in politics?

Q. You were interested in Mr. Banks' fight, weren't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. During this campaign, where were you; what was your business? A. I was Chief Turnkey at the State Prison.

Q. Where is that? A. San Quentin.

Q. In Marin County? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you took quite an interest in the fight? A. Yes, sir; I took quite an interest in the ticket.

Q. You didn't take any particular interest in Mr. Banks' fight? A. Yes, sir; I would get votes for Banks, and I would get votes for every other Republican that I could.

Q. Don't you know you took a little bit more interest in Mr. Banks than you did in any other Republican? A. No, sir; I don't think so.

Q. Didn't you ask people to vote for Mr. Banks that you did not ask to vote for the Republican ticket? A. Yes, sir; I might have done that, and to vote for Davies, and for Laumeister. If I was talking to a Democrat there, and knew that he wanted to vote for his electoral ticket, and wanted to vote for one or two or three on my ticket, I did.

Q. Then you did take an interest in half a dozen men? A. I took an interest in the whole ticket.

Q. You asked them to vote for Banks and you also asked them to vote for who else? A. I asked them to vote for just as many as they would.

Q. Who did you begin with first? A. I suppose I asked for Congressmen first.

Q. Don't you think Mr. Morrow was able to take care of himself? A. No, sir; I was quite interested in Mr. Morrow.

Q. Didn't you ask everybody to vote for Mr. Banks? A. I may have.

Q. Don't you know, as a matter of fact, you were taking a personal interest in Mr. Banks' fight? A. I was taking a personal interest in the whole ticket.

Q. Were you taking what we call a particular interest in Mr. Banks? A. I wanted to see Mr. Banks elected; yes, sir.

Q. And you wanted to help him all you could? A. Yes, sir.

Q. At this time you were Captain over there at San Quentin? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were not drawing your salary over there while you were here, were you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were here, in fact? A. I never was away three days at a time except on election. I was here and there.

Q. You were away once three days? A. Yes, sir; I was here before election and went over there and come back.

Q. Election day you were here three days? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What are the duties of Turnkey? A. Locking and unlocking the doors and letting the prisoners out.

Q. Do the rules of the prison allow them to go away? A. I had two assistants there, under the law.

Q. Under the law and under the rule you are allowed to go away from San Quentin, to come over here, and take an interest in politics, and come over here and stay three or four days at a time? A. I will state now that there are some Democrats there that did the same thing.

Q. Now you want to ring the Democrats in? A. The Warden of the prison did not prevent either side.

Q. Is there a rule of that kind? A. No, sir; there is no rule.

Q. Isn't there, as a fact, a rule preventing officers? A. No, sir; you make application to the Warden for a leave of absence.

Q. And you made the application every day? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you came over every time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you talk with the Commissioners about that? A. I never talked with them.

Q. Do the Commissioners know when and how often the officers are absent? A. I suppose if they look over the record they will see the days they were absent.

Q. Is there such a record? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Don't you know they never look over that? A. They should.

Q. Don't you know they never do? A. I don't know. I know the Captain of the Guard generally marked down.

Q. Didn't you examine the record over there, to see it? A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't he make an exception in your case? A. No, sir. When I wanted to come over here I always went to the Warden. I told him I wanted to come over to the city, and I would be back this afternoon or tomorrow, and he said it was all right.

Q. Do they require you to write out an application when you want to go away? A. No, sir.

Q. Don't all the officers have to do that? A. The Guards do.

Q. No other officers? A. No, sir.

Q. What other officers go away without filing an application? A. The Deputy Warden.

Q. Who is that? A. Benjamin Chambers.

Q. Who else? A. Dr. Durant, the druggist.

Q. Who else? A. Mr. Fish.

Q. Who else? A. George W. Adams, the agent.

Q. What other officers go away without asking? A. Capt. Chambers.

Q. Any others? A. Those officers never write out any application; only inform the Warden.

Q. Are you the only Captain that is over there except this Captain Chambers? A. I don't know as any are Captains.

Q. You are called the Captain, are you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is where you get your title from, isn't it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Ain't you called Captain of the Guard there? A. No, sir; I am not.

Q. What do they call you? A. Captain of the Yard.

Q. Then there is a Captain of the Guard, is there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What other Captain is there? A. I believe there is a Captain of the Night-watch and Sergeant of the Night-watch.

Q. Do these other officers go away without asking? A. No, sir.

Q. They never file an application? A. No, sir; I think they never file applications over the Captain and Deputy Warden and the druggist.

Q. Who is the Warden? A. General McComb.

Q. You went to General McComb and told him you wanted to go over to San Francisco, and told him you wanted to take an interest in Mr. Banks' fight? A. No, sir.

Q. And he never asked you what you wanted? A. No, sir.

Q. And he raised no objection? A. No, sir; he did not.

Q. Did you ever tell him you were going over to take an interest in politics? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever tell him your friend Banks was running for Senator? A. No, sir.

Q. You never mentioned anything about that? A. No, sir.

Q. You never mentioned that your friend Banks was running for Senator? A. I don't know. I may have.

Q. And he never wanted to know what you were doing over here? A. No, sir.

Q. Don't you know he did know that? A. He may have known I was in politics.

Q. As a matter of fact, don't you know he knew that, and that you were taking a hand in politics here? A. As a matter of fact, I suppose he knew I was taking a part in politics here.

Q. You testified in your direct examination, as I understand it, that you knew nothing about these letters? A. Oh, no; I didn't say that I did not.

Q. I understood it that way? A. No; I said I never had any of them sent, and I never spoke to any of them to write them, nor I never saw any of them.

Q. Didn't you say you never knew anything about them? A. If I did, I made a mistake.

Q. If the record shows you said that, that was a mistake? A. That was a mistake and it was a slip of the tongue, that is all.

Q. Do you say you did not know about these letters? A. I may have known that there were some going.

Q. How did you know it? A. I might have heard it talked.

Q. Who did you hear talk it? A. I don't know now.

Q. You know how you found it out, don't you? A. I might have known there were people over there writing that were friends of mine, and I wouldn't prevent them.

Q. You wouldn't prevent them if they wrote what you wanted? A. No, sir; and I wouldn't have prevented them if they wrote for Sullivan. It would have went out just the same.

Q. It would have gone out just the same as these letters went out, would it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Smuggled out? A. I don't know whether any of them were smuggled out.

Q. Don't you know how these letters go out? A. No, sir.

Q. As a matter of fact, don't you know they go out through the office? A. No, sir.

Q. How are they sent out? A. They are given to a man that takes charge of them.

Q. Who is that? A. C. N. Fish. I want to say now that you can find out all about those letters from C. N. Fish.

Q. Mr. Fish goes around taking these letters? A. Yes, sir; any officer will take a letter up to the office.

Q. They are allowed to roam around the way they please, are they? A. No, sir.

Q. How do they get to the officers? A. The officers are outside the yard.

Q. When Mr. Fish takes a letter, what does he do? A. He has got an office in the yard, and the prisoners go and leave them in this office, and Mr. Fish mails them.

Q. Don't they require them to number the letters that go out there? A. No, sir.

Q. Don't you know they do? A. I don't think so. There is a book kept there with the letters, and who they are written to.

Q. Isn't every letter that goes out there numbered, and don't you know that that is the fact? A. No, sir; I never had anything to do with it.

Q. Isn't every convict required to send the letters out to the office? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you don't know how they keep a record of it? A. I know they keep a record in the book there.

Q. And you don't know anything about it? A. I know they keep the book there, but I didn't pay any attention to it.

Q. You heard that letters of this kind were going out? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Didn't you say anything about it when you knew they were going out? A. No, sir. I knew Mr. Fish was usually taking a great interest in the other side of the house.

Q. He never stopped them? A. If he got anxious, I suppose he sent them. I don't know whether he did or not. I didn't write them.

Q. You heard these political letters were going out of the jail, didn't you? A. I didn't read them.

Q. Don't you know, as a matter of fact, Mr. Fish reads every letter that goes out of the jail? A. He does, or a convict that he has got under him.

Q. Who is that? A. Elliott.

Q. Elliott is quite a friend of yours, isn't he? A. I don't know as he is.

Q. Are you pretty friendly over there? A. With whom?

Q. With Elliott? A. No; I don't know as I am with any other prisoner.

Q. You are entitled, as an officer, to have a man run round as a sort of trusty for you, are you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you selected one man to do that in particular, didn't you? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you select this man Elliott? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you swear you never put him in that position? A. No, sir; I never selected him at all.

Q. As a matter of fact, haven't you had Elliott running round for you? A. No, sir.

- Q. You are sure of that? A. Yes, sure of it.
- Q. Just as sure of that as of anything else you have testified to? A. I am, sir.
- Q. Do you know a man by the name of Griffin? A. A tailor?
- Q. I don't know. He is a convict over there, isn't he? A. Yes, sir; he is head tailor.
- Q. Are you pretty friendly with him? A. Yes, I am friendly with him.
- Q. He is a sort of trusty for you, isn't he? A. No, sir.
- Q. And you don't take any interest in him either? A. No, sir.
- Q. You never sent him around any? A. No, sir; his business is in the tailor shop.
- Q. Do you know what kind of an interest he took in politics this time? A. I don't know as he took any.
- Q. He never told you what interest he was taking? A. No, sir.
- Q. You and he never talked about politics? A. No, sir; I don't think I ever mentioned politics.
- Q. Do you know whether you did or not? A. I don't remember ever mentioning politics, because I didn't go into the tailor shop over once a week.
- Q. Didn't you meet him out of the tailor shop? A. No, sir. I might have met him in the yard.
- Q. Didn't you and he have several talks in the yard? A. No, sir.
- Q. Didn't you talk politics in the yard? A. No, sir.
- Q. Didn't you take Banks in the yard with you? A. No, sir.
- Q. Wasn't Griffin the man you sent around to get these letters from the convicts? A. No, sir.
- Q. You are sure of that? A. Yes, sir. I don't think Mr. Griffin is hardly ever out of the tailor shop during the hours he is unlocked.
- Q. Wasn't Griffin the one you sent to talk with these people? A. No, sir.
- Q. You are sure of that? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. You are not over there now, are you? A. No, sir.
- Q. How long since? A. I suppose a month.
- Q. Why did you go to see him a month ago? A. I was working there then.
- Q. Then you left there? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Why did you come to leave? A. I resigned.
- Q. It was not on account of politics? A. No, sir.
- Q. You knew Mr. Griffin? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. You didn't ask him about these letters? A. No, sir.
- Q. How they come to get out? A. No, sir.
- Q. Tell us how you knew these letters come to go out. A. I cannot swear now.
- Q. Will you swear it was not Griffin? A. I wouldn't swear it was, and I wouldn't swear it was not.
- Q. You remember these conversations and you remember everything Mr. Dorn asked you as perfectly as can be, and I ask you about these now and you cannot remember? A. I cannot tell who I talked with about this.
- Q. Who was it? A. I can't tell. There were numbers of them.
- Q. It was a generally understood thing that these letters were going out? A. I think it was understood that a convict that had outside friends, they would send them out.
- Q. And it was an understood thing among the officers that these letters were going out? A. Well, I never read them. I suppose if a man was a Democrat and had Democratic friends running here he would write them, and if he was a Republican he would write them for the Republicans.

Q. I just want to know about this case? A. I might say I didn't go to any of those parties to send letters.

Q. Do you swear Griffin was not the one who told you about these letters? A. I won't swear that.

Q. You won't? A. No, sir; I won't.

Q. Will you swear Mr. Griffin did not tell you he had gone and talked to people about Banks, and that these letters had been smuggled out by Captain Leale? A. Yes, sir; I swear no such thing was ever told me.

Q. Will you swear Captain Leale did not tell you any such thing as that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You swear the letters went in the regular channel, do you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who is Captain Leale? A. He is a steamboat Captain that runs up the river and stops there.

Q. Isn't he one of the officers there? A. No, sir.

Q. He has free entrance there whenever he wants to? A. He hauls up the lumber and grain and everything they use, and he has free entrance there.

Q. He has free entrance in and out of the jail whenever he wants to go? A. Yes, he is free and he comes up there every second day, I think it is, and goes to the different officers and tells them what he has got for them.

Q. Other people don't do that, do they? A. No, sir.

Q. If I was to go up there, I couldn't do that, could I? A. Yes, I think you could.

Q. Do you think I could get out, too? A. Yes, sir. Any attorney, I expect, could go in there.

Q. Did you ever see Captain Leale talking with these convicts? A. Yes, sir; I must have seen him talking with them every day, for there were a number of them worked unloading his boat every second day.

Q. Did you see them talking with him about it? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see him talking with people who wrote letters? A. No, sir.

Q. You don't know who wrote letters, do you? A. I suppose I heard who wrote them.

Q. Who did you hear wrote letters besides Mr. Murray? A. I can't tell now.

Q. You forget now, do you? A. Yes, sir. I cannot tell their names. I wouldn't have thought of Murray, perhaps, if my attention was not called to it.

Q. How many did you see writing them out? A. I can't tell.

Q. Were there twenty-seven, do you think? A. I don't know how many did go out.

Q. Did you say to Maxwell there were twenty-seven? A. I don't remember any number.

Q. You think it was said? A. I think Mr. Maxwell mentioned twenty-seven or thirty, something of that kind, and I might have said twenty-five or thirty. That was a kind of joking backwards and forwards between us.

Q. You are like the other witness that just joshed a good deal? A. You have been in politics enough to know that there is a good deal of joshing in politics.

Q. And you are just like the other witness that just joshed and went off? A. No, sir; I couldn't tell any numbers.

Q. You think Maxwell testified right? A. I am satisfied that Maxwell testified very correctly.

Q. And you are satisfied if Maxwell said you said it, that you said it?
A. I may have said it, but I don't remember it now. I don't remember the exact number.

A. What did you want to go down and see Mr. Murray in the jail for? What did you want to go down there for? What was your idea in going down there? A. I suppose he and his brothers have been very friendly to my side of the house, and from what his brother had said——

Q. [Interrupting.] What do you mean by your side of the house? A. The Republican side of the house.

Q. Just the general Republican ticket? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You don't mean Mr. Banks by that? A. Yes, I mean his side of the house.

Q. You knew about this contest when you went down there? A. Yes, sir; I knew about this contest when I went down there.

Q. You were engaged looking that up? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And ever since the contest came up they run to you and wanted you to get all the evidence you could get? A. I don't know as they did that.

Q. They went down and talked with you about it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. They went in the Mint Saloon and talked with you about it? A. Who?

Q. Banks. A. I don't know as he ever talked with me in the Mint Saloon. We are neighbors, and it may have been in my house and it may have been in his.

Q. In whose other house? A. It may have been in the saloon.

Q. Was it in anybody else's house? A. No, sir.

Q. It was not any house out on Sutter Street, was it? A. No, sir.

Q. And you never were out there? A. Oh, yes; I have been up there a number of times.

Q. You are sure it was not out there? A. No, sir.

Q. You are sure it was not out there you had it? A. No, sir; I am sure Mr. Banks and I never were out there since election.

Q. You didn't talk about this out there? A. I don't know as I ever spoke about this case out there. I know what you have reference to; but I have not talked politics or other business out to that house, because the gentleman has been quite sick. I have always called to see him as a friend, and not to talk politics.

Q. Before he got sick, did you and he talk about Mr. Banks at all? A. Banks' election?

Q. Yes, sir? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He took a pretty active interest in it, didn't he? A. Yes, I suppose I did.

Q. Did you ever take people up there to talk with him? A. To Higgins?

Q. Yes, sir. A. I don't remember. I may have introduced some in the last fifteen years.

Q. Did you take anybody up there and introduce them as a relative of Banks? A. I don't remember introducing anybody to him in the last six months. If I met him on the street, I may have introduced that gentleman with me.

Q. You don't say you did not? A. I say now I don't remember whether I did or not.

Q. Did you take anybody up in the Mint Saloon to meet him? A. No, sir.

Q. Are you sure of that? A. Yes, sir; because I never saw him but once at the Mint Saloon during the campaign.

Q. Are you acquainted with the Governor? A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Governor was down here about election time, wasn't he? A. I believe so.

Q. Where was he quartered? A. I believe he stops at the Occidental Hotel.

Q. Did you ever see him up there? A. No, sir.

Q. You never went up there? A. No, sir.

Q. Mr. Banks didn't take you up, did he? A. No, sir. I think I was acquainted with the Governor before Mr. Banks was.

Q. You didn't talk with him and Banks? A. No, sir.

Q. You never told anybody they might get a place if they would help Banks? A. No, sir; I hadn't the disposition of any patronage.

Q. And you didn't tell anybody you knew the man that had the disposal of it, and if they would stand in with Banks you would take them to see him? A. No, sir: I don't make any such promises.

Q. Didn't you tell them you would get them a place? A. No, sir: I don't do that kind of work. I know it is not the right way to work, because that is not the way to make politics.

Q. They don't make politics that way? A. I think the man that would do it would soon fall through—making promises that way—because he would never be able to carry them out.

Q. You went down to see Murray in the city prison because you thought he had been friendly to Banks? A. Yes, sir. I want to say that the brothers spoke to me and told me they were trying to job him, and, from what he told me about the case, he claimed they were trying to put up a job and scare him into saying I had done so and so.

Q. They were putting up a job on you? A. No: that was what he claimed. I said, "If it is just as you say, there is no trouble getting it dismissed," and he said, "I want to get bail," and I said I couldn't do anything about it.

Q. Tell us what the brothers said to you about it? You didn't testify in your direct examination that the brothers said anything about it. A. I don't remember the exact things. Mr. Banks was there, going along, and he told me the thing just about as it was.

Q. Banks was with you? A. Yes; he was right there.

Q. Banks was with you when you saw the Murray boys? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he talk with them about it going down? A. No, sir.

Q. Mr. Banks walked away and did not hear the conversation, did he? A. No, sir.

Q. Then Mr. Banks walked away? A. No: I think Murray came with us along on Stockton Street as we came out of the saloon.

Q. You and Banks came out of the saloon? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Give us the conversation between you and Banks and Murray? A. I cannot repeat that.

Q. Then if you have sworn to the conversation a little while ago you swore to something wrong, did you? A. I give you about the substance.

Q. Did Banks take any part in it? A. I don't remember now.

Q. That was another thing you forget about? A. I don't remember whether Banks spoke to him or he spoke to Banks or not. He might have done it and I might have paid but very little attention.

Q. You weren't paying any attention to what he said to Mr. Banks, or what Mr. Banks said to him? A. No, sir: I did not.

Q. Did Mr. Banks say: "You better go down and see him, Mr. Smith?" A. I can't remember that he did.

Q. And you cannot say now whether Mr. Banks said that might be a good idea to have that out here? Did Mr. Banks tell you it was a good idea not to have those letters appear here? A. No, sir; he said nothing about it. I think those men that had friends over there had a right to send out letters if they wanted to, and I don't think there is anything wrong about it?

Q. Mr. Banks thought the same, did he? A. I suppose so.

Q. Did you and Banks talk about that being right? A. About what being right?

Q. About getting convicts to write letters from over there? A. No, sir.

Q. Did he ever talk with you about his brother-in-law, Captain Leale, getting these letters? A. No, sir.

Q. Then Mr. Banks never told you he knew this was going on? A. No, sir.

Q. After that conversation you went down there. What did you go down there for? A. On account of him writing me this letter.

Q. How long before that was that? A. I don't remember whether it was four or five days. One day I got it while I was living over there.

Q. You got it six or seven days before you met the second Murray? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you have testified in the second examination that you didn't intend to go on that, and didn't pay any attention to it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. But you were not going down to the prison? A. No, sir.

Q. And he asked you to go to his house and you wouldn't do that? A. No, sir.

Q. Then you got the second letter and didn't pay any attention to it? A. No; I didn't go and talk with him. He came to me.

Q. Who did? A. Young Murray.

Q. What did you go down for? A. If the boy was in trouble and I could assist him, I suppose I would, if it was legitimate.

Q. Why did you want to assist him? Do you assist all the convicts there that get in trouble? A. I don't know. There is often these boys will get into trouble if they ain't guilty.

Q. Are you in the business of running around helping convicts? A. Oh, no.

Q. You didn't do that very often, did you? A. I may the same as other people; if I have people that are friends of mine and they ask me to do them a favor, I will do it.

Q. Then Murray was a friend of yours? A. I suppose so.

Q. What made you suppose that? A. I have always been very friendly with those fellows in that district.

Q. Those up in the district? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have been friendly with him? A. I have been friendly with quite a number of them.

Q. You are quite sure it was not your friendship for Banks that induced you to go and get him out of jail? A. Yes. I don't say to get him out of jail.

Q. Get him out of trouble? A. I didn't say that. I went down to see what he wanted, and I might try to assist him. If he was guilty of any felony, I would not assist him. If a man was down for battery or vulgar language, I might assist him.

Q. You knew he was down there for battery? A. I believe there was a charge of battery.

Q. If you went down to help him out, it was only the assault and vulgar language? A. I don't say it was that.

Q. You wouldn't help him out if it was a felony, would you? A. If I investigated it and thought he was innocent.

- Q. And you went down to see Murray? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. How would you help him out? A. There is a great many ways.
- Q. Tell us how you intended to help him out? A. A man might be innocent of the charge and he might get his witnesses for him and do a great many things. There are a great many ways of assisting.
- Q. Murray has brothers, hasn't he? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And you were going to go around getting witnesses? A. Oh, no.
- Q. Tell us how you were going to assist Murray. A. I cannot say. There are a great many ways of assisting him.
- Q. What was your idea of assisting him? A. I would have to know the case.
- Q. Supposing he said, "I am innocent of this?" A. I wasn't there at all.
- Q. Then what would you have done? A. Then I would have asked him where he was and who was with him.
- Q. What would you have done then? A. I would go and investigate that and see if he told the truth, and I would get the boys there as witnesses.
- Q. You would go and get witnesses? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. That was all you intended to do? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. You went down and saw Murray, did you? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Did you tell him that you came in response to the letter? A. No, sir. I told him, "I saw your brother Charlie up on the street just now."
- Q. Go on and tell the conversation that occurred between yourself and Murray? A. I can't say all the conversation. I was standing close up to the Sergeant's desk there, and he mentioned Collins. I know, as one that he mentioned.
- Q. Matt. Collins? A. Oh, no.
- Q. Did he say what Collins? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Why do put it on the other Collins? A. I said, "Is that that Collins that is up on the hill, that is a collector?" and he said "Yes." He said he had been down and told him: By —, that he had better turn up and do the square thing; that he had been against Sullivan, and now he better do the square thing.
- Q. Did you object to him doing that? A. I said, "What did he mean by doing the square thing?" And he said, "I don't know." He said "If I go and say you got me to write those letters over here." and I said, "Right here, did I ever ask you to write any letters or ever see any letters you wrote?" and he said no. I said, "Well, all I want you to do is come out there and tell the truth in this matter, and that is all I care about."
- Q. And that is all you said? A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And you didn't mention anything about the letter? A. I said, "There is nothing in that letter that I care anything about."
- Q. How do you know that? A. As far as I was concerned, I never read the letter and I never told him to write a letter.
- Q. How do you know there was nothing in the letter, then, that you cared about? A. If he has written the truth from there, I had nothing that I cared anything about.
- Q. You swore a minute ago you didn't remember the conversation. Now you recall it all, do you? A. You cannot, a week afterwards, call word for word; I didn't have an official reporter there to take every word.
- Q. You didn't have an official reporter there to take every word: therefore, you cannot tell what the conversation was? A. I will swear I never told him to tear up any letters.
- Q. How do you know you did not say that? A. I know I didn't say that.

Q. You say this was part of the conversation and you don't recollect?
A. I know I didn't say that.

Q. Why do you know it? A. I know too well. Why should I? I wouldn't say anything of that kind, I know.

Q. He just said you asked him where the letters were. There would be something wrong about that, would there? Don't you think you said that? A. I don't remember of saying that. But about destroying the letter, or tearing it up—

Q. [Interrupting.] He did not claim you said that. A. I understand that there was some one swore I told him to tear those letters up.

By MR. DORN: The testimony was, that Mr. Smith asked him if the letters were burned up, and he answered that they were all right.

THE WITNESS: I didn't ask him that.

MR. CLUNIE: You didn't ask him that? A. No, sir.

Q. This man says you simply asked him if they were burned up. A. Well, I didn't say that.

Q. And he didn't say they were all right? A. No, sir.

Q. And then Murray is wrong? Murray has made a statement that is not true, according to you, then? A. Yes, sir.

Q. McLaughlin, that was sitting there by him, made a statement that was not true also, did he? A. He was not there, and I know it, because I was standing at the end of the desk, and if any one says that he was sitting on the bench, it is not true.

Q. Maxwell is another one, isn't he? A. No: I say Maxwell in substance is about right. It might not have been word for word.

Q. But the substance is there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then Ryan is wrong? A. He may have been, but I never—I understand Ryan said I took him aside and related this conversation with him. That is what I understand, and I did not do that.

Q. What became of this letter? A. Which letter?

Q. The letter which this convict, Murray, wrote? A. I don't remember now.

Q. That was after this contest commenced, wasn't it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Didn't you think that was a little funny, to destroy it? A. I don't think I did destroy it. I think I left it in some of my coat pockets, and I don't know where it is now.

Q. By MR. DORN: Didn't I ask you particularly to hunt that letter up? A. Yes, sir; you did.

By MR. CLUNIE: Of course, but you knew the hunt would be fruitless? A. There is no question about that. He says himself he wrote it.

Q. You hunted for it, did you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you last see the letter? A. I don't remember seeing it at all since the day I got it.

Q. And you didn't think enough of it to take care of it? A. I thought I put it in my pocket.

Q. You are sure you did not lose it to keep from bringing it in here? A. No, sir; I will swear that.

Q. You say Mr. Maxwell had a special fight up there, and he says he did not. He was mistaken then? A. I don't know what you call a special fight, I was for the ticket.

Q. He says he was not for Mr. Sullivan any more than for any other candidate. If he says that, he says something that is wrong again? A. I wouldn't say it is wrong. I saw Maxwell a good deal during the campaign, and I suppose if he went to a man he knew to be a Republican, he wouldn't ask him to vote for Harrison, though he may have thought if he could get him to vote for Sullivan or for any other candidate on the ticket, he would get him to do it.

Q. When you were over there, did you ever know of Captain Leale taking any letters out of the prison? A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. You are sure of that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you never had Griffin ask anybody about Banks and Sullivan? A. No, sir.

Q. You never had him running around getting letters from different convicts? A. If he did it, he did it on his own hook.

Q. Did he tell you he was doing it? A. No, sir. I never knew Griffin went among the convicts and I knew his business was down there in charge of the tailor shop, and his place was to work in the tailor shop.

Q. And you swear you did not know that every letter that comes out of the State prison at San Quentin has to be numbered? A. No, sir. I paid very little attention to the letter business, because that was Mr. Fish's business.

Q. Do you swear, as an officer, you don't know whether that was the rule over there? A. The number of letters?

Q. Yes, sir. A. No, sir.

Q. Don't you know, as a matter of fact, they require to take an official copy of every letter? A. I don't think they do. I think if it was done they took down the substance of the letter and who it is to.

Q. And you swear you don't know that was done? A. I think that was so.

Q. Isn't there something in the rules about it? A. I think there is something in the rules.

Q. What are the rules? A. I think the rules are that the letters are to go to the office, and whoever has charge of the letters will take a copy or a part of a copy; I know they don't take a copy, because they couldn't do that, and if they did, it would take forty or fifty clerks to do it.

Q. And the rules don't require them to do it? A. I think the rules require them to take the name, and who the letter is to, and about the substance of it.

Q. Don't you know that the kindness that Captain Leale extended to the convicts was to smuggle letters out of there? A. No, sir.

Q. You never knew that? A. I never knew that he took letters out for him.

Q. Where are you? A. I am chief jailor of the City and County of San Francisco.

Q. And you have been since this contest commenced? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Since the first of January? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you draw your pay right along? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You drew your pay at San Quentin all the time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they don't require an affidavit that you worked all the time when you draw your pay? A. No, sir.

Q. And you are around hunting up witnesses for Mr. Banks? A. Since I have been in the jail I believe I have been one evening hunting up witnesses.

Q. If this gentleman testifies on the stand he met you two different occasions, he was wrong? A. One day was since I had been in the county jail about two days.

Q. And you have only been in the county jail one night? A. I don't stay there at night.

Q. You don't stay there at all, do you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When? A. I was there this morning.

Q. How long? A. I was there from about half-past six until twenty minutes of ten.

Q. There is a rule that the jailer must stay there, isn't there? A. I am Chief Jailer, and I have four assistants.

Q. Are there no rules? A. I have charge of the men, and look after the detail of the men.

Q. Isn't there any rule as to when the Chief Jailer shall be at his office? A. No, sir, there is not; and there is not any under any of the Sheriffs.

Q. And you had no instructions from Mr. Laumeister when to stay at the jail? A. No, sir.

Q. Your duties are to stay there, to watch the jail, are they not? A. No, sir.

Q. What are your duties? A. To see that the men report on, look out and see that the men are fed there, and look out for the jail to be kept clean, and a great many duties.

Q. And you do that from six o'clock to twenty minutes to ten? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you do all that? A. There are a great many other things.

Q. And you have been out hunting witnesses for Mr. Banks? A. I told you I saw some of them.

Q. You have been consulting with witnesses out here, haven't you? A. I may have talked with them.

Q. You have been going around here with Mr. Dorn considerably, haven't you? A. No, sir; I walked out with him one night.

Q. Have you been going around with Mr. Banks since this commenced looking for witnesses? A. I walked down from this hall, down town; I don't know as we have been to any places looking for witnesses.

Q. Have you ever gone over in the district with him since this commenced—since you became Chief Jailer? A. Since I have been Chief Jailer, I don't remember of meeting Mr. Banks over in the district unless it was at my house or at his house. Our families are intimate and we visit each other.

Q. And you cannot say how often you visited him? A. I may have met him every couple of nights.

Q. Don't you know you met him every night? A. No, sir.

Q. What nights did you meet? A. I know I didn't see him after I left the court last night.

Q. And that is the only night? A. Oh, no.

Q. What other night? A. I cannot say now. We are very friendly, and our families are friendly.

Redirect Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: As a matter of fact you have only been in as Chief Jailer about three days? A. Since Monday.

Q. You went in office since the first of this week? A. Yes, sir. I was not out here that day.

Q. You have not drawn any pay as Chief Jailer then, have you? A. No, sir.

Q. Then you hope and expect to get your pay? A. Yes, sir.

Q. It is purely hypothetical? A. I suppose so.

Q. That is a supposition? A. That is a supposition.

Q. You said Mr. Fish, whose business it was to attend to letters over there, was a Democrat, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were asked where you were on election day. Do you know where Mr. Fish was on election day? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where was he? A. He was in the Twenty-ninth Assembly District.

Q. Was he representing the Republican party? A. No, sir; he was assisting the Democratic party.

Q. And he was about as active there as you were over in the Twenty-first, probably? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You state the reason why you do not know and cannot state that letters that come out of the State's Prison are numbered is that it was never your business to look after them? A. No, sir.

Q. You have never had anything to do with the letters? A. No, sir.

Q. Your duties over there were different entirely? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were never called on to have anything to do with the letters? A. No, sir.

Q. Therefore, your attention was never called to know what the situation was as to letters? A. No, sir.

Q. You were asked if it was proper for an officer at the State's Prison to be taking any interest in politics, and you said it was. Would there be any moral or political line to be drawn between the officers of the State's Prison taking any interest in politics, Secretary of the Corporation Yard, or the Secretary of the Board of Fire Commissioners? A. No, sir.

Q. Then if you took an interest in politics, you had as much right to be there as George Maxwell had? A. Yes, sir, and I suppose he had the same right as I had.

Q. How would it be about a clerk in the tax office? The principle would be about the same, would it not? A. I think so.

Recross Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: Do you know a man by the name of John Fargo? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did he live? A. He lives down at North Beach.

Q. He lives over in the twenty-first district, don't he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You and he had a little talk about Mr. Banks; you know Mr. Banks, don't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you and he have a little talk about Mr. Banks? A. I may have; yes, sir.

Q. Don't you know whether you did or not? A. Yes, sir; we talked about Mr. Banks.

Q. What did you talk with him about Banks for? A. I have understood he was fighting him, and I met him on the street one day and asked him about it.

Q. What did you ask him? A. I asked him if he was fighting Banks.

Q. What did he say? A. He said no, he was not particularly fighting him.

Q. What did you say then? A. I said, "You have got no reason to fight him;" I said, "He has never done anything to you; if you claim to be a Republican you ought to support him."

Q. What did he say? A. He didn't say whether he would or not.

Q. And you did not say anything? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you tell John Fargo he could go with you to Mr. Higgins, and he could have his pick in the Sheriff's office, or any position for one hundred and twenty-five dollars per month, if he would get in and work for Banks? A. No, sir. Now, you want the conversation? You are speaking about Mr. Banks now, and that was before Mr. Banks was a Senatorial candidate.

Now Fargo was the Secretary of the Republican District Convention of the Twenty-First District. He came the night of the Senatorial contest to me at the corner, and he wanted to know if he would support Banks for the nomination, if I would promise him a place. I says, "What in hell! I aint running for office. I couldn't promise you a place." I said, "If you want to vote for him, vote for him, and if you don't, you needn't; we can get votes enough."

Q. You said "we?" A. Well, I might have said Banks.

Q. You said "we?" A. Well, I was satisfied he had delegates enough to nominate him.

Q. You said "we?" A. I might have said "we."

Q. Then if Mr. Fargo states that, he states what is untrue? A. He states what is untrue.

Q. You did not mention Mr. Higgins' name? A. No, sir.

Q. He had nothing to do with that then? A. I don't think Mr. Higgins knew half a dozen of the delegates from that district. I don't think he knew three of them from that district.

Q. He didn't know who was going to be nominated for Senator, did he? You don't think Mr. Higgins knew anything about it? A. Oh, yes, I do.

Q. Did you go up with Mr. Banks to see Mrs. Murray? A. No, sir.

Q. You are sure of that, are you? You recollect nothing of the kind at all? A. Yes, sir; I was at Murray's house before election, but I never was there with Banks.

Q. What did you want to go up there for? A. The old lady was over at the Prison. I wasn't there since this contest, or since the election. I was there once before the election.

Q. What did you go there for? A. I suppose I was there to dig up people, and to get votes.

Q. Did Murray tell you to go there? A. No, sir.

Q. Who told you to go there? A. The old lady herself; she was over one day at the prison.

Q. And if you did, it was in the presence of Murray himself, was it? A. I am not sure about that.

[Here a recess was taken until two o'clock P. M.]

AFTERNOON SESSION.

MR. DORN: While we are waiting for a witness, we have now come to the place where I deem it advisable to ask your Honors to issue a subpoena for the Registrar, and to bring with him the ballots which were cast in the Twenty-first Senatorial District. We desire to count the ballots, and submit the evidence to the Legislature of the actual vote which was cast. The pleadings which we have drawn, and which are on file here show and claim, at least, that the votes were not properly returned, and that the votes were fraudulently miscounted, and that as a result of the fraudulent miscount of the votes, Mr. Banks lost a great many votes which were cast for him, and to which he is legally entitled. If this evidence is introduced before the Legislature, it will be seen that Mr. Banks' vote was largely in excess of the amount which was credited to him in the official returns. In other words, we claim that a fraud was committed, and that the vote was fraudulently misrepresented. If there was such a fraud, if there was such a wrong done, if the public have been imposed upon in that manner, they are entitled to know it. If a Senator of the State of California has been deprived of votes which have been cast for him in his district by the people, and of which he has been deprived, your honors and everybody else are alike interested, and I trust that the motion for the subpoena will be consented to, and that there will be no opposition, and that we will all join hands, if there is such a fraud as we believe, as we have sworn, and I therefore apply for a subpoena for your honors to issue to the Registrar to produce the ballots which were cast on the sixth day of November, eighteen hundred and eighty-eight, in the Twenty-first Senatorial District. I would like very much that Mr. Clunie will consent.

MR. CLUNIE: I am not trying your side of the case. I think it would be out of place for me to ask Mr. Dorn to get a subpoena. I suppose he will get if he is entitled to it.

MR. DORN: I may say that my reason for not applying for this subpoena before, is that I had thought he might consent to count these ballots, and it is apparent that Mr. Clunie does not intend to consent.

MR. CLUNIE: I want it to appear that I have not refused to consent at all. Mr. Dorn can put in his side of the case, and if I want to have the ballot counted, I will apply for a subpoena. As I said before, we were willing at the first of this contest to meet Mr. Banks half way, and I sent word to Mr. Banks proposing to have the ballots counted, and Mr. Banks sent word that he would not agree to have the ballots produced. I went ahead and produced my witnesses, and finished my case. Mr. Dorn has certainly my consent to get a subpoena, if he wants it.

THE COURT: Do you think we have any power to compel the Registrar to open the ballots, if he refuses to do so? Supposing we have not the power to order him to produce them?

MR. DORN: I believe your honors have the right to order him to produce them, the same as any other evidence.

THE COURT: But have we the right to order him to produce them?

MR. DORN: I believe your honors have the right to order him or anybody to produce any evidence of fraud.

THE COURT: Have you looked up the proposition?

MR. DORN: I have. What law can you show me which will authorize you to issue a subpoena for a man to produce his books?

THE COURT: I understand it to be your duty to assist the Court.

JUSTICE BOLAND: Our power to order books to be produced here would be as a Court, but here we are sitting as a commission simply, and only have the right to hear the testimony. Our rights as a Court and as a commission are two separate things.

MR. DORN: [Reads Section 277 of the Political Code.] That is one of the sections which provides the means by which the case of a contest for an officer of the Assembly or Senate can be tried. I now ask your honors to issue the subpoena, and I make the application in good faith, and I think it ought to be granted, and I think my reputation in the community is sufficient for your honors to know that.

THE COURT: [After waiting a few minutes.] Proceed with your witnesses, Mr. Dorn, and we will pass on this later.

MR. DORN: My further testimony depends on your honors' ruling entirely.

THE COURT: We are prepared to rule that we have no right to order the Registrar to open ballots, but we are not prepared to say whether we can subpoena him to bring them here.

MR. DORN: In order to make this matter comprehensive, I take it that it should appear in the subpoena, and I have made it to appear as follows:

In the Justices' Court of the City and County of San Francisco, New City Hall.

The People of the State of California to T. J. L. Smiley, Registrar of Voters of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

GREETING: We command you, and that all and singular business excuses being laid aside, you be and appear before the Hon. H. J. Stafford and James I. Boland, Justices of the Peace of the City and County of San Francisco, on the 11th day of January, A. D. 1889, at two o'clock P. M., at the office of said Justices, in the New City Hall, in said city and county, then and there to testify in a certain action and proceeding now pending before said Justices, wherein John J. Sullivan is plaintiff and contestant, and W. O. Banks is defendant and respondent, on the part of defendant and respondent, and you are further commanded to have with you at said time and place all the ballots now in your possession, or under your control, which were cast on November 6, 1888, in the Twenty-first Senatorial District of the State of California, for the purpose of counting said ballots for the office of Senator of said district. And for failure to attend, you will be deemed guilty of contempt of Court, and liable to pay all losses and damages sustained thereby to the party aggrieved.

Given under our hands this 11th day of January, A. D. 1889.

THE COURT: We will let this matter stand until to-morrow morning at ten o'clock.

MR. DORN: All my subsequent action depends upon the ruling of your honors, and that will necessitate an adjournment.

MR. CLUNIE: I object to these adjournments and continuances. Mr. Dorn has no right to ask for this, and I don't refuse to have a count, because I offered to do so once, and it was refused by Mr. Banks; but Mr. Dorn is doing this for the benefit of the newspapers. I will state that there was a case in San Mateo County where the Justices of the Peace and County Clerk, both Republicans, issued a subpoena of this kind—issued by the Justices—and the Clerk who there has charge of the ballots brought them in and opened the ballots, and the contestee appealed to the Superior Court, and Judge Head of the Superior Court of San Mateo County issued a writ of prohibition, and censured the Justices and the County Clerk very severely.

MR. DORN: I will stipulate now, then, that these ballots be counted.

THE COURT: Let it go upon the record, then, that the subpoena is refused on the ground that the law does not provide for the recounting of the ballots in a proceeding of this character before the Justices.

MR. CLUNIE: I would like to have it also appear that your honors do not refuse to issue any subpoena Mr. Dorn wants, but you do refuse to issue a subpoena specifying what you are going to do with the witness after you get him here.

THE COURT: Certainly.

MR. DORN: Now I ask that that subpoena be marked "Respondent's Exhibit C."

[The subpoena requested by counsel for respondent is here marked "Respondent's Exhibit C."]

THE COURT: If there is authority for us to do this, we can readily be mandamusd.

WILLIAM MAXWELL.

Recalled as a witness on behalf of respondent.

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Mr. Maxwell, you were present in Judge Finn's Court during the progress of the recount for the office of Mayor, were you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was a proceeding commenced in the Superior Court, and conducted before Department 3 of the Superior Court? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In which a regular contest was had, and the votes being recounted for the office of Mayor? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you present when the Eighth Precinct of the Thirty-third Assembly District was counted? A. I was.

Q. Do you know whether any ballots were ordered counted by the Judge which had been rejected by the Precinct Board? A. I don't recollect whether that was the seventh or the eighth. It is one or the other.

Q. It was either the seventh or the eighth? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you refresh your memory in any way? A. I couldn't swear positively which it was.

Q. It was either the Seventh or Eighth Precinct of the Thirty-third District? A. Yes, sir.

[Here the reporter reads the fourth preceding question, as follows: "Do you know whether any ballots were ordered counted by the Judge which had been rejected by the Precinct Board?"] A. Yes, sir; I do.

Q. An order was made by Judge Finn, sitting in that election contest as Judge of the Court before whom it was pending, directing that certain ballots which had been rejected by the Precinct Board, be counted? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And tallied as legal votes? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many? A. There were eight straight Republican ballots that had been rejected on account of their being too short; that I took particular notice of.

Q. You don't remember the others? A. No, sir. I think there were two or three Democratic ballots, but I ain't sure.

Q. But you are positive of this? A. I am positive that there were eight Republican ballots.

Q. That was one of the precincts in which Mr. Banks was a candidate, was it not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. If they were straight Republican tickets, then Mr. Banks' name would be on the ballots? A. They said they were straight Republican. I couldn't see the ballots.

Q. Didn't you see the ballots? A. No, sir. I saw the ballots in Judge Finn's count, but I did not see the face of them.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: You were up in this Twenty-first Senatorial District considerable on election day, weren't you? A. I was in the Fifth Precinct.

Q. You know Mr. Hawkins, don't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are the gentleman that Mr. Hawkins referred to as being present when some gentlemen came up and said they wanted to vote some names? A. I am.

Q. What precinct was that in? A. The Second of the Thirty-fourth.

Q. That occurred at a few minutes before seven o'clock on election night? A. Just before the polls closed.

Q. You heard his statement? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you in that precinct at that time? A. No, sir; I was not in that precinct during the day while the voting was going on.

Q. Just answer the question: Were you present at that time? A. No, sir.

Q. Were you present when any one came up that was not entitled to vote, and offered to vote for John J. Sullivan? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see anything of that kind going on on that day? A. No, sir.

Q. You think that everything that Mr. Sullivan did was perfectly right and proper? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you are one of the witnesses for Mr. Banks on this case? A. I am called now as a witness.

Q. You know Mr. Pistolesi, don't you? A. I do.

Q. You heard Mr. Pistolesi's statement that you were present when a man came up and voted by the name of Barry? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct was that in? A. The Fourth of the Thirty-fourth.

Q. Is that true or not? A. No, sir.

Q. Were you present at that time? A. No, sir, I was not.

Q. Then that statement is false? A. That statement is false.

Q. That statement is false? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you present in any precinct in the Twenty-first Senatorial District when any person not entitled to vote came up to offer to vote, and you helped them in any way? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you do anything of that kind that day? A. No, sir. I was present once during the day in the Fourth Precinct of the Thirty-fourth District, and that was in the morning, and there was a man named Callahan came up in the Third Precinct, and he was under the influence of liquor, and he said he wanted to vote, and I took the register to give him his number, and I said, "Where do you live?" and he said, "I live in Jansen Street," and I said, "That is up here in another precinct: come up and I will go with you." We went up to the polls, and the United States Marshal, or Inspector, I don't recollect which, said, "You have voted before: that man has voted before." So I suppose he voted before, or knew he did, and that he was doing wrong, for he walked off.

Q. You were present in this precinct where DuRose states he was present? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you there at the time he specifies? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see anybody with a pencil in their hand? A. No, sir: I did not.

Q. You were watching for anything of that kind? A. Yes, sir: I was.

Q. And you didn't see anything of that kind? A. No, sir: I don't recollect seeing that man in the position at all that he states, because during the time Mr. Buckley sat on one side and the stranger on the other, and it is impossible.

Q. And you have talked with Mr. Buckley about this since? A. I talked with him about it going home.

Q. Did you ask Mr. Buckley about it? A. Yes, sir; going home last night I asked him.

Q. What did he say? A. He said nothing of that kind occurred.

Q. Did you talk with anybody else about it? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know Mr. Smith? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was Mr. Smith there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you talk with Mr. Smith about it? A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. And all of you were in the Third Precinct there, weren't you? A. I was in the Third Precinct during the whole time the vote was counted. I don't think I was out of there an hour during the whole time.

Q. A great many people reported to you, didn't they, there, that they had been offered places by Mr. Banks? A. Yes, sir. That is, nobody reported that Banks offered them a place, but John Fargo told me that Michael Smith, acting as agent for Mr. Banks, offered him a place.

Q. You heard of places being offered to people by the Governor, for instance, for their voting for Banks? A. I heard rumors; yes.

Q. Did anybody tell you that the Governor of this State had offered them anything to stand in for Banks? A. No, nobody told me.

Q. Do you know Mike Barry? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you and Mike Barry have a talk about this? A. No; he never said anything about that to me.

Q. Did he tell somebody else that has told you? A. I believe he has told somebody else, but I don't know who it is.

Q. What was that? A. I heard that the Governor sent for Barry, and promised him a place, provided he would stand in for Banks.

Redirect Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: You know all of this of your own knowledge, do you? A. This is hearsay.

Q. This is the veriest kind of hearsay, isn't it? A. It is only hearsay, as far as that goes.

By MR. CLUNIE: And you are testifying here at Mr. Dorn's request? A. Yes, sir.

By MR. DORN: Are you testifying now at my request? A. I don't know at whose request I am testifying. I went on the stand at your request.

Q. You were one of the witnesses here for Mr. Sullivan, weren't you? A. I was.

Q. You were one of his reliable agents and canvassers up there in the election, were you not? A. Well, yes.

Q. Didn't you testify in your direct examination that your particular fight was for Mr. Sullivan? A. No, sir; I didn't testify to anything of the kind.

Q. You did not? A. No, sir.

Q. If you did testify to that you were mistaken, were you not? A. I did not testify to it.

Q. I say if you did? A. I did not.

Q. If you had? A. I have not.

Q. Then you would have misstated, would you? A. I have not misstated anything. I know what I have testified to.

Q. I say, if you had so testified it would have been a misstatement, would it? A. I have not testified to anything of the kind.

MR. DORN: Will your honors direct him to answer the question?

THE COURT: Answer the question.

By MR. DORN: I say, if you had made such a statement that you had made special fight for Mr. Sullivan, it would have been untrue, would it? A. If I made the statement that I made a special fight for Mr. Sullivan it would be untrue; yes, sir.

Q. Before you went on the stand I asked you if you knew about these ballots, didn't I? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Didn't you say then there were eight straight Republican tickets?
A. That is what they said.

Q. I say didn't you say to me that there were eight Republican tickets?
A. Yes, sir.

By MR. CLUNIE: That is what you think now, isn't it? A. Yes, sir.

By MR. DORN: And you said that to me before I put you on the stand?
A. Yes, sir; but I didn't see the ballots, and Judge Finn held the ballot in his hand about as far from me as you are now.

Q. But you stated to me that they were straight Republican tickets?
A. That is what they said; yes, sir.

JOHN F. FINN.

A witness on behalf of respondent, was called, sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Judge, you are the Judge of Department Three? A. Yes, of the Superior Court.

Q. Is that the department in which the contest for Mayor was held?
A. The recent contest? Yes, sir.

Q. The contest for the office of Mayor for the City and County of San Francisco was tried recently in that Court? A. Yes, sir; in the month of December last.

Q. And a portion of it was the counting of the ballots recently cast in the City and County of San Francisco? A. Yes, sir; so far as that office was concerned.

Q. Do you remember the circumstance of certain ballots that were claimed to be short, and they were therefore not counted by the Precinct Board, coming before you for examination, and to be passed upon in that contest? A. I remember there were a number of ballots—a batch of them, the exact number I don't remember, seven or eight—that were a trifle short; they were a margin less than the eighteen inches allowed by law.

Q. Do you remember whether those ballots were the ballots which had been cast in the Eighth Precinct of the Thirty-third Assembly District?
A. That I cannot remember, because I did not charge my memory with the number of the precinct.

Q. What was the ruling which was made by yourself as Judge of that Court in that contest at that time, with regard to the admissibility of those ballots? A. I admitted them, on the authority of the case of Kerr vs. Rhodes, in 46 Cal. The Court there held that proceedings of that kind are to a large extent directory; that is, directions as to the actual ballot, and the Court always construe the law liberally with reference to the admissibility of those ballots, and on the strength of that case I admitted those ballots.

Q. Do you remember whether eight of those ballots were eight unscratched Republican ballots? A. I cannot testify certainly to that. They were Republican ballots, but I don't remember whether they were scratched or not. My memory is that they were, but I cannot testify to a certainty.

Q. There was no circumstance to charge your memory specially with it?
A. No, sir.

Q. But your memory is that they were? A. My impression is that they were straight Republican tickets.

Q. And that is the best of your impression on that at the present time?
A. Yes.

By MR. CLUNIE: You don't remember seeing Mr. Banks' name on those tickets? A. No, sir; my impression is very strong, and it is almost certain, that the tickets were unscratched.

Q. But you don't remember the district or precinct? A. No, sir.

GEORGE S. McCOMB.

A witness on behalf of respondent, was called, sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Mr. McComb, were you present in Judge Finn's Court, in the Superior Court of this city and county, during the recent contest that was pending before that Court for the office of Mayor? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you present during the progress of that count when the ballots of the different precincts of this city and county were examined and counted by the Court? They were so examined, were they? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you present when the Eighth Precinct of the Thirty-third Assembly District was counted? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What were you doing there? A. I was keeping a snap tally for Mr. Russell.

Q. Do you remember the circumstance of the Judge passing upon some ballots which had been rejected by the Precinct Board and refused to be counted? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What order did the Judge make? A. The Judge ordered them to be counted, and they were straight Republican tickets.

Q. How many? A. There were eight of them, I believe.

Q. Did you examine them with regard to the office of State Senator?
A. They were straight Republican tickets, and no scratch on them at all; so of course the Senator was Banks.

Q. Were they tickets of the Twenty-first Senatorial District? A. I couldn't swear to that.

Q. What is your impression? A. My impression is that it was, because, if I may give the impression, Mr. Falk, or some other gentleman, was taking off the count at the time, and he was keeping the count of the Senatorial contest there, and he counted up eight votes for his name.

Q. Eight votes for whom? A. For Banks. Of course he could see the Senator when he was taking off that vote.

Q. Was anybody taking off the tally for members of the Legislature?
A. I am not sure about that; I didn't pay any particular attention to that, but I think there was some there during the whole contest.

Q. Do you know who got the tally of those eight votes for member of the Legislature; whether it was the Republican or whether it was the Democratic candidate from that Assembly District, or not? A. I couldn't state that positively.

Q. But you are positive that Mr. Falk took that tally? A. Yes, sir; for Senator.

A. And announced that they were for Mr. Banks? A. Yes, sir.

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: You didn't see the Senatorial vote at all? A. No, sir.

Q. You were kept busy looking at the Russell vote? A. I didn't have to examine those. Judge Finn stated they were eight straight Republican ballots.

Q. But you didn't see them at all? A. Yes; I did look at it, and see they were eight straight Republican votes, and no scratches on them.

Q. But, as a matter of fact, you only know what you heard? A. I only know what I saw.

Q. But you didn't see Banks' name? A. I know they were straight Republican tickets.

Q. But you don't know that they were straight tickets for the district in which Mr. Banks was running? You don't know how that was?

A. No; I didn't take notice what Senatorial District they were.

 RAY G. FALK.

A witness on behalf of respondent, was sworn, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. DORN: Mr. Falk, were you present in Judge Finn's Court during the late contest for Mayor which was being tried there? A. Yes, sir; part of the time.

Q. Were you present when the Eighth Precinct of the Thirty-third Assembly District was counted? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember the circumstance of the Judge's ordering certain ballots counted which had been rejected by the Precinct Board? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many ballots were there? A. I believe there were eleven.

Q. How many of those were Republican and how many were of other kinds? A. I think eight of them were Republican and one Democratic ballot, and the other two I am not certain.

Q. Did you take off the tally for Senator on those ballots? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Upon those eight Republican ballots, which you say were Republican ballots, whose name appeared for Senator? A. Mr. Banks.

Q. Then if those ballots had been counted by the Precinct Board as they were afterwards counted by the Superior Court, in the contest which was pending in that Court, when they came before the Court Mr. Banks would have received eight more votes for Senator in the Thirty-third Assembly District than the tally gives him? A. Eight more, yes, sir;

Cross Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: You were there for Mr. Banks, were you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where were you employed then? A. No place.

Q. You were not in the Tax Collector's office then? A. No, sir; I was a gentleman of leisure then.

Q. You went in there at Mr. Banks' request? A. I did, sir.

Q. And you saw these ballots? A. I did, sir.

Q. What was the reason they had been rejected; do you know? A. Eight of them on account of being short ballots.

Q. Then there were not eleven? A. There were eleven in that district, but eight of them rejected on account of being short—marked short.

Q. Did you see these ballots? A. Yes, sir.

Q. With the other gentlemen's names on them? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were in a position so you could see them? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You saw them? A. Yes, sir.

[Respondent rests.]

F. E. DORAN.

A witness in rebuttal on behalf of contestant, was recalled, and testified as follows:

Direct Interrogatories.

By MR. CLUNIE: Mr. Doran, do you know a man here, a little drunken fellow, called Louis Campbell? A. No, sir.

Q. You never saw him, did you? A. Yes, sir, I have seen him; but I don't know him to speak to.

Q. You have seen him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You know what his reputation is? A. I never knew much about the man. I have seen him under the influence of liquor a half a dozen times.

Q. You have seen him twice, and you have seen him drunk? A. I have seen him when he looked to me as if he had whisky aboard.

Q. If that gentleman took the stand and swore he saw you bring four people around and buy their vote and give them silver, I will ask you if on election day at the place he states, or any other place, you bribed anybody to vote the Democratic ticket or for Mr. Sullivan, or any other person? A. No, sir; I did not.

By MR. DORN: Where are you employed now, Mr. Doran? A. In the License Office.

Testimony closed.

[Here the further hearing of the case was continued until to-morrow morning at ten o'clock.]

[It is stipulated by and between the respective parties to the above, and their attorneys, here in open Court before the Justices, Hon. James I. Boland and H. J. Stafford, who were duly commissioned to take the testimony of witnesses in the contest of J. J. Sullivan, contestant, vs. W. O. Banks, respondent, for the office of State Senator from the Twenty-first Senatorial District, that the annexed testimony and exhibits constitute all the testimony and exhibits taken before said Justices in said contest, and that the reading and signing of the depositions of the witnesses named in this testimony is hereby expressly waived; and it is hereby stipulated that said testimony shall have the same force and effect whether signed or not as if said witnesses had each respectively signed the testimony set down and reported as being given by him upon the hearing of said proceeding. This stipulation is intended to waive all technical objections which could be made to said testimony because of its not having been signed by any or all of said witnesses.

This stipulation is intended also to take the place of a certificate from the Commissioners to the taking and identity of the foregoing testimony and exhibits, which said certificate is hereby expressly waived.]

REPORT
COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS AND MANAGEMENT OF THE Funeral of the Late GOVERNOR BARTLETT.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE.

To his Excellency R. W. WATERMAN, Governor of the State of California:

Upon the death of Washington Bartlett, Governor of the State of California, on September 12, 1887, and your assumption of the position as Governor, it was decided by you that a State funeral should be accorded to him. At your request we assumed the responsibilities of Committee of Arrangements and Management of the Funeral, and now report our action as follows:

On September thirteenth, the day after his death, the remains of Governor Bartlett were conveyed from Oakland to the hall of the Pioneer Society in San Francisco, the following named gentlemen acting as pallbearers: Colin M. Boyd, E. B. Pond, Arthur Rodgers, A. P. Williams, George K. Fitch, George T. Marye, Jr., W. D. English, and Washington Ayer.

Brigadier-General W. H. Dimond, N. G. C., was asked to furnish a guard of honor to the remains. Company F, of the Third Infantry Regiment, Second Brigade, National Guard of California, was accordingly detailed for that purpose, and upon arrival at Pioneer Hall assumed that duty. It was decided to hold the funeral obsequies at 10 A. M., on Friday, the sixteenth day of September, and in the meantime that the body of Governor Bartlett should lie in state in Pioneer Hall, where an opportunity should be allowed the public to view the remains. The body was deposited on a stately catafalque in the hall, and the room and entrances elaborately draped. As soon as the workmen could prepare the room it was opened to the public, and a vast concourse of people came to look upon the face of the dead.

The obsequies took place on Friday, September sixteenth. General W. H. Dimond, at the request of the Committee, acted as Grand Marshal of the funeral procession. At ten o'clock Governor R. W. Waterman and staff, officials of the United States and of the State, and representatives of foreign States residing in this State, and the pallbearers, consisting of the following named gentlemen: John G. Downey, Newton Booth, George Stoneman, Leland Stanford, George E. Belknap, John S. Hager, E. W. McKinstry, W. R. Davis, L. U. Shippee, George H. Sanderson, William T. Garratt, Frank Dalton, T. J. Clunie, M. F. Tarpey, N. Greene Curtis, George K. Fitch, E. B. Mastic, John A. Stanley, George T. Marye, Jr., Levi Strauss, R. H. F. Variel, C. A. C. Duisenberg, I. W. Hellman, Alex. T. Vogelsang, W. C. Burnett, F. F. Low, Romualdo Pacheco, George C. Perkins, George Hearst, O. O. Howard, Niles Searls, E. B. Pond, Isaac E. Davis, E. S. Holden, J. V. Coffey, W. L. Merry, P. B. Cornwall, Washington Ayer, Henry Vrooman, John F. Swift, William T. Coleman, John P. Irish, Philip A. Roach, Albert Dibble, Albert Miller, Jacob Bergman, Robert J. Tobin, Colin M. Boyd, and Sampson Tams, were marshalled, and, with the Guard of Honor, marched to Trinity Episcopal Church, where religious ceremonies were held. These ceremonies were conducted by Rt. Rev. Bishop W. Ingraham Kip, Rev. Dr. H. W. Beers, and Revs. Dr. Lathrop and Chetwood. After the religious exercises the procession of officials, representatives, soldiers (Federal and State), societies, and persons not classed in organizations was formed, and marched through crowded streets to Laurel Hill Cemetery, where the last rites to the dead were celebrated, and his body left to his personal representatives.

The foregoing is a very brief outline of the obsequies of Governor Bartlett. We annex hereto copies of reports of the same from day to day, as given in some of the newspapers of San Francisco, which will indicate more fully the work done in this behalf.

In the conduct of this State funeral it became necessary to incur considerable indebtedness. This was done by the committee in the confidence that such reasonable indebtedness would be borne by the State. In assuming this liability your committee endeavored to confine the expenses to the necessary and appropriate purposes of the occasion, and within reasonable limits. The following is a list of the expenditures incurred by the committee, all of which have been paid:

		$3,057 16

A duplicate receipt for each item of expenditure, numbered to correspond with the items above, is hereto annexed.

In order to pay all these expenses, this amount, $3,057 16, was borrowed on a note dated September 22, 1887, for the sum of $3,057 16, with interest at 7 per cent per annum, payable February 22, 1889. The amount thereof at that time will be $3,360 32. This note was executed to the Bank of California by the following gentlemen: Wm. D. English, A. P. Williams, Arthur Rodgers, Wm. H. Jordan, George T. Marye, Jr., M. F. Tarpey, C. H. Maddox, R. W. Waterman, J. C. Smith, Thos. J. Clunie, George Hearst, and Richard T. Carroll.

As before stated, the amount of this note on February 22, 1889, will be $3,360 32, which amount we respectfully ask the Legislature to appropriate.

We are glad to say that the traders with whom we dealt were generally very liberal, and in some important instances, as in furnishing the draping for instance, made no profit whatever for the supplies furnished. The newspapers without exception deserve special recognition for numerous announcements made without cost.

Finally, we cannot close without an expression of our appreciation of the profound sorrow on the death of the Chief Magistrate of the State manifested by the people of all conditions, gathered at his funeral from all portions of the State.

Thanking your Excellency for your support of our efforts, we respectfully submit the foregoing.

WILLIAM H. JORDAN,
ARTHUR RODGERS.

COMMUNICATION

FROM THE

STATE CONTROLLER TO THE ASSEMBLY.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE STATE CONTROLLER.

OFFICE OF THE CONTROLLER OF STATE,)
 SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA, February 28, 1889.)

To the Assembly of the State of California:

In conformity with the resolution adopted by your honorable body February 12, 1889, which reads as follows:

"Resolved, That the Controller of State be and he is hereby required to furnish the Assembly with the following information, to wit:

"First—The whole amount of taxes delinquent upon railroads assessed by the State Board of Equalization for the years 1883, 1884, 1885, 1886, and 1887.

"Second—The proportion of said delinquent taxes due the several State funds, and the amount due each county.

"Third—The amount which, if the total delinquency were paid, would, upon the basis of the school census for the present year, and the rates levied for school purposes in the several counties, be available for school purposes in each county."

The assessments upon which these taxes are due were made by the State Board of Equalization, such assessments being for the franchise, roadway, roadbed, rails, and rolling stock of railroads operated in more than one county of the State.

Of the railroad companies delinquent for taxes for the years 1883 to 1887, inclusive, the Central Pacific, Southern Pacific, California Pacific, Northern Railway, and the San Pablo and Tulare, and the Stockton and Copperopolis Railroads each paid 60 per cent of the taxes levied against them for the year 1883, leaving the amount shown in the statement as still due from them for that year.

For the year 1884, the Stockton and Copperopolis Railroad Company paid its taxes in full when they became due and payable, and has also paid the taxes due for each subsequent year. The other companies named above paid about 51 per cent of the taxes levied against them for the year 1884, but for the years 1885, 1886, and 1887, they have paid nothing. The North Pacific Coast Railroad Company is delinquent for the sum of $5,339 38 as taxes for the year 1885. The South Pacific Coast Railroad Company is delinquent for the sum of $10,178 48 as taxes for the year 1887. The Pullman Palace Car Company is delinquent for the sum of $1,102 18, as taxes for the year 1887 upon the rolling stock of the company used on the Central Pacific and other railroads.

From the above it will be seen that the entire delinquency, except the amounts due from the North Pacific Coast Railroad Company and the Pullman Palace Car Company, is chargeable to the system of roads operated by the Southern Pacific Company.

Respectfully submitted.

JOHN P. DUNN, Controller.

STATEMENT

RELATIVE TO

UNPAID CLAIMS OF CALIFORNIA AGAINST THE UNITED STATES,

TO

SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE.

STATEMENT.

To the Special Joint Committee appointed under Assembly Concurrent Resolution in terms as follows, to wit :

“ CONCURRENT RESOLUTION No. 5.

“ In view of the importance and amount of the unpaid claims of this State against the United States, and in order that the Legislature may have full information in regard thereto, and as to whether the good faith of this State has been maintained with all persons employed to collect any claims of this State against the United States ; therefore, be it

“ Resolved by the Assembly, the Senate concurring, That all matters which in anywise relate to the unpaid claims of this State against the United States, and to the efforts to secure a recognition and collection thereof from the United States made by this State or by any of its officers, and all matters involving the good faith of this State toward any persons employed to collect any claims of this State against the United States, be investigated by a special Joint Committee of seven—three from the Senate, to be selected by the President pro tem., and four from the Assembly, to be selected by the Speaker—which Joint Committee is now hereby appointed for the purpose aforesaid. Said committee, at the earliest date practicable, shall report all the facts and its conclusions, and may submit at any time its recommendations thereon by bill or otherwise.”

Adopted by the Legislature of California, January 25, 1889.

I have the honor to now respectfully bring to your notice and for your consideration certain matters as follows, to wit :

First—I have been employed for over ten years—to wit, since November 1, 1878—to collect for the State of California from the United States certain claims alleged to have been then unpaid, and for many years prior thereto due to the State of California; and which employments, whence derived, the dates thereof, the action of the Legislature approving same, as far as the Legislature has acted thereon, the recommendations in the regular messages of former Governors of California in relation thereto, are all set forth in exhibits hereto attached, made parts hereof, marked No. 1 to No. 12.

Second—My services under all these employments have at all times, ever since November 1, 1878, been diligently performed, and at all times at my own and great expense, and never at any time or place at any cost to this State; and never at any time to the dissatisfaction of any State officer of California (so far as I am advised), except in the single instance in the manner hereinafter referred to.

Third—In order that previous Legislatures should have full information in regard to these claims, I submitted on November 1, 1886, to the Governor of California a written report of my services under my said employments, covering a period of eight years, from November 1, 1878, to November 1, 1886.

This report proper for all the purposes of this statement is hereto attached, made part hereof, marked Exhibit No. 13.

Fourth—In order that this Legislature may be fully informed in regard to said claims, I am prepared to submit at this time additional facts in relation thereto, extending from November 1, 1886, to this date.

Fifth—If certain acts of the Governor of California, hereinafter referred to, are to be recognized by the Legislature as the acts of the State, then I respectfully submit to you that on the third, sixth, tenth, and twenty-fifth of February, and on the sixth of March, 1888, the obligations and good faith of the State of California, due me under and by virtue of my said employments, seem not to have been maintained, and in consequence of certain acts of the Governor of California on said dates, and whatever purpose or intention may have been contemplated thereby, yet they nevertheless were matters that involved the good faith of this State in its obligations towards me, under and by virtue of my said employments, and which acts of the Governor, and the mode and circumstances of their performance and the effect thereof, I now respectfully submit to you were in violation of such good faith. These acts of the Governor are set forth in exhibits hereto attached, made parts hereof, marked No. 14 to No. 19.

Sixth—If a certain other act of the Governor of California, hereinafter referred to, is to be recognized by the Legislature as the act of the State, then I further respectfully submit to you that on the eighteenth day of January, 1889, the obligations and good faith of the State of California, due me under and by virtue of my said employments, seem not to have been maintained; and in consequence of a certain act of the Governor of California on said date, and which act consisted in his refusal to pay me the compensation as determined and authorized to be fixed and paid through him, by the Legislature of California, and due and payable to me on that date when I delivered to him two drafts for $11,723 64, collected by me under and by virtue only of my said employments, from and delivered to me by the United States in liquidation and payment on account of one of said claims, recognized by the United States to be due to this State.

Seventh—The history of this particular claim was duly submitted by me to the Governor of California in a paper, copy of which is hereto part hereof, marked Exhibit No. 20.

Eighth—The reasons alleged by the Governor of California for such refusal, were set forth in a paper, copy of which is hereto attached, made part hereof, marked Exhibit No. 21.

Ninth—Whatever purpose or intention may have been contemplated in this refusal by the Governor of California to pay me for my services in this case, and as set forth in said exhibit No. 20, yet it nevertheless was a matter that involved the good faith of the State in its obligations towards me. Under and by virtue of my said employments, and which act of the Governor, and the mode and circumstances of its performance, and the effect thereof, I now respectfully submit to you were in violation of such good faith.

Tenth—As the Governor of California has failed, up to this date, to pay me for my services the compensation as aforesaid, for the collection of this claim from the United States for the State of California therefore I now respectfully submit to you that the State of California has not fulfilled its part of its agreed obligation now due me in this case by this State.

Eleventh—Wherefore, I respectfully move that all of the aforesaid matters may be fully investigated by your honorable committee, and, from the facts found and conclusions reached by you in these premises, that adequate action may be had thereon by the Legislature—such as will provide me with an ample relief for the past and a secure remedy for the future under my said employments.

Respectfully,

JOHN MULLAN.

COUNTY OF SACRAMENTO. } ss.

John Mullan, on first being duly sworn, says: that he has read the foregoing statement, and all the exhibits thereto attached made parts thereof, and knows the contents of all of the same; that the same are true, except as to those matters therein stated upon information and belief, and as to those matters, he believes the same to be true.

JOHN MULLAN.

Capt. JOHN MULLAN, San Francisco, California:

DEAR SIR: I hereby appoint you Agent for the State of California, to secure from the United States, for the benefit of the State of California, the payment by the United States to this State of the five per centum of the net proceeds of the sales of all public lands lying within the State of California, which have been sold by Congress after the admission of said State into the Union, after deducting all the expenses incident to the same, and to be deposited in the State Treasury for such purposes as the Legislature may hereafter direct, which amounts have been provided for and granted to the other States in the Union.

I shall recommend to the next Legislature that you be paid such compensation for your services in the premises as shall appear just and proper, and based upon the amount of moneys you may succeed in recovering for this State.

You will see that the total amount recovered, without any deduction of any kind whatsoever, shall be transmitted by draft, and not otherwise, by the Hon. Secretary of the Treasury of the United States to the Treasurer of the State of California. You will report to this office from time to time the results of your action in these premises.

JOHN MULLAN, Esq., Washington, D. C.:

SIR: It having come to my knowledge that measures are being taken by several of the States, through their duly appointed agents, to recover from the National Government certain moneys paid by such States under an Act of Congress, approved August 5, 1861, entitled "An Act to provide increased revenue from imports to pay interest on the public debt, and for other purposes," and as the State of California has paid the sum of two hundred and fifty-four thousand five hundred and thirty-eight ($254,538) dollars under the provisions of said Act, it being the total amount assessed against the State, I, therefore, following the action of our sister States, do appoint you as the agent of the State of California to act in her behalf in taking such steps as may be necessary to recover from the United States Government the sums of money so paid under said Act. Your compensation for services rendered thereunder to be left to the discretion of the State Legislature.

GEORGE C. PERKINS,
Governor of California.

EXHIBIT No. 5.

RECOVERY OF MONEYS FROM THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT.

Information having been received by me that the expenses incurred by this State, and by the citizens of Siskiyou and Modoc Counties, for the suppression of Indian hostilities during the Modoc Indian war of 1872, had never been reimbursed by the General Government, I appointed Captain John Mullan, at Washington City, D. C., to represent said interests, on behalf of this State, before the proper authorities of the United States, for the purpose of securing such reimbursements; and, also, for such as were provided for (for California) under the Act of Congress, approved June 22, 1882, authorizing an examination and adjustment of the claims of the States of Kansas, Nevada, California, Oregon, Colorado, Nebraska, and Texas, for repelling invasion and Indian hostilities therein, between April 15, 1861, and June 22, 1882. Since writing the above I have just been informed by telegraph that success has attended Captain Mullan's efforts, and that the Modoc war bill, reimbursing the State, has passed both houses of Congress.

In addition to the foregoing, I also received information that many of the States intended to petition the General Government for the return of moneys paid by some of them in part, and by others in whole, of the sums assessed to the several States under the Act of Congress, approved August 5, 1861, to pay the interest on the public debt, and for other purposes. The amount assessed to this State under said Act was $254,538 66, which sum has been paid. But a few of the States have paid their assessments in full, others but a portion, and some of them not anything. Equity would demand that all or none should comply with the law.

Deeming the subject of considerable importance, and that the interests of the State required an agent in her behalf, with others employed in obtaining an equitable adjustment of these claims, I also authorized Captain Mullan to represent the State before the proper authorities at Washington, and would recommend that these appointments be ratified and confirmed by you, and that you provide for his compensation, to be paid out of the sums he may recover for the State, contingent, however, upon his success, it having been expressly understood that such compensation should be left entirely to your judgment and discretion.

Under an appointment from Surveyor-General William Minis, subject to legislative ratification, Captain Mullan, during the last four years, has endeavored to secure for California five per cent of the net proceeds of the sales of the public lands in this State, and has already made considerable progress in the same; and it is to be hoped before another Congress shall have adjourned that California may be placed upon an equal footing with all the other public land States in regard to this grant.

I invite your favorable attention to the report of Surveyor-General Shanklin touching this subject, and to the recommendations by him made in regard thereto.

(Signed)

GEORGE C. PERKINS,
Governor of California.

(Page twenty-two, Appendix to Journal of Senate and Assembly, twenty-fifth session.)

EXHIBIT No. 6.

THE FIVE PER CENT FUND.

I would invite your attention to the law of Congress, approved September 4, 1841, relating to the appropriation of the proceeds of the sales of public lands, etc. This Act named the eight States in which public lands were then for sale, giving said States 10 per cent of the net proceeds, and making provisions for the distribution of 5 per cent among certain new States and Territories. But this law did not contemplate a division among other than the twenty-six States and Territories then existing. No good reason can be shown why California should be excluded from this distribution, for it is a public land State, and has contributed largely to the fund to be distributed among other States. It was evidently an oversight in not putting California upon an equal footing with other States in this matter when she came into the Union. My predecessor, William Minis, taking the same view of the matter that I do, appointed Captain John Mullan as an agent of the State to aid in procuring Congressional legislation that would give us an equitable distribution, and so well has he succeeded, that mainly through his activity in presenting and urging the matter on the attention of our Representatives and before the Land Committees in Congress, that a bill has passed one house and is now pending in the other house, which will, if it becomes a law, give California the share she is justly entitled to in connection with the other States. Captain Mullan has constantly kept this office informed of what he has been doing in the matter.

JAMES W. SHANKLIN,
Surveyor-General.

Assembly Concurrent Resolution No. 20, relative to directing the Governor to fix the compensation for services rendered by Captain John Mullan, in collections of claims due the State from the United States, adopted March 3, 1883.

WHEREAS, The Governor and State Surveyor-General of this State have heretofore respectively appointed Captain John Mullan, of San Francisco, California, agent and attorney to represent the interests of the State of California before the proper authorities of the United States, at Washington, District of Columbia, in the matter of the claim of this State to the five per cent net proceeds of the sales of the public lands by the United States in this State; and also in the matter of the direct tax levied upon this State by the United States, under the Act of Congress of August sixth, eighteen hundred and sixty-one; and also of her claim arising during the Modoc war, in eighteen hundred and seventy-two; and also under the provisions of the Act of Congress of June twenty-seventh, eighteen hundred and eighty-two; therefore, be it

Resolved by the Assembly of California, the Senate concurring, That the appointments so conferred upon Captain John Mullan by the Governor and Surveyor-General, respectively, are hereby ratified and confirmed; and the Governor of this State be and he is hereby authorized and directed to fix the compensation for services by Captain John Mullan heretofore and that may be by him hereafter rendered, at twenty per cent of each of the sums or claims that may be by him collected from the United States, and to pay to him such per cent out of the moneys that may be collected by him and paid to this State on account of each of the foregoing matters, respectively; provided, however, that this State shall not in any event become liable for any expenses, fees, and salaries, of any nature whatever, other than such contingent commission.

SECTION 2. That the Controller of the State of California be and he is hereby authorized to deliver to Captain John Mullan, or to his authorized agent, all the original vouchers, certificates, and papers of every kind and nature against the Government of the United States, for or on account of each of the foregoing matters, respectively.

SEC. 3. That said Controller shall prepare and take from Captain John Mullan, or from his authorized agent, a receipt in writing, bound in a book, same as he keeps in his office for all such papers as aforesaid, and which shall show what the papers are in each case, the date thereof, by what Board of Examiners passed, the amount and date of the warrant, and in whose favor drawn.

Subject to the approval and ratification of the Legislature of the State of California, I hereby appoint Captain John Mullan to represent this State and collect therefor such amounts of money as have been paid by said State to the Registers and Receivers of the several United States Land Offices as fees for the selection of lands, as provided by law, and which selections, for cause satisfactorily shown, were not approved, confirmed, or certified to said State, but subsequently rejected and canceled, and to the restitution of which fees the State is entitled.

No expense connected with the collection of said amounts to be considered a claim against the State, and Captain Mullan to receive as compensation in full for said collection, the sum of twenty per cent (20 per cent) of the amount collected and received for by the State.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,)
 SACRAMENTO, CAL., March 31, 1884. }

In addition to the claims due the State of California from the United States enumerated in the preamble to Assembly Concurrent Resolution No. 20, and adopted by the Legislature of California on March 3, 1883, Captain John Mullan, of San Francisco, California, now residing at Washington City, D. C., is hereby appointed agent and attorney to represent the interest of the State of California before the proper authorities of the United States at Washington City, D. C., in the matter of all moneys or balances that have been paid, or which remain due and to be or liable to be paid in whole or in part by the State of California, on account of any Indian war bonds or coupons issued by the State of California under the authority of the Legislature thereof, in its Acts approved fifteenth February, 1851, third May, 1852, and twenty-fifth April, 1857, respectively, for the suppression of Indian hostilities within said State, for the purpose of recovering from the United States for the State of California a sum equivalent thereto in payment or satisfaction of the whole thereof; together with all interest which is now and which may hereafter become due, payable, or allowed thereon, or on any part thereof, by the United States; and also, to recover from the United States all interest that is now or which may hereafter become due, payable, or allowed by the United States to the State of California, on account of any part of the money expended or liabilities assumed by this State on account of the war of the rebellion.

The compensation of Captain Mullan for his services in the foregoing named matters is fixed at 20 per cent of the moneys that may be collected by him or paid to the State of California in any of these premises; provided, however, that this State shall not in any event become liable for any expenses, fees, or salaries of any nature whatever other than such contingent commission.

This appointment and commission shall be subject to the ratification of the Legislature, otherwise to be void.

GEORGE STONEMAN,
 Governor of California.

EXHIBIT No. 10.

FEDERAL CLAIMS.

In reference to the several claims of the State alleged to exist against the United States, I beg to report that the agent for this State at Washington, D. C., under the executive authority heretofore conferred upon him and duly ratified by the Legislature, has brought to the official attention of the proper authorities and departments of the United States, sundry claims of this State. While the reports made by him from time to time in regard thereto show considerable and favorable progress, still, only two of such claims have been allowed and paid by the United States, namely, that of $495 72 on account of the expenses incurred by the State in the year 1872 for the transportation of arms to the northern counties during the Modoc Indian war; and that of $38,180 80, on account of the rebate of the fifteen per centum of the direct war tax levied upon and assessed to this State under the Act of Congress, approved August 5, 1861 (U. S. Statutes, vol. 12, p. 296).

The total amount of the Federal direct war tax levied upon the State of California, under the aforesaid Act of Congress, was $254,538 67. This the State assumed and made provision for its payment in the Act of the Legislature approved April 12, 1862, and of the sum, up to February, 1863, had paid $247,445 41. This left the amount, still due from the State to the United States, $7,093 26.

It was claimed by the agent of this State that, though the State failed to make her payment of this direct war tax within the time prescribed in said Federal statute, and though she was in consequence not legally entitled to the rebate of fifteen per centum thereof, as described in section fifty-three of said Act, this State, nevertheless, was in equity entitled to said fifteen per centum rebate, since the collection and payment had been made without any expense whatever to the United States. By establishing this right in equity the agent succeeded in securing and collecting the rebate in the per centum mentioned.

In the settlement had between the United States and this State, arising under the two claims mentioned, the proper United States authorities deducted said sum of $7,093 26 then delinquent and due the United States, and thereafter issued in the name of the Governor of California, a draft for the remainder, viz.: $31,583 26, upon the United States Sub-Treasurer at San Francisco. This amount, after deducting the commission for collection as fixed by the joint resolution of the Legislature adopted March 3, 1883, was by me paid over to the State Treasurer in the sum of $23,847 96.

In this connection I beg to report that under the belief that a proper effort, made by a competent person, to collect from the United States the old California Indian war debts would be crowned with success, I have duly appointed Captain John Mullan, the present agent, as agent also for such purposes, the appointment being subject to ratification by the Legislature. I have authorized him to present all the matters connected with the said war debts, including the interest paid by and due to this State on account of moneys heretofore expended and guaranteed by this State on account of Indian and other hostilities within its borders, to the proper United States authorities at Washington, with a view to the favorable recognition and payment of such claims. Such a presentation has been made by him, and the State may expect through his efforts an eventually favorable action in final adjustment.

The intelligence and fidelity displayed by Captain Mullan in the matters described fully reflect the confidence reposed in him by his selection for this special work, and I therefore recommend that the Legislature confirm the executive appointment of Captain Mullan made by me for the purposes above described.

(Signed)

GEORGE STONEMAN,
Governor of California.

CHAPTER XVI.

Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 3, relative to directing the Governor to fix the compensation for services rendered by Captain John Mullan, in collections of claims due the State of California from the United States, adopted March 3, 1885.

WHEREAS, The Governor and State Surveyor-General of this State, respectively, have heretofore appointed Captain John Mullan, of San Francisco, California, agent and attorney to represent the State of California before the proper authorities of the United States, at Washington, D. C., in the matter of the claims of the State of California against the United States, growing out of past Indian hostilities, and for interest on moneys heretofore expended by this State on account of military operations herein and borders hereof, and in recovering all land fees heretofore illegally paid to the United States by this State; and, whereas, in pursuance of Concurrent Resolution Number Twelve, adopted February twenty-sixth, eighteen hundred and eighty-one, and in pursuance of Assembly Joint Resolution Number Thirty, adopted March ninth, eighteen hundred and seventy-two, James E. Hale and Thomas M. Nosler were duly appointed and commissioned agents on behalf of the State of California and the Governor thereof, by themselves and their duly constituted agents, to collect from the Government of the United States the cost, charges, and expenses properly incurred by the State of California for enrolling, subsisting, clothing, supplying, arming, equipping, paying, and transporting its troops employed in aiding to suppress the insurrection against the United States; and, whereas, said James E. Hale and Thomas M. Nosler have duly constituted said Captain John Mullan their agent and attorney, in pursuance of the foregoing authority conferred on them, in their names, places, and stead, to demand and receive all said moneys from said Government of the United States, and in and about the premises to act as their agent therein; therefore, be it

SECTION 1. Resolved by the Senate of California, the Assembly concurring. That the appointments so conferred upon Captain John Mullan by the Governor and Surveyor-General, respectively, are hereby ratified and confirmed, and the Governor of this State be and he is hereby authorized and directed to fix the compensation for the services by Captain John Mullan heretofore and that may be by him hereafter rendered, at twenty per cent of each of the sums or claims that may be by him collected from the United States, and to pay to him such per cent out of the moneys that may be collected by him and paid to this State on account of each of the foregoing matters respectively; provided, however, that this State shall not, in any event, become liable for any expenses, fees, and salaries of any nature whatever, other than such contingent commission.

SEC. 2. That the proper State officers of the State of California be and they are hereby authorized and directed to deliver to Captain John Mullan, or to his authorized agent, all the original vouchers, certificates, and papers of every kind and nature relating to the claims of this State against the Government of the United States for or on account of each of the foregoing matters respectively, and also all Controller's warrants that have been heretofore paid and canceled, and which may be needed to perfect any of the claims of this State against the United States, represented by him.

SEC. 3. That said State officers shall prepare and take from Captain John Mullan, or from his authorized agent, a receipt in writing, bound in a book same as they keep in their offices for all such papers as aforesaid, and which shall show what the papers are in each case, the date thereof, by what Board of Examiners passed, the amount and date of the warrant, and in whose favor drawn.

EXHIBIT NO. 13.

REPORT.

WASHINGTON, D. C., November 1, 1886.

Hon. GEORGE STONEMAN, Governor of California:

DEAR SIR: I have the honor to submit you a report upon the several claims of the State of California against the United States, for which I have been heretofore appointed agent and counsel, and for all of which I have been so acting for a period covering the eight years last past, to wit: from November 1, 1878, to November 1, 1886.

I have from time to time during said period made to you and to your predecessor, and to the present State Surveyor-General and Adjutant-General of the State of California, and to their predecessors in office, sundry detailed reports of my acts in all these premises, and have addressed you and them from time to time such proper communications thereon as enabled you and them to keep au courant with all proceedings had therein as the same transpired. Yet, in order, at the termination of your administration as Governor of the State of California, that you may have full information on all these matters, and for the purpose of your laying the same before the Legislature at its next session, and in view of the importance to the people of California of sundry of these several claims and of many circumstances connected therewith, and especially for the purpose of having an authentic record of the history of all thereof for future reference, in so far as my agency in any of these premises has been or may be hereafter concerned, I deem it proper to now submit you a general summary, covering each of said claims as represented by me during the eight years last past.

The several claims by me represented, as agent and counsel for the State of California, are as follows, to wit:

First—The five per centum of the net proceeds of the cash sales of the public lands in California made by the United States subsequent to the date of her admission into the Union—September 9, 1850—and not heretofore paid to the State of California by the United States.

Second—The refunding by the United States to California her quota of the direct tax levied by the United States under the Act of Congress approved August 5, 1861, and not heretofore reimbursed the State of California by the United States.

Third—The refunding by the United States to California the moneys heretofore by her expended on account of the Modoc Indian war, in north California, in 1872 and 1873, and not heretofore reimbursed the State of California by the United States.

Fourth—The refunding by the United States to California the moneys heretofore by her expended on account of Indian (other than Modoc) hostilities therein, and upon the borders thereof, between September 9, 1850, and June 27, 1882, and not heretofore reimbursed the State of California by the United States.

Fifth—The refunding by the United States to the State of California the moneys heretofore by her expended on account of the war of rebellion, and not heretofore reimbursed the State of California by the United States.

Sixth—The refunding by the United States to the State of California the moneys by her heretofore paid as interest on the principal borrowed by her on account of the two foregoing items, and not heretofore reimbursed the State of California by the United States.

Seventh—The refunding by the United States to the State of California the moneys by her heretofore paid the United States as fees upon those particular selections and locations of lands under the several land grants made by Congress to California, which have been declared invalid by the United States, not allowed, and which were finally canceled by the United States, wherever said fees have not been heretofore reimbursed the State of California by the United States; and, also,

The securing for the State of California an indemnity in either lands or money of so much of its Swamp Land Grant, made to her in the Act of Congress approved September 28, 1850, and confirmed to her in the Act of July 23, 1866, as have heretofore not inured to the benefit of said State, but which lands have in sundry instances been heretofore sold, or been otherwise disposed of by the United States, and without any benefit accruing therefrom to the State of California.

No. 1. THE FIVE PER CENT CLAIM.

During a law practice in California extending over a period of several years, devoted chiefly to land matters arising therein, it came to my knowledge that the State of California had never received from the United States, nor had ever been granted by Congress, any percentum of the net proceeds of the cash sales of the public lands therein made by the United States; and that while California had no legal claim against the United States therefor, yet in view of the fact that a similar grant had been made by Congress to all the other public land States of the Union, that an equity therein at least would seem to exist in behalf of California, which, if properly represented and urged at the proper times and places, by a competent party conversant with the subject-matter, might eventuate in finally securing a similar grant to California.

Therefore, in the year 1878, I brought this matter to the special attention of the State authorities of the State of California, to wit: to her Governor, Honorable William Irwin, and to her State Surveyor-General, Honorable William Minis, and made fully known to them all the circumstances and facts connected therewith within my knowledge, believing then and knowing now that no systematic effort had ever been made, prior to that time, to secure California the benefits of this grant.

It is true the Legislature of California, upon the recommendation of Hon. John B. Weller, Governor of California, on March 4, 1858, and in approval of the urgent and intelligent presentation to him of the valid reasons therefor by Hon. Andrew J. Moulder, the Superintendent of Public Instruction, under date of March 4, 1858 (see Assembly Journal, ninth session, pages 302 et sequiter and 314), did, on March 11, 1858, memorialize Congress to make her such a grant; but the matter, so far as I know, began and ended in this one step. Certainly, in 1878, a period of twenty years had been allowed to come and go, and during which time no beneficial results had flowed to her therefrom.

Even in that single effort the Legislature of California admitted that Congress had changed, by departing from its policy, in the case of California in these premises—an admission which, to a very great extent, gave away the very case which the memorial sought to secure; but, be that as it may, one thing is most sure, that this admission, such as it was, could certainly not strengthen her position as a petitioner after a long lapse of years subsequent to the date of her admission into the Union.

A copy of this memorial is hereto attached, and marked Exhibit No. 1, and made a part hereof.

After having maturely considered the subject-matter in all its bearings, and all that it might involve, I was willing to visit Washington and there undertake, at my own expense, the presentation of this equitable claim of California before the proper United States tribunals, provided I were so authorized. The subject-matter having been duly considered by the State Surveyor-General and ex officio Register of State Lands, Hon. William Minis, the head of that branch of the State Government more directly than any other charged by law with the superintendence of the public interests in all matters relating to lands and land sales in California—that officer, on November 1, 1878, commissioned me as agent and attorney for the State of California in these premises, a copy of which commission is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 2.

My said appointment and commission were made subject to the action of the Legislature, for the purpose of ratifying and validating the appointment so by him made, and of fixing the compensation which I should receive, and which latter was to be entirely contingent upon success, to wit:

That I was to get nothing if the State got nothing; and per contra, if the State's claim should be recognized, then I was to receive such compensation as the Legislature might thereafter fix and declare whenever it should take up, consider, and act thereon.

Armed with this authority, I proceeded from California to Washington City in the month of November, 1878, at my own expense.

Immediately upon my arrival in Washington, for the purpose of testing the sense of the General Land Office as to whether there was sufficient authority of law by which that office could then recognize this claim of the State of California, I, on the twentieth of November, 1878, submitted to the honorable Commissioner of the General Land Office, my letter of appointment, together with a communication, copy of which is hereto appended and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 3.

To this letter the honorable Commissioner of the General Land Office replied in a communication dated November 28, 1878, a copy of which is hereto appended and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 4.

Having thus exhausted all executive remedy in the premises, I thereupon determined to address myself next to Congress, in order to secure that legislation without which the honorable Commissioner of the General Land Office had informed me he could not state an account to the Treasury Department in favor of the State of California; and deeming it my duty in these premises (with but few exceptions) then and now to always proceed through the members of the California delegation in Congress, in either the Senate or House, and for this reason, I thereupon addressed a letter on this subject to the Hon. J. K. Luttrell, then in Congress from California, copy of which letter is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 5.

To this letter Mr. Luttrell replied in a communication, a copy of which is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 6.

Not being satisfied with this view of the case as expressed by Mr. Luttrell, I then, for reasons appearing to me good and sufficient, next brought the matter to the attention of Hon. P. D. Wigginton, then also in Congress from California, who, at my request, on January 20, 1879, introduced in the House a bill, H. R. No. 6081, third session, Forty-fifth Congress, to make this grant to California, and copy of which bill is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 7.

While I was not sanguine in securing any final result on this bill then, so near the end of the third and last session of the Forty-fifth Congress, yet I desired to get the matter on record and before Congress at the very earliest date possible, and due diligence on my part seemed to me to make this a matter of duty which I owed the trust that I had undertaken to execute.

This bill, it will be perceived, proposed to dedicate said proceeds to the "making or improving public roads, constructing drainage and irrigating ditches and canals, to effect a general system for irrigating the agricultural lands in said State, and in the mode and manner as the Legislature of said State may establish and direct."

During this third session of the Forty-fifth Congress, the Hon. George W. Julian was Chairman of the House Committee on Public Lands, and in whom I did not think I had found any friend of this measure; on the contrary, it seemed to me that he, with other members of that committee, seemed to labor under the impression that the State of California had no claim for this grant that was valid in either law or equity, and because she had accepted an admission into the Union without such grant or condition, and she had allowed twenty-eight years to pass without even urging this claim, which at best was questionable, and not well founded; and that the most that California could expect was, that should Congress make her any such grant, the same should take effect only from the date of its passage; which thereby, as I saw, would destroy more than one half of the value of this claim. I therefore feared to urge final action on this bill during the Forty-fifth Congress, fearing either an adverse report or one such as would limit the grant, by making it take effect from and at the date of the passage of the Act, and if action by Congress on such report should be delayed, as it would likely be, then the effect would inevitably be to render this grant barren of those substantial benefits for which I pleaded, to wit:

That this grant, when made, should relate back to the date of the admission of the State of California into the Union, or at least to the earliest date when the first sales of public lands for cash in California had taken place, and which date is July 1, 1857.

Finding the Committee on Public Lands during the Forty-fifth Congress little disposed to take any favorable action on this measure. I deemed it more prudent and diplomatic to let this measure rest until another Congress should meet, so that the Forty-fifth Congress adjourned with this matter unacted on but still sub judice before the House Committee on Public Lands, and as hereinbefore stated.

In view of the situation as I found same to exist in Washington during the Forty-fifth Congress, and in order that the Legislature of California might express itself de novo on this subject, and believing that a resolution to Congress, expressive of its latest views and wishes therein, might have the effect to stimulate to more active efforts the California delegation at least in behalf of this measure, I prepared a resolution having for its object to express the wishes of the Legislature of California on this subject, and transmitted the same to Sacramento on the twenty-ninth November, 1880, to the Hon. Grove L. Johnson, then a State Senator in the California Legislature, with the request that he would interest himself in the subject-matter, and to introduce in the State Senate my said resolution, and informing him, among other things, that the interest of the State of California in this measure would aggregate at least one half million dollars; and which resolution was of a tenor like unto the bill which I had prepared and had Hon. P. D. Wigginton introduce, and as hereinbefore described.

This resolution passed the Senate of California during its session of 1880-81, but it failed to pass the Assembly during that session, when the Legislature adjourned sine die.

The Legislature of California having been convened in session in 1881, I again renewed my efforts to have that body pass a similar resolution at this session on this same subject, and with this object in view I again prepared another paper, and again transmitted it to Hon. Grove L. Johnson, still a State Senator, at Sacramento.

Before action was taken by the Legislature on this paper, I wrote to Mr. Johnson to change the form of said paper, which was then only a resolution, into a memorial, which, upon reflection, I thought it ought to be; and also to change the dedication of the proceeds of this claim from internal improvement purposes, which had been my original intention, to educational purposes, which, upon reflection, I thought might subserve larger interests.

This memorial Hon. Grove L. Johnson, at my request, introduced in the State Senate of California, where it passed and went to the Assembly, where it also passed that same session, and became the Act of the Legislature during its session of 1881, and on the ninth day of February, 1881, it became the expressed will of the State in the form of Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 1, copy of which is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 8.

Certified copies of this Senate concurrent resolution, which in fact and in the body thereof, was a memorial under the seal of the State, having been sent to me from Sacramento, I presented the same to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress from California, and also to the Public Lands Committee in both Senate and House of Representatives, and thereupon I prepared two bills in harmony with said memorial, one of which, to wit, Senate Bill No. 311, was, at my request, introduced in Congress on December 8, 1881, by Hon. James T. Farley, and the other, to wit, H. R. No. 61, was, also at my request, introduced in the House by Hon. C. P. Berry, on December 13, 1881, and copies of which bills are hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibits Nos. 9 and 9½.

Prior to this date, to wit, on nineteenth February, 1880, during the second session of the Forty-sixth Congress, the Senate having under consideration Senate Bill No. 19, relating to the general subject of the five per cent claims (of those public land States which were then the beneficiaries of a grant thereof), at my request Senator Farley submitted an amendment thereto, in words as follows: "And provided further that the State of California is hereby placed upon the same footing as regards the five per cent of the net proceeds of the sales of all public lands in the said State with the States named herein, and shall be entitled to all benefits and payments to which they, or either of them, are entitled under this and all previous Acts of Congress." (See page 1010 Congressional Record, vol. 10, second session Forty-sixth Congress, February 19, 1880.)

This bill having failed to pass Congress, like as in the Forty-fifth Congress, we were unable to secure any action for our California five per cent claim during the Forty-sixth Congress—no effort having been made in the House by me during the Forty-sixth Congress, as I feared the attitude of that committee, and especially its Chairman, on this proposition.

But, as before stated, I renewed my efforts before the next, or Forty-seventh Congress, and before which we had submitted, through Senator Farley, Senate Bill No. 311, and, through Hon. C. P. Berry, House Bill No. 61.

A house had assembled in the Forty-seventh Congress that changed the political character and personnel of the House Committee on Public Lands, and the change was more particularly marked by the substitution of Governor Pound, of Wisconsin, for its Chairman, vice Hon. George W. Julian, retired from Congress.

To support these two bills with appropriate facts and arguments, I compiled from various records and archives in the General Land Office a series of eight (8) tables of statistics, which contained a full history of all the legislation, from the earliest sessions of Congress to date, on this five per cent grant to the several States, and the reasons thereof, and the amounts of money received by the several States up to June 30, 1881, including a statement of the cash sales of public lands in California made by the United States up to June 30, 1881.

I thereafter, to wit, April 14, 1882, submitted these tables to Hon. N. C. McFarland, Commissioner of the General Land Office, for his examination and approval, and that officer finding them to be correct, he, at my request, so certified. The original of these tables I filed with the Senate Committee on Public Lands in the Forty-seventh Congress, and copies thereof I filed with the House Committee on Public Lands, and appended other copies as exhibits to an argument which I then prepared in support of said Senate Bill No. 311 and H. R. No. 61, and copies of all of which I filed with the Public Land Committee in Senate and House, and with the members of the California delegation then in Congress, and copies of which are hereto annexed and made a part thereof, and marked Exhibit No. 10.

It was during this Forty-seventh Congress, to wit, on December 5, 1881, that Senator Voorhees, of Indiana, introduced Senate Bill No. 67, having for its object to authorize the accounting officers of the Treasury, when stating the accounts for this five per cent event in behalf of any public land State, that was then the beneficiary thereof, to so state the same that it should include the sales made by or for Military Bounty Land Warrants as well as those made for cash, and which Bounty Land Warrants sales had always theretofore been excluded from such statements when any settlements had been had between the United States and said public land States.

A House Bill, to wit, No. 4239, for this purpose, had also been favorably reported (in House Report No. 70) upon in the Forty-fifth Congress, a copy of which report is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 11, and a copy of said Senate Bill No. 67 is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 11½.

Senator Voorhees' Senate Bill No. 67 in the Forty-seventh Congress being in all respects similar to said House Bill No. 4239 in the Forty-fifth Congress, and being limited as it was exclusively to the public land States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Arkansas, Louisiana, Alabama, Mississippi, Florida, Oregon, Nevada, and Colorado—California being the only public land State not named therein, and, therefore, specially excepted from its provisions—at my urgent request, while the same was under consideration in the Senate, Honorable James T. Farley, then in the Senate, who theretofore had not been in favor of the general Military Bounty Land Warrant legislation as contained in said Senate Bill No. 67 of the Forty-seventh Congress, yet finally agreed, at my request, to submit an amendment to said general Bill No. 67, so as to include California, copy of which amendment is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 12. This bill, amended by Senator Farley so as to include California, passed the Senate on the nineteenth day of May, 1882, by only five majority, and went to the House. Copy of the record of the vote had thereon is hereto appended and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 12½.

On the next day, upon a motion by Senator Pugh of Alabama, to reconsider the vote by which this bill passed the Senate, it was recalled from the House, and the vote by which it had passed the Senate was reconsidered and it was thereafter laid upon the table of the Senate, where it ever remained unacted on during the session.

It is due to truth to report that Senator Pugh had antagonized this bill during all the debates had thereon, and only voted with the ayes in order to have the parliamentary privilege of moving its reconsideration.

When Congress reconvened at its short and last session, the friends of the measure despairing of securing in so short a time any favorable congressional action thereon, failed to renew their further efforts in regard thereto, and consequently this bill, which contained our California five per cent measure in full effect, died with the Forty-seventh Congress. I now here insert a chapter of the history of this legislation within my personal knowledge, in order to record a fact which otherwise might never be recorded.

As I before stated, Senator Farley was not favorable to the general Military Bounty Land Warrant construction of the five per cent grant (a fact which, no doubt, Hon. Newton Booth, then also a Senator from California and a member of the Senate Committee on Public Lands, may possibly recall, as Senator Farley is now dead).

But Senator Farley's vote for this bill was then thought by its friends to be a necessity for its passage, and due to the fact that the Senate was thought to be quite evenly divided then on this general proposition, and because the sense of the Senate thereon having been informally taken it was found, certainly was then thought, that Senator Farley's vote against this general bill would defeat the same.

I have reason to believe that had Senator Farley voted against this general bill, that its friends would have thereafter given a cold shoulder by giving a large negative vote against Senator Farley's separate and independent Senate Bill No. 311, to grant California this five per cent claim.

Knowing these facts, I laid them all before Senator Farley, not once, but many times; and he appreciating the importance and the difficulty and the delicacy of his position on this general measure, finally waived all his objections to this general bill, in order that his action thereon should not thereafter be used as an argument or as a club with which to defeat our California five per cent claim, then pending, as it was, before the Senate in an independent and separate bill, to wit, Senator Farley's Senate Bill No. 311.

The friends of this general five per cent Senate Bill No. 67, which had solely for its object to include all sales of military bounty land warrants, indulged a confident belief that all the public land States, then the beneficiaries of this grant, had a claim against the United States so valid at law that it could be maintained by a mandamus proceeding, if initiated in the United States Supreme Court and directed specifically against the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

In view of such belief, two of the States, to wit: Iowa, whose interest in the military bounty land warrant sales made in that State aggregated \$595,853 31, by its State agent, Hon. R. P. Low (ex-Governor and ex-Chief Justice thereof), and Illinois, whose interest therein aggregated \$881,006 60, by its State agent, Hon. W. W. Wilshire (ex-representative in Congress from Arkansas), petitioned the United States Supreme Court for writs of mandamus to issue from it against said honorable Commissioner of the General Land Office, compelling him to state an account that would include all military bounty land warrant sales made in said two States by the United States. These two gentleman, therefore, as State agents for said two States, respectively, under the authority of their respective States, representing the same interests before Congress in this Senate Bill No. 67, and whose compensation, like mine, was to be contingent on success, that of Governor Lowe being one third ($\frac{1}{3}$) of such sums as he might recover—and whose relation to this subject-matter is set forth in a paper, copy of which is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 13—prosecuted said mandamus proceedings.

I consulted with these gentlemen as to their view of the propriety of my intervening in behalf of the State of California in this proceeding; but it was their judgment that as California did not occupy that same legal relation to the subject-matter, such as Iowa and Illinois did, or such as would strengthen the general case before the Court, therefore I concluded that it would be unwise to intervene, and hence limited my efforts in aiding these two State agents in all that promised a successful result. The State of Alabama, having a legal status in the matter, intervened through her own State agent.

This judicial proceeding resulted in a denial of the writ of mandamus, as petitioned for, and as will more fully appear from copy of the order of dismissal of said petition, hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 14.

During the forty-seventh Congress Senator Farley's said Senate Bill No. 311 was favorably reported on twentieth February, 1882, from the Senate Committee on Public Lands; and Representative Berry's House Bill No. 61 was ordered to be favorably reported to the House, when its public Land Committee should be called for reports, but which call was never made, so that the Forty-seventh Congress adjourned leaving the said Senate bill on the Senate calendar unacted on, though favorably reported; and no further action was had on this measure in the House other than that hereinbefore stated.

In view thereof, and of the fact that the proceedings before the United States Supreme Court had proven equally barren of beneficial results, I renewed my efforts in behalf of this measure before the Forty-eighth Congress, when I again prepared two (2) bills, one of which, to wit, Senate Bill No. 796, was, at my request, introduced on December 18, 1883, in the Senate by the late Senator Hon. John F. Miller; and the other, to wit, H. R. No. 111, was, at my request, introduced on December 10, 1883, in the House by the Hon. Barclay Henley, and copies of which bills are hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibits Nos. 15 and 16.

Senator Miller was requested by me to take charge of this measure in the Senate at this time, in consequence of the fact that Senator Farley, who had had charge thereof during the Forty-seventh Congress, was absent from Washington sick.

Prior to this date it occurred to me that, as I had been diligently at work for a period of about five years in endeavoring to secure favorable action, in season and out of season, for this and other California measures, and as yet no action had been taken by the Legislature of California either to ratify and validate my appointments, or to determine and fix the compensation that I should receive in any of these premises, and believing that it was at least due me and the people of California that this matter should be now considered, and fully acted upon, and definitely disposed of, and not be left in doubt till my labors should be finally completed, and, if successful, that I should be then compelled to run the gauntlet of a hungry lobby sometimes said to be found outside the doors of a legislative body, and also said to be often composed of blackmailers, or unscrupulous and impecunious dead beats, who unfortunately, it is said, are at times successful in defeating meritorious measures, and who, some persons believe, allow action on private claims before a Legislature only on their own terms, I deemed it more prudent, rather than risk being placed in any such condition, to have this matter brought fully to the attention of the Legislature for its consideration and final action.

This subject-matter, with others relating to me, was, therefore, brought to the attention of the Legislature of California at its session in January, 1883, by Hon. George C. Perkins, Governor of California, in his concluding message to the Legislature, and also by the State Surveyor-General, Hon. James W. Shanklin, in his final annual report to Governor Perkins, and which references of said officials are hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibits Nos. 19 and 20. The Legislature of California having maturely considered the entire subject-matter in its appropriate committees of each of its respective Houses, and also by each of its respective bodies as a whole, finally passed a resolution on the third day of March, 1883, ratifying and confirming, among other appointments, the one so conferred upon me by State Surveyor-General, Hon. William Minis; and did at the same time determine upon and fix in a contract, the exact compensation I should receive in these premises, copy of which action of the Legislature is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 21.

My appointment so theretofore made, having been thus ratified and confirmed March 3, 1883, by the highest power known to the State, and my compensation in the premises having been thereby fixed in a legislative contract, I proceeded with renewed diligence to secure for the State the best results possible in these premises, and which results, during the Forty-eighth Congress, consisted in a favorable report being made in behalf of the measure both by the Senate and House Committees on Public Lands, copy of which report (No. 1969) is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 22.

Notwithstanding having thus received said favorable reports in both Senate and House in behalf of this measure, fearing that we would not secure any final separate action on this claim in the form of an independent bill, as it was now getting late in the session, it occurred to me, in view of such favorable action by the Senate Committee on Public Lands, that the Senate would possibly favorably entertain a proposition to incorporate a provision in the General Deficiency Bill, by way of an amendment thereto, to cover the amount of said claim as same existed on June 30, 1883.

With this object in view I prepared an appropriate amendment to the House Deficiency Bill No. 7235 of the first session of the Forty-eight Congress, after said bill had reached the Senate, that would cover this proposition, and at my request the late Senator John F. Miller, on June 16, 1884, introduced the same in the Senate, and had it referred to the Senate Appropriation Committee; copy of which amendment is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 22½.

But the Senate Appropriation Committee failed to give the same any favorable action, so that, notwithstanding sundry efforts made on my part in these premises, I found that it was impossible either to reach or take up in either the Senate or House, this proposition, either as independent bills or as an amendment to an appropriation bill; therefore, the Forty-eighth Congress adjourned without any action on either thereof, other than as herein reported; and both of said bills were on the calendars of Senate and House on the day of final adjournment, and both with a favorable report.

When the Forty-ninth Congress convened I again renewed my efforts in behalf of this same measure, by preparing two more bills to cover this same claim.

In view of the non-arrival of Senator Miller in Washington when the Forty-ninth Congress met, I awaited his arrival, believing that he could take up in the Senate this measure, he having had charge thereof during the Forty-eighth Congress, but when he did arrive, and finding that he was unable to take his seat in the Senate, I thereupon brought this same matter to the attention of the Hon. Leland Stanford, who, on January 11, 1886, at my request, introduced one of said bills, to wit, Senate Bill No. 994, and Hon. Barclay Henley, on December 21, 1885, at my request, introduced the other of said two bills, to wit, H. R. No. 150, copies of which bills are hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibits Nos. 23 and 24.

I thereupon prepared an argument to support each of said two bills, and filed same with both the Senate and House Committees on Public Lands, said argument covering about the same grounds as hereinbefore particularly described, and in due time both of said two bills were favorably reported upon, to wit, in the Senate, on the fifteenth of February, 1886, and in the House, on the tenth of March, 1886, copies of which reports (No. 994) are hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 25.

An examination of this report will show, like Report No. 1969, in the Forty-eighth Congress, that said committees adopted quite verbatim in the arguments which I had submitted in behalf of this measure, including as their exhibits thereto to both of said reports, the eight (8) tables of statistics in full, as compiled by me and as hereinbefore described.

In due course of proceedings this Senate Bill No. 994 was reached in the Senate calendar, to wit, on May 18, 1886, on which day certain proceedings were had thereon in the Senate, copy of which proceedings is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 26.

Anticipating that action on this measure would be had in the Senate on May 18, 1886, I was present in the Senate gallery, and noticing what had taken place in regard to this measure, I immediately thereafter sought an interview with Senator Allison, to know his reasons or grounds of objection, and learned from him that he thought this Senate Bill No. 994 proposed to revive, for California alone, the provisions of the old Military Bounty Land Warrant Five Per Cent Senate Bill No. 67, and as hereinbefore referred to, and if such was its intention and purpose, he said he desired to submit an amendment to this bill, and such as would include or cover the case of his State of Iowa; but I informed him that this Senate bill was confined exclusively to proceeds of the cash sales of public lands in California, and that its object was solely to place the State of California on the same plane as was at that very time enjoyed by his State of Iowa.

Senator Allison thereupon promised me to look into this Senate Bill No. 994 at his first leisure, and if he found it to be as I stated to him it was, that he would not further object thereto. Later other certain proceedings were had in the Senate on this same bill, to wit, on June 8, 1886, a copy of which is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 27.

I never was officially informed of the cause of this latter objection by Senator Plumb.

Thereafter, certain other proceedings were had, to wit, on June 19, 1886, copy of which is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 28.

As Senator Allison had not objected the second time to the consideration of this measure in the Senate, when Senate Bill No. 994 was called up from the Senate calendar, I requested the Hon. Barclay Henley to accompany me on another interview to see Senator Allison, and to ascertain his reasons for his said objection to the consideration of this measure; and he informed Mr. Henley and myself, that while he had no objection himself to this measure, on the contrary, he having duly considered the same, as he had promised to do, and that he favored this bill, yet as Senator Stanford was not present in the Senate on June 19, 1886, or in Washington City when this bill was called up, and as Senator Stanford had prior to his departure from Washington, expressed to him a desire to be present when this bill should be considered in the Senate, that out of respect to Senator Stanford's wishes so expressed, he therefore desired the measure to go over; only this and nothing more.

Thereafter other certain proceedings were had on this bill, on July 9, 1886, and a copy of which is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 29.

I subsequently learned that Senator Miller of New York, the last objector to this Senate Bill No. 994, had no special reasons for antagonizing the measure contained therein; but as the calendar on July 9, 1886, was being considered under the Senate's five-minute rule, he, thinking that the measure would lead to debate, preferred to have the measure "go over" rather than risk consuming time in its consideration.

And as on this occasion neither of the California Senators were present in the Senate, and as the session was drawing to a close, and as this last objection had the effect to carry this bill over in the list of "bills objected to" on the Senate calendar, which thereby and thereafter would require unanimous consent to call it up, unless that portion of the Senate calendar was under consideration, which it never was again during the session. I therefore determined, in view of all these premises, and to make one more last effort in the Forty-ninth Congress, and similar to that which I had made in the Forty-eighth Congress, to wit, through the Appropriation Committee, by having an amendment proposed to the Sundry Civil Appropriation Bill, and to secure this measure by a general amendment, and which, due to the absence of both the California Senators, I had submitted through Senator Mitchell of Oregon. Copy of this amendment is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 30.

The Appropriation Committee, however, considering this amendment as proposing new legislation so far as it would include California, deemed it not permissible under the rules of the Senate, and in consequence, it failed to be incorporated in that or in any other appropriation bill.

I thereupon abandoned all hope of securing action on this measure during the last stages of the first session of the Forty-ninth Congress, but only when it was drawing to a final close. As any favorable action that might have been secured in the Senate for this measure at the first session of the Forty-ninth Congress on this separate Senate Bill No. 994, would have failed to receive any recognition in the House, and because by legislative tactics now fully known to the country the House persistently refused to consider any matters on any of its several calendars for more than a month prior to its final adjournment, and for such reasons it failed to take up or consider Mr. Henley's Five Per Cent Bill, No. 164, which had been favorably reported upon by the House Public Lands Committee by the Hon. Barclay Henley, and which bill so stood on its calendar on the day of its final adjournment, I have prepared, and now append hereto and make a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 31, a statement of the total cash sales of all the public lands in California made by the United States up to June 30, 1885, showing also the annual simple interest thereof for each year to June 30, 1885, which interest the State has thus far lost, and now continues to lose, at the rate of $37,131 87 per annum.

This table shows that by the failure of prosecuting this claim prior hereto to a success, the State of California has lost, in simple interest alone, the sum of $424,030 74.

I have thus, step by step, reported to you fully the successive proceedings had by the United States upon this measure during the last eight (8) years since I have had charge thereof as agent and counsel in behalf of the State of California; and I state without any fear of successful contradiction that it has not been due to any fault or laches of mine that the proceeds of this claim have not been as yet placed in cash among the funds of the people of the State of California in their State Treasury.

In conclusion, I beg to report that I shall hereafter renew my efforts in behalf of this measure, knowing as I do, and that which you will readily perceive, that the main work in these premises has already been done by me; and which work in due time must, in my opinion, eventuate in giving California all proper benefits of this meritorious proposition, the proceeds arising therefrom to be expended for such purposes as the Legislature of California may hereafter wisely determine.

And all of which is now very respectfully submitted.

JOHN MULLAN,
Agent and Counsel for the State of California.

No. 2. CALIFORNIA DIRECT TAX CLAIM.

In my capacity as State Agent and Counsel for the State of Oregon, I was called upon, in 1881, by Hon. W. W. Thayer, the Governor thereof, to represent and defend the interests of that State in the matter of its protest against that certain action of the accounting officers of the United States Treasury Department, at Washington, District of Columbia, which consisted in their crediting upon the books of the Treasury Department the earnings of the State of Oregon arising from the five per cent of the net proceeds of the cash sales of the public lands therein, instead of paying the same from time to time over in cash to said State, as the same were earned, the said earnings having been used as a set-off to Oregon's quota of the direct tax levied under the Act of August 5, 1861, upon said State by the United States, in the sum of $35,140 66, and which quota the State of Oregon having assumed but failed to pay, had been treated by the United States as a debt still due the United States by said State.

In order to meet this Oregon case as it actually existed, it became necessary for me to carefully study the entire United States direct tax system, and all matters connected therewith; and also to ascertain the principle of set-offs as then and still in vogue as a practice by the accounting officers of the Treasury, to whom I presented such arguments against such practice in the Oregon case as to me seemed valid, but without any successful result.

Having exhausted all executive remedy in this matter, I found it absolutely necessary, therefore, to go to Congress for adequate relief in regard thereto.

It was thus while familiarizing myself with these matters that I discovered a peculiar condition of things relating to the direct tax quota that had been levied upon the State of California, which, somewhat like that of Oregon's direct tax case, might be and I thought could be bettered, and which I was willing to undertake to do if duly authorized. Thereupon I brought the entire matter to the attention of Hon. George C. Perkins as Governor of California, who, after maturely considering the same, conferred upon me, on December 12, 1882, his authority to represent the interests of the State of California therein, and in a commission, copy of which is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 1.

This matter was thereafter brought by Governor Perkins to the attention of the Legislature of California, in his last annual message to that body, copy of which reference has been heretofore appended, as my exhibit No. 19 to my five per cent report, and to which reference is now made.

The Legislature, having had the subject-matter under its consideration, duly ratified and confirmed my said appointment, and determined upon and fixed in a contract the compensation that I should receive in the premises if successful; and copy of which action has been heretofore appended as my Exhibit No. 21 to my five per cent report, and to which reference is now made.

Having authority, therefore, from the State of California to represent her interests in all matters that related to the adjustment of her quota of the direct tax of $20,000,000 levied on the several States under the Act of August 5, 1861, I proceeded at the first session of Congress that convened next after the date of my said appointment to bring this matter to the attention of Congress; and having at the same time full authority to represent similar interests of the States of Oregon and Nevada, I brought fully to the attention of their respective delegations in Congress all that was necessary to be known to them in these premises.

This subject seemed to me to divide itself naturally into two subdivisions:

First—To secure for each of said States a recognition of the principle that notwithstanding the expiration of the limitations of time named in the Act of August 5, 1861, which fixed June 30, 1862, and September 30, 1862, as the two dates prior to which, if payment of said tax was made, should entitle the States so paying the same to a rebate of a certain per cent, to wit, if paid prior to June 30, 1862, a rebate of fifteen per cent, or if not paid prior to June 30, 1862, but if paid prior to September 30, 1862, a rebate of ten per cent of the amounts so by them paid; and if paid after September 30, 1862, then no rebate was provided for in the statutes. Yet it seemed to me that if California, Oregon, and Nevada had paid or should pay their respective quotas of said direct tax even subsequent to September 30, 1862, and that without any expense whatsoever to the United States, that then and in that event each of said States should in equity be entitled to receive a rebate of full fifteen per cent on their respective payments, fifteen per cent having been estimated by the United States to be about the cost to the United States to be incurred to put its own Federal machinery in motion in the several States for the purpose of assessing, levying, and collecting said direct tax; so that an equity, in my judgment, could be invoked, if it could be shown that this tax had been eventually collected from said States without the United States incurring any expense whatsoever in the premises.

Second—That as an examination by me of the records in the Treasury Department had disclosed the fact that some of the States had paid their full quota of this direct tax, while others had paid only a portion thereof, and while still others had not paid any thereof, that an equitable adjustment of the whole matter of this direct tax could be found by Congress enacting a law by which there should be refunded to each State the amount of said direct tax that it had already paid, and to release each State from thereafter paying any portion thereof which had not been paid, but which was still due and payable, and for which unpaid balance such State was being treated as a delinquent debtor upon the books of the Treasury Department.

For the purpose of securing the first of these two propositions, in behalf of California, Oregon, and Nevada, I prepared appropriate bills accordingly; and at my request each of the same was duly introduced in the Senate and House, and as follows, to wit:

Senate Bill No. 511, by Honorable James H. Slater, December 10, 1883; for Oregon.

Senate Bill No. 665, by Honorable John P. Jones, December 13, 1883; for Nevada.

Senate Bill No. 810, by Honorable John F. Miller, December 19, 1883; for California.

And in the House, as follows, to wit:

House Bill No. 108, by Honorable Barclay Henley, December 10, 1883; for California.

House Bill No. 953, by Honorable George W. Cassidy, December 11, 1883; for Nevada.

House Bill No. 1310, by Honorable M. C. George, December 11, 1883; for Oregon.

Copies of which bills are hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibits 2, 3, 4. In support of said Senate bills, I prepared arguments and submitted same to the appropriate Senate committees to which the same had been referred for reports, and also to each of the Senators who had introduced same respectively, and a copy of which argument is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 5.

I also prepared an argument in support of said three House bills, and submitted same to the appropriate House committees to which the same had been referred for reports, and also to each of the members of the House who had introduced the same respectively; copy of which argument is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 6.

Finding that Senate Bills No. 511, for Oregon, and No. 655, for Nevada, had been referred to the Senate Committee on Claims, while Senate Bill No. 810, for California, had been referred to the Senate Committee on Finance, and having made, with the aid of the late Senator Miller of California, several ineffectual and unsuccessful efforts to secure a change of reference of said Senate Bill No. 810, for California, to the Senate Committee on Claims, from the Finance Committee, where I soon discovered that no favorable action would be had, but where it seemed to me unfavorable action was likely to arise, and desiring that Senator Miller should not be taxed with the responsibility of introducing two separate Senate bills, each having in view only one and having the same object, and to be referred to two different Senate committees, I therefore prepared a second bill, and which Senator Farley, at my request, introduced in the Senate on the ninth day of May, 1884, to wit, Senate Bill No. 2191, for this same object, copy of which is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 7.

This bill of Senator Farley was referred to the Senate Committee on Claims, my desire being to have one and the same committee report on all three of said bills.

These three bills, to wit, Senate Bills Nos. 511, 655, and 2191, were then referred to Senator Dolph for reports, and he, on May 14, 1884, submitted to the Senate his favorable report (No. 550) on each thereof, copy of which report is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 7 $\frac{1}{2}$.

By this time, and in view of my observations in seeing said Senate Bill No. 810 going to one committee and said Senate Bills Nos. 511 and 655 going to another and different committee, I concluded it would have been wiser in the first instance to have had only one bill in the Senate that would have included all the provisions contained in said three Senate bills; and only one bill in the House that would have included all the provisions contained in said three House bills; and so that all three should be considered at one and the same time by one and the same committee. With this object in view, I therefore prepared a separate House bill that would include all the provisions contained in said three House bills, to wit, H. R. No. 108 and No. 953, and No. 1310, and at my request the same was introduced in the House on twenty-eighth of April, 1884, by Hon. John R. Glascock, H. R. 6772, copy of which is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 7 $\frac{1}{2}$. I also suggested to Senator Dolph that when reporting back said three Senate bills that he would report one substitute for the whole, and in view of the character and merit of the subject of said bills and the lateness of the session rendering action on these bills as separate measures difficult, if not impossible, to secure an order of reference of his said report from the Senate Committee on Claims to the Senate Committee on Appropriations; and Senator Dolph, therefore, acquiescing in my suggestion, when submitting his said report, submitted one bill as a substitute for said three Senate bills, to wit, Nos. 511, 655, and 2191, and in this form, on the fourteenth day of May, 1884, he submitted the same to the Senate as an amendment to be proposed to the General Deficiency Appropriation Bill, and asked its reference to the Senate Committee on Appropriations, and a copy of which substitute and said amendment is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 8.

In this shape this measure to grant California, Oregon, and Nevada, respectively, fifteen per cent of their full quota of the direct tax, as levied upon them under the Act of August 5, 1861, passed the Senate, and thereafter went to the House for its action thereon. The House refused to concur therein, whereupon this bill was thereafter referred to a conference committee composed of three (3) members of the Senate and three (3) members of the House, and before which conference committee I appeared and renewed all the arguments in support thereof similar to those which I had hitherto submitted to the Senate and House committees, and finally said conference committee agreed to recommend to their respective houses the passage of said measure, and which recommendation having been concurred in, said bill passed both Senate and House, and became a law on the seventh day of July, 1884.

In the House, on the other hand, we could not secure not only any favorable action, but, on the contrary, the general subject of direct tax legislation developed various antagonisms, but none of which seemed to me to rest on any valid foundation; but these antagonisms, such as they were, were sufficient to prevent any final action thereon during the Forty-eighth Congress, other than herein stated. These antagonisms will be hereafter referred to by me when reporting upon the second branch of this direct tax subject.

This bill, granting California, Oregon, and Nevada a rebate of fifteen per cent on their full quota of this direct tax, having become a law on the seventh of July, 1884, I immediately thereafter requested the proper accounting officers of the Treasury to state an account in behalf of the State of California for the settlement of this claim. This statement was made on July 23, 1884, in Treasury Report No. 43,395, in the office of the Fifth Auditor, and confirmed by the First Comptroller of the Treasury on August 22, 1884; copy of all of which is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 9.

California's quota of this direct tax of $20,000,000, levied under the Act of August 5, 1861, was $254,538 67, and upon which she had paid in second quarter, 1862, as follows, to wit:

After September 30, 1862, to wit, on October 7, 1862, the sum of	$63,839 31
And during first quarter 1863.....	183,606 10
.....
Making a total payment only of	$247,445 41
Leaving unpaid and due on October 8, 1875, the sum of.....	7,093 26

In evidence whereof see letter of Hon. C. C. Fairchild, Acting Secretary of Treasury, dated July 14, 1886, inclosing the manuscript Certificate of Settlement No. 10,813, made seventeenth March, 1874, by Fifth Auditor, and confirmed eighth October, 1875, by the First Comptroller of the Treasury, and hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 10.

This sum of $7,093 26 due the United States by the State of California, and unpaid at the date of the said settlement made in said Report No. 10,813 (see manuscript certificate), by Fifth Auditor of the Treasury, March 17, 1874, and confirmed by First Comptroller October 8, 1875, had been on February 8, 1884, reduced to $6,597 54, by crediting California with the sum of $495 72 on account of the "Modoc Indian war claim" (and to which full reference will be by me hereafter made in my Report No. 3 on California's Modoc Indian war claim), and which reduction will fully appear from Settlement No. 39,283, made February 7, 1884, by the Fifth Auditor, and on February 8, 1884, confirmed by the First Comptroller of the Treasury, copy of which is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 11.

Therefore, on July 7, 1884, the date of the passage of this fifteen per cent rebate bill, the State of California was still indebted to the United States on account of the balance due on her quota of this direct tax, in the sum of $6,597 54, and as fully appears in said Settlement No. 43,395, and made by the Fifth Auditor on twenty-third July, 1884, and confirmed by the First Comptroller on twenty-second August, 1884, same being my Exhibit No. 9 herein.

In making this final settlement between the United States and the State of California, the first thing, therefore, done by the Fifth Auditor of the Treasury, was to credit the State of California with fifteen per cent of her whole quota of said direct tax, to wit, $254,538 67.

And which fifteen per cent thereof was and is.....	$38,180 80
And to thereafter deduct therefrom the amount of said balance of.....	6,597 54
Leaving due California by the United States a cash difference of.....	$31,583 26

And for which a draft upon the Sub-Treasurer in San Francisco, to the order of the Governor of California, was delivered to me by the Secretary of the Treasury, and which was by me delivered to the Governor of the State of California in August, 1884, and the proceeds whereof (less the commission due me, and as fixed by my contract with the Legislature on March 3, 1883) were duly paid by you into the State Treasury; and as fully appears in your message to the Legislature, dated January 5, 1885, extract from which covering this special reference is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 12.

In order that you may fully understand how, as late as October 8, 1875, the State of California became indebted to the United States in the sum of \$7,093 26 on account of her quota of said direct tax, I desire to report that the State of California having, under the Act of her Legislature approved April 12, 1862, assumed the responsibility of collecting and paying the whole of her quota of \$254,538 67 of the direct tax of \$20,000,000 levied by the United States under the Act of Congress, approved August 5, 1861 (U. S. Statutes, vol. 12, page 296), and having provided, as she did, all the necessary and proper State machinery for levying and collecting the same, that prior to September 30, 1862, there had been collected of this direct tax, and paid into the State Treasury of California in gold coin, the sum of \$70,932 56 $\frac{2}{3}$.

Hon. R. D. Ashley, then State Treasurer, and in possession of said \$70,932 56 $\frac{2}{3}$ in gold coin, converted the same into greenback currency, and prior to September 30, 1862, made a tender of such currency to the United States Sub-Treasurer at San Francisco, California, in part payment of California's quota of said direct tax. Said Sub-Treasurer, D. W. Cheeseman, Esq., knowing that this sum had been collected in gold coin, and not in currency, claimed that it should have been paid by Mr. Ashley into the United States Treasury in the gold coin in which it had been so collected. This Mr. Ashley declined to do, whereupon the question was referred to the honorable Secretary of the Treasury at Washington for decision, and that officer directed the Sub-Treasurer to receive the tax in currency, as it was so tendered.

But by the time this decision and order was received at San Francisco back from Washington, the thirtieth of September, 1862, had come and gone, and as this law authorized a rebate only in the event that an actual payment should be made on or prior to September 30, 1862, at the very latest, and as the money was not, as a matter of fact, actually paid over by Mr. Ashley to the United States until after September 30, 1862, to wit, on October 7, 1862, the United States refused to recognize the claim of the State of California to any rebate in the premises.

But Mr. Ashley, taking a different view, and asserting that the State of California was entitled, in his opinion, to a rebate at least of 10 per cent on said \$70,932 56 $\frac{2}{3}$, did himself deduct 10 per cent thereof, to wit, \$7,093 25 $\frac{2}{3}$, which he turned into the State Treasury, and the balance, to wit, \$63,839 31, he paid over to the United States as a first installment and in part payment of California's said direct tax quota. But the United States never recognized either this claim of rebate or this system of discount and of bookkeeping on the part of the State of California; but, on the contrary, the United States simply credited the State of California with the amounts of money which she had actually paid, to wit, said \$63,839 31, and subsequently, to wit, in 1863 (when the legal time within which any rebate could be claimed had fully expired, and that too without question), with a second payment of \$183,606 10, aggregating a total only of \$247,445 41, and the United States charged California with the amount she had not paid, to wit, \$7,093 26, and which charge ever remained upon the books of the Treasury as a debt against the State of California due the United States until it was liquidated by having been paid and canceled by deducting this debt of \$7,093 26 from the two credits which I had been enabled to secure and collect for the State of California, and in the manner hereinbefore fully stated, to wit :

First—By the California Modoc Indian war claim in the sum of.....	$495 72
Second—And so much of the fifteen per cent on $254,538 67 as was necessary to make up the balance of said debt of $7,093 26, to wit.....	6,597 54
Aggregating the sum of.....	$7,093 26

And as has been fully set forth in the settlements hereinbefore referred to, and filed as exhibits. The explanation made by Mr. Ashley in regard thereto, is hereto attached and made part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 13. From Mr. Ashley's own report you will therefore perceive that he made the effort to secure for California a rebate of ten per cent on a payment of \$70,932 56 $\frac{2}{3}$, stating that that sum was all that could possibly be recovered or saved to the State of California in this direct tax matter, but which claim the United States never allowed and never recognized, while it also fully appears herein that I made the effort to secure for California a rebate of fifteen per cent on the whole of her quota of \$254,538 67 of this direct tax, which I succeeded in recovering and collecting: and the same has already been paid into the State Treasury of California in the manner aforesaid, and all of which was had and done by me under the authority conferred by Hon. George C. Perkins, when Governor of California, and duly ratified by the Legislature of California on the third of March, 1883, and as hereinbefore fully set forth.

SECOND.

The second subdivision in the adjustment of this direct tax matter, as I viewed the same, consisted in securing such legislation by Congress as should enable the Secretary of the Treasury to refund to each State such portion of this direct tax as it had paid, and to relieve any State from paying such portion thereof as it had not paid.

In order to accomplish these results, I prepared two bills, one of which, to wit, Senate Bill No. 795, was, at my request, introduced in the Senate on the eighteenth of December, 1883, by the late Senator Hon. John F. Miller: and the other, to wit, H. R. No. 110, at my request, was introduced in the House on the tenth day of December, 1883, by Hon. Barclay Henley of California.

A somewhat similar bill, to wit, H. R. No. 6047, was introduced by Mr. Price, of Wisconsin, copies of which bills are hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibits No. 14 and No. 15, respectively.

In support of these two bills I prepared arguments, and submitted the same to the proper committees having charge thereof, to wit, the Finance Committee in the Senate and Claims Committee in the House, and gave the members of the California delegation duplicates thereof, copies of which are hereto attached and made part hereof, and marked Exhibits No. 16 and No. 17, respectively.

Said Senate Bill No. 795, at the request of Hon. W. E. Earle, State Agent for South Carolina, was referred to the honorable Secretary of the Treasury by Senator Hampton, of South Carolina; and said House Bill No. 110, at my request, was referred to the honorable First Comptroller of the Treasury by Hon. Barclay Henley of California, to secure the views of these two officers, who in due time submitted to Congress terse reports thereon, copies of which are hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibits No. 18 and No. 19, respectively.

The general subject-matter having thereafter been maturely considered in the House by its Committee on Claims, that committee, on the fourth day of February, 1885, made a majority favorable report, through Mr. Price of Wisconsin, to wit, Report No. 2486, Part 1, second session Forty-eighth Congress, and a minority report, Part 2, through Mr. Warner, copies of which are hereto attached, made parts hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 20.

It is due to the history of this case that I should here state that this direct tax matter having been referred to the House Committee on Claims, was by it referred to Hon. A. J. Warner, as a sub-committee to examine into and report thereon to the full committee. Thereafter I got Hon. Barclay Henley to accompany me several times to interview Hon. A. J. Warner on this bill, and I was soon convinced that he was not only not favorably disposed in the matter, but he finally had prepared an adverse report thereon, and which he finally submitted to his said committee and asked its adoption as the views of the majority of said committee. Discovering this fact, the friends of this measure were immediately interviewed, and the result was that Mr. Price of Wisconsin, a member of said committee and a warm friend of this measure, was selected by its friends to make a minority report, and to thereafter move its adoption as a substitute for Mr. Warner's majority report, all of which was done; whereupon Mr. Price's minority report was adopted and became the majority report of that committee, and Mr. Warner's report, which he had expected would be the majority report of said committee, instead thereof became the minority report, so that both reports and history of each are herewith submitted for your information.

But this majority report was made so late in the session—as Congress adjourned March 4, 1885—that favorable action thereon was a matter of legislative impossibility during the Forty-eighth Congress.

But sufficient, however, had already been done, by virtue of the foregoing showing, to disclose to Congress that to discriminate between those States that had assumed and paid their full quota of this direct tax, and those States that had neither assumed nor paid the same, or any portion thereof, was a distinction without a difference.

If Congress was vested with constitutional jurisdiction to levy and apportion said tax as made, then those States upon which it was levied were legally obligated to raise and pay the same, or failing so to do, then to submit to such legal penalties as were provided for in the Act of August 5, 1861, that directed the levy to be made, and not to do as Mr. Bennett of North Carolina desired to have done, to wit, to release the delinquent States from further paying up their quota of this tax, and, as provided for by him in a bill, to wit, H. R. No. 6713, by him introduced twenty-first April, 1884 (and without making any provision for those States that had already paid this tax) copy of which bill is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 21.

If, on the other hand, this direct tax was not constitutionally levied upon the several States, as States—as in some high quarters had been assumed and argued—then it seemed to me that fair dealing suggested that those States—like California, for instance—which had responded by paying promptly, and without questioning the constitutionality of the tax, or the regularity of the levy and collection, should now be refunded and reimbursed the several amounts they had so heretofore paid to the United States; and when this was done, then, in my judgment, it would be in order to release the delinquent States from further paying their delinquent debts, but not before.

While the foregoing proceedings were being had in the House, we were not successful in securing any direct action upon Senator Miller's Bill No. 795, in the Senate; but yet, by virtue of an effort to have Congress pay the State of Georgia the sum of $35,555 42, on account of an old revolutionary war claim, the attention of the Senate and of the country was called to this meritorious measure, and, as will appear in the manner following, to wit, on March 28, 1884, Senator Brown of Georgia, introduced Senate Bill No. 1948. A similar bill, to wit, H. R. No. 4703, was introduced in the House by Mr. Hammond of Georgia, on February 5, 1884, both having this object in view.

A somewhat similar bill, to wit, Senate Bill No. 595, had been introduced on December 11, 1883, by Senator Colquitt of Georgia, and a report (Senate No. 124) had been made thereon by Senator Hoar, on February 6, 1884, and which bill proposed to reimburse the State of Georgia the sum of $22,567 42, on account of expenses in that sum by her incurred on account of an old Indian war claim arising therein between 1795 and 1818, and which bill became a law, but the accounting officers of the Treasury, instead of paying over to Georgia in cash the sum thereby appropriated, simply credited that State with the amount thereof on the books of the Treasury, as a set-off against Georgia's quota of the direct tax then unpaid and delinquent, and as a payment pro tanto thereon, and hence the reason for the language used in Senator Brown's Georgia Bill, No. 1948, and Mr. Hammond's House Bill, No. 4703, which proposed to repeal, and annul, and vacate any law, or ruling, or decision of the accounting officers of the Treasury that had undertaken, or should undertake, to use the money so appropriated as a set-off to said direct tax then delinquent and due by Georgia to the United States, and copies of which Bills Nos. 1948, 4703, and 595, and Reports Nos. 124 and 752, are hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibits Nos. 22 and 23.

Apparently so fixed had the House Judiciary Committee of the Forty-eighth Congress become in its conviction that some remedy was needed to adjust by law a practice of set-offs that had grown up without law among the United States Treasury officials at Washington, that a general bill, to wit, H. R. No. 7082, therefor, was reported from the Judiciary Committee on the twentieth of May, 1884, by Mr. Hammond, as a substitute for H. R. No. 6867, together with a report thereon, to wit, House Report No. 1658, copies of which bill (H. R. No. 7082) and Report No. 1658 are hereto attached and made part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 24.

A favorable report, to wit, Senate Report No. 592, was also made by Senator Hoar on Senator Brown's Georgia Bill, No. 1948, on the twenty-eighth day of May, 1884, copy of which report is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 25.

It was during the discussion of Senator Brown's Georgia Bill, No. 1948, and of the Report No. 592 that was made thereon by Senator Hoar on the twenty-eighth of May, 1884, that the acrimonious but celebrated debate between Senator Brown of Georgia and Senator Ingalls of Kansas occurred in the Senate on the twelfth of June, 1884.

Prior to said discussion in the Senate, Senator Dolph of Oregon, believing with me that said Senate Bill, No. 1948, and said Senate Report No. 592 made thereon, secured a discrimination in favor of Georgia, which had not yet paid her quota of this direct tax, as against California and Oregon (among other States), that had paid the same, at my request submitted, on the twenty-eighth of May, 1884, an amendment to said Senate Bill, No. 1948, having for its object to place California and Oregon on the same plane as was then sought to be occupied by Georgia in said Senate Bill No. 1948; copy of which amendment is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 26.

The discussion of this Senate Bill No. 1948 and the report made thereon led to a motion to recommit the same back to the Claims Committee, that had reported thereon, and an aye and nay vote having been taken thereon, it was carried, by ayes twenty-one and nays seventeen; but immediately after the vote had been taken it was discovered, and the point was raised, that a quorum of the Senate had not voted; and upon motion of Senator Ingalls, therefore, the Senate adjourned; and as the Senate prior to this had agreed that when the Senate adjourned it should adjourn till Monday, the Senate thereupon adjourned till the following Monday, leaving this bill and the subject-matter to which it related as unfinished business.

This was on Thursday, June 12, 1884, and the Senate adjourned to the following Monday, June 16, 1884.

I had observed that this motion to recommit this Senate Georgia Bill No. 1948 was not accompanied with any instructions from the Senate, and it further occurred to me that this occasion was the opportune period at which the adjustment of this entire subject might be made general by substituting the provisions contained in Senator Miller's general bill, to wit, Senate Bill No. 795, for those contained in Senator Brown's special Georgia Bill No. 1948. I immediately laid my views before Hon. W. E. Earle, State Agent for South Carolina, who had ever cooperated with me in the premises, and whose State had overpaid this tax, and hence as her State Agent was as anxious as myself for a satisfactory adjustment of this whole subject. Therefore, during the interval, Mr. Earle and myself held several interviews with Senator Brown of Georgia and the late Senator Hon. John F. Miller of California, having this object in view, and which, at our joint request, finally resulted as follows, to wit: in open Senate, before any further vote should be had on Senator Brown's Georgia Bill No. 1948, that Senator Miller should offer his Senate Bill No. 795 as a substitute for Senator Brown's Georgia Bill No. 1948, and that Senator Brown would agree to accept the same. This agreement was fully carried out, and on the following Monday, to wit, June 16, 1884, Senator Miller, in open Senate, submitted, by way of an amendment, his said Senate Bill No. 795 as a substitute for Senator Brown's Georgia Bill No. 1948, and which was duly accepted by Senator Brown and ordered to be printed and lay on the table; copy of which amendment and substitute is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 27.

The first session of the forty-eighth Congress was now drawing to a close, and it adjourned without any further action on this measure, which stood on the calendar of the Senate in the form of unfinished business.

In view of what had then already taken place on said Senate Bill No. 795 and said House Bill No. 110, I deemed it proper and my duty to bring the same to the attention of the Legislature of California at its next session, to wit, in January, 1885; and for this purpose I submitted a report thereon to your office. Thereafter, the Legislature, having had the matter under its consideration, did, on the third of March, 1885, pass Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 26, copy of which is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 28.

Copies of this resolution having been forwarded to me by the honorable Secretary of State, under the seal of his office from Sacramento, were by me filed with the appropriate committee in both Senate and House, and given to the members of our California delegation in Congress.

A Presidential election having taken place when the short and last session of the Forty-eighth Congress convened, other matters seeming to engross the attention of that body, there was an evident disposition not to consider this measure. Surely the fact is that though every effort proper was made by me and other friends of this bill to secure consideration thereof, the Forty-eighth Congress finally adjourned without any definite action being had thereon in either the Senate or House other than hereinbefore stated.

In consequence thereof, when the Forty-ninth Congress convened, I renewed my efforts in this same direction, and with this object in view I prepared two bills, to wit: House Bill No. 164, and which, at my request, was introduced by Hon. Barclay Henley on twenty-first December, 1885; and also one substantially the same was introduced by Mr. Price of Wisconsin, on January 1, 1886, in H. R. No. 2776, in harmony with the Report No. 2486, which he had made on February 4, 1885, on this same subject from the Committee on Claims; and in consequence of the absence and illness, which ended in death, of Senator Miller of California, who had charge of this measure during the Forty-eighth Congress, as hereinbefore fully reported, at my request, Hon. Leland Stanford introduced the other of said bills in the Senate on the eleventh day of January, 1886, to wit, Senate Bill No. 995; copies of which bills are hereto attached and made parts hereof, and marked Exhibits No. 29, No. 30, and No. 31, respectively.

Senate Georgia Bill No. 1948, and House Bill No. 4703, having failed to receive in the Forty-eighth Congress any action in either the Senate or House, other than that hereinbefore described, were revived in the Forty-ninth Congress by the introduction by Senator Brown of Georgia, of Senate Bill No. 2457, which latter was favorably reported in Report No. 1138, by Senator George from the Judiciary Committee, on May 18, 1886; copy of which bill and report is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibits No. 32 and No. 33.

And by Mr. Hammond, by the introduction in the House of special bill, to wit, H. R. No. 1, and also by a general bill, to wit, H. R. No. 3, on December 19, 1885, and upon which bill, H. R. No. 3, a Report No. 35 was made from the Judiciary Committee, on the nineteenth day of January, 1886; copies of which bills and report are hereto attached and made parts hereof, and marked Exhibits No. 34 and No. 35 and No. 36, respectively.

The views contained in this House Report were antagonized by Mr. Earle and myself, and we were finally successful in securing a favorable minority report in the House on twenty-ninth January, 1886, on this direct tax matter, copy of which is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 37.

When this Georgia Bill H. R. No. 3, was, on February 8, 1886, reached in the House for consideration, Mr. William E. Earle and myself again submitted a statement in writing in regard thereto, copy of which is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 38.

Whereupon several friends of our view of this measure, to wit, Messrs. Price of Wisconsin; Taylor of Ohio, Culbertson of Texas, Ranney of Massachusetts; Hepburn of Iowa, and Little of Ohio, duly supported the same in arguments which will fully appear in Exhibit No. 39, hereto attached and made parts hereof.

In addition thereto, Mr. Price submitted his bill, No. 2776, as a substitute for said House Georgia bill, and Hon. John T. Little of Ohio, offered an amendment to Mr. Hammond's said Georgia bill, copy of which is hereto attached, and marked Exhibit No. 39½.

In addition thereto, by special appointment made therefor, the views of Mr. Earle and myself were, on April 20, 1886, laid before Hon. J. R. Eden of Illinois, Chairman of the sub-committee of the House Judiciary Committee having charge of this direct tax measure, in an oral argument; and with whom we submitted sundry written and printed statements on the night of April 20, 1886; and next day supplemented same with a written statement, copy whereof is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 40.

In the Senate, Mr. Earle and myself succeeded in having Senator Hampton (who had taken a great interest in Senator Miller's Senate Bill No. 795 of the Forty-eighth Congress, and who it was that wrote as aforesaid to Secretary Folger at Mr. Earle's request in regard thereto, which called out the Secretary's report thereon, and as hereinbefore filed as an Exhibit No. 18) introduce on May 24, 1886, a substitute for Senator Brown's said Georgia Bill No. 2457, copy of which substitute is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 41.

This substitute contained substantially all the matters contained in Senator Stanford's Senate Bill No. 995 and Hon. Barclay Henley's House Bill No. 164, heretofore filed as Exhibits Nos. 29 and 31.

In this connection we called Senator Hampton's attention to the fact that the report of the Senate Judiciary Committee on Senator Brown's Georgia Bill No. 2457 rested on a wrong theory, and because from an examination by me made of the laws of the States of Georgia and Texas I found that both Georgia and Texas had, as a matter of fact, assumed the payment of their quotas of this direct tax, and Georgia had, under an Act of her Legislature, authorized the issuance of interest-bearing bonds with which to pay her quota of this direct tax, and as will fully appear from copies of the laws of Georgia and Texas thereon, hereto attached and made parts hereof, and marked Exhibits No. 42 and No. 44, respectively.

On July 14, 1886, Senator Hampton, in support of his substitute for Senator Brown's Georgia Bill No. 2457, and which was substantially identical with the substitute which at my request had been offered in the Forty-eighth Congress by Senator Miller of California, as a substitute for Senator Brown's Georgia Bill No. 1948 in the Forty-eighth Congress, submitted an argument in support of this substitute, copy of which is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 44.

As the accounts between the several States and the United States arising under the settlements had on this direct tax, were constantly changing, and thereby the status of each, in relation to this direct tax matter, at the end of every settlement was different from what it had been theretofore reported to be, and as this was particularly true in the case of the State of California, which then owed nothing to the United States, and as a considerable time had elapsed since Congress had been officially supplied with authentic data in regard to the exact amount of debt then due the United States by any of the States which had been reported as delinquent in the payment of their respective quotas thereof, I deemed it wise, whenever this measure should be next under consideration, that its friends in Congress should be in possession of the very latest facts in regard thereto; whereupon I prepared a resolution of inquiry, which, at my request, was introduced in the House by the Hon. Barclay Henley, in order to secure this information, copy of which resolution is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 45.

This resolution having been considered and modified by the appropriate committee, was transmitted to the honorable Secretary of the Treasury, who, on March 31, 1886, made a reply thereto, as set forth in House Executive Document No. 158, first session, Forty-ninth Congress (copy of which is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 46), and which gives the latest published official information on this important matter.

While Senator Dolph of Oregon was willing, in the Forty-eighth Congress, to submit, and did submit, an amendment in the Senate to Senator Brown's Georgia Bill No. 1948, by which if at that time Georgia was to secure her $35,555 42 in cash, that Oregon, under his said amendment, would also receive in cash her $35,140 67, and as set forth in said amendment (copy of which has been heretofore attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 26), yet he was not so confident that the proposition contained in Senator Hampton's said substitute exactly suited the views or interests of the people of the State of Oregon, thinking, as he stated to me, "that while Oregon, under Senator Hampton's amendment, would secure in cash her $35,140 67 that she already had paid as her quota of this direct tax, yet he also thought that in the end the people of Oregon would be taxed to raise a sum larger than said $35,140 67. In other words, that he thought that Oregon, in the event of Senator Hampton's substitute becoming a law, would have to pay out more money than the people of Oregon would get back."

Learning, therefore, that Senator Dolph was liable to antagonize Senator Hampton's said substitute whenever it should be considered by the Senate, and deeming it my duty, as agent and counsel herein for the State of California, to answer in a proper manner, and at all proper times and places, all antagonisms to this general measure, as contained in said Senate Bill No. 995 of Senator Stanford, and in said H. R. No. 164, as introduced by Hon. Barclay Henley, whenever and wherever the same could be properly done, I, as late as July 20, 1886, having had several interviews with Senator Dolph thereon, submitted to him for his consideration an argument in support of the views by me hereinbefore expressed, and directed especially against his impression thereon, then taking shape and form, and copy of which argument is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 47.

Though every proper effort was made by me to have this measure considered in both the Senate and House during the first session of the Forty-ninth Congress, yet there never seemed to me or to any other friends thereof to be that opportunity when either body had the time sufficient, or the inclination towards the favorable consideration of this measure, to take up and maturely weigh the same, and, therefore, the first session of the Forty-ninth Congress adjourned with this measure on the calendars of both Houses in an unfinished condition, and in the manner hereinbefore more fully set forth.

I have thus, step by step, given you the history of this measure, beginning with the Forty-eighth Congress (before which date it had never before been considered in either House of Congress, and when considered in the Forty-eighth Congress, the same was had and done solely through my agency), and ending at the first session of the Forty-ninth Congress.

I make this report, thus detailed and specific, in order that you and the people of California may fully know all that has been done in regard to this particular claim; and in order that a full account of my stewardship and agency in these premises may become a matter of official record in connection therewith, and for future reference.

In conclusion, I beg to report to you that I shall hereafter renew my efforts in behalf of this measure, knowing, as I do, that the main work in the premises has already been done by me, and which work, in due time, must, in my opinion, eventuate in giving California all the proper benefits of this meritorious proposition, the proceeds arising therefrom to be expended for such purpose as the Legislature of California may hereafter wisely determine.

All of which is now very respectfully submitted.

JOHN MULLAN,
Agent and Counsel for the State of California.

No. 3. MODOC INDIAN WAR CLAIM.

In my capacity as State Agent and Counsel for the State of Oregon, I was called upon, in 1881, by Hon. R. P. Earhart, Secretary of State thereof, to represent and prosecute the interests of that State in the matter of its claim against the United States, on account of certain expenses by it incurred for the suppression of Indian hostilities on its southern border, during the Modoc Indian war, in 1872, 1873, and 1874. I discovered that the State of California, and certain of its citizens residing in Siskiyou and Modoc Counties therein, had also incurred sundry expenses in this same Modoc Indian war, NO CLAIM for the payment of which had ever been urged by the State of California or by her citizens against the United States; and which claims, though small in amounts, were in my judgment valid, and such as I thought I could secure if properly so authorized. Knowing, as I did then, and do now, that no claim can be prosecuted or urged before the Treasury Department except by a party in propria persona, or by another acting therein under a written letter of authority or power of attorney, I therefore brought the entire matter to the attention of Hon. George C. Perkins, Governor of California, who, after maturely considering the same, on March 7, 1882, conferred upon me his authority to represent the interests of the State of California and her people therein, and in a commission, copy of which is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 1.

This matter was thereafter brought by Governor Perkins to the attention of the Legislature of California in his last annual message to that body; copy of which reference has been heretofore appended as my Exhibit No. 19 to my "five per cent report" herein, and to which reference is now made.

The Legislature of California having had the subject-matter under its consideration, duly ratified and confirmed my said appointment, and determined upon and fixed in a contract the compensation that I should receive in these premises if successful, copy of which action has been heretofore appended as my Exhibit No. 21 to my "five per cent report" herein, and to which reference is now made.

Having authority, therefore, from the State of California to thus represent all matters that related to the adjustment of its interests in these premises, I prepared a suitable bill to cover this claim, which, at my request, the late Senator, Honorable John F. Miller, on seventeenth March, 1882, introduced in the Senate, to wit, Senate Bill No. 1502. I therefore prepared an argument in support of said bill, and presented same to the Committee on Military Affairs, to which said bill had been referred for examination and report, and on twenty-second March, 1882, a favorable report, to wit, Senate Report No. 306, was made thereon by Senator Harrison. Copies of which bill and report are hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 2.

I also prepared a similar bill for this same purpose, which, at my request, was, on the thirteenth day of February, 1882, introduced in the House by Hon. C. P. Berry, to wit, H. R. No. 4244, a copy of which is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 3.

Senate Bill No. 145, limited as it was exclusively to Oregon in order to provide for its Modoc Indian war claim, had theretofore been prepared, and at my request had been introduced in the Senate on the sixth day of December, 1881, by Senator Grover of Oregon, and which had been favorably reported upon on February 2, 1882, in Senate Report No. 114, copies of which bill and report are hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 4.

At the date when this Oregon Senate Bill No. 145 had been introduced and reported upon in the Senate, it did not occur to me to suggest to Senator Miller that when said Oregon's Senate Bill No. 145 should be considered in the Senate to amend same by incorporating therein a provision for California's Modoc Indian war claim.

The said two bills, to wit, Senate Nos. 145 and 1502, were therefore called up and considered and acted upon as two separate measures, and both of said two bills passed the Senate on March 27, 1882, but as two separate and independent measures.

When said two bills reached the House they were both referred to the House Committee on Military Affairs, before which Committee I appeared as counsel and agent for both of said separate bills Nos. 145 and 1502, and suggested to said committee that these two bills might be appropriately considered together by being consolidated, and which could be done by adding to said Senate Bill No. 145, which then consisted of only one section, a second section, that should cover the provisions contained in said California Senate Bill No. 1502, and all of which was done; and thus amended by the House, said Senate Bill No. 145 was favorably recommended to the House, where it passed, and was returned to the Senate for its concurrence, which it secured, and also passed and became a law on the sixth day of January, 1883 (U. S. Statutes, vol. 22, page 399), a copy of which is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 5.

This bill, authorizing the proper accounting officers of the Treasury to adjust the accounts of the State of California against the United States arising in California during the Modoc Indian war of 1872 and 1873, having thus become a law. I thereupon requested the statement of an account by the proper accounting officers of the Treasury, in behalf of the State of California, for the settlement of this claim.

The statement was thereupon duly made by the Third Auditor of the Treasury, copy of which is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 6, and shows that the United States was indebted to the State of California on account of sundry claims arising in said Modoc Indian war in the sum of $495 72.

But this sum of $495 72, instead of being paid over in cash to the State of California, was credited to her upon the books of the United States Treasury Department by the proper accounting officers thereof, and used as a set-off and a payment, pro tanto, by the State of California to the United States on account of the sum of $7,093 26, said sum being a debt then due the United States by the State of California on account of a balance arising in the settlement of the direct tax accounts between the United States and the State of California, and all of which fully appears in Settlement No. 39,283, made by the Fifth Auditor on February 7, 1884, believing, as they substantially stated, that all indebtedness arising under said Act of April 25, 1857, had been amply provided for and fully adjusted and confirmed by the First Comptroller of the Treasury on February 8, 1884, and as appended as my Exhibit No. 11, to my report in the direct tax claim hereinbefore made, and to which reference is now made.

While the State of California did not receive the payment of this claim in cash, yet she did receive full credit therefor on account of a debt unpaid, and then due by her to the United States, and as herein fully set forth, so that the matter was as broad as it was long, in so far as California's financial relation with the United States was concerned; but I beg to report that the total sum claimed by the State of California, as due her as a State by the United States, was allowed, appropriated, and paid, by giving her a credit for the full amount thereof; and which adjustment, so made, thus finally terminated this particular claim, collected by me under the authority conferred by Honorable George C. Perkins, as Governor of California, and duly ratified by the Legislature of California, on the third day of March, 1883, as aforesaid.

It may be information to you to know that Congress, also, at that same time, by virtue of my efforts therein exercised in their behalf, under this same authority conferred upon me by Governor Perkins and the Legislature of California, made ample provision for the reimbursement of the payment of certain specific claims of sundry citizens, then living in Modoc and Siskiyou Counties, in California, and aggregating a total sum of $3,945 61, which sum, together with said $495 72, made a total aggregate of $4,441 33, as named in said law.

Some of these allowances so provided for have been already paid to the citizens of California entitled thereto, while others remain still unpaid, but all of which will be paid by the United States whenever the beneficiaries of that legislation, if living, or their heirs if dead, shall duly present their claims and make their identity legally known to the proper accounting officers of the Treasury, at Washington City.

And all of which is now very respectfully submitted.

JOHN MULLAN,
Agent and Counsel for the State of California.

No. 4. CALIFORNIA INDIAN WAR CLAIMS.

The examinations which I had made, and especially those made in 1881 and 1882, in connection with the Modoc Indian war claims arising in California and Oregon, in 1872 and 1873, brought me in contact with the general subject-matter of other California Indian and other war claims, some of which, by the United States, had been settled in full, some settled only in part, and some not settled at all. I had already had a limited experience before the California Legislature in 1872, 1874, and 1876, as attorney in behalf of the holders of certain California Indian war bonds and coupons, theretofore issued by her in payment of certain expenses that had been incurred therein, on account of Indian hostilities, and sufficient to convince me that the State of California—improperly, as I thought then, and think now—was in no mood to either pay or to recognize said claims.

Believing, therefore, in 1882, that the true, if not the only remedy of the State of California, and that left to those of her citizens who still held any valid evidences of these unpaid debts growing out of Indian and other hostilities in the State of California, and upon the borders thereof, lay in presenting the same fully and intelligently before the proper United States authorities at Washington City, I, in June, 1882, duly brought this entire subject-matter to the official attention of her then Governor, Hon. George C. Perkins, who, after having maturely considered the same, authorized me to represent the interests of the State of California in all these premises; and in a commission, copy of which is hereto annexed and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 1, and which appointment so made, the Legislature of California, by its action had thereon third March, 1883, duly validated, ratified, and confirmed, and did therein fix the compensation that I should receive in these premises if successful; and, as will fully appear in copy of said action, and which has been heretofore filed by me as my Exhibit No. 21, in my report on the five per cent claim, and to all of which reference is now made.

No one, in my opinion, knew better than Governor George C. Perkins of the many efforts that had been made prior to 1882 to secure recognition, adjustment, and full payment of all these old Californian Indian war claims; and he also knew that most of the efforts that had theretofore been made in regard thereto, and for the adjustment thereof, either before the Legislature of California or before the United States authorities, had resulted in signal failures; and he also knew, as every intelligent man must know, that the longer any settlement looking towards the payment of these old claims was delayed, that the chances for success therein would diminish, and grow more and more doubtful year by year, and probably in the end fail in toto.

Governor Perkins, when a State Senator from Butte County in the Legislature of the State of California in 1872 (and before which Legislature and its proper committees I had appeared as attorney to represent certain claimants holding certain valid evidences of this old California Indian war debt, then and now unpaid and due said holders by the State of California), was made the Chairman of a joint committee of the Senate and House that had been created by the Legislature of that year to examine into and report upon the general subject of the California Indian war indebtedness as the same existed in 1872.

This joint committee made their full report to the Legislature on the twenty-first of February, 1872, copy of which report is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 2.

A bill in harmony with, and to carry out the recommendations contained in this report, was thereupon framed, and which bill passed the California Senate in 1872, but failed to pass the California Assembly. Thereafter other strenuous efforts made at the meetings of subsequent Legislatures to secure favorable action on this subject-matter had also all proved equally abortive and equally barren in favorable results.

I do not know, in fact, of any one subject-matter that has ever been brought so constantly, or pressed so frequently or so vigorously before the attention of the Legislature of California, or for so long a period of time—for this has been done certainly from 1852 to 1878—as this one subject of the indebtedness created by the State of California growing out of its Indian hostilities in early years, and as a reference to the messages of the several Governors of California will attest, and as the various resolutions passed by her Legislature, and reports of her State officers, will fully confirm. Extracts from some of these messages, and resolutions, and reports, are hereto attached and made parts hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 3.

A perusal of these last exhibits will serve to show, in part at least, the very unsatisfactory condition of the several branches of this claim of the State of California against the United States at the date when I took charge of these California Indian war claims. It appears that California, when not paying sundry of these claims in cash, as she did, made ample provision for their ultimate payment by the issuance of interest-bearing bonds, and which were paid to individual claimants in full satisfaction of their claims against the State of California, and as provided for in the Acts of her Legislature approved February 15, 1851, May 3, 1852, and also by the issuance of certain non-interest bearing bonds, as provided for in the Act of the Legislature approved April 25, 1857, and in Acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto.

Up to this date there are still afloat in the hands of bona fide holders and of the officers of the State of California (which last, though paid by the State of California, have not yet been paid by the United States), claims aggregating several thousands of dollars arising under each of the aforesaid Acts of February 15, 1851, May 3, 1852, and April 25, 1857.

Strange as it may appear, yet the fact is, that while the aforesaid joint committee of the Legislature of 1872 had been appointed to report upon the full history and total amount of all the then unpaid and outstanding indebtedness arising on account of Indian hostilities in California and upon the borders thereof, yet that joint committee, so well composed as it was, with the Hon. George C. Perkins as its Chairman, made no reference whatsoever to any of the indebtedness which was then outstanding and unpaid, and which arose under the Act of the Legislature approved April 25, 1857, and Acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto, but, on the contrary, confined their said report exclusively to so much of said outstanding and unpaid indebtedness as arose under the Acts of January 15, 1851, and May 3, 1852, only, and not otherwise.

In view of the fact that, as my labors in the past have been, and those in the future will be, directed to matters arising under all of said Acts, so too my report therefore will include a proper reference to all proceedings had under each and all thereof, as well as to those arising under such other and different special Acts and resolutions of the Legislature of California as have taken place therein between September 9, 1850, and the first of November, 1886, the date of this report.

In my efforts in 1881, as State Agent and Counsel for the States of Oregon and Nevada, it became necessary for me to secure for them appropriate legislation by means of which they could be reimbursed for the expenses by them incurred, respectively, on account of the war of the rebellion, and which legislation had been made necessary by virtue of the provision contained in Section No. 3489 of the United States Revised Statutes, and which is as follows, to wit:

SECTION 3489. No claims against the United States for collecting, drilling, or organizing volunteers for the war of the rebellion shall be audited or paid unless presented before the thirtieth day of June, eighteen hundred and seventy-four. No claims for horses lost prior to the first day of January, eighteen hundred and seventy-two, shall be audited or paid unless presented before the thirtieth day of June, eighteen hundred and seventy-four.

The States of Oregon and Nevada had permitted the thirtieth of June, 1874, to come and go without having presented to or filed with the proper United States authorities at Washington, D. C., under the Act of Congress approved July 27, 1861, any claim against the United States for the expenditure of money by them incurred during the war of the rebellion (United States Statutes, volume 12, page 276). At my request, therefore, and in view of the provisions of said Section No. 3489 of the United States Revised Statutes, on December 12, 1881, Senator Grover of Oregon introduced in the Senate, Senate Joint Resolution No. 10 for Oregon, and on December 13, 1881, Senator Fair of Nevada, also introduced Senate Joint Resolution No. 13 for Nevada, and both of which joint resolutions were referred to the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, of which Senator Grover was then a member, and he, on May 12, 1882, reported back to the Senate a bill, to wit, Senate Bill No. 1673, as a substitute for both of said two resolutions, and which bill had for its object, among other things, to provide for the examination, audit, and report to Congress of the expenses of said two States arising therein between fifteenth April, 1861, and date of the passage thereof, copy of which Bill No. 1673 and of his Report No. 575, made thereon May 12, 1882, is hereby attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibits No. 4 and No. 5.

Having discovered that the State of California was in no better or different position in regard to her rebellion war claims than the States of Oregon and Nevada, I, therefore, brought the same to the attention of the late Senator, Hon. John F. Miller of California, and who, on June 8, 1882, submitted an amendment to Senator Grover's said Senate Bill No. 1673, so as to include California. Other amendments having been made in the Senate to this Senate Bill No. 1673, and such as should include the States of Colorado and Nebraska, said bill passed the Senate on the eighth day of June, 1882, and went to the House, where it was still further amended so as to include the State of Kansas, and so amended, it passed the House on June 20, 1882, and went back to the Senate, where upon the motion of Senator Maxey of Texas, said House amendments were concurred in on the same date, June 20, 1882, and said Senate Bill No. 1673 became a law by the approval of the President on June 27, 1882; copy of which law is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 6.

This law was broad enough to cover not only certain Indian war claims of California, Oregon, and Nevada, but also those arising in each thereof during the late war of the rebellion, and under this law I have heretofore filed the rebellion war claims and Indian war claims for the States of Oregon and Nevada, and certain Indian war claims and also the rebellion war claims of the State of California (but as to the latter, California's rebellion war claims, a full reference and report thereon will hereinafter appear in a separate paper).

In order to present to the United States authorities in proper form, all the evidences of all the expenses that had been incurred by the State of California on account of the Indian hostilities that had occurred therein, and for which provision had been made by the passage of this Act of June 27, 1882, it has been necessary for me to make annually a trip from Washington City to Sacramento, California, from 1882 to 1886, inclusive, and to there remain several weeks each time, in studying into the history of the legislation that has been heretofore had in regard to this subject by the State of California; and in examining into many thousands of papers and various records and books in the offices of the Governor, Controller, Treasurer, Secretary of State, and Adjutant-General: also to have made certified copies of such books, records, and other archives, which originals could not be spared from said offices, or being not of the classes I had been authorized by the Legislature to receipt for and use when pressing said claims before the United States authorities, and such as were, in my judgment, necessary to have daily at hand in my office at Washington, for an intelligent presentation of these claims to said United States authorities.

These certified copies of said books, records, archives, and sundry papers have all been paid for at my own expense, aggregating quite a large sum, and made without any cost whatsoever to the State of California, and because the terms of the contract made with me by the Legislature of California provided that, whereas my fee was to be entirely contingent and to be paid only in the event of my success, that the State of California under no circumstances should incur any expenses of any kind on account of this or of any of these other several claims; so that if the State of California in the end failed to secure any recognition and payment for any of these several claims, she would not be at any expense in the premises, and all of which expense devolved upon me to meet and pay, and all of which I have done.

The examinations by me made into these several claims soon disclosed the fact that said Act of Congress, approved June 27, 1882, while ample to meet California's rebellion claims, was not adequate to meet fully all her Indian war claims, and because outside of the claims for the war of the rebellion, most of the war claims in California had arisen prior to fifteenth April, 1861, and for those Indian war claims arising prior to fifteenth April, 1861, said Act failed to make any provision, as said Act, by its own terms, was declared by the United States authorities to be limited exclusively to those claims that had arisen in California subsequently, and not prior to fifteenth April, 1861.

This condition of things I thereupon made known to your office by appropriate reports, whereupon you conferred upon me your authority to represent among other things, such of these California claims as might not have been covered by or included in any prior appointment (copy of said authority is hereto appended and marked Exhibit No. 7), and which appointment so made, the Legislature of California, on the third of March, 1885, duly validated, ratified, and confirmed in Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 3, copy of which is hereto appended and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 8.

In order, therefore, to meet this new condition of things, I prepared an appropriate resolution, and presented the same to Hon. W. S. Rosecrans, then in Congress from California, who, at my request, introduced the same in the House of Representatives on the twenty-fifth day of February, 1884, and which was referred to the House Committee on Military Affairs, and of which he was then Chairman. I thereafter prepared an argument in support of said resolution, and submitted the same to the House Committee on Military Affairs, whereupon the matter was favorably reported upon from said committee on March 18, 1884, copy of which resolution and Report No. 807, made thereon, are hereto attached and made part hereof, and marked respectively Exhibits Nos. 9 and 10.

The phraseology of said resolution was slightly changed by said committee, and for reasons set forth in a letter to me from General W. S. Rosecrans, of January 21, 1885, original of which is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 11.

An examination of said Report No. 807 will show that said committee fully used my said argument as their appendix "B" in support of said resolution.

While urging this view of the case, I also prepared sundry other separate and independent bills to meet these same California Indian war claims, and at my request the same were duly introduced in the House and Senate, and as follows, to wit:

H. R. No. 50, by Hon. W. S. Rosecrans, December 10, 1883.
 H. R. No. 69, by Hon. W. S. Rosecrans, December 10, 1883.
 H. R. No. 6099, by Hon. Barclay Henley, March 24, 1884.
 H. R. No. 6669, by Hon. Barclay Henley, April 21, 1884.
 H. R. No. 7975, by Hon. Barclay Henley, January 19, 1885.
 H. R. No. 8149, by Hon. Barclay Henley, February 2, 1885.
 Senate Bill No. 809, by Hon. John F. Miller, December 19, 1883.
 Senate Bill No. 811, by Hon. John F. Miller, December 19, 1883.
 Senate Bill No. 1917, by Hon. John F. Miller, March 24, 1884.
 Senate Bill No. 1970, by Hon. John F. Miller, April 1, 1884.

Copies of which are hereto appended and made parts hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 11 $\frac{1}{2}$.

In support of these sundry bills, I prepared and filed with the appropriate committees in both Senate and House, and the California delegation in Congress, sundry arguments, copies of which are hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 12.

Notwithstanding frequent and often importunate efforts on my part to secure action on some of the bills in the House, and particularly by the House Committee on War Claims, to which most of the same had been referred, and though Mr. Tully of California was a member of the House War Claims Committee, I was unable during the whole of the Forty-eighth Congress to even get said bills considered. It is true, certain days were fixed by said committee at which it was agreed to hear me in an oral argument thereon, but when such days arrived said committee could not and did not muster a quorum of its members; and the consequence was that our California Indian war claims, no adequate provision of law then existing, went by the board, unacted on and unconsidered during the whole of the Forty-eighth Congress.

In this dilemma, I made the effort to secure a recognition of at least a portion thereof, by an appropriate amendment therefor to one of the appropriation bills; and with this object in view, I prepared an amendment, supported by proper correspondence, and which, at my request, was introduced by Hon. Barclay Henley, and duly submitted to the House Committee on appropriations, copy of which is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 13. But this effort bore no good fruit.

In the Senate the aforesaid Senate bills fared no better fate. Senator Miller's Senate Bill No. 809 was referred to Senate Committee on Military Affairs, and after sundry correspondence between that committee and the War Department that bill was unfavorably reported upon, and as will fully appear in Senate Miscellaneous Document No. 40, and Senate Report No. 158, first session Forty-eighth Congress, copies of which are hereto attached and made a part hereof, marked Exhibit No. 14.

The impossibility of holding such bills in the Senate after adverse action had been had thereon, is fully set forth in a letter to me by the late Senator Hon. John F. Miller, dated April 2, 1884, original of which is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 15.

Not set back by this unfavorable action, I prepared appropriate amendments to be proposed to the appropriation bills then pending in the Senate, and at my request the same were presented by Hon. Senators Farley and Miller, copies of which are hereto appended and made parts hereof, and marked Exhibits No. 16 and No. 17, respectively.

Prior to this date and in order to fortify myself with all official statistics needed in order to show to Congress just exactly the true history thereof, Hon. James T. Farley and Hon. C. P. Berry, of California, and Hon. James

H. Slater of Oregon, at my special request, made sundry calls upon the Treasury Department in regard thereto, and copies of the correspondence had thereon are hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 18, same being:

1. Letter of Hon. C. P. Berry to Third Auditor, of December 23, 1882.
2. Reply of Third Auditor thereto, of January 3, 1883.
3. Letter of Hon. Secretary of Treasury, January 8, 1883, with a statement of Third Auditor, of January 8, 1883.
4. Letter of Hon. Secretary of the Treasury to Hon. James T. Farley, of January 15, 1881, with letter of Third Auditor, of January 11, 1881.
5. Letter of Third Auditor to Hon. James A. Slater, January 24, 1883.

While the foregoing was being done in Congress, I also made two separate and distinct efforts before the Treasury Department to secure recognition of at least a portion of these claims, and duly submitted the same to the Third Auditor of the Treasury, even under existing laws; and with this object in view I filed with that officer classified abstracts of said claims, and supported same by vouchers in tabulated form and in large bound volumes, copies of which abstracts are too large to now appear herein as exhibits in this report, but which I now file in your office, and call them my Exhibit No. 19 to this report.

The results of the action had thereon by the Third Auditor is set forth in his letters to me of the eighteenth August, 1885, and November 23, 1885, copies of which are hereto attached and made parts hereof, and marked Exhibits No. 20 and No. 21, respectively.

In order to throw official light upon a portion of these claims, and in order that the Senators and Representatives in Congress from California should coöperate with the State authorities in securing such legislation by Congress as should secure their favorable recognition, and ultimately the final payment, the Legislature of California, on March 30, 1878, adopted Assembly Joint Resolution No. 73, and under which the late Hon. W. B. C. Brown, on May 27, 1878, as Controller of the State of California, submitted to Hon. Wm. Irwin, then Governor of California, an official report upon these California Indian war claims, copy of which is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 22.

It will be observed that the late Controller Brown limited his reports to such claims and outstanding and unpaid indebtedness as had arisen under the Acts of February 15, 1851, and May 3, 1852; his report being as a matter of fact more silent than that of said joint committee upon such claims as had arisen under the Act of April 25, 1857, and Acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto. An impression in 1872 and in 1878, and even up to the time I took hold of these claims, seems to have existed, that all indebtedness arising under said Act of April 25, 1857, and Acts supplemental thereto and amendatory thereof, had been all fully adjusted, which is not a fact.

Having thus exhausted every proper effort for both an executive and legislative remedy in these premises during the Forty-eighth Congress, I thereupon, to wit, on January 20, 1885, submitted to you a report in writing, accompanied with a printed statement that related exclusively to the cases that then existed under the aforesaid Acts of February 15, 1851, and May 3, 1852, reserving to myself the intention and duty to report to you at a subsequent date and in another report such claims as had arisen under other Acts of the Legislature of California.

As many of the matters by me presented to you in my said report are important to be known in connection herewith, I now append hereto a copy of said report and make the same a part hereof, and mark it Exhibit No. 22.

When the Forty-ninth Congress convened I renewed my efforts in behalf of these same measures and in the manner following, to wit:

I prepared, and at my request they were introduced in the House of Representatives, as follows, to wit:

H. R. No. 153, December 21, 1885, by Hon. Barclay Henley of California.

H. R. No. 155, December 21, 1885, by Hon. Barclay Henley of California.

H. R. No. 5566, February 16, 1886, by Hon. Barclay Henley of California.

H. R. No. 8732, May 10, 1886, by Hon. Barclay Henley of California.

H. R. No. 8149, February 2, 1885, by Hon. Barclay Henley of California.

Copies of which are hereto appended and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 23.

In support of these bills I appeared before the House Committee on War Claims, by appointment granted me therefor, and submitted to said committee an oral argument, and on February 22, 1886, I further submitted a special argument in writing in support of said H. R. No. 5566, copy of which is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 24.

Whereupon said War Claim Committee, on twenty-third March, 1886, submitted to the House a favorable report, to wit: House Report No. 1298 on said bill, H. R. No. 5596, a copy of which bill as amended by said committee, and of its Report No. 1298 made thereon, are hereto appended and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 25.

It will be observed by the reading of said report, that said War Claims Committee recommended that California be granted nearly all that I had claimed in her behalf; the principal exception being that of interest on the principal she had borrowed or expended in these premises, and as I was then engaged in endeavoring to secure for California such interest as she had actually paid out on all of her war claim expenditures, and in a separate and independent bill (a report upon all of which will hereinafter more fully appear), I deemed it wise not to antagonize that particular recommendation of the War Claims Committee, but to await the proper time, and then meet the same whenever said separate bill for interest should be under consideration in either the Senate or in the House, and in the meanwhile to accept this action of the War Claims Committee, which at that time seemed to me to be the very best that I could secure at its hands.

While thus engaged in securing from Congress by appropriate and separate bills the most favorable report possible in behalf of these measures, I framed sundry letters of inquiry, which, at my solicitation, the Hon. Barclay Henley addressed to the proper officers of the Treasury Department, replies to which, under date of March 20, 1886, from Third Auditor, and June 22, and July 2, 1886, from the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, are hereto attached and made parts hereto, and marked Exhibit No. 26.

Having thus secured a favorable report on the aforesaid H. R. No. 5566, and having also, and that too in an official form, been put in possession of such authentic information regarding some of these claims as might be appropriately used by the House Committee on Appropriations if it were disposed to use the same, I thereupon framed sundry communications of request, which, at my solicitation, the Hon. Barclay Henley addressed to the Hon. Samuel I. Randall, Chairman of said committee, the intention thereof being to secure, by a proper amendment to the appropriation bills, provision to cover some of these claims, copies of which communications are hereto appended and made parts hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 26½.

Failing to secure by this proceeding at the hands of said committee in the House that favorable recognition of these measures which I thought they were then justly entitled to receive, I thereafter renewed the same by similar efforts in the Senate, where, at my request, Senator Stanford, on sixth of April, 1886, submitted to the Senate Indian Appropriation Bill H. R. No. 5543, an amendment having this same object in view, copy of which is hereto appended and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 27.

At my request also, Senator Hearst submitted to the Deficiency Appropriation Bill H. R. No. 9726, an amendment also having this same object in view, copy of which amendment, together with a printed statement prepared by me in support of said amendment so proposed by Senator Hearst, is hereto appended and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 28.

These efforts of mine in the Senate proved to be as barren of favorable results as had attended my similar efforts in the House, so that the first session of the Forty-ninth Congress adjourned, leaving the legislation prepared and proposed to adjust these claims, and in the manner herein outlined, in an unfinished state. Progress, however, more than had ever before been made in regard thereto had been secured, and because the provisions contained in H. R. No. 5566 vests in the proper United States authorities power to examine, and audit, and pay all Indian war claims arising in the State of California and upon the borders thereof (including the redemption of certain California Indian war bonds), between September 9, 1850—date of the admission of California in the Union—to April 15, 1861, on which last named date the Act of June 27, 1882, would take up the remainder of such claims, to wit. those arising between April 15, 1861, and June 27, 1882, so that by these two Acts, taken jointly, California would have ample authority of law under and by which to have in time duly examined and audited and paid all claims arising therein and upon the borders thereof between September 9, 1850, and June 27, 1882, and whether the same included Indian war claims or claims arising during the war of the rebellion, and which she has heretofore paid.

In addition to the foregoing, and in order that the State of California should be fully reimbursed for expenses by her incurred for the payment of certain Indian depredation claims, and in order that her citizens also might be fully reimbursed for expenses and losses of property by them incurred on account of various Indian depredations in California, and for which, as the several exhibits submitted herewith fully show, the Legislature has so often besought Congress to enact adequate legislation, in order that same be paid, and all of which efforts had up to this time proved fruitless, I prepared three bills, which at my request were introduced in the House of Representatives by Hon. Barclay Henley of California, to wit. H. R. No. 5209, on February 8, 1886, and H. R. No. 8080, and H. R. No. 8082, on April 19, 1886. Similar bills were also at my request introduced in the Senate by Senator Dolph of Oregon, and supported by an argument, the statistics of which were prepared by my associates, Messrs. Charles and William B. King, and myself.

After various efforts to secure action on these House bills by the House Committee on Indian Affairs, to which the same were referred, that committee granted Messrs. King and myself several audiences, where and when we submitted sundry oral arguments. That committee favorably reported a substitute for all of said bills and sundry others, all relating to the same subject, to wit. H. R. 9729, on the thirtieth June, 1886, with a favorable report, to wit, House Report No. 3117. Copies of all of which are hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 29.

No action was taken on this measure in the Senate. It is therefore my high privilege to be enabled to report to you, that for the first time in the history of Congressional legislation has any committee of either the House of Representatives or of the Senate ever recommended the passage by Congress of a general bill to meet and pay for losses sustained on account of Indian depredations throughout the United States.

My own judgment ever has been, and now is, that the only proper way to secure relief for the State of California, and for those of her citizens who have sustained losses in this class of cases, was, not by a special, but by a general bill, and for this reason, in this case, and in sundry other claims in which California had an interest in common with the other States, I thought the proper proceeding to be had was by general legislation.

In conclusion, I beg to report to you that I feel quite confident that in due time all California Indian war claims will receive full attention at the hands of the proper United States authorities, and wherefore I shall hereafter renew my efforts in behalf of these several measures, knowing, as I do, that the main work in these premises has already been done by me, and which work, in due time, must, in my opinion, eventuate in giving the State of California all proper benefits of these equitable claims, when the proceeds arising therefrom can be expended for such purposes as the Legislature of California may hereafter wisely determine.

All of which is now very respectfully submitted.

JOHN MULLAN,

Agent and Counsel for the State of California.

No. 5. REBELLION WAR CLAIMS.

My examination into the general subject-matter of the rebellion war claims of the States of Oregon and Nevada, whose agent and counsel I for several years last past have been and still am, brought me naturally in contact with similar matters arising in the State of California.

Prior to November 27, 1879, not knowing that any appointment had been made by any officer, or by the Legislature of the State of California, to represent these California rebellion claims, I wrote to Hon. William Irwin in relation thereto, and in reply he told me he would consult with the Attorney-General (then Hon. Jo Hamilton) in regard thereto.

A long time elapsing, and not hearing further from either Governor Irwin or from Attorney-General Hamilton in regard thereto, on November 27, 1879, I wrote to Hon. James A. Johnson, then Lieutenant-Governor of California, and requested him to see Attorney-General Hamilton in my behalf in regard thereto. To this letter Hon. James A. Johnson replied on December 2, 1879, in a letter, original of which is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 1.

Following up the information contained in said letter, I had knowledge for the first time that the Legislature of California had, on March 1, 1872, by Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 36 (California Statutes 1871-1872, page 958), made provision for the presentation to the proper United States authorities at Washington of its rebellion war claims; and by it I also learned, that though seven years had come and gone, there had not been any presentation of said claims, or anything done in regard to same up to twenty-sixth February, 1881, when the Legislature of California passed a second, to wit, Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 12, in regard thereto (California Statutes 1881, page 100), copies of which resolutions and of the action had thereunder by Hon. Newton Booth and Hon. George C. Perkins, when Governors of California, are hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 2.

Thereafter the provisions of Section No. 3489, United States Revised Statutes, came to my knowledge, and wherein it was provided as follows, to wit:

Section No. 3489. No claims against the United States for collecting, drilling, or organizing volunteers for the war of the rebellion, shall be audited or paid unless presented before the thirtieth day of June, eighteen hundred and seventy-four. No claims for horses lost prior to the first day of January, eighteen hundred and seventy-two, shall be audited or paid unless presented before the thirtieth day of June, eighteen hundred and seventy-four.

In view of the matters therein contained, I brought this subject-matter to the attention of the late Senator, Hon. John F. Miller, and who, to remedy this matter, in so far as California was concerned, moved, at my request, to amend Senator Grover's Oregon and Nevada Rebellion Claim Bill No. 1673, as hereinbefore reported, by inserting "California," so that by the passage of the Act of Congress of June 27, 1882, there was enacted ample provision of law by which all of California's rebellion war claims could thereafter be examined, audited, and reported by the proper accounting officers of the United States Treasury to Congress for final payment.

After the passage of said Act of Congress of June 27, 1882, under arrangements made between Hon. James E. Hale and Thomas M. Nosler and myself, I was placed in possession of all the papers, vouchers, and documents and evidences in support of portions of these claims, which for ten (10) years had laid in Washington City boxed up, unacted on, unclassified, and unexamined for any purpose whatsoever.

Finding these claims in much confusion, and that many thereof were missing and many links of valid evidence needed to properly support the same for presentation to the United States authorities, and there being no evidence of payment filed with any thereof, and because the Controller's original warrants drawn in payment thereof, and upon which in nearly all cases are indorsed a proper receipt, were not filed with any of these claims, I thereupon called upon State Treasurer January to surrender to me such of these original warrants issued in payment of these claims as, having been paid and canceled, were then on file in his office.

The chief value of these paid and canceled warrants at that time was that they constituted original evidence to the United States of payment by the State, and should have been surrendered by the State of California as so many sub-vouchers to support her claim for reimbursement by the United States.

Mr. January, however, declined to accede to my request, and refused to surrender to me or to my duly authorized agent any of said paid and canceled warrants for such public use.

In the preparation, classification, and abstracting of and placing with each the exact evidence that pertained thereto, I had to proceed, therefore, without such original warrants, and until such time as the Legislature should next meet, and when its authority for the delivery to me of all such original warrants, and of any other original papers that I might need in the proper presentation of these claims would be invoked.

This matter was therefore brought to the attention of the Legislature that convened in January, 1885, and that body, after fully considering the same, did among other things, duly authorize the surrender to me of all said original warrants; and as will fully appear from copy of its action had in regard thereto on March 3, 1885, and which has been heretofore filed as my Exhibit No. 8, in my report on "California Indian War Claims," and to all of which reference is now made.

These warrants were subsequently got together, boxed, and sent by express to me, at Washington City, at my expense. Each warrant was thereafter duly placed with the particular claim to which it belonged, and in payment of which it had been issued by the Controller of the State of California. The work of the proper classification, and abstracting, etc., of all the evidences in support of this rebellion claim—involving, as it did, the handling and rehandling and careful examination of over 100,000 papers—has had my attention, with the aid of never less than three and sometimes that of five clerks, continually for the four years last past. I therefore now have the honor to report to you that, on the eighteenth day of September, 1886, I duly filed all the papers, vouchers, warrants, and other evidences in support of the rebellion war claims of the State of California with the honorable Secretary of the Treasury, whose duty it is also made under said Act of June 27, 1882, to examine and report upon the whole thereof. (See copy of letter to the Secretary of the Treasury for September 18, 1886, and of affidavit therein referred to, and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 9.)

These papers occupy eight large packing boxes; the abstracts thereof alone comprise bound volumes, and which abstracts have been by me prepared on heavy sheets of paper, eighteen inches by twenty-three inches, and strongly and neatly bound in separate volumes; and all this, too, has been done at my own expense.

Duplicates of these several abstracts in twenty-one bound volumes, one each for Abstracts A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H, K, L, M, N, O, and three of P, and five of Q, have also been made by me, and all of which I now submit you herewith, and which volumes will constitute a permanent record in the proper State office in evidence of at least a part of the work that has been done by me in regard to these claims, and which, possibly, may prove of some value as books of reference whenever any matter in regard to any of these claims shall hereafter arise.

No injury whatsoever has occurred to the State of California by virtue of any delay while these papers were in my custody for examination and proper preparation prior to filing the same with the proper United States authorities, and because even had they been filed prior to the date when they were actually filed by me, no action whatsoever would have been had thereon, and because similar rebellion war claims, that over two years ago had been filed by me for the States of Oregon and Nevada, lay unacted upon in the War Department; and because of the allegation by Hon. Robert T. Lincoln, Secretary of War, that the aforesaid Act of June 27, 1882, under which said Oregon and Nevada claims were to be examined, imposed upon the War Office new and additional duties, without at the same time placing at his disposal new or additional force for this examination, and that he wanted Congress to appropriate the sum of $25,000 to aid him to do his work, and in its annual estimates in 1884 and 1886 the War Department made a call for this $25,000 for said purpose.

Learning, therefore, the cause of the non-action in the War Department on these claims, I called the matter to the attention of Senator Dolph, of Oregon, who, on February 19, 1885, submitted an amendment to the Sundry Civil Appropriation Bill, to appropriate said $25,000 for this purpose, but this amendment failed to secure any favorable action in the Senate.

I also, on February 16, 1885, brought this matter to the attention of Hon. O. Welborn of Texas, in a communication, copies of which are hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 2½.

Nothing having been done in these premises during the Forty-eighth Congress, the matter was by me called to the attention of Senator Maxey of Texas, who, as a member of the Committee on Military Affairs when the said Act of June 27, 1882, became a law, had taken much interest therein, and because of the fact that Texas was one of the States named in the said Act of June 27, 1882, and he had an interview with the Secretary of War, Mr. Endicott; whereupon the Secretary of War, on January 27, 1886, wrote Senator Maxey a letter, a copy of which is hereto appended and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 3; whereupon Senator Maxey, on the twenty-ninth of January, 1886, introduced in the Senate a bill to meet this special want, to wit, Senate Bill No. 1284, copy of which is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 4.

No action having been taken on this separate Bill No. 1284 of Senator Maxey, and, appreciating as I did (probably even more than any other one person, for I now represented three of the States named in said Act of June 27, 1882, to wit, California, Oregon, and Nevada, that were then and are now interested in this proposed legislation) the importance of getting some early action by the War Department in these premises, I again brought this matter to the attention of Senator Maxey, who at my request, on the first day of July, 1886, introduced an amendment to the Sundry Civil Appropriation Bill (H. R. No. 9478) to appropriate said $25,000, copy of which is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 5.

The Senate Committee on Appropriations would not recommend an appropriation for this particular sum, but did recommend an appropriation for this purpose of $7,500, but which sum was, on July 24, 1886, upon the motion of Senator Allison of Iowa, increased to $10,000.

When this particular amendment was reached in the Senate, on July 24, 1886, a long and acrimonious debate was had thereon, so much so that even said appropriation of $10,000 came very near being lost, and as will fully appear from copy of said proceedings had thereon in the Senate, on the twenty-fourth of July, 1886, hereto appended and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 6.

Having discovered in the examination of these claims that certain original evidence in a part thereof was wanting, and all of which in my judgment was necessary for the War Department to have and in order to validly support the same, and after diligent search made by me in Sacramento, aided by Controller John P. Dunn, and his assistant, J. M. O'Reilly, of the Controller's office, and by General George Cosby and his son, and by his assistant, Colonel Tobin, and by two State Treasurers and their assistants, and by the Secretary of State, and having failed to find the missing links of that evidence which was so necessary to have in my judgment, I deemed it proper to secure the passage of a law by Congress, whereby we could use such secondary evidence as might be available in these premises, and a bill for this purpose was therefore prepared by me, and at my request was introduced in the Senate, on December 13, 1883, by Senator Jones of Nevada, and favorably reported upon on January 13, 1885, by Senator Dolph, but which bill failed to pass, copies of which bill, No. 656, and report thereon, No. 984, are hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 6½.

Wherefore I renewed my efforts in the same direction in the Forty-ninth Congress, and at my request Senator Dolph of Oregon, on December 8, 1885, introduced in the Senate, Senate Bill No. 71, and which was favorably reported upon in the Senate on February 3, 1886, and favorably reported upon February 17, 1886, in the House, in House Report No. 572, and became a law on the fourth of August, 1886. Copies of which bill and of said law are hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 7.

You therefore have in the foregoing synopsis, a history of a portion of my efforts, covering a long period of time and accompanied with much labor of myself and of my assistants, all of whose services, together with the expenses necessarily incident to the preparation in proper form of these claims, have been all met, and all paid for exclusively at my own expense.

Immediately after the adjournment of Congress, to wit, on the eighteenth of September, 1886, I requested the honorable Secretary of War, in writing, to create the Board of three army officers which the aforesaid law vested in him authority to do, and which Board was ordered on October 6, 1886, to be convened, and as will appear from copy of the War Department Order No. 282 issued therein, and now hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 8.

When said Board shall have examined and considered the claims of the State of California, the results of their examination from time to time I have no doubt will be submitted to me, and my further action thereon will depend upon the character of their examination by said Board, and a report on all of which will thereafter be submitted by me to your office for its information, and that of the Legislature of California, and of such other parties as may be interested therein.

All of which is now very respectfully submitted.

JOHN MULLAN,
Agent and Attorney for the State of California.

No. 6. CLAIM OF INTEREST EARNED BY THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA ON WAR CLAIMS.

My examination into the subject-matter of the several war claims of the States of California, Oregon, and Nevada disclosed the fact that said States had in some instances been compelled to borrow money with which to pay cash for some of these claims, and to pay interest on the sums so borrowed and so paid out on account of said claims, while in other instances they had issued interest-bearing bonds.

It therefore appeared to me that if these States had a valid claim against the United States for the reimbursement to them of the principal which they had respectively expended in the payment of those expenses which constituted a proper charge against the United States, that these same States also had an equally valid claim against the United States for the reimbursement to them by the United States of such interest as they had paid out when compelled to go into the money markets of the country to borrow money with which to pay said claims.

This proposition appeared to me to be both logical and equitable, and while it was true that Congress, when legislating on July 27, 1861, to reimburse the several States of the Union for such expenses as by them had been incurred during the war of the rebellion, had not made any provision for the payment of interest on the principal therein provided for in the event any State had to borrow said principal, and had not made any provision for the payment of interest in any of its other special acts that related to any one of these three States where said States had paid interest, yet it appeared to me that it was in all respects proper for me to endeavor to secure the enactment of a law by Congress by which this claim, which existed only in equity, should be recognized by law.

For this purpose I framed two special bills limited in their provisions to California, Oregon, and Nevada, one of which, to wit, Senate Bill No. 320, at my request the late Senator Hon. John F. Miller introduced in the Senate on fifth of December, 1883, copy of which is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 1, and the other, to wit, H. R. No. 109, was also at my request introduced in the House on tenth December, 1883, by Hon. Barclay Henley, copy of which is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 2.

These two bills, it will be perceived, covered interest for two classes of claims:

First—"Interest upon loans or money borrowed and actually expended by them for the use and benefit of the United States during the late war for suppressing insurrection and rebellion.

Second—Interest upon loans or money borrowed and actually expended by them for the use and benefit of the United States on account of Indian hostilities in said States and Territories.

After these two bills had been introduced in the Forty-eighth Congress, I soon discovered that while there were a number of Eastern members in that Congress who seemed willing to reimburse California, Oregon, and Nevada for interest they had paid out on account of the war of the "rebellion," yet these same men were not equally willing to reimburse these same States for interest where the same had been by them paid out on account of "Indian hostilities." In view thereof, and having maturely considered this subject from many points of view, and desiring as I did to secure favorable action upon both of these propositions, and to avoid having these bills, as presented, being amended by leaving intact one and striking out the other of said two provisions, and thereby jeopardize in the future the success of the one so stricken out, I deemed it best to proceed in two separate bills, the one to be limited to interest paid out on account of the rebellion war claims, and the other on account of Indian war hostilities, and in order that this measure for the payment of interest should have a general support, I deemed it wise to make both of said bills general by applying to all States and Territories alike.

I therefore prepared for this purpose two separate and independent bills, one of which at my request, to wit, H. R. No. 2930, was on January 8, 1884, introduced in the House, limited to Indian hostilities, and a similar bill, to wit, H. R. No. 2463, on the same day, limited to the war of the rebellion, was at my suggestion introduced, and both referred to the House Committee on War Claims, copies of which are hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibits Nos. 3 and 4.

In support of these several bills I prepared, and had printed at my own expense, appropriate arguments, and submitted the same to said Committee on War Claims, copies of which are hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibits No. 5 and No. 5½.

At the same time I prepared, and had printed and submitted to each of the members of the delegations from California, Oregon, and Nevada, and of said committee, a circular letter, a copy of which is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 6.

This War Claims Committee, having maturely considered the subject-matter, did, on April 1, 1884, make a favorable report thereon, to wit, Report No. 1102, copy of which is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 7.

For reasons before stated, I thought it equally wise to proceed in the Senate by separate bills, but deemed it prudent not to have any action taken in the Senate until after the House had acted thereon. As soon as the House War Claims Committee made its said report on April 1, 1884, partly at my suggestion, a bill, to wit, Senate Bill No. 2000 (similar in all respects to H. R. No. 2364) was introduced in the Senate on April 5, 1884, and referred to the Senate Committee on Claims, and which committee, on May 28, 1884, favorably reported said Senate Bill No. 2000 in its Senate Report No. 590, copies of which bill and report are hereto appended and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 8.

In view of what had then already taken place on said Senate Bill No. 2000, and said House Bill No. 2364, I deemed it proper and my duty to bring the same to the attention of the Legislature of California at its next session, to wit, in January, 1885, and for this purpose I submitted a report thereon to your office.

Thereafter the Legislature, having had the matter under its consideration, did, on fifth of March, 1885, pass Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 25, copy of which is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 8½.

Copies of this resolution having been forwarded to me by the honorable Secretary of State, under the seal of his office, from Sacramento, were by me filed with the appropriate committees in both Senate and House, and given to the members of our California delegation in Congress.

The subject-matter of this interest claim of the State of California, I had prior thereto made known to your office, by appropriate reports, whereupon you thereafter conferred upon me your authority to represent it among other claims; copy of your said authority has been heretofore appended, as my Exhibit No. 7, in my report on "California Indian War Claims," and to which reference is now made, and all of which appointments so made, the Legislature of California, on third March, 1885, duly validated, ratified, and confirmed, in Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 3, copy of which has been heretofore appended as my Exhibit No. 8, in my report on "California Indian War Claims," and to which reference is now made.

Though every proper effort was made by me and by other friends of this measure to secure consideration of these bills and reports during the Forty-eighth Congress, that Congress adjourned without even considering the same; but both bills stood on the calendars of both the Senate and House on the day of the sine die adjournment of the Forty-eighth Congress with favorable reports.

When the Forty-ninth Congress convened I renewed my efforts in behalf of this same measure and in the manner following, to wit: I prepared three bills, and at my request the same were introduced, as follows, to wit, H. R. No. 163, by Hon. Barclay Henley, December 21, 1885, a general bill for interest on account of "Indian hostilities," and H. R. No. 152, by Hon. Barclay Henley, December 21, 1885, and Senate Bill No. 59, by General Cullom, December 8, 1885, general bills for interest on account of the "War of the Rebellion." Copies of which are hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 9.

Said Senate Bill No. 59 was favorably reported upon on sixteenth December, 1885, by Senator Hoar, in Senate Report No. 2, copy of which is hereto attached and made part thereof, and marked Exhibit No. 10. And the Senate favorably recognized the principles contained in said bills by reiterating the same thereafter during the first session of the Forty-ninth Congress in its Senate Report No. 183, made by Senator Hampton on March 3, 1886, in the "Florida case." Copy of which is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 11.

The position of the House of Representatives during the first session of the Forty-ninth Congress on this subject-matter of interest, was rather anomalous, and because while the House Committee on War Claims reported said House Bill No. 152 unfavorably, and as will appear from copy of their said report thereon, to wit, House Report No. 560, made April 6, 1886, by Mr. Perry of South Carolina, copy of which is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 12. The House Committee on Claims, in this same Congress, on four different occasions recognized the obligation of Congress to pay interest on similar claims, and they so recommended in four different reports from said committee, as follows, to wit:

First—In its House Report No. 303, made February 3, 1886, by Mr. Dougherty, in the Florida case.

Second—In its House Report No. 518, made February 13, 1886, by Mr. Shaw, in the case of the States of Maryland and Virginia.

Third—In its House Report No. 519, made February 13, 1886, by Mr. Trigg, in the case of the City of Baltimore, and the States of Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, and South Carolina.

Fourth—In its House Report No. 3126, made June 30, 1886, by Mr. Gallinger, in the case of the First National Bank of Newton, Massachusetts.

Copies of which are hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 13.

It will be observed that this House Report No. 1560 nowhere meets the question of equity presented in said Interest Bill H. R. No. 152, as introduced by Hon. Barclay Henley. All there is of the report is: "That the rule of adjustment of the Treasury Department officials in regard to interest was correct." No one disputed that proposition then, and no one disputes it now. The accounting officers of the Treasury have to adjust all accounts according to the laws as they actually exist, and Congress not having enacted any law allowing interest to States for expenses of wars, such as California has heretofore incurred, the Treasury officials of course could not state an account for interest.

But the object of said H. R. No. 152 was not to declare that the accounting officers of the Treasury were right or wrong, and that was not the question before the War Claims Committee; but the question that was actually before them was, as to whether it was not equitable to refund or make to all the States payment for interest where the States had to pay interest, and this Report No. 1560 dodges that question, and which was the only one before the War Claims Committee. A perusal of this report shows that the matters therein contained did not express the unanimous sentiment of even that committee, which is full of facts, authorities, and precedents, and wherein the prior action of that same War Claims Committee of the Forty-eighth Congress was not only referred to, but Mr. Rowell's report, No. 1102, made on H. R. No. 2463, in the Forty-eighth Congress, was bodily incorporated in said minority report.

Not only this, but even the action of the House Claims Committee of the first session of the Forty-ninth Congress, as by me hereinbefore referred to, was also favorably cited in said minority report.

When the Senate reached the aforesaid Senate Bill No. 59, it was considering its calendar under its five-minute rule, and as a bill of this magnitude could not be considered under any rule that limited debate to five minutes, this Senate Bill No. 59, under objection under said rule, "went over," and was never thereafter considered by the Senate; but when the Senate adjourned sine die this bill stood at the head of the Senate calendar.

For reasons hereinbefore stated on other of these claims, the House adjourned its first session without considering either this measure as an independent proposition, or even any of the other bills in which said House Reports Nos. 303, 518, 519, and 3126 had been made, and in which this measure of interest had been favorably recommended.

In conclusion, I beg to report to you that I feel quite confident that in due time interest on all California's war claims will receive full attention at the hands of the proper United States authorities, and wherefore I shall hereafter renew my efforts in behalf of this measure, knowing, as I do, that the main work in these premises has already been done by me; and which work in due time must, in my opinion, eventuate in giving the State of California all proper benefits of this equitable claim, the proceeds arising from which can be expended for such purposes as the Legislature of California may hereafter wisely determine.

All of which is now very respectfully submitted.

JOHN MULLAN,
Agent and Counsel for the State of California.

No. 7. REFUNDING CALIFORNIA SUCH MONEYS AS SHE HAS HERETOFORE PAID AS FEES ON SELECTIONS OF AGRICULTURAL LANDS THAT HAVE BEEN CANCELED BY THE UNITED STATES;

AND

PAYING CALIFORNIA MONEYS THE UNITED STATES HAD RECEIVED FROM SALES, OR BY VIRTUE OF AN ESTIMATED VALUE OF LANDS WHICH HAVE BEEN OTHERWISE DISPOSED OF, BUT WHICH LANDS WERE GRANTED OR CONFIRMED TO HER AS SWAMP AND OVERFLOWED LANDS BY CONGRESS.

My practice in land cases arising before the Interior Department at Washington, D. C., brought to my knowledge some time ago that the State of California having, or should have, paid fees at the rate of $2 for selections of one hundred and sixty acres each, of lands in part satisfaction of sundry grants of agricultural lands heretofore made to her by Congress; and which selections having been not only not confirmed, but which for cause pronounced by the United States to be valid, in sundry cases had been canceled by the General Land Office: and it occurred to me that if a proper examination of the whole thereof should be made, it would clearly appear to what extent the United States had received money paid as fees by the State of California for such selections as had been so canceled. It also came to my knowledge that the United States had in some cases sold, and in other cases had otherwise disposed of sundry tracts of land, which in my opinion clearly were not the property of the United States to either sell or otherwise dispose of, and because I thought the same inured to the State of California under her swamp land grant of September 28, 1850 (U. S. Statutes, vol. IX, page 519), or under her confirmatory grant of July 23, 1866 (U. S. Statutes, vol. XIV, page 218).

Thereupon I brought these matters to the attention of the State Surveyor-General, Hon. H. I. Willey, who conferred upon me his authority to represent the same in behalf of the State of California. Copies of my authority in these premises are hereto attached and made a part hereof, and marked as Exhibit No. 1.

This matter of fees having been brought to the attention of the Legislature of California, that body, after maturely considering the same, on March 3, 1885, duly acted thereon, as appears from copy thereof, filed as my Exhibit No. 8, in my report on "Indian War Claims," and to which reference is now made.

Armed, therefore, with this authority to represent the interests of the State of California in these premises, I thereupon proceeded to make a detailed examination of all the entries of these selections of lands heretofore made by the State of California, and which had been canceled as aforesaid, in order to segregate such of these selections which had been canceled from those which had not been canceled (numbering in all as they do, a total aggregate of several thousand throughout the whole State—now subdivided into ten (10) United States Land Districts). It has been, and will in the future continue to be, necessary for me to carefully examine the one hundred and twenty-five volumes of tract books in which these entries have been posted and now recorded; and has been and will become also necessary for me to carefully examine into over two thousand monthly and quarterly reports of the several Registers, and particularly of the money returns of the Receivers of Public Money in California, in order to ascertain just what fees these officers have reported as having been by them received from the State of California on account of said selections of lands.

Under a rule laid down by the General Land Office in these cases, it has been made requisite that I should make up the claims of the State of California against the United States, in each particular instance of cancellation, by giving:

First—The number of the State selection that has been canceled.

Second—The character of the land grant under which said selection was made.

Third—The description of the land so selected.

Fourth—The land district in which was situate the lands so selected.

Fifth—The date when such selections were made.

Sixth—The date when the fees on such selections were paid.

Seventh—The amount of the fees so paid on such selection.

Eighth—The name of the officer receiving said fees for said selection.

Ninth—The date when such selections were canceled.

And all of which, where not heretofore done, will have to be done by me before the United States will undertake any examination in order to verify the accuracy of the claim so made, or before it will state an account for any sums that such an examination may disclose to be due the State of California by the United States on account thereof.

The foregoing requirements involve much time, care, and careful analytical examination of numerous records and papers, and is a class of work which cannot be made continuous, because many of these records are in daily use, and as it involves many months of labor, it is impossible for any one to confine himself exclusively to same.

In view thereof, my labors in this class of cases are not yet completed, so that I am unable as yet to report to you what sums are liable to be derived from this particular source. It is proper, however, that I should report to you that, whereas the United States now believe that the State of California is now indebted to them, in a sum now unascertained on account of sundry valid selections of lands upon which the fees as required by law have not heretofore been paid by the State of California, that I am liable to be confronted with a proposition on the part of the United States, that instead of paying over to the State of California in cash any particular sum which the results of my examinations may disclose to be due the State of California by the United States herein, that the United States may deem it its duty to set-off such sum as a credit to such other sums as the United States may find to be due by the State of California on account of fees not heretofore by her paid, but which are still due the United States on account of other valid selections of lands which have been heretofore made by the State of California and allowed, or to be allowed, and confirmed, or to be confirmed, to her by the United States.

In regard to the second branch of this case, to wit, paying California those moneys which the United States have either received from cash sales, or due from an estimated value of those otherwise disposed of, and which lands were not the property of the United States to dispose of at the date of such disposal, but which lands were then the property of the State of California, and because the same were either originally granted by Congress to California in her Swamp Land Act of September 28, 1850, or which were confirmed to her on July 23, 1866, in the "Act to quiet land titles in California," and a claim to which the State of California has not heretofore asserted, or which claim thereto, if asserted, has been heretofore unsuccessfully maintained, or been declared against her.

I beg to report to you that I prepared a general bill to reach the remedy sought for this purpose, which at my request was, on January 11, 1886, introduced by the Hon. Barclay Henley, and referred to the House Committee on Public Lands, to wit, H. R. No. 3222, copy of which is hereto attached and made a part thereof, and marked Exhibit No. 2, and which I supported with an appropriate argument before said House Public Lands Committee. This, and other bills having a somewhat similar object in view for other States, having been duly considered by that committee on March 17, 1886, it made a favorable report on the general subject-matter in House Report No. 1089, copy of which is hereto attached, and which, with said amended bill as reported, are now made a part hereof, and marked Exhibits No. 3 and No. 4.

This bill proposes to pay a cash indemnity to (among other States) the State of California, in all cases, for all swamp lands which, though granted and confirmed to her, have not heretofore inured to her benefit, and of which she has heretofore been deprived, and because either of the sales, or of the location, or of the entry, or of the selection, or of the disposal of the same to or by some person or persons other than to or by the State of California, the legal equitable grantee thereof.

The adjustment provided by said bill seems to me to be in all respects equitable, and, in my opinion, will in due time receive the favorable attention of Congress.

But the first session of the Forty-ninth Congress, seeming to have had its time so thoroughly engaged in other matters, this measure, though early and favorably reported upon to the House of Representatives, failed to receive either attention or recognition of that body, and because the calendar of which it constituted a part was never called during the first session of the Forty-ninth Congress, that adjourned August 6, 1886.

I shall hereafter renew my efforts in behalf of both of these two propositions, and in which much work has already been done by me, but in which in the future much more work will yet have to be done than has been done in the past, but which, when completed, will eventuate in giving the State of California all proper benefits arising therein, when the proceeds arising from these equitable claims can be expended for such purposes as the Legislature of California may hereafter wisely determine.

All of which is now very respectfully submitted.

JOHN MULLAN,
Agent and Counsel for the State of California.

No. 8. CONCLUSION.

In conclusion, Governor, I have thus endeavored, in the foregoing synopsis, to give you an accurate and as complete a history of the action that has heretofore been had in regard to the several claims of the State of California against the United States that have been intrusted to my agency, and such as I thought was necessary to enable you and the people of California to have a full understanding of the character and extent of each, and what proceedings have already been had in the past, or that may be necessary to be had in the future, in order to secure the proper adjudication and full payment of each thereof.

It has been no less to my personal interest than it has been to that of the public interest of the people of the State of California to secure the very earliest adjustment possible for all of these several claims at the hands of the Federal authorities; and because, under my contract with the State, my compensation consisted of a contingent fee only, and payable only in the event of success, the State of California not incurring any expenses of any kind in regard to any of the matters in anywise connected with the presentation or the adjustment of any thereof.

Any delay, therefore, had in any of these premises, has not been of my creation, or due to any laches on my part; but such as they are, they seem to be inseparable from and generally attend all adjustments had by either individuals or States with the Federal Government where the payment of money is involved, or where the securing of adequate legislative machinery to pay the same has been found necessary.

I know that the belief is generally entertained and has been sometimes expressed, that all that is necessary to be done by the members of a State delegation in Congress is for them to ask the Executive Departments to state accounts, or to present proper bills of relief in Congress for their respective States, and that such departments or Congress at once respond by granting the relief or the remedy sought. My experience, however, and that of those who have had most to do with this class of cases, does not confirm any such belief. On the contrary, all the executive departments, and all the committees in Congress, demand that all claimants, be they individuals or be they States (and they are all treated equally alike in all matters of claims against the United States), should properly and fully prepare their respective claims against the United States, and support the same with all proper evidence, for neither the one nor the other will go out of their way to adduce evidence to favorably support the same, though both often supplement such presentation with evidence intended to defeat such claims.

It is therefore not to be expected that the members in Congress, either from California or from any other State, will convert themselves, either singly or generally, into special agents of their respective States to properly prepare, or to present, or to plead, or to argue the claims of their respective States against the United States, except it be in public debate upon the floor of the respective Houses, while such subject-matters are legitimately before the same for passage, or being considered in the Committee of the Whole House, or before such special committees to which the same may have been reported for full examination and proper report to the whole House.

As members of Congress they are the servants of the United States, and are not and cannot be made special agents for any State in any matter that must come before them to pass upon as legislators, and besides none have the time and few even the disposition to so act.

Besides, the delegation in Congress from California has been constantly changing, so much so that to-day there is not a single member in our California delegation, in either the Senate or in the House, who was in Congress at the time I took hold of these several claims. Some have retired from public life, while two of the Senators who took a most active interest in behalf of these several claims, to wit: Senators Miller and Farley, have died during this time.

It has been therefore absolutely necessary for some one, having both the knowledge of all the facts, and whose interest it has been made by the State to keep constantly before our delegation in Congress from California all the matters relating to the past history or status at any time of these several claims, and to present from time to time to them such suggestions as might seem to be needed to secure a proper understanding of all that might be necessary to favorably reach the end sought to be secured in all thereof.

This duty I have ever sought at all times to perform to the best of my ability, and whatsoever lack of evidence of this allegation on my part the foregoing reports and exhibits may disclose, will, I am confident, be fully supplied, if necessary, by every member of the California delegation now in Congress, or by any of its living ex-members, who have been by me kept fully advised of all that has been done in these several claims.

The exhibits appended to the foregoing reports will, I believe, fully supply any information not to be found in the body of any one thereof.

When the several claims that have been intrusted to my care shall have been finally adjusted, I shall then submit to your office full and final reports on each thereof, and, in the meantime, I would state that all the more valuable papers relating to these claims, when not in use by me in my office, and which have not as yet been filed by me with the proper departments, are safely and securely stored, at my own expense, in one of the best fire-proof safe deposits in this city, in order that no loss of any kind should occur thereto to the detriment of the trust that has been heretofore confided to my care by the people of the State of California in and under the several contracts as hereinbefore recited.

I am, Governor, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN MULLAN,
Agent and Counsel for the State of California.

Capt. JOHN MULLAN, Washington, D. C.:

Several communications have been received, signed by yourself as State Agent for California, in which you refer to the passage of a claim of the State of California of five per cent of the cash sales of the public lands, etc.

I wish you distinctly to understand that I do not recognize your authority to act in behalf of California in the premises, you never having been appointed by any competent authority for that purpose; all the necessary care and attention having been paid to the matter by the Senators and Representatives from California.

As you are acting entirely in a private capacity, without any sanction from myself, I prefer receiving all further communications in regard to the matter from the duly accredited Representatives from California in the Senate and in the House.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE, SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA,) February 10, 1888.)Capt. JOHN MULLAN, Washington, D. C.:

Referring to my telegrams of the third and sixth, respectively, and after due and careful consideration of the matters therein referred to, I am convinced that certain appointments (as Agent and Attorney to represent the State in Washington) made to you by the Governor and State Surveyor-General, and which you endeavored to have ratified and confirmed, with a commission of twenty per cent fixed as your fee, by concurrent resolution of March 3, 1883, and March 3, 1885, should be, and are hereby, most emphatically revoked.

This revocation applies specially to the appointment by Surveyor-General Minis, November 1, 1878, in the matter of the "Five Per Cent Claim," aggregating nearly one million dollars.

To the appointment of ex-Governor George C. Perkins, December 12, 1882, in the matter of "Direct Tax of August 5, 1861," aggregating over two hundred thousand dollars; also that of March 7, 1882, in the matter of the "Modoc War Claims;" also that of July 12, 1882, being "Claim for money expended and indebtedness assumed in repelling invasions, suppressing insurrections and Indian hostilities," together with interest on the same; also claims under the provision of the Act of Congress, June 27, 1882, known as the "Rebellion Claims," aggregating a grand total of $2,938,623.

To the appointment of ex-Governor George Stoneman, March 31, 1884, in the matter of "Claims of State of California growing out of Indian hostilities, and in the matter of all moneys that have been paid, or may be due by the State of California on account of Indian war claims, or Indian war bonds, or coupons issued by the State for the suppression of Indian hostilities, and for the purpose of recovering from the United States the payment of the whole of these, together with interest due on same," aggregating a total of several hundred thousand dollars.

To the appointments of Surveyor-General Willey, October 24, 1883, and December 1, 1885, in the matter of "refunding certain fees," and "indemnity for certain swamp lands," therein mentioned.

The appointments above enumerated, when taken in connection with the appointments named and attempted to be confirmed in the concurrent resolutions of March 3, 1883, and March 3, 1885, are vague, indefinite, and uncertain; and that there may be no mistake, I hereby revoke all appointments held by you from the Governor or State Surveyor-General of whatever kind or nature, or named in said concurrent resolutions.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, STATE OF CALIFORNIA, }
SACRAMENTO, March 6, 1888. }Hon. C. S. FAIRCHILD,, Secretary of the Treasury, Washington, D. C.:

SIR: To arrive at a correct understanding as to the right of Captain John Mullan to represent this State as agent or attorney in Washington, the following recital of facts is necessary:

On February tenth I addressed you the following telegram:

" EXECUTIVE OFFICE, }
" SACRAMENTO, February 10, 1888. }" To the Hon. Secretary of the Treasury, Washington, D. C.:

" You are hereby notified and attention called to the fact that Captain John Mullan has no authority from me as agent or attorney in representing the State of California before your department.

" Therefore, he cannot receipt for or receive any drafts, warrants, or moneys belonging to the State of California, and you are instructed to hold such warrants, drafts, or moneys subject to my order.

" R. W. WATERMAN, Governor."

On February thirteenth, Acting Secretary of the Treasury Hugh S. Thompson acknowledged receipt as follows:

“TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,)
WASHINGTON, D. C., February 13, 1888.)

“Hon. R. W. WATERMAN, Governor of California, Sacramento, Cal.:

“SIR: I have to acknowledge the receipt of your telegram of the tenth instant, stating that John Mullan has no authority to represent the State of California before this department, and to inform you that it has been referred to the Hon. First and Second Comptrollers for their information.

“Respectfully yours,

“HUGH S. THOMPSON, Acting Secretary.”

On February twenty-first John S. Williams, Third Auditor, addressed me the following letter:

“TREASURY DEPARTMENT, THIRD AUDITOR'S OFFICE,)
WASHINGTON, D. C., February 21, 1888.)

“Hon. R. W. WATERMAN, Governor of California, Sacramento, Cal.:

“SIR: The Secretary of the Treasury has referred to this office copy of your telegram to him of the tenth instant, in which you state that Captain John Mullan is no longer recognized by you as agent or attorney for the State of California before the Treasury Department.

“I now have the honor to inclose herewith copy of Captain John Mullan's authority to act as agent, etc., and also copy of Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 3 of March 3, 1885, showing subsequent ratification by the Legislature of his appointment and commission, for your consideration and remark.

“Very respectfully,

“JOHN S. WILLIAMS, Auditor.”

It is a singular fact that while Captain John Mullan is submitting copies of appointments and concurrent resolutions for inspection by the Third Auditor, he should fail to submit for his consideration his pretended appointment by the Governor, “in the matter of the claim of this State to the five per cent net proceeds of the sales of public lands by the United States in this State,” together with the concurrent resolution adopted March 3, 1883, which recites this appointment and attempts to confirm the same.

The all-important proposition, and the one in which the people of California are at this time particularly interested, is the five per cent claim, of which, in the documents you inclose for my “consideration and remark” no mention is made.

Neither is any mention made of the direct tax claim, in which the State of California is interested to the extent of $216,000.

Under this five per cent claim alone, which must be finally adjudicated by your department, there will accrue to the State of California, on the passage of Senate Bill 418, in the Fiftieth Congress, nearly $1,000,000 for the benefit of our common or public schools.

As Mullan claims twenty per cent, or one fifth of these amounts to be appropriated by Congress for “services rendered,” you will see that we cannot intelligently discuss the law or the facts as to Mullan's authority or claim to the custody and control of the warrants, drafts, and money to be issued and paid by the Treasury Department until all of Captain John Mullan's appointments and concurrent resolutions are before you.

For your information I will here remark that after duly considering the validity of all the appointments and concurrent resolutions made and adopted in the interest of Captain John Mullan, and being fully advised as to my powers and duties in the premises, I did, on February third, address him a telegram, in which I said: "I wish you to distinctly understand that I do not recognize your authority to act in behalf of California, you never having been appointed by any competent authority for that purpose, and that you are acting entirely in a private capacity."

And on February tenth I revoked all his appointments, as is shown by the following communication:

"EXECUTIVE OFFICE,
"SACRAMENTO, February 10, 1888. }

"Captain JOHN MULLAN, Washington:

"Referring to my telegrams of the third and sixth, respectively, and after due and careful consideration of the matters therein referred to, I am convinced that certain appointments (as agent and attorney to represent the State in Washington) made to you by the Governor and State Surveyor-General, and which you endeavored to have ratified and confirmed, with a commission of twenty per cent fixed as your fee, by concurrent resolution of March 3, 1883, and March 3, 1885, should be and are hereby most emphatically revoked.

"This revocation applies especially to the appointment by Surveyor-General Minnis, November 1, 1878, in the matter of the '5 per cent claims,' aggregating nearly $1,000,000.

"To the appointment of ex-Governor George C. Perkins, December 12, 1882, in the matter of 'Direct Tax of August 5, 1861,' aggregating over two hundred thousand dollars; also, that of March 7, 1882, in the matter of the 'Modoc War claims;' also, that of July 12, 1882, being 'Claim for money expended and indebtedness assumed in repelling invasions and Indian hostilities,' together with interest on the same; also, claims under the provision of the Act of Congress, June 27, 1882, known as the 'Rebellion Claims,' aggregating a grand total of $2,938,623.

"To the appointment of ex-Governor George Stoneman, March 31, 1884, in the matter of 'Claims of the State of California growing out of Indian hostilities, and in the matter of all moneys that have been paid in or may be due by the State of California on account of Indian war claims, or Indian war bonds, or coupons issued by the State for the purpose of recovering from the United States the payment of the whole of these, together with the interest due on same, aggregating several hundred thousand dollars.

"To the appointment of Surveyor-General Willey, October 24, 1883, and December 1, 1885, in the matter of 'Refunding certain fees,' and 'Indemnity for certain swamp lands' therein mentioned.

"The appointments above enumerated, when taken in connection with the appointments named and attempts to be confirmed in the concurrent resolutions of March 3, 1883, and March 3, 1885, are vague, indefinite, and uncertain, and that there may be no mistake, I hereby revoke all appointments held by you from the Governor or State Surveyor-General, of whatever kind or nature, or named in said concurrent resolution.

"R. W. WATERMAN, Governor."

As to the question of the custody and control of any warrants, drafts, or money, representing, as they must, large sums due and payable to the State of California by the United States, there can be no doubt that such power is vested in the Chief Executive of the State, and not in a pretended agent or attorney, who is acting without competent authority and in direct violation of law—never having been legally appointed or confirmed—who has filed no official bond, and has never qualified as such officer or appointee as provided by the law of this State.

It would appear to me, if Captain John Mullan's interests as pretended agent or attorney for this State in Washington have in any way been jeopardized by my action, his remedy must be against the State in her own tribunals, and not before an Executive Department of the United States Government.

I have again to request that you direct all warrants, drafts, or moneys issued from the Treasury and drawn on the sub-Treasury at San Francisco, in pursuance of any appropriation made by Congress for the benefit of California, payable to the Governor, to be retained by the proper officer, subject to my order.

Should you desire further information I would be pleased to furnish the same.

Respectfully yours,

R. W. WATERMAN, Governor.

EXHIBIT No. 20.

The Governor of California:

SIR: In compliance with the request of the Governor of California, that I furnish him with a copy of the paper presented to him by me on January 18, 1889, I have the honor to now very respectfully present the Governor of California herewith a duplicate original of said paper.

I am, Governor, yours very respectfully,

JOHN MULLAN.

At the Capital, Sacramento, Cal., January 21, 1889.

The Governor of California:

SIR: First—On March 13, 1862, the Legislature of the State of California appropriated the sum of $16,382 60, which was thereafter duly disbursed by the proper State officers of the State of California for the "common defense," to wit: In the payment of expenses incurred in the suppression of Indian hostilities in the County of Humboldt in this State in 1861. (See page 54 Statutes of California, 1862.)

Second—This expenditure by the State of California so appropriated and so expended for the "common defense," was under the Constitution of the United States in all respects proper to be refunded by the United States to the State of California. Copy of this Act of the Legislature of California of March 13, 1862, is now hereto attached, made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 1.

Third—The history of the circumstances and public exigencies under which the expenditure was made necessary by this State, and the method suggested by Governor Downey how this expenditure might have been duly credited to the State (but which was not done), were all duly laid before the Legislature of California by the Governor, Hon. John G. Downey, in his regular message to the Legislature in January, 1862; extract from which message relating to this matter is hereto attached, made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 2.

Fourth—The efforts taken by ex-Governor Downey to aid in securing the evidence made necessary by the United States to prove and establish the validity of this refunding by the United States to the State of California are set forth in an affidavit made by said ex-Governor Downey, on June 15, 1888, at Los Angeles, California. Copy of which affidavit is hereto attached, made a part thereof, and marked Exhibit No. 3.

Fifth—More than twenty years having elapsed—during which interval the amount of the interest lost to this State by virtue of its failure to secure the refunding of the aforesaid sum from the United States has far exceeded the amount of the principal, and no portion of said principal having been refunded by the United States to the State of California prior to July 12, 1882, the Governor of California, Hon. George C. Perkins, on July 12, 1882, employed me to secure the refunding to the State of California by the United States of the aforesaid sum, and other sums or claims, proceeding therein under an Act of Congress, approved June 27, 1882. (Page 111, United States Statutes, 1882.)

The compensation for my services in these cases was to be paid exclusively out of the sums or claims I might receive from the United States for this State, at my own expense, and not at any time at the expense of this State, contingent, however, upon my success.

It was also expressly understood that any compensation in these cases was to be left entirely to the judgment and discretion of the Legislature of California to fix and determine.

Copy of this employment is hereto attached, made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 4.

Sixth—At its next session subsequent to July 12, 1882, upon the recommendation of Hon. George C. Perkins, as Governor of California, duly recited in his regular message to the Legislature in January, 1883, the Legislature of California, on March 3, 1883, duly approved said employment by ratifying and confirming the same in a contract by which the rate of the compensation for my services rendered and to be rendered and the amount thereof were all duly provided for, to wit: the same was to be a commission on the amounts of the sums or claims so by me collected, the amount and rate of my said commissions to be fixed and determined in the manner and to be paid as in said contract duly recited, and payable to me only in the contingency of my success.

Copy of this recital of recommendation from Governor Perkins' said message to the Legislature of California, in January, 1883, is hereto attached, made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 5. And copy of said contract is hereto attached, made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 6. (Page 394, Statutes of California, 1883.)

Seventh—Proceeding in good faith immediately after the date of my said employment and so continuing thence to this date, and ever with due diligence under said contract, and at all times and places at my own expense, and never at any time or place at any expense to the State of California, never having paid and never liable to pay any expenses of either fees or of salaries of any nature or kind or description to any one whomsoever other than my said contingent commission, I have succeeded at the earliest date practicable in having the United States take the proper and final steps necessary to have duly refunded or reimbursed to the State of California the sum of $11,723 64 in partial payment of the aforesaid disbursement of $16,382 60 by the State of California for the common defense.

(See page five hundred and seventy-five, U. S. Statutes, 1888. Act of Congress, approved October 19, 1888, the words as follows, to wit: "Reimbursement to certain States and Territories of expenses incurred in repelling the various, and suppressing Indian hostilities, Act June 27, 1882, $11,723 64.")

Eighth—The refunding of this sum of $11,723 64 has been duly authorized to be made by the United States in the manner following, to wit: By two drafts duly drawn by the Treasurer of the United States and duly delivered to me by direction of the proper officers of the United States Treasury Department, Washington, D. C., and by me duly receipted for, to wit: One draft, No. 26,538, being for $9,378 92; one draft, No. 26,539, being for $2,344 72 (the latter draft representing the amount of my commission and my compensation in this case); both drafts drawn "to the order of the Governor of California;" both drafts made payable by the United States Assistant Treasurer at San Francisco, California, and both drafts bearing date, "Washington, D. C., January 2, 1889."

Ninth—These two drafts, representing as they do the results of part of my services in behalf of the State of California (continuously from July 12, 1882, to January 18, 1889,) and of the amount finally allowed by the United States in this case, I now very respectfully tender to the Governor of California in and as the evidence in part of the due performance in good faith by me of my part of said contract; and at the same time I now ask, and very respectfully request, the Governor of California to fix and determine the amount of my compensation for my services rendered in these premises, and also to now pay me the same, and all to be done in the manner and to the extent as provided for in said contract (Exhibit No. 6), and all of which I now pray and move may be so done by the Governor of California in and as evidence of the due performance in part by the State of California of its part of said contract in this case.

I am, Governor, yours, very respectfully,

JOHN MULLAN.

At the Capital, Sacramento, California, January 18, 1889.

CHAPTER LXVI.

An Act for the payment of expenses incurred in the suppression of Indian hostilities in the County of Humboldt, in this State.

[Approved March 13, 1862.]

The People of the State of California, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. The sum of $16,382 60 is hereby appropriated out of any money in the General Fund not otherwise appropriated, for the payment of the indebtedness incurred by the expedition of the mounted volunteers, called into service by the Governor of this State, against the Indians in Humboldt County, in the year A. D. 1861.

SEC. 2. The Controller shall draw his warrants upon the Treasurer in favor of such persons and for such amounts as have been audited and allowed by the Board of Military Auditors of this State, incurred by the said expedition.

SEC. 3. This Act shall be exempt from the provisions of the Act entitled "An Act to create a Board of Examiners, to define their powers and duties, and to impose certain duties upon the Controller and Treasurer," approved April 21, 1858.

EXHIBIT No. 2.

INDIAN HOSTILITIES.

The employment of State troops for the suppression of Indian hostilities has, with one exception, been avoided during my administration, the officers in command of the United States forces on this coast having, when the same was practicable, rendered timely assistance when called for by me. In the month of August last I received from the citizens of Humboldt County petitions, accompanied by proper and satisfactory affidavits, setting forth that the lives and property of the citizens were being sacrificed by hostile Indians. I applied repeatedly, in person and by letter, to Brigadier-General E. V. Sumner, then in command of the United States Army on this coast, and requested him to move forward troops into the disturbed districts. After some delay he informed me that he had no men at his disposal for this purpose. This refusal involved the necessity of rendering State aid, and a company of mounted men was called out, and remained in service some ninety days, or until Brigadier-General Wright, who had succeeded to the command on the Pacific Coast, gave me assurance that he would send into these districts a sufficient force to insure the protection of the inhabitants and their property.

The expedition, in accordance with the orders and instructions given, was conducted humanely, and met the object for which it was called into service. A proper and praiseworthy economy has been pursued by the officers having charge of it, and an appropriation to meet the expenses incurred is recommended. Sixteen thousand dollars will cover the whole outlay for subsistence, pay of men, and horses, with transportation.

This amount will, as it were, be only advanced to the General Government, as it will be promptly recognized; and when such claims are so recognized, they by law become proper offsets against our quota of the Federal tax to an equal amount.

SIR: Information having been received at this office from sources entitled to credit, of repeated outrages having been committed by hostile Indians upon the settlers in the vicinity of Eel River, the same having been communicated to General E. V. Sumner, commanding Pacific Division United States Army, with request that he might furnish the desired relief. It not being convenient for said General commanding to render the aid required, and in order to protect the lives and property of the citizens of Humboldt County, you will at once proceed to enroll and muster into service, for the space of three months, forty mounted volunteers to be used in subduing the Indians committing said depredations.

In organizing this company you will follow as strictly as possible the military law of the State and be careful in protecting the lives and property of the citizens; that no inhumanity be practiced towards the Indians; that only those in actual hostility must be molested, and in no case must the lives of women and children be taken, and a departure from these instructions will subject the parties offending to severe penalties and reprimand.

You will report to this office as soon as the company is organized, sending copy of muster-roll and list of officers, that the latter may be commissioned.

RECOVERY OF MONEYS FROM THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT.

Information having been received by me that the expenses incurred by this State, and by the citizens of Siskiyou and Modoc Counties, for the suppression of Indian hostilities during the Modoc Indian war of 1872, had never been reimbursed by the General Government, I appointed Captain John Mullan, at Washington City, D. C., to represent said interests, on behalf of this State, before the proper authorities of the United States, for the purpose of securing such reimbursements, and, also, for such as were provided for (for California) under the Act of Congress, approved June 27, 1882, authorizing an examination and adjustment of the claims of the States of Kansas, Nevada, California, Oregon, Colorado, Nebraska, and Texas, for repelling invasion and Indian hostilities therein, between April 15, 1861, and June 22, 1882. Since writing the above, I have just been informed by telegraph that success has attended Captain Mullan's efforts, and that the Modoc war bill, reimbursing the State, has passed both Houses of Congress.

In addition to the foregoing, I also received information that many of the States intended to petition the General Government for the return of moneys paid by some of them in part, and by others in whole, of the sums assessed to the several States under the Act of Congress, approved August 5, 1861, to pay the interest on the public debt, and for other purposes. The amount assessed to this State, under said Act, was $354,538 66, which sum has been paid; but a few of the States have paid their assessments in full, others but a portion, and some of them not anything. Equity would demand that all or none of them should comply with the law.

Deeming the subject of considerable importance, and that the interests of the State required an agent to act in her behalf, with others employed in obtaining an equitable adjustment of these claims, I also authorized Captain Mullan to represent the State before the proper authorities at Washington, and would recommend that these appointments be ratified and confirmed by you, and that you provide for his compensation, to be paid out of the sums he may recover for the State, contingent, however, upon his success, it having been expressly understood that such compensation should be left entirely to your judgment and discretion.

GEORGE C. PERKINS, Governor.

Assembly Concurrent Resolution No. 20, relative to directing the Governor to fix the compensation for services rendered by Captain John Mullan, in collections of claims due the State from the United States.

. [Adopted March 3, 1883.]

WHEREAS, The Governor and State Surveyor-General of this State have heretofore, respectively, appointed Captain John Mullan, of San Francisco, California, agent and attorney to represent the interests of the State of California before the proper authorities of the United States, at Washington, District of Columbia, in the matter of the claim of this State to the five per cent net proceeds of the sales of the public lands by the United States in this State; and also in the matter of the direct tax levied upon this State by the United States, under the Act of Congress of August sixth, eighteen hundred and sixty-one; and also of her claim arising during the Modoc war, in eighteen hundred and seventy-two; and also under the provisions of the Act of Congress of June twenty-seventh, eighteen hundred and eighty-two; therefore, be it

Resolved by the Assembly of California, the Senate concurring, That the appointments so conferred upon Captain John Mullan by the Governor and Surveyor-General, respectively, are hereby ratified and confirmed; and the Governor of this State be and he is hereby authorized and directed to fix the compensation for services by Captain John Mullan heretofore and that may be by him hereafter rendered, at twenty per cent of each of the sums or claims that may be by him collected from the United States, and to pay to him such per cent out of the moneys that may be collected by him and paid to this State on account of each of the foregoing matters, respectively; provided, however, that this State shall not in any event become liable for any expenses, fees, and salaries, of any nature whatever, other than such contingent commission.

SEC. 2. That the Controller of the State of California be and he is hereby authorized to deliver to Captain John Mullan, or to his authorized agent, all the original vouchers, certificates, and papers of every kind and nature against the Government of the United States, for or on account of each of the foregoing matters, respectively.

SEC. 3. That said Controller shall prepare and take from Captain John Mullan, or from his authorized agent, a receipt in writing, bound in a book, same as he keeps in his office for all such papers as aforesaid, and which shall show what the papers are in each case, and date thereof, by what Board of Examiners passed, the amount and date of the warrant, and in whose favor drawn.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, STATE OF CALIFORNIA, }
SACRAMENTO, January 18, 1889. }

Captain JOHN MULLAN, addressed :

DEAR SIR: With this, under instructions of the Governor, I transmit you a copy of the decision reached by the Executive in your case.

Yours truly,

M. D. BORUCK, Private Secretary.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, STATE OF CALIFORNIA, }
SACRAMENTO, January 18, 1889. }

To Captain JOHN MULLAN, addressed :

On February third, sixth, and tenth, eighteen hundred and eighty-eight, I revoked all of the appointments held by you from the Governor and State Surveyor-General to act as agent or attorney for the State in Washington, which appointments you attempted to have confirmed, with a commission of twenty per cent fixed as your fee, by concurrent resolutions adopted March 3, 1883, and March 3, 1885, and I notified you of my actions. I did, on February 10, 1888, notify the Hon. Secretary of the Treasury that you "had no authority" from me to represent the State of California before his department, "or to receipt for or receive any drafts, warrants, or moneys belonging to the State of California," and requested him "to hold such drafts, moneys, or warrants subject to my order."

It would appear that the Hon. Secretary of the Treasury and yourself have conspired together, against the promotion of public ends, for the purpose of defeating, if possible, my authority in all these matters, that you might obtain possession of these warrants or drafts made payable to me, and attempt, in the garb of a pretended agent or attorney, to levy tribute on me to the extent of twenty per cent, or one fifth of all the moneys called for, as your compensation, for the reason that he has, in opposition to my written instructions, selected you as the messenger to carry to Sacramento and deliver to me certain drafts issued by the Treasurer of the United States on the Sub-Treasurer in San Francisco, based on appropriations made by Congress for the benefit of this State.

This action on his part is most singular, for with the certain and swift communication with distant parts of the country afforded by the mails and express companies, it was entirely unnecessary to make you the custodian of these warrants or drafts, and can only be explained on the proposition that he would give you the benefit of the word "collected," which word is the basis of all your claims to twenty per cent, or one fifth of all the appropriations made or to be made by Congress in the matter of the five per cent claim, direct tax claim, rebellion claim, and Indian or war bond claims, as set forth in the concurrent resolutions to which I have referred. These drafts are made payable to the Governor (or should be) and represent moneys that rightfully belong to the people without diminution. When the bill appropriating these moneys to the State was signed by the President, and drafts issued by the Treasury Department payable to the Governor (who must pay the same into the State Treasury), then these moneys became a part of the public funds of this State and cannot be diverted or drawn from the treasury, "but in consequence of appropriations made by law and upon warrants duly drawn thereon by the Controller."

The concurrent resolutions to which I have referred are without precedent in attempted State legislation, being in direct violation of section fifteen, article four, of the Constitution, which declares "No law shall be passed except by bill." The fact which I desire to emphasize is, that I do not propose to disregard such plain provisions of the Constitution and be made a convenience to carry into effect these unconscionable contracts based on unauthorized appointments and concurrent resolutions, involving as they do, several hundred thousand dollars. I want it distinctly understood that I do not recognize or receive you as acting in the capacity of agent or attorney for California, either in Washington or Sacramento, but simply as a private citizen or messenger intrusted with these drafts for delivery to the Governor, and as such executive officer I demand that you now surrender to me all warrants or drafts you may have in your possession or control, due and payable to the Governor of the State, that I may convey the money into the Treasury of the State where it properly belongs.

(Signed)

R. W. WATERMAN,
Governor of California.

PART NO. 2.

CONTINUATION OF THE SWORN STATEMENT
OF
JOHN MULLAN
RELATIVE TO THE
UNPAID CLAIMS OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA
AGAINST THE UNITED STATES

Made to the SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE appointed under ASSEMBLY CON-
CURRENT RESOLUTION No. 5, adopted January 26, 1889.

SACRAMENTO:
STATE OFFICE : : : J. D. YOUNG, SUPT. STATE PRINTING.
1889.

STATEMENT.

To the Special Joint Committee appointed under Assembly Concurrent Resolution No. 5, adopted by the Legislature of California, January 25, 1889.

SIR: In continuation of the sworn statement which by leave of your honorable committee I am permitted to submit for your consideration, I have the honor to now further state to you as follows, to wit:

1. At the date when the report recited in Part No. 1 of this statement was submitted by me to the Governor of California, to wit, November 1, 1886, the Forty-ninth Congress had taken a recess, its first session having terminated and its second session not having then commenced.

At that date the status of "CALIFORNIA'S FIVE PER CENT CLAIM" was as follows, to wit:

Senate Bill No. 994, introduced by Senator Stanford, and House Bill No. 150, introduced by Hon. Barclay Henley, to pay said claim in first session, Fiftieth Congress, both prepared and drawn by me, were each pending before Congress: the Senate Bill in the Senate, and the House Bill in the House, both favorably reported upon; but no action taken on either thereof in either the Senate or House, other than that heretofore reported by me in my said Report of November 1, 1886, to the Governor of this State.

3. As soon as the second and last session of the Forty-ninth Congress convened, said Senate Bill No. 994, was taken up, considered, and passed by the Senate in the exact form as it had been recommended by the Senate Committee on Public Lands, immediately sent to the House, by it referred to its Public Lands Committee, by which it was immediately, unanimously, and favorably ordered to be reported, which was done by the Hon. Barclay Henley, a member of said committee. But the Forty-ninth Congress adjourned sine die, without giving any consideration to either said Senate Bill No. 994, or said House Bill No. 150, for this claim.

4. When the first session of the Fiftieth Congress convened, I again renewed my efforts in behalf of this five per cent claim, by preparing and drawing appropriate bills therefor, similar to those presented in prior Congresses, one of which I submitted to Senator Stanford, and one to Hon. Joseph McKenna, and one to Hon. Thomas L. Thompson, requesting each of them to introduce the same in the Congressional bodies of which they were members; and to have the same referred to their respective Public Lands Committees for consideration, action, and report.

5. This was done, and Senator Stanford's Senate Bill No. 418 was unanimously and favorably reported from the Senate Public Lands Committee by Senator Dolph; was considered and passed by the Senate on January 26, 1888, without a dissenting vote; was immediately sent to the House, by it referred to its Public Lands Committee; by it considered and ordered to be reported back January 31, 1888, which was done in two reports, to wit:

In majority favorable report No. 179, Part No. 1, Fiftieth Congress, first session, by Hon. Joseph McKenna, and in minority adverse report No. 179, part No. 2, Fiftieth Congress, first session, by Messrs. Jackson, Payson, and Holman.

This Senate bill was thereafter duly considered and debated for two days in the House; and on the last day of said debate, to wit, March 10, 1888, said Senate Bill No. 418 was transferred to the unfinished Calendar of "Bills on 'The Union Calendar,' considered under Clause 5 of Rule 24" of the House. Said Senate Bill No. 418 now stands as bill No. 2 on said House Calendar of January 21, 1889.

6. One of said House bills, to wit: House Bill No. 1235, was reported back from said Public Lands Committee on January 23, 1888, in two reports, to wit:

In majority favorable report No. 70, Part No. 1, Fiftieth Congress, first session, by Hon. Joseph McKenna, and in minority adverse report No. 70, Part No. 2, Fiftieth Congress, first session, by Messrs. Jackson, Payson, and Holman.

This House Bill No. 1235 has not yet been considered by the House; but it now stands as bill No. 2 on the first page on the Calendar of the House of Representatives, Fiftieth Congress, second session, on what is called "Calendar of Bills referred to the 'Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.'"

7. Simultaneously with the presentation of said bills I duly submitted to the Senate and House Public Lands Committees, and to Messrs. Stanford and Dolph, and to Messrs. McKenna and Thompson appropriate data in support of said bills, as I had ever similarly done in prior Congresses with their predecessors in support of this same claim.

8. When, however, I discovered that for the first time in the effort to secure a recognition of this claim a minority adverse report had been prepared and submitted to Congress against it, I deemed it my duty to prepare a special statement in support of this claim as set forth in said two bills, to wit: Senate Bill No. 418 and House Bill No. 1235.

This statement I prepared so as to meet and answer the views expressed in said minority adverse report, had it printed at my own expense, and submitted copies thereof to all the Senators and Representatives in Congress from California, copy of which statement I now submit herewith, make part hereof, mark Exhibit No. 22.

9. In view of the very early termination of the Fiftieth Congress—there being now left only seventeen working days—and in view of the present House Calendar of unfinished and unconsidered measures, comprising as it does a book of over one hundred pages, and so many clamoring for recognition and priority of consideration, and in view of the doubt as to whether the President's veto might not be exercised in regard to this measure, and in view of other matters appearing to me and generally if not fully understood and appreciated by the delegation in Congress from California, warrant my belief that no further action on this measure can be reasonably expected at the hands of this Congress.

10. Should this bill, or one similar thereto, become a law by which the State of California will be paid all that I have claimed in her behalf in these premises, then the State of California may reasonably expect to secure from this claim not less than $500,000, and how much more no one is now competent to specifically state.

11. Your honorable committee will take due cognizance of the fact that by virtue of a change of policy by the General Government (heretofore partially and in the near future likely to be generally) adopted in regard to the future disposition of its agricultural public lands—such disposition being limited chiefly to homestead purposes—the sum to be secured from this claim will necessarily not be as large as it would otherwise have been, except for such proposed change of public policy.

NOTE.—As this Exhibit No. 22, prepared by me and printed at my own expense is quite lengthy, I beg to state that I will furnish each member of your honorable committee with a copy of same, as also with copies of each of certain other exhibits hereinafter referred, and numbered Exhibits Nos. 22, 24, 25, 28, 31; and I will also present copies of all of said exhibits to the appropriate branches or offices of the Executive Department of this State, for the purpose of making same matters of record in their respective offices, for any reference or value they may possibly have in the future in regard to the unpaid claims of this State against the United States—and which facts in view also of the cost of printing same—will obviate the necessity of printing said exhibits (so above numbered) at this time as a part of this statement.

SECOND.

At the date hereinbefore stated, to wit: November 1, 1886, the status of California direct war tax claim was as follows, to wit:

1. Senate Bill No. 995, that had been introduced in the Senate by Senator Stanford, and House Bill No. 164, that had been introduced in the House by Hon. Barclay Henley during the first session of the Forty-ninth Congress, to pay said claim, and both of which had been prepared and drawn by me, were pending before Congress; the Senate Bill in the Senate, and the House Bill in the House, Senator Stanford's Senate Bill having been favorably reported upon by Senator Morrill, and placed on the Calendar of the Senate for its consideration and action.

2. As soon as the second and last session of the Forty-ninth Congress convened, said bill of Senator Stanford, to wit: Senate Bill No. 995, was taken up, considered, and passed by the Senate, immediately sent to the House, by it referred to its Judiciary Committee, by which it was considered and ordered to be favorably reported to the House. But the Forty-ninth Congress adjourned sine die without giving any consideration either to Senator Stanford's said Senate Bill No. 995, or to Representative Henley's said House Bill No. 164, for this claim.

3. When the first session of the Fiftieth Congress convened, I again renewed my efforts in behalf of this direct war tax claim by preparing and drawing bills therefor, similar to those presented in prior Congresses, and in the exact form in which Senator Stanford's said Senate Bill had passed the Senate during the second session of the Forty-ninth Congress. One of these bills I duly submitted to Senator Stanford, one to Hon. Thomas L. Thompson, and one to Hon. Joseph McKenna, requesting them to introduce the same in the Congressional bodies of which they were members, have the same referred to their respective appropriate committees for consideration, action, and report.

4. This was done. Senator Stanford introduced in the Senate said bill, and Senator Morrill also introduced a copy of Senator Stanford's said bill, word for word, as it had passed the Senate in the Forty-ninth Congress. Senator Quay of Pennsylvania also introduced a copy of Senator Stanford's said bill. This measure, thereupon having been considered by the Senate Finance Committee, was unanimously reported to the Senate by Senator Morrill—then and now its Chairman—being the same Senator who had favorably reported Senator Stanford's similar bill for this claim in the Forty-ninth Congress. There being, therefore, before the Senate Finance Committee three similar bills, all of the same form, all having the same object, and all three being practically and substantially Senator Stanford's bill of the Forty-ninth Congress, it made but little difference which one was selected by Senator Morrill or by his committee, to report back to the Senate for its consideration and action, so that the bill so accidentally (no doubt) selected was Senate Bill 139, Fiftieth Congress, first session, that being the number of the Senate Bill as introduced by Senator Morrill.

4. This measure so introduced by Senators Stanford, Morrill, and Quay, having been, therefore, duly considered by the Senate, it was passed by that body on January 18, 1888, by a vote of forty-eight ayes to ten noes, was immediately sent to the House, by it referred to its Judiciary Committee, by the latter considered, amended, and favorably reported back to the House with a recommendation that it pass as amended. In April, 1888, under an order or rule reported from the Committee on Rules of the House, this Senate measure was made the special order for consideration on April 4, 1888, on which date it was taken up by the House, considered, and debated, leading to the "ten days direct war tax dead lock," the most remarkable and celebrated deadlock, it is said, that ever occurred in the history of Congressional legislation since the foundation of this Government.

5. While this deadlock delayed favorable action on this bill at that time, yet it served to thoroughly educate every member of Congress whose attention had not been theretofore called to it, and also the country at large, on the wisdom, policy, and equality of the legislation on this measure, contained substantially in the form in which I had the honor to first bring it to the notice of Governor Perkins, of this State, and afterwards to the earnest consideration of Congress, through the California delegation.

6. Upon a vote of the House, in April, 1888, the said deadlock was broken by an agreement that the further consideration of this measure should be postponed until December 6, 1888, on which date this same Senate measure, as introduced by Senators Stanford, Morrill, and Quay, was again considered, debated for three days, and finally passed that body by a vote of one hundred and seventy-eight ayes to ninety-two noes.

7. This Senate Bill (No. 139, Fiftieth Congress, first session,) was thereupon sent by the House back to the Senate to receive the Senate's concurrence in certain amendments made thereto by the House. The Senate thereupon referred said bill to its Finance Committee, before which, at this date (February 13, 1888), it is either pending sub judice and not yet finally determined, so far as I am credibly informed, or it is still in the hands of the conferees of the Senate and House appointed to consider the same.

8. At all proper occasions and at all opportune stages of progress of this measure, I duly placed at the disposal of the California delegation in Congress, such data as in my opinion seemed to relate or were germane thereto, and as I had ever done in prior Congresses with their predecessors, in support of this claim.

Should this measure become a law by which California will be paid all that I have ever heretofore claimed in her behalf in these premises, then this State may expect to secure from this claim a sum not less than $216,347 87.

THIRD.

At the date hereinbefore stated, to wit: November 1, 1886, the status of California's Indian War Claims was as follows, to wit:

1. House Bill No. 5566, that had been introduced in the House by Hon. Barclay Henley during the first session of the Forty-ninth Congress, which had been prepared and drawn by me, was then pending before the House with a favorable report, to wit: House Report No. 1298; first session, Forty-ninth Congress.

2. The object of that bill was to provide adequate legal machinery, by which all California Indian war claims, of every character, due by the United States to this State, or to its citizens, could be finally adjusted, and such as were not within the purview or jurisdiction of any other Act of Congress, and especially the Act of Congress of June 27, 1882, under which I secured an adjudication and payment of the Humboldt Indian war claim of 1861, that arose when Governor Downey was Governor of this State, the amount of which claim, as allowed by the United States, and collected by me, has already been paid, by two drafts delivered by me to the Governor of California, as set forth in my Exhibit No. 20, and wherein the Governor of California has refused to pay me any compensation for my services (and especially that compensation already by me earned, and as heretofore authorized and directed to be fixed by the Legislature of California, and which was definitely fixed by the Governor of this State in September, 1884), and for reasons alleged by him in his paper, my Exhibit No. 21.

3. As soon as the second and last session of the Forty-ninth Congress convened, and beginning at the commencement of that session, every proper effort was made to secure recognition for the consideration and action of said House Bill No. 5566, but without success; and the Forty-ninth Congress adjourned sine die without acting upon or considering that bill, or any other bill or any measure having for its object to give this State any adequate legal machinery by which this class of California unpaid Indian war claims could be adjudicated.

4. As soon as the first session of the Fiftieth Congress convened I again renewed my efforts in behalf of all of California's unpaid Indian war claims.

5. The Fiftieth Congress opened with two new Senators from the Pacific Coast, to wit: Senator Hearst from California, and Senator Stewart from Nevada. The long residence of these two Senators on this coast made both familiar with California Indian wars and Indian war claims, and they both knew of the fruitless results heretofore made when trying to secure an adjustment thereof by Congress.

6. It appeared to me, therefore, to be the part of wisdom and duty, that as so many fruitless efforts had been inaugurated in the House to there secure the desired result in this class of unpaid claims, that while not diminishing in the least our efforts for action by the House, we would also inaugurate simultaneously in the Senate efforts similar to those begun in the House.

7. As Governor Stanford had already introduced and charged himself with the care of the "California five per cent" claims and also with that of her "Direct War Tax" claim, and as I was attorney and counsel for Oregon and Nevada for their Indian and rebellion war claims, equally as for those of California, it seemed to me wise and judicious to bring to the special attention of Senators Hearst, Stewart, and Dolph all matters that in anywise related to either unpaid Indian or rebellion war claims of all of these three States; so that these three Senators might cooperate in securing some uniform legislation for these three States, and particularly in view of the fact that the items that constituted the rebellion war claim of one were quite identical with those constituting the rebellion war claims of all.

8. In view of these facts, Senators Hearst, Stewart, and Dolph, introduced sundry bills or amendments, prepared by me, looking towards securing the objects sought.

9. While these three Senators themselves found no difficulty in discriminating between Indian war claims and rebellion war claims, yet for the purpose of preventing the Congressional mind from getting confused by confounding the one class of war claims with the other, it was thought wise to prepare and introduce bills intended to cover Indian war claims separate and apart from those intended to apply to rebellion war claims, and to support each of the same with separate statements, and submit therein separate reports.

10. Keeping this precaution and intention in view, sundry bills and amendments to bills were introduced by these three Senators, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, which committee, after maturely considering the same, authorized Senator Stewart (a member of the Senate Military Committee), to submit to the Senate a bill such as, while embodying the views of said committee, would also be a proper substitute for all other bills and amendments relating to the subject-matter, so far as California Indian war claims was concerned.

11. Therefore, on August 14, 1888, Senator Stewart reported such a bill, to wit: Senate Bill No. 3439, a copy of which is hereto annexed, made a part thereof, marked Exhibit No. 23. A unanimous report of said committee, to wit: Senate Report No. 2246, first session, Fiftieth Congress, accompanied this bill, which, when I left Washington on January 5, 1889, was on the Calendar of the Senate (No. 2315), awaiting the consideration and action of the Senate.

12. Similar bills to cover the same matters were prepared by me, submitted to Hon. Thomas L. Thompson, by whom they were duly introduced in the House, and appropriately referred, but it was deemed wise to defer action thereon in the House until definite action could be had in the Senate on said Senate Bill No. 3439, and which action it is my privilege to now report to your honorable committee, was this day heard in the United States Senate, where, notwithstanding the importance of the Constitutional duty of the Senate to help to count and to canvass the vote for President and Vice-President of the United States on this day, upon motion of Senator Stewart (who introduced this Senate Bill No. 3439), who advocated it in committee, who reported it to the Senate, and who at all times has demanded that Congress deal equitably and honestly with California and her citizens and with all holders of her unpaid, outstanding, and unredeemed obligations under her and their implied contracts through her with the United States under the Constitution of the United States and of this State, this Senate Bill No. 3439, as I am this day informed by telegraph from Washington, was, to the exclusion and consideration of all other public or private matters, taken, considered passed by the Senate, and duly transmitted to the House for its further consideration.

13. If this Senate Bill No. 3439, or any bill similar thereto, should become a law, by which California would be paid all that I have heretofore ever claimed in her behalf in these premises, then the State of California, her citizens, and the holders of her outstanding and unredeemed bonds, coupons, and certificates of indebtedness, may expect to secure thereunder a sum aggregating about, probably, $605,287 64, of which probable aggregate there should inure to the State of California, probably, the sum of about $200,000, and the remainder thereof, to wit: $405,287 64, will inure to said private citizens and to said private holders of California's said now outstanding, unpaid, and unredeemed obligations now existing in the forms aforesaid.

14. A statement that gives the history, adduces the authority under which many of the aforesaid claims arose, together with a copy of every law enacted and of every memorial and of every resolution passed by the Legislature of California on Indian wars and Indian war claims, and extracts from every report made by any of the committees of the Legislature of this State at any time, or made by others by its authority, and also extracts from all messages of all Governors of California upon Indian war claim matters generally, was in part prepared by me at my own expense, submitted to Senator Stewart, and by him submitted to the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, in support and explanation of his said Senate Bill No. 3439, copy of which statement is hereto attached, made part hereof, marked Exhibit No. 24.

15. In addition to the foregoing, I submit, that largely through the efforts of those of my legal associates whom I have associated with me to aid me in securing the appropriate results in these cases, Congress for the first time in its history in responding to our frequent and opportune presentation and prayers on this subject has earnestly addressed itself to formulating general legislation, by which all citizens of this State may hereafter be enabled to at least present their claims, and possibly receive from the United States some indemnity for losses that may have heretofore been sustained by them on account of Indian depredations.

16. Copy of a bill for this purpose, which passed the House July 21, 1888, and reported in the Senate, January 21, 1889, is hereto attached, made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 25.

17. If this bill should become a law, and should prove insufficient to authorize a reimbursement to California all the amounts she has heretofore expended or assumed to pay to her citizens, or others, on account of Indian depredation claims, I feel quite confident that it is only a question of time when by an appropriate amendment to such a law adequate legislation may be secured. It were better, in my opinion, to let this bill now become a law and take it with all its crudities and defects, than none at all, trusting to a more liberal spirit in the future, and for a larger representation in Congress from west of the Mississippi River, to hereafter guide and mould this class of needed legislation.

FOURTH.

REBELLION WAR CLAIMS.

On November 1, 1886, the date heretofore stated, the status of "California's Rebellion War Claims" was as follows, to wit:

1. These claims made up from over one hundred thousand papers, and comprising as they do the total money expenditures of the State of California during the entire rebellion period, from April, 1861, to August, 1866; and which occupied me, aided by three clerks and sometimes more, for over three years (and as usual at my own private expense), was pending in the War Department for examination before the Board of Army Officers sitting as "State and Territorial War Claim Examiners," provided for under the Act of Congress approved August 6, 1886, ordered by the honorable Secretary of War October 6, 1886, to be convened for the examination of this class of war claims.

2. At this same date the rebellion war claims of the States of Oregon and Nevada were also pending before the War Department. The claims of those States, like those of California, were submitted to the Treasury and War Departments for their examination and allowance under the Acts of Congress of July 27, 1861, and June 27, 1882, either or both.

3. The War Department, which was the first to make examinations thereof, having taken up the rebellion war claims of these States under said Acts of Congress, and having maturely considered the same, decided that neither of said Acts gave to the War Department jurisdiction sufficient to examine, audit, or allow any portion of said rebellion war claims of either of said States. This decision of the War Department was made in the Oregon case.

4. Thereupon the Oregon rebellion claims, as a test case, were referred by the War Department to the Treasury Department for its action under both of said Acts, and that Department, first, in the office of the honorable Third Auditor, and second, in the office of the honorable Second Controller, held that the Treasury Department, like that of the War Department, was also without sufficient jurisdiction to examine, audit, or allow any part of any of said claims. A copy of the decision of the Treasury Department is hereto attached, made part hereof, marked Exhibit No. 26.

5. Additional and supplemental legislation by Congress became therefore absolutely necessary in the rebellion war claims of the States of California, Oregon, and Nevada. For reasons similar to those set forth above in regard to California Indian war claims, the Senate Committee on Military Affairs authorized Senator Stewart to report to the Senate an omnibus bill for California, Oregon, and Nevada State rebellion war claims, which he did on the tenth day of August, 1888, in Senate Bill No. 3420, but made applicable exclusively to rebellion claims. Copy of this bill, Senate No. 3420, and of Senate Report No. 2014 to support same, first session of Fiftieth Congress, are hereto attached and made part hereof, marked Exhibit No. 27.

A statement that gives the history, adduces the authority under which most of said California rebellion war claims arose, together with a copy of every law enacted and of every resolution and memorial passed by the Legislature of California, asking Congress for action in relation to any portion of the subject-matter of said rebellion expenses, including extra pay, bounty, and relief, and the expenditures of every miscellaneous nature, and also extracts from every State report made to the Legislature by any authority thereof, and also extracts from all the messages of all the Governors of California touching said rebellion war claims was, in part, prepared by me, at my own cost and expense, submitted to Senator Stewart, and by him submitted to the Senate Committee on Military Affairs in support and explanation of said Senate Bill No. 3420, copy of which statement is hereby attached, made part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 28.

Finding in my examination of the public archives of this State that the continuity of the correspondence between its Governors and the War Department, and also between the United States Military Commanders in California and the War Department, and between said Commanders and the Governors of this State, was broken, and that much valuable data were missing, and appreciating the value and necessity thereof, I requested Senator Dolph, on June 11, 1888, to introduce a resolution in the Senate calling on the War Department to supply a copy of the whole of such war correspondence. This was done, and the War Department was kept busily occupied with a very large force from June to December, 1888, in preparing copies of such correspondence from April, 1861, to August, 1866, all of which was sent to the Senate by the honorable Secretary of War, and ordered by the Senate to be printed on January 17, 1889, as per copy of Senate Report No. 2435, attached hereto, made part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 29.

This correspondence is complete in six separate volumes for 1861, 1862, 1863, 1864, 1865, 1866, respectively, and was declared by the Senate Committee on State Public Printing, as a reason justifying the printing thereof in the form ordered, that "it disclosed the high value of the historical data thus printed, and for this reason to be printed in brevier type and bound in blue cloth."

This correspondence thus secured at my suggestion, while it will aid me in finally proving up and fully establishing the validity of many of said claims, will also add to the public archives of this State matters of great value not now contained therein.

This Senate Bill No. 3420 was considered and passed by the Senate on the twenty-first of August, 1888; sent to the House; by it referred to its War Claim Committee, which reported it back favorably to the House on the fourth day of September, 1888, and now stands on page 19 of its Calendar "Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union."

Upon a consultation had at my request between Mr. Stone, Chairman of the House Committee on War Claims, who favorably reported said Senate Bill No. 3420, and Hon. Thomas L. Thompson, representing California, and Hon. Binger Hermann, representing Oregon, and Hon. William Woodburn, representing Nevada, and myself, as attorney and counsel for these claims for all three of said States, it was agreed, so far as these gentlemen could agree thereon, that upon the first call by the Speaker of said War Claims Committee for the consideration of bills reported from that committee, that this Senate Bill No. 3420 should have the right of way over all other bills theretofore reported from that committee, and be considered by the House at this session, if possible; and the Senators and Representatives in Congress from California, Oregon, and Nevada now anxiously await that opportunity for further consideration of this bill, knowing, as they do, the very great importance to the people of these three States of this measure so long delayed, though importunately urged upon the attention of Congress for more than a score of years.

As Hon. Thomas L. Thompson, of California, has specially charged himself in looking out in the House for the measures touching these Indian and rebellion war claims for California, and such as Senators Stanford, Stewart, Hearst, Dolph, Jones, and Mitchell would advocate in the Senate for California, Oregon, and Nevada, and who is thoroughly advised of all the details and of the past history of all thereof, I duly consulted with him before I left Washington and since then to try, outside of the above understanding, to secure unanimous consent for the consideration and passage of this bill, which he promised he would try to secure. And should he be so fortunate as to secure the consent of the Speaker to call up this measure during the few working legislative days left the Fiftieth Congress, he may possibly secure favorable action thereon prior to March 4, 1889, unless some sinister influence originating in this State may be brought to bear upon some Representative in Congress, outside of the California delegation, to prevent such consideration and action by making objection thereto.

If this Senate Bill No. 3420, or a bill similar thereto, should become a law, by which California may be paid all that I have claimed for her in these premises, then she may reasonably anticipate and expect to secure from this claim an aggregate sum of about $2,938,623 72, more or less.

The appreciation of my services and of my efforts by means of this omnibus bill (Senate No. 3420, which includes Nevada and Oregon as well as California) to secure a recognition and settlement of these rebellion war claims as entertained by the State officers of Oregon and Nevada (and which officers in said States have immediate custody and charge of all said rebellion war claims matters) is set forth in an extract from the report of the Controller, Hon. J. H. Hallock, of Nevada, to the last Legislature of that State; and in the extract from the report of the Secretary of State, Hon. George W. McBride, to the last Legislature of Oregon. Copies of which extracts are hereto attached, made parts hereto, and marked Exhibits No. 26 and No. 30.

FIFTH.

INTEREST CLAIM.

At the date hereinbefore stated, to wit: November 1, 1886, the status of California's claim for interest on money expended by her for the "common defense," for war claim purposes, etc., was as follows, to wit:

1. This claim had been introduced during the Forty-ninth Congress, in a bill prepared by me and submitted to Hon. Barclay Henley, to wit: Bill H. R. No. 152, but which, on April 6, 1886, was unfavorably reported by Mr. Perry, of South Carolina, in House Report No. 1560, all during the first session of the Forty-ninth Congress.

2. This bill, with such unfavorable report, was placed on the Calendar of the House for its consideration and action. It seemed, therefore, to be the part of prudence not to proceed further in this measure during the Forty-ninth Congress, and by so doing avoid an adverse decision by the House during that Congress, which might possibly be successfully pleaded in a subsequent House to the disadvantage of this measure.

3. Deferring, therefore, all action on this matter until the Fiftieth Congress met, and then proceeding in concert with other attorneys and counsel representing other States, but equally with California interested in these premises, we succeeded, on seventh February, 1888, in having this measure favorably reported from the House War Claim Committee, in House Report No. 309, to accompany H. R. No. 1474, first session, Fiftieth Congress.

4. This measure, as recommended, is, in my opinion, not as it should be, and not as liberal as it ought to be, and because—

First—Its limits interest to rebellion war claims only, and does not apply to Indian war claims.

Second—It does not reimburse any State the amount of interest that has actually been paid out by such State, during or subsequent to the rebellion period; but simply proposes to allow interest from the dates when said rebellion war claims were filed with the United States, and only then upon such amount of said principal as the United States may have recognized and paid, and in the case of California the principal by her claimed, has been disallowed in toto by the United States.

5. This bill now stands number five on the first page of the House Calendar "Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union." In view of the situation generally in Congress at this date, with only seventeen working days left, it would seem that no action will be had on this measure during the Fiftieth Congress.

6. It is difficult, if not impossible, for any one to now say what sum, if any, the State of California is ever likely to secure from this source, and because such sum is made indeterminate by virtue of many unknown factors entering therein in her case, and though I have claimed for California a reimbursement by the United States of all moneys which she has actually paid out in the form of interest, yet in view of the necessity for equality of legislation by Congress on this subject, such as must apply equally to all other States of the Union, and of the importance of the principle involved, and of the possible magnitude of the sums claimed to be due the several States on this account, it may reasonably be expected that whatever Congress may do herein will be done only after having approached this subject cautiously, and that Congress will not formulate any measure for paying any interest to any State on any State claims that shall not have been wisely conceived and maturely considered.

In order that your honorable committee may, however, know that which Congress has done in the past, when measuring and meting out its liabilities for reimbursing other States, both principal and interest, under that provision of the Constitution which charges Congress to maintain the "Common Defense," and in order that such information should be at hand to aid me in supporting this claim of California for the interest by her paid out for the "Common Defense," I in part prepared with great care and great labor, a statement submitted to Senator Stewart, and by him submitted to the Military Committee in the Senate, to accompany his Senate Report No. 1286 in support of a similar liability represented by me and urged in Congress by him as due by the United States to the State of Nevada, copy of which is hereto attached, made part hereof, marked Exhibit No. 31.

SIXTH.

Refunding money on account of IMPROPER SALES, by the United States, of lands belonging to this State, and FEES PROPERLY due this State by the United States PAID on selections of lands not approved to THIS STATE BUT CANCELED BY THE UNITED STATES.

On November 1, 1886, the status of the above named claims was as follows, to wit:

1. Provision for the payment of the first of these claims had been introduced during the Forty-ninth Congress in a bill prepared by me and submitted to Hon. Barclay Henley, to wit: H. R. No. 3222, the subject whereof having been maturely considered, was favorably reported upon in House Report No. 1089, all during the first session, Forty-ninth Congress, but no action was had thereon in either the Senate or House during the remainder of the Forty-ninth Congress.

2. Proceeding when the Fiftieth Congress convened, in concert with other attorneys and counsel representing States equally with California interested in these premises, we succeeded, on eighth of February, 1888, in having this measure favorably reported upon by the House Public Land Committee in House Report No. 347 to accompany H. R. No. 6897, Fiftieth Congress, first session. This bill now stands No. 8 on first page of the House Calendar, "Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union."

3. It is difficult, if not impossible, for any one to now say what definite sum this State is likely to secure from this source, and because it is made indeterminate by virtue of many unknown factors entering therein. I have, however, been of the opinion that the United States is indebted to this State on this account probably about $25,000, more or less.

4. In view of the situation generally in Congress at this date, with only seventeen working days left, the chances would seem to be that no action will be had on this measure during the Fiftieth Congress.

5. In regard to the collection of the aforesaid fees, etc., that is a matter in which I am still engaged before the Interior Department at Washington, and wherein the labor is tedious and difficult; and though progress has been made, yet no final results therein have as yet been reached. While it is impossible for any one to now say what definite sum, if any, the State of California is likely to secure from this source, in advance of the final summing up of all the proper debits and credits between this State and the United States on this account, I have, however, been of the opinion that the United States owes this State on this account probably about $6,000, more or less.

SEVENTH.

I assume that your honorable committee will take due cognizance of the public facts, as follows, to wit:

First—That under Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 36, adopted March 1, 1872 (page 958 of the Statutes of California, 1871-72), Messrs. James E. Hale and Thomas M. Nosler were, on the fifteenth of March, 1872, employed by the Governor of California—Hon. Newton Booth—to collect for this State, from the United States, the rebellion war claims of this State, such as were recited in the preamble to said resolution, they to be paid as a compensation for their said services 10 per cent commission of the sums collected, contingent upon success and at their own expense.

Second—That on February 26, 1881, the Legislature of this State, reciting in a preamble the foregoing facts, did further declare that said 10 per cent commission was too small and inadequate a compensation for the services to be performed by these gentlemen in said premises, and in consequence of said recitals the Legislature of this State did, on the twenty-sixth day of February, 1881, authorize and direct that the aforesaid compensation of 10 per cent commission so to be paid to Messrs. Hale and Nosler, should be increased to a commission of 25 per cent of the sums or claims so collected from the United States for this State on account of said rebellion war claims; and the Legislature of this State did so declare in another concurrent resolution, to wit: Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 12, adopted February 26, 1881 (page 150, Statutes of California, 1881), and which said commission of 25 per cent of said sums or claims was so fixed by the Governor of California—Hon. George C. Perkins—on March 1, 1881.

That while the manner adopted by Governor Perkins in that case was somewhat different in time, from that subsequently established in my case by Governor Stoneman, in September, 1884, when an adjustment was made with me by him, as Governor of this State, for the commissions then due me as compensation for my services in collecting for the State of California from the United States, its "Modoc Indian War Claims," and also its claim for a "Rebate of 15 per cent of its quota of the Direct War Tax" assessed to this State by the United States under the Direct War Tax Act of Congress, approved August 5, 1861, yet in effect and substantially they amount to one and the same thing.

The difference being only in this, to wit: that while Governor Perkins fixed the commission of Messrs. Hale and Nosler at 25 per cent BEFORE their work was seriously begun, Governor Stoneman fixed the commission in my cases at 20 per cent ONLY AFTER two parts of my work were fully performed.

Both acts, however, of said Governors were decisions under and upon said resolutions of the Legislature, binding, as I submit, upon their successors in office. This action by Governor Stoneman is set forth in my Exhibit No. 10, reported by him in his biennial message to the Legislature in January, 1885, and printed on pages seven and eight to the Appendix to the Senate and Assembly Journal, Twenty-sixth Session, Part No. 1.

In view, therefore, of these recitals, and other matters, of which you will take due cognizance, or to be brought to your attention, I deem it proper to state to your honorable committee that all the California rebellion war claims, herein reported and referred to by me, are the identical rebellion war claims which Messrs. Hale and Nosler have been so employed to collect from the United States for this State, in the manner and under all the circumstances aforesaid, and that my services in the collection of the principal of said "rebellion war claims" have been heretofore and continue to be performed under an employment from them.

So that I now recapitulate said claims in the manner following, to wit:

First—The unpaid State claims of the State of California against the United States, for which John Mullan has heretofore been employed by this State, or by the officers thereof, at his own expense, to collect for this State, in consideration of a contingent commission of 20 per cent of the amounts of the claims or sums that may be collected therein are as follows, to wit:

1. Five per cent claim, about.....	$500,000 00
2. Indian war claims, about.....	200,000 00
3. Direct war tax claim.....	216,347 87
4. Moneys from improper sales of land, about.....	25,000 00
5. Moneys from fees due by the United States.....	6,000 00
	<hr/>
6. Interest on war claims, an indeterminate quantity.
Possible aggregate, more or less.....	$947,347 87

Second—The unpaid State claims of the State of California against the United States, for which Messrs. Hale and Nosler have heretofore been employed, by this State or by the officers thereof—at their own expense—to collect for this State, in consideration of a contingent commission of 25 per cent of the amounts of the claims or sums that may be collected thereon, are as follows, to wit:

1. California rebellion war claims, principal, making a possible aggregate of, more or less, $2,938,623 72.

Your honorable committee, of course, know that it is one thing to allege a claim as due and payable to this State by the United States, and another and different and more difficult thing to establish its validity, and to collect the same when proceeding in either law or equity against the United States.

The manner in which I have endeavored to perform my duty and my part of the agreements and understandings heretofore entered into between this State or its officers and myself under the several employments as set forth in Exhibits Nos. 1 to 12, in Part 1 of this sworn statement, is partially certified to in sundry letters, which I hereto annex, make parts hereof, and mark Exhibit No. 32 (A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H, I, K, L, M, N, etc.), and I ask leave to file others should I deem it proper or necessary so to do.

While it is very difficult, and, under all the circumstances, now impracticable, for me to hurriedly compress within the space of a few pages of a brief sworn statement a full history of the application, continued by me without break for the last ten years, and which have been dedicated to the prosecution of these unpaid claims of this State against the United States, and give an account of the details of a very large expenditure of my own private means disbursed by me during these ten years, in a thousand and one necessary and proper ways to aid me in accomplishing and completing this very great work for which I have been employed, and which I undertook and contracted to execute at my own cost and expense, and which has ever been done at my own private cost and expense, and never at any time or place at the cost or expense of any one else whomsoever (and especially at no time at the cost or expense of this State, for the letter of the Controller of this State, Hon. John P. Dunn, Exhibit No. 33, attached hereto, shows that no Controller's warrant was ever drawn to pay me a single dollar out of the Treasury of this State), yet your honorable committee, from the recitals herein contained and from the exhibits hereto attached, can form an adequate judgment, sufficient certainly to prove that whatever results may in the end attend the final adjudication of these now unpaid State claims of the State of California against the United States, that I have done my full duty, in my efforts continuously pursued for over the ten years last past, to maintain, defend, and establish, in both law and equity, their validity or justice, and that I have succeeded in keeping all these unpaid claims alive, in order that they might be freshly handled, and presented de novo, as they ever have been, by new and successive delegations in Congress from this State, the new delegations ever beginning where the old delegations left off, or as members of such old delegations passed away.

These old delegations in Congress, in whole or in part, have passed away, some by death, as in the cases of Senators Farley, Miller, and Sargent, all of whom (more or less connected or identified with matters pertaining to these unpaid State claims, by virtue of data presented to them through and by me), were in the Senate when I began, and while I was prosecuting these State claims; while others, by a final retirement from Congressional life, have terminated all identity with these claims, the fact being that there is not now in Congress a single Senator or Representative from this State who was in either the Forty-fifth, Forty-sixth, or Forty-seventh Congress, during which six years I continuously prosecuted these claims, or who was there at the date when I first began my work of representing, defending, and prosecuting any of the unpaid claims of the State of California against the United States, and in the manner and under my employments, as in this statement set forth.

Respectfully,

JOHN MULLAN.

At the Capitol, Sacramento, California, February 13, 1889.

John Mullan, on first being duly sworn, says that he has read the foregoing statement, and all the exhibits thereto attached, made parts thereof, and knows the contents of all of the same; that the same are true, except as to those matters therein stated upon information and belief, and as to those matters he believes the same to be true.

JOHN MULLAN.

EXHIBIT No. 23.

SUBSTITUTE BILL.

[Fiftieth Congress, first session, S. 3439.]

August 14, 1888.—Mr. Stewart introduced the following bill, which was read twice, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs:

A BILL authorizing the Secretary of War to ascertain the amount of money which has been expended and the obligations assumed by the State of California, growing out of Indian hostilities therein and upon the borders thereof, not heretofore reimbursed by the United States.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of War, the Board of War Claim Examiners, appointed under section two of the Act entitled "An Act for the benefit of the States of Texas, Colorado, Oregon, Nebraska, California, Kansas, and Nevada, and the Territory of Washington, and Nevada when a Territory," approved August fourth, eighteen hundred and eighty-six, be and he is hereby authorized and directed to examine all vouchers, accounts, papers, and evidence which heretofore have been or which hereafter may be submitted to him in support of the Indian war claims and Indian war obligations of the State of California, and to ascertain the amount of money actually expended and obligations incurred by said State, growing out of Indian hostilities therein and upon the borders thereof, and which have not heretofore been reimbursed by the United States.

The Secretary of War is hereby authorized and directed to ascertain the amount of interest paid and assumed by said State on obligations incurred for the purposes hereinbefore enumerated, and which has not heretofore been reimbursed by the United States.

The Secretary of War shall report to Congress the amount of money which may be thus ascertained to have been actually paid and assumed by the State of California on account of the matters above enumerated, including the amount of interest actually paid and assumed by said State on moneys borrowed for the purposes above enumerated and not heretofore reimbursed by the United States.

And the Secretary of War shall report the circumstances and exigencies under which, and the authority by which, such expenditures were made, and what payments have been made on account thereof by the United States; and the money necessary to enable the Secretary of War to comply with the provisions of this Act is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

For Exhibits Nos. 24 and 25, see note on page 3.

EXHIBIT NO. 26.

ACCOUNTS AGAINST THE GENERAL GOVERNMENT.

CLAIMS FOR EXPENSES DURING THE WAR OF THE REBELLION.

The claim of the State of Oregon against the United States for expenses incurred during the war of the rebellion, referred to on pages twenty and twenty-one of the printed report of the Secretary of State to the legislative assembly of 1887, was filed in the office of the Third Auditor of the United States Treasury Department, August 21, 1884. Abstracts and vouchers in support of said claim were prepared and forwarded by my immediate predecessor in this office, Hon. R. P. Earhart, for examination by the War Department, under the provisions of the Act approved June 27, 1882. In a letter dated January 26, 1884, the Secretary of War, Hon. Robert T. Lincoln, referring to similar claims of the State of Nevada, stated that the statute approved June 27, 1882, was "deemed sufficiently broad to embrace all proper claims of said State and Territory of Nevada," and it was therefore believed that the claim of the State of Oregon would be examined and allowed under the provisions of said Act. But on November 8, 1887, Hon. Wm. C. Endicott, Secretary of War, decided that the claim of the State of Oregon did not come within the provisions of the Act of June 27, 1882, and directed that all the papers connected therewith be returned to the Treasury Department. The entire claim was disallowed by the Third Auditor of the Treasury Department in a report which I herewith submit for your information.

REPORT OF THE THIRD AUDITOR IN THE MATTER OF THE WAR CLAIM OF THE STATE OF OREGON.

March 10, 1888. }

The war claim of the State of Oregon (second installment) for moneys paid on account of military forces during the war of the rebellion, and interest thereon, was filed in this office August 21, 1884, under the Act of Congress, approved June 27, 1882 (12th Stat., 267).

All the papers in the matter of this claim were laid before the honorable Secretary of War, of date November 3, 1884, by the Third Auditor, for administrative action, under the Act to "reimburse certain States and Territories for expenses incurred in repelling invasion and suppressing Indian hostilities." The War Department returned the papers, declining to take any action upon them for the reason that the expenses did not fall within the provisions of that Act. (Letter of Secretary of War, November 1, 1887.)

The Act of July 27, 1861, under which the claim was originally presented, and is now examined, authorized reimbursement to the States for the cost of such troops as were employed in aiding to suppress the present insurrection, and the rule and practice of the accounting officers in applying provisions of said Act have extended only to the cost of troops mustered and received into, or actually employed in, the service of the United States, at the request or under the authority of the President or Secretary of War.

The items of the claims are as follows:

Pay of troops.....	$9,907 00
Supplies.....	3,998 46
Transportation.....	727 42
Services.....	2,276 63
Clerical expenses.....	805 66
Postal expenses.....	121 72
	<hr/>	$17,836 89
Interest thereon to September 1, 1883.....	24,971 64	-$42,808 63
Bounty bonds to volunteers.....	129,041 02
Interest thereon to September 1, 1883.....	62,466 45	-191,507 47
Relief bonds to officers and men.....	90,392 99
Interest thereon to redemption.....	44,745 20	-135,128 19
Expenses in Adjutant-General's department.....	9,731 33
Interest thereon to January 1, 1885.....	11,635 58	- 21,365 91
Total.....		$390,820 10

By no reasonable construction can the provisions of the Act of July 27, 1861, be extended to embrace any of the amounts mentioned above. The items for the claim "for pay of troops, supplies, transportation, services, clerical, and postal expenses" appear to have been expenditures on account of troops for State purposes, or home guard, not mustered and received into or actually employed in the services of the United States at the request or under the authority of the President and Secretary of War. Many of the vouchers show this. It also appears by a report of the Adjutant-General, United States Army, dated March 7, 1888 (herewith), that only one regiment of cavalry, one regiment of infantry, and one independent company were raised in the State of Oregon during the war of the rebellion, and that the expenses thereto were paid by the United States disbursing officers stationed at Portland, Oregon, and San Francisco, California, out of the appropriation for collecting, drilling, and organizing volunteers.

There is no evidence that the expenses mentioned above for "pay of troops, etc.," or any part thereof, were for any of the organizations named in the report of the Adjutant-General.

Passing to the items of claims for reimbursement on account of bounty and relief bonds issued to volunteers (bounty), I do not find that Congress has made any provision for the repayment of this class of claims. Such bounties as were authorized by law were paid by the United States directly to the men authorized to receive them. It will be seen from the tabulated statement that the State of Oregon claims reimbursement on account of interest amounting to $132,183 29. In respect to the charge of interest, it is sufficient to say that, as the United States is not liable to the State for any part of the principal upon which the interest is computed, there can be no possible ground for a claim for interest. But even upon sums due by the United States interest is not allowable, unless when specially provided for by an Act of Congress. The Act of July 27, 1861, made no such provision, and interest has never been allowed to any State upon any war claim unless under express statute.

The entire amount of this claim, viz.: $390,820 10, is therefore disallowed, and certified to the Second Comptroller for his action thereon.

JOHN S. WILLIAMS,
Auditor.

Soon after the above decision by the Treasury Department, Senator Dolph introduced a bill, which was referred to the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, specially authorizing the payment of said claim. I was thereupon requested by Captain John Mullan, the agent of the State for the collection of said claim, to forward rosters and muster rolls of the Oregon volunteers actually mustered into the service of the United States during the war of the rebellion, and other evidence tending to show that the expenses incurred by this State for bounties and extra pay, and in enlisting, equipping, and drilling troops during said war, were incurred solely for the payment of troops for services actually rendered the United States, or to prepare volunteers for service in the field whenever they should be called upon by the President or the Secretary of War. These documents were prepared in this office and forwarded to Captain Mullan, and were, together with other proofs and arguments prepared by him, submitted to the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, and were printed in the report of said committee recommending the passage of Senate Bill, No. 3420. This bill provides for examination by the Secretary of War of all accounts and evidence in support of the war claim of the State of Oregon, and directs the said Secretary to ascertain and state the amount of money expended for actual warfare, or enlisting, subsisting, and drilling troops, and for bounty and extra pay for volunteers and militia, and also the amount of interest paid on obligations incurred for the said purposes. The bill also directs the Secretary of War to report the circumstances and exigencies under which and the authority by which said expenditures were made, and what payments have been made thereon by the United States. This bill passed the Senate August 21, 1888, has been favorably reported by the House Committee on War Claims, and has been placed on the House Calendar for consideration during the present session. If this bill become a law, I shall endeavor to procure additional evidence to show that the expenses included in said claim were properly chargeable to the United States, and a reasonable appropriation should be made to meet such expenses as may be necessary for the prosecution of this claim.

INDIAN WAR CLAIMS OF 1877-78.

An Act of Congress approved June 27, 1882, directed the Secretary of the Treasury, with the aid and assistance of the Secretary of War, to examine and report to Congress the amount of all claims of the States of Texas, Colorado, Oregon, Nebraska, California, Kansas, and Nevada, for money expended and indebtedness assumed by said States in repelling invasions and suppressing Indian hostilities. The expenses incurred by this State in paying the volunteer and military forces thereof for service in the Indian wars of 1877-78, constituting a just charge against the United States under the above mentioned Act of Congress, I caused to be prepared copies of the vouchers, muster rolls, and other papers relating to said expenditures, and forwarded the originals to Captain Mullan for presentation at Washington. These vouchers and papers were arranged and classified by Captain Mullan, in the form and manner required by the United States officers, and thereafter presented by him to the Board of War Claims Examiners. Further evidence was required by said Board respecting the actual service in the field of said forces, and affidavits showing the term of service of each company, and also the affidavit of ex-Governor Chadwick, showing the exigencies under which the volunteer forces engaged in said wars were called into service by the State, were obtained and forwarded by this department. The Board of War Claims Examiners has reported that an allowance of $38,192 38 should be made on the first installment of said claims. Their report was approved by the Secretary of War December 22, 1888, and was transmitted to the Secretary of the Treasury for his action thereon. It is but just to Captain Mullan to say that he has been energetic, prompt, and diligent in representing this claim before the departments at Washington, and in notifying this department of the proofs required by the Board of Examiners.

EXHIBIT NO. 27.

[S. 3420. Fiftieth Congress, first session.]

August 6, 1888.—Mr. Stewart introduced the following bill, which was read twice and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

August 10, 1888.—Reported by Mr. Stewart, with an amendment, viz.: Insert the part printed in italics.

A BILL authorizing the Secretary of War to ascertain what amount of money has been expended by the States of California, Oregon, and Nevada for military purposes in aid of the Government of the United States during the war of the rebellion.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of War, through the Board of War Claims Examiners appointed under section two of the Act of Congress entitled "An Act for the benefit of the States of Texas, Colorado, Oregon, Nebraska, California, Kansas, and Nevada, and the Territories of Washington and Idaho, and Nevada when a Territory," approved August fourth, eighteen hundred and eighty-six, be and he is hereby authorized and directed to examine all accounts, papers, and evidence which heretofore have been, or which may hereafter be, submitted to him in support of the war claims of the States of California, Oregon, and Nevada, and Nevada when a Territory, growing out of the war of the rebellion, and in suppressing Indian hostilities and disturbances during the war of the rebellion, and of guarding the overland mail and emigrant routes during and subsequent to the war of the rebellion, and to ascertain and state what amount of money each of said States and Nevada when a Territory actually expended, and what obligations they incurred for the purposes aforesaid whether such expenditures were made or obligations incurred in actual warfare, or in recruiting, enlisting, enrolling, organizing, arming, equipping, supplying, clothing, subsisting, drilling, furnishing, transporting, and paying their volunteers, militia, and home guards, and for bounty, extra pay, and relief paid to their volunteers, in camp and field, to perform military services for the United States.

The Secretary of War is also directed to ascertain what amount of interest has been paid by each of said States and Nevada when a Territory on obligations incurred for the purposes above enumerated. The Secretary of War shall report to Congress the amount of money which may be thus ascertained to have been actually paid by each of said States and Nevada when a Territory on account of the matters above enumerated, and also the amount of interest actually paid or assumed by each of said States and Nevada when a Territory on moneys borrowed for the purposes above enumerated. And the Secretary of War shall also report the circumstances and exigencies under which, and the authority by which, such expenditures were made, and what payments have been made on account thereof by the United States; and the money necessary to enable the Secretary of War to comply with the provisions of this Act is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

[Senate Report No. 2014. Fiftieth Congress, first session.]

Mr. Stewart, from the Committee on Military Affairs, submitted the following report, to accompany bill S. 3420:

The Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3420) authorizing the Secretary of War to ascertain what amount of money has been expended by the States of California, Oregon, and Nevada for military purposes in aid of the Government of the United States during the war of the rebellion, having considered the same, report as follows:

During the war of the rebellion the States of California, Oregon, and Nevada were separated from the Atlantic States by over one thousand five hundred miles of almost uninhabited country. Much apprehension was felt on account of the exposed condition of those distant States, and the Government called upon them to assist in guarding the overland mail and emigrant routes, in preventing Indian outbreaks in the States, and to aid the United States in various ways during the war of the rebellion.

At the beginning of the war Nevada was a Territory, and was admitted into the Union as a State in 1864: but for the purposes of this report Nevada will hereafter be referred to as a State.

These States complied promptly with all the requirements of the General Government, and volunteered all the aid in their power to assist the United States. On the Pacific Coast during this time, and particularly in Nevada, prices of all commodities (and also the price of labor) were exceedingly high, and as a mining excitement existed in these States, it became necessary to extend aid in many ways in organizing, arming, equipping, furnishing, and maintaining volunteer soldiers and militia beyond the amount required for those purposes in the Eastern States. California, Oregon, and Nevada passed numerous Acts to organize and equip soldiers in compliance with the requests of the Government, for which they were compelled to expend large sums of money. They were also compelled to borrow money, upon which a large amount of interest has been paid.

An examination of all the facts connected with these claims, a statement of accounts showing for what the money was paid, and under what authority, involves too much detail for a committee of Congress to investigate. They, therefore, recommend the passage of the accompanying bill, which simply provides for an examination and report upon the facts of the claims of each of these States, so as to enable Congress to take such action as may be just and proper in the premises.

The bill does not commit Congress to the payment of these claims in advance, nor a settlement upon any particular theory. It does not commit Congress in advance to reimburse these States for bounty or extra money expended by them in furnishing troops to assist the United States in suppressing the war of the rebellion, nor to the payment of interest on moneys borrowed. It simply provides for an ascertainment of such facts as to enable Congress to legislate intelligently.

A bill for the payment of the claims of Nevada has already been reported by a majority of your committee and is now on the Calendar of the Senate. The report in that case is very elaborate, and some members of your committee desire, before action is taken on it, a more authoritative statement of the case, which will be obtained by the examination now proposed. The claims of California and Oregon are of a similar character to those of Nevada. All these States were differently situated during the rebellion from the other States of the Union, and your committee, therefore, thought proper to have the same investigation and report made in each case, and have them all incorporated in one bill. The writer of this report has prepared an elaborate statement of the claims of California and Oregon, which has been printed, by order of the Senate, for the use of the committee.

The report on the Nevada claim, known as Senate Report No. 1286, and dated May 14, 1888, and the statement with regard to the claims of California and Oregon will assist the War Department in collecting the laws and orders under which these States expended the money in question, and your committee desire to call the attention of the Secretary of War to these documents in case this bill should become a law.

The laws that have been passed for the investigation of claims of other States are not applicable to the peculiar conditions of these States during the war of the rebellion, and there is no authority under them for the ascertainment of the necessary facts to enable Congress to determine what allowances should be made under the peculiar circumstances which surrounded these States at the time in question.

Your committee report the bill back with an amendment, and when so amended recommend that it do pass.

For Exhibit No. 28, see note on page 3.

EXHIBIT No. 29.

[Senate Report No. 2435, Fiftieth Congress, second session.]

Mr. Manderson, from the Committee on Printing, submitted the following report: To accompany letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, in response to Senate resolution of June 11, 1888, report relative to the raising of volunteer troops to guard overland and other mails from 1861 to 1866.

The Committee on Printing, to whom was referred the above letter and correspondence, report as follows:

The correspondence furnished in pursuance to the Senate resolution of June 11, 1888, embraces letters found of record from April 15, 1861, to August 20, 1866, of the War Department with the division commanders of the Pacific and the department commanders of the Columbia and California, in relation to the subject of raising and organizing volunteer troops for the purpose of guarding the overland and inland mail and emigrant routes. It is compiled in six parts, by years, viz., 1861, 1862, 1863, 1864, 1865, and 1866.

An examination of the correspondence discloses the high value of the historical data thus furnished, and if for no other purpose than to preserve it intact and make it conveniently accessible, the committee would recommend that there be printed the usual number of copies, in quarto form, in brier type, and bound in blue cloth. The cost of printing the usual number will be $966 50. For each succeeding thousand it will cost $302.

EXHIBIT No. 30.

PROCEEDINGS IN CONGRESS TO REDEEM THE OBLIGATIONS OF THE UNITED STATES DUE TO NEVADA IN THIS CASE.

The circumstances under which these expenditures were made by the Territory and State of Nevada being exceptional, and their reimbursement not being provided for by any existing law, general or special, Senator Fair, of Nevada, on December 13, 1881, introduced a joint resolution in the Senate providing for the equitable adjustment of these claims of Nevada now under consideration, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

This committee, instead of reporting back the joint resolution, reported back a substitute in the form of a bill providing for the payment of the claims of several States and Territories, including the State of Nevada, and which bill finally resulted in the Act of June 27, 1882. This bill was reported on May 12, 1882, by Hon. L. F. Grover; and Nevada believed then and believes now that it was then the intention of Congress to equitably and explicitly provide for the reimbursement to her of the amount of money which she had actually and in good faith expended in these premises. This bill was accompanied by a report in which the following statement is made in relation to the claims of the State of Nevada:

NEVADA.

It appears by the report of the Adjutant-General, United States Army, of February 25, 1882, that one regiment of cavalry and one battalion of infantry were raised in the late Territory of Nevada during the late war of the rebellion, and that the expenses of raising, organizing, and placing in the field said forces were never paid by said Territory, but were assumed and paid by the State of Nevada; and that none of said expenses so incurred by said Territory, and assumed and paid by said State, have ever been reimbursed the State of Nevada by the United States, and that no claims therefor have ever been heretofore presented by either said Territory or said State for audit and payment by the United States. Under Section 3489 of the Revised Statutes, hereinbefore referred to, the payment of these claims is barred by limitation.

These forces were raised to guard the overland mail route and emigrant road to California, east of Carson City, and to do other military service in Nevada, and were called out by the Governor of the late Territory of Nevada upon requisition therefor by the Commanding-General of the Department of the Pacific, and under authority of the War Department, as appears by copies of official correspondence furnished to your committee by the Secretary of War and the General commanding the Division of the Pacific. * * *

PRESENTATION BY NEVADA TO THE UNITED STATES OF HER CLAIMS.

This bill reported from this committee, having become a law in an amended form, on June 27, 1882, thereupon the Governor and Controller of the State of Nevada transmitted to the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of War, a detailed account of the moneys actually expended, and actual indebtedness assumed and paid by the State of Nevada on account of the volunteer military forces enrolled by the Territory and State of Nevada, as shown by the books of the State Controller. This statement of the claim of Nevada against the United States was prepared with great care by the proper officers of the State of Nevada, being first submitted by them to the Legislature thereof in printed form at the expense of the State, and thereafter transmitted, as above stated, with proper original vouchers and evidence of every kind, then in her possession, to the authorities of the Government of the United States, and as provided for in said Act of June 27, 1882.

DELAY OF THE UNITED STATES IN THE EXAMINATION OF NEVADA'S CLAIM AND THE CAUSES THEREOF.

This claim, with said vouchers and evidence, was first presented to the Secretary of the Treasury in 1883, where, being properly stamped, it was duly transmitted to the Secretary of War for examination and action thereon. It remained of record in the War Department, unacted on, up to and after August 4, 1886, because, as was stated to Congress by Hon. Robert T. Lincoln, Secretary of War, he required the aid of a board of at least three army officers to assist his department in such examination, and he requested Congress to make an appropriation of $25,000, to defray expenses of the examination of the different State and Territorial claims presented under the Act of June 27, 1882. Congress delayed action upon these requests of the Secretary of War until August 4, 1886, on which date Acts were passed providing for said board of army officers, as asked for, and also appropriated $10,000 to defray the expenses of said examinations. (See Vol. 24, Stats. at Large, pages 217 and 249.)

SECRETARY LINCOLN'S CONSTRUCTION OF THIS ACT OF JUNE 27, 1882, FOR THE RELIEF OF NEVADA, ETC.

Prior to any action of the War Department on the claim of the State of Nevada, and prior to any action by Congress on the request of the Secretary of War for a board of army officers to examine said claim, a bill was introduced in Congress by Senator Jones, of Nevada, and referred to the Secretary of War for report, providing for the payment of certain individual claims of citizens of Nevada, on account of Indian hostilities in Nevada in 1860, upon which the Secretary of War reported as follows:

WAR DEPARTMENT, }
WASHINGTON CITY, January 26, 1884. }

SIR: In response to so much of your communication of the twenty-second ultimo as requests information concerning Senate Bill 657, "to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to adjust and settle the expenses of Indian wars in Nevada," I have the honor to invite your attention to the following report of the Third Auditor of the Treasury, to whom your request was duly referred:

"The State of Nevada has filed in the office abstracts and vouchers for expenses incurred on account of raising volunteers for the United States to aid in suppressing the late rebellion amounting to $349,697 49, and for expenses on account of her militia in the 'White Pine Indian war' of 1875, $17,650 98; also expenses of her militia in the 'Elko Indian War' of 1878, amounting to $4,654 64, presented under Act of Congress approved June 27, 1882 (22 Statutes, 111, 112)."

These abstracts and vouchers will be sent to your department for examination and report as soon as they can be stamped, as that statute requires a report from the Secretary of War as to the necessity and reasonableness of the expenses incurred. This statute is deemed sufficiently broad enough to embrace all proper claims of said State and Territory of Nevada.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant.

HON. S. B. MAXEY,

Of Committee on Military Affairs, United States Senate.

ROBERT T. LINCOLN,

Secretary of War.

In accordance with this letter the Committee on Military Affairs reported back the bill referred to (S. 657), and asked that it be indefinitely postponed, and because of the explanation made by said committee, as follows, to wit: It will be observed that it is deemed by the department that the Act approved June 27, 1882, is sufficiently broad to embrace all proper claims of Nevada, whether as State or Territory. For convenience of reference the above Act accompanies this report, and an examination thereof, and of the construction thereon, satisfies the committee that no additional legislation is necessary.

The State of Kansas presented her claim to Secretary Lincoln under this Act, which claim was by him examined, audited, and allowed for almost exactly the sum that Kansas had actually expended for the use and benefit of the United States, and all of which allowance has since been paid to Kansas by the United States, and aggregating the sum of $332,308 13 (23 U. S. Stats. 474.)

AFTER OVER FOUR YEARS DELAY, SUBSEQUENT TO THE PASSAGE OF THE ACT OF JUNE 27, 1882, THE UNITED STATES TAKES UP NEVADA'S CLAIM FOR EXAMINATION, WHEN THE VERY FIRST QUESTION RAISED IS ONE OF JURISDICTION, AND WHICH IS DECIDED AGAINST NEVADA.

After the passage of said Act of August 4, 1886, the War Department detailed a board of three army officers under Special Orders No. 232, dated October 6, 1886, to proceed to examine the claims arising under the Act of June 27, 1882, and in the manner contemplated and as provided for in said Acts. The claim of the State of Nevada was the first claim submitted to and examined by said board. This board being in doubt whether, under the terms of said Act of June 27, 1882, they could allow a reimbursement to Nevada of the amount by her expended for interest and extra pay to her troops while in the military service of the United States, referred these two questions to the Secretary of War for his decision. On February 8, 1887, after argument was submitted to him in support of these two elements of Nevada's claim against the United States, the Secretary of War decided as follows:

WAR DEPARTMENT. }
WASHINGTON CITY, February 8, 1887. }

SIR: The Department has received your communication of December 31, 1886, and January 28, 1887, submitting arguments in the claim of the State of Nevada, under the Act of June 27, 1882, for reimbursement of amounts paid by the State for "extra pay" and for interest. Also, your communication of the second instant, inclosing a resolution of the Senate and Assembly of Nevada, requesting favorable action on said claim. In reply, I have the honor to inform you that after a careful consideration of the subject, I am of the opinion that neither the extra pay nor the interest can, under the provisions of the Act, be allowed.

Very respectfully,

WILLIAM C. ENDICOTT,

Secretary of War.

JOHN MULLAN, Esq., Agent of the State of Nevada.

TWO SEPARATE REPORTS (A MAJORITY AND MINORITY) MADE BY THE ARMY BOARD OF WAR CLAIM EXAMINERS, THE MINORITY REPORT ALLOWING ONLY ABOUT TWO AND ONE HALF PER CENT OF THE AMOUNT ACTUALLY EXPENDED BY NEVADA, AND WHICH MINORITY REPORT IS APPROVED BY THE SECRETARY OF WAR.

It will be borne in mind that on January 26, 1884, Secretary Lincoln was of opinion that the Act of June 27, 1882, was sufficiently broad to embrace all proper claims of the State of Nevada, and the Committee on Military Affairs, in consequence thereof, reported to the Senate that that committee was satisfied that no additional legislation was necessary in regard thereto, while Secretary Endicott, on February 8, 1887, decided that the claims for expenditure for interest and extra pay to said troops while in the service of the United States could not be allowed by him under said Act; and further, by approving the award made by the minority examiner, and as will hereinafter be more particularly referred to, also disallowed the amount expended by Nevada and by her paid as her costs for the enrollment of those very troops so called into the service of the United States.

The day following the decision of Secretary Endicott, to wit: February 9, 1887, and contrary to a practice usual in similar cases, said Board of Army Officers, instead of submitting one report to the Secretary of War, submitted two separate and independent reports, one signed by the majority of said board, and the other in the nature of a minority report.

The total of this particular claim of the State of Nevada so presented to said board amounted to $349,697 49. The amount thereof that was allowed in minority report was only $8,559 61. (And this amount was allowed for salary, in part only, and expenses of the Adjutant-General, principally.—STATE CONTROLLER.)

This minority report was approved by the Secretary of War, thereby disallowing or suspending all of Nevada's claim except the paltry sum of 2½ per cent of the money actually expended by Nevada for troops called into the service of the United States, and at the urgent solicitation of the Government of the United States, in its hour of need, while this same board allowed nearly $1,000,000 of the claim of Texas, to wit: $927,242 30, being about 50 per cent of the claim of that State of $1,867,259 13, as presented for reimbursement for the expenses of her Indian wars, which occurred since the rebellion, and prosecuted chiefly, if not solely, for the protection of the inhabitants of the State of Texas. It is worthy of remark that no minority report was submitted in the case of Texas.

The foregoing will show why all past efforts have been of so little avail.

The end is not yet, however, as our Senators and Representatives in Congress and State Agent are alive in the matter, and will maintain that "because of the fact that a small fraction only of this claim has been allowed and paid, and the great bulk thereof rejected, for want of jurisdiction only, there is no valid objection to an authorization by Congress for the payment of what is honestly due the State of Nevada," and a bill of ample scope for its examination and adjustment was introduced by Senator Stewart and passed by the Senate at the last session of Congress, and was reported favorably to the House of Representatives by the Committee on War Claims, but was not reached for passage. It will doubtless be pressed to passage at this session of Congress.

The reason given by the Board of Army Officers for large disallowances of the White Pine and Elko Indian war claims were that greater amounts were paid the volunteers engaged in those wars than the regular pay of the United States army, and that many bills for supplies, etc., were exorbitant or not fully itemized.

Too much cannot be said in praise of Captain John Mullan, our State Agent in Washington, who has had these claims in charge, as he has been untiring in his efforts to secure favorable Congressional action on them for the last six years, and the amount of work he has performed is almost incredible. No attempt will be made to give a detailed statement of his ceaseless labors, but he has made arguments, in and out of season, drawn exhaustive statements and reports, and bills and resolutions innumerable, corresponded voluminously with our State Departments, and has ever been alert for opportunities for effective work.

He has also visited the State several times in pursuit of necessary information, and thus obtained that thorough knowledge of the claims which enabled him to work intelligently in the past, and will fortify him for further useful work in the future. He is well worthy the reward, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

My Dear Governor:

Captain John Mullan left here a few days ago for California. You will pardon me for suggesting in his behalf that he has been very efficient in looking up and urging the payment of the California claims. I know nothing about the arrangements made with him as to compensation, and only wish to say it will be difficult to find a more faithful agent. The Government owes California a large amount of money—between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000—for moneys expended in the equipment and pay of troops and for services in Indian wars and in the suppression of the rebellion. Captain Mullan has been very diligent in collecting the evidence to establish the claims.

I thought it proper that you should know these facts in dealing with the matter, and I think it just that any person who attends to business here as Captain Mullan has should have credit for it, because diligence is rare and negligence the rule in Washington.

Yours very truly,

Captain JOHN MULLAN, Sacramento, California:

DEAR SIR: In response to your letter of the twenty-sixth ultimo, touching the matter of your agency for the Pacific Coast States for claims due them from the United States, I will say you have always been diligent in pressing before Congress and its committees the claims due Oregon, California, and Nevada, as the many letters written to and the interviews had with me by you relating to them have clearly shown.

In the absence of the Senators from California, and at your request, I have on several occasions urged and secured the passage of bills and amendments in the Senate concerning claims of that State. In October last I assisted you in securing an appropriation in the Deficiency Bill of $11,723 64, with which to pay California an Indian war claim allowed by the Treasury Department under Act of June 27, 1882. It was at your suggestion that there was obtained from the War Department the correspondence between that Department and the Governors of California, Oregon, and Nevada, and the military commanders therein, and of said military commanders with said Governors, and covering the period of the rebellion—from 1861 to 1866—so as to have a complete military history of that time, and called for by a resolution submitted by me in the Senate on June 11, 1888.

Very respectfully,

SAN FRANCISCO, January 30, 1889.

Hon. E. HENSHAW, State Senate, California :

DEAR SIR: I am prompted by what is due to an honest man and a faithful servitor of the interest of the State of California, to say something to you in regard to the claims of Captain John Mullan against the State for a certain per cent due him on amounts of money collected and to be collected from the Federal Government by the State.

I simply say what I believe no Representative or Senator from California will think of denying when I state that, but for the tireless zeal, industry, and wonderful activity shown by Captain Mullan in the prosecution of these claims, there would have been no money up to this day paid into the California Treasury by the Federal Government.

The truth is that it is needless to deny, and no person conversant with the machinery of legislation in Congress will deny, that it is almost impossible to get a bill through Congress affecting large public interests without having an active person or persons to work on the outside. Upon this proposition I may safely challenge contradiction upon the part of any person who has ever served a term in Congress. I was the first Representative who ever obtained a favorable report on the bill to pay to the State for school purposes five per cent of the net proceeds of the sales of public lands in the State of California. The proposition was a perfectly plain and simple one. Its justice was beyond controversy. Every public land State in the Union, except California, had received this percentage. It is obviously and indisputably, by every rule of right or fair dealing, due to our State, and yet such are the difficulties that hedge in and environ the progress of a measure of that character, namely, a measure looking to the payment of money from the Federal to the State Government, that it was with the utmost difficulty, although I worked incessantly to that end, that I could get the Public Land Committee to make the report; and then it was not unanimous, and encountered bitter opposition at every step.

I am as anxious as any honest man ought to be to claim all credit that is legitimately my due in connection with my public life; but I should dis-entitle myself to the respect of honorable men if I failed to acknowledge that, without Captain Mullan's assistance I should, probably, not have been able to obtain the favorable report on the bill that was made in the second session of the Forty-eighth Congress.

The effort had been vainly made in antecedent Congresses.

The question may be asked, the measure being so meritorious, why this opposition? The answer is plain. There is always in Congress a large class of men who, under any and all circumstances, oppose any measure involving the payment of any claims from the treasury. Judge Holman, of Indiana, has many followers.

As to the merits of the controversy between Captain Mullan and the State, I say nothing, because I have never carefully looked into the question; but I do say, and shall always say whenever it is opportune, that Captain John Mullan deserves well of the people of the State of California for what he has done at Washington.

I know that in saying this I run counter to public opinion as expressed in a number of influential journals. While, like all other men, I dislike to antagonize any one. I have felt that I ought to say what I have said.

As to whether it will influence your action or not depends upon how you will view it.

Yours very truly,

EXHIBIT No. 32 G.UNITED STATES SENATE,)
WASHINGTON, D. C., February 5, 1889.)Captain JOHN MULLAN, Sacramento, California :

MY DEAR CAPTAIN: I am in receipt of yours of the twenty-sixth ultimo, and have to state that during the last two years, while I have been in the Senate, I have been familiar with your labors in endeavoring to obtain payment of the claims of the State of California against the United States.

You have to my knowledge been energetic, active, and efficient, and have contributed largely in obtaining material and compiling the reports and statements which I have presented to the Senate with regard to them, copies of which you undoubtedly have, and they will show for themselves. Without your aid it would have been impossible for me to have made the reports. The documents upon which they depended were scattered throughout the departments in such a manner that it required much time and diligence to collect them and get them into shape to be presented in an intelligent manner. A stranger without an intimate knowledge of the history of these transactions, which you have, would have been unable to do the work. These reports will furnish the basis for all future action. There is no doubt that the government is indebted to the Senate of California in a very large sum of money. If justice is done, California should be paid about three and a half millions of dollars for expenses incurred in suppressing the rebellion. It may be compromised to some extent, but in any event the sum will be large, but it requires constant work and push. Your acquaintance with the mode of doing business in the departments and in Congress, and also, with a large number of the members of both Houses, has enabled you to become very efficient in pressing these claims. I suppose you have the bill which passed the Senate, requiring the Board of War Claims Examiners to report on the claims of California, Nevada, and Oregon. That bill is now pending in the House, and I am still in hopes that it will pass that body at this session. If such should be the fact, the report which you assisted me to prepare, which will show for itself, will be a guide to the Commission in making their report. If this work had not been done, no Board of Commissioners would have looked up the case and compiled the evidence, from which they could have made a report, covering any considerable portion of the amount due the State. The other bill, providing for a like examination and report upon the Indian war claims of California, is still on the Calendar of the Senate, and has been delayed with all other business on account of the tariff, but I hope to pass it in a few days. Whether it will get through the House or not at this session is uncertain. If you had been able to have stayed here and watched these bills in the House, I have no doubt that we would have gotten them both through before the end of the session, which would have enabled us to present the case to the next Congress free from all questions of fact. The only question which could then arise would be whether the United States would pay an honest claim to the State of California. It was absolutely necessary to free these claims from questions of fact before favorable action could be had in Congress, and the work already done will be the foundation for any action that will hereafter be taken.

(Signed) Yours truly,

 WM. M. STEWART.

Captain JOHN MULLAN, Golden Eagle Hotel, Sacramento, Cal.:

DEAR SIR: I have received your favor of January twenty-sixth, in which you ask me to give expression to such views as I may entertain as to the fidelity and efficiency of your efforts here in behalf of the States of the Pacific in the matter of pressing the consideration of the claims of those States against the General Government.

In reply, I can only say that to my personal knowledge you have been energetic and untiring in urging upon the attention both of Congress and the Executive Departments the justice and equity of the claims, and the duty of the Government to recognize and pay them.

It gives me pleasure to state that in my opinion your services have been of great value to the States interested by the perseverance with which, in season and out, you kept bringing the claims forward, and by the earnestness with which in personal interviews, written communications, and formal arguments, you upheld the merits of the claims and insisted on their payment.

Captain JOHN MULLAN:

SIR: It affords us pleasure to say, in reply to your letter of the twenty-sixth ultimo, that we are fully cognizant of the strenuous efforts on your part to have considered and adjusted the war claims, in the settlement of which you have acted in the capacity of agent.

From personal knowledge we can bear testimony to the fact that your preparation by means of numerous abstracts and vouchers of the rebellion war claims of California is indubitably a work which could not have been accomplished without much expense and great painstaking in the matter of calculations, and in the arrangement of the mass of material connected with that claim.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

COMPLETION OF THE SWORN STATEMENT
OF
JOHN MULLAN
RELATIVE TO THE UNPAID CLAIMS OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA
AGAINST THE

Made to the SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE appointed under ASSEMBLY CON-

STATEMENT.

To the Special Joint Committee appointed under Assembly Concurrent Resolution No. 5, adopted by the Legislature of California January 26, 1889.

SIRS: In completion of the statement, which by leave of your honorable committee I have been permitted to submit for your consideration, I have the honor to now invite your attention to the recitals printed on page four, part one, of this statement as follows, to wit:

Fifth—If certain Acts of the Governor of California, hereinafter referred to, are to be recognized by the Legislature as the acts of the State, then I respectfully submit to you that on the third, sixth, tenth, and twenty-fifth of February, and on the sixth of March, 1888, the obligations and good faith of the State of California, due me under and by virtue of my said employments, seem not to have been maintained, and in consequence of certain acts of the Governor of California on said dates, and whatever purpose or intention may have been contemplated thereby, yet they nevertheless were matters that involved the good faith of this State in its obligations toward me, under and by virtue of my said employments, and which acts of the Governor, and the mode and circumstances of their performance and the effect thereof, I now respectfully submit to you were in violation of such good faith. These acts of the Governor are set forth in exhibits hereto attached, made parts hereof, marked No. 14 to No. 19.

Sixth—If a certain other act of the Governor of California, hereinafter referred to, is to be recognized by the Legislature as the act of the State, then I further respectfully submit to you that on the eighteenth day of January, 1889, the obligations and good faith of the State of California, due me under and by virtue of my said employments, seem not to have been maintained; and in consequence of a certain act of the Governor of California on said date, and which act consisted in his refusal to pay me the compensation as determined and authorized to be fixed and paid through him, by the Legislature of California, and due and payable to me on that date when I delivered to him two drafts for $11,723 64, collected by me under and by virtue only of my said employments, from and delivered to me by the United States in liquidation and payment on account of one of said claims, recognized by the United States to be due to this State.

Seventh—The history of this particular claim was duly submitted by me to the Governor of California in a paper, copy of which is hereto attached and made part hereof, marked Exhibit No. 20.

Eighth—The reasons alleged by the Governor of California for such refusal, were set forth in a paper, copy of which is hereto attached and made part hereof, marked Exhibit No. 21.

Ninth—Whatever purpose or intention may have been contemplated in this refusal by the Governor of California to pay me for my services in this case, and as set forth in said Exhibit No. 20, yet it nevertheless was a matter that involved the good faith of the State in its obligations towards me, under and by virtue of my said employments, and which act of the Governor, and the mode and circumstances of its performance, and the effect thereof, I now respectfully submit to you were in violation of such good faith.

Tenth—As the Governor of California has failed, up to this date, to pay me for my services the compensation as aforesaid, for the collection of this claim from the United States for the State of California, therefore I now respectfully submit to you that the State of California has not fulfilled its part of its agreed obligation now due me in this case by this State.

1. The Governor of California having telegraphed me at Washington City, on February 3, 1888, these words: * * * "I wish you to distinctly understand that I do not recognize your authority to act in behalf of California. * * * I prefer receiving all further communications in regard to the matter from the duly accredited representatives from California in the Senate and in the House," was, in my opinion, sufficient justification to prevent me from making any response whatsoever, either by letter, telegram, or otherwise, at any time to any of the matters contained in Exhibits Nos. 14 to 19, or to matters referred to therein.

2. As soon, however, as I learned that the Governor of California had caused to be submitted to the honorable Secretaries of the Treasury and Interior Departments matters set forth in Exhibits Nos. 17, 18, and 19, I deemed it proper to take due cognizance of all thereof, by submitting to said officials of the Government of the United States the facts therein and my views of the laws thereof.

3. At none of the dates, when the matters set forth in these exhibits was submitted to the Treasury Department by the Governor of California, were there, in fact, any claims of any kind of this State against the United States pending therein, sub judice or undetermined, wherein any decision could properly be made by the proper officers of that department, charged by law with the due consideration, adjudication, and determination of any question of fact or law raised by virtue of the matters so then brought to the notice of that department by the Governor of California.

4. At all said dates all the unpaid claims of this State against the United States, without a single exception, were pending either before Congress or before some department of the Government of the United States, other than the Treasury Department; and, therefore, there was no case then in the Treasury Department to which the notice of the Governor of California could at said dates properly attach or apply.

5. Nor did any such actual case arise therein, until after October 19, 1888 (and that case was the Humboldt County Indian War Claim of this State arising in August, 1861, when Hon. John G. Downey was Governor of California, and provided for by the Act of Congress of June 27, 1882, and as set forth in my Exhibit No. 20 herein), that rendered it either proper, pertinent, or necessary to determine said matters.

6. It is sufficient, therefore, for the purposes of this statement, to inform your honorable committee that when the time had properly arrived in the Treasury Department to legally reimburse this State for said Indian War Claim, the time had also arrived therein when it was proper to consider, adjudicate, and determine all matters so raised by the Governor of California, and in connection with said claim; (which for six years and more had been duly represented by me as the agent and attorney of this State before every possible tribunal having jurisdiction therein and thereof) and in connection with my authority and identity therewith in these premises.

7. Prior to November 23, 1888, all these matters had been duly referred to the honorable Third Auditor of the Treasury Department, and on that date that officer primarily determined the same in words and figures as follows, to wit:

November 23, 1888. }

Respectfully referred to the honorable Second Comptroller, recommending that Captain John Mullan be recognized as the attorney for the State of California, and the draft to be issued in the name of the Governor in payment of the amount found due the State as her claims. Certificate No. 3,219 of September 18, 1888, be remitted in his (Mullan's) care, as has been the practice heretofore in all such cases.

[Signed.]

JOHN S. WILLIAMS,
Auditor,
L. W. F.

8. On November 23, 1888, all these matters and said action of the honorable Third Auditor were duly reported to the honorable Second Comptroller of the Treasury Department, and that officer duly considered, adjudicated, and finally determined the same in words and figures as follows, to wit :

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, }
SECOND COMPTROLLER'S OFFICE, December 29, 1888. }

Respectfully returned to the Third Auditor approved.

Let the draft be made payable to the order of the Governor of the State of California, and be sent to him in the care of John Mullan, the Agent and Attorney of the State.

Memorandum of decision to follow.

(Signed)

SIGOURNEY BUTLER,
Comptroller, S. M. H.

Copy of this "Memorandum of Decision" is hereto attached, made part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 34.

9. Your honorable committee, I assume, will take due cognizance of the public fact that, under the laws of the United States, the honorable Comptrollers of the Treasury Department at Washington control the entire disbursements of all the public moneys of the United States.

No public money whatsoever, wheresoever, or whensoever, is paid out by that Department of the Government of the United States without their knowledge, without their consent, without their signature. Their rulings, adjudications, and confirmations are the decisions of that Department, which finally adjudicate and determine to whom, how, when, where the public moneys of the United States are to be paid, and to whom, in any and every case, the drafts of that Department shall be delivered, under the supervision of the Secretary of the Treasury.

Their decisions on all controverted or contested questions of either fact or law properly arising within their respective jurisdictions, affecting individuals, States, or other corporations, constitute the law of the cases in which they are rendered, and become the precedents to guide the subsequent actions of themselves and of their successors when deciding similar cases arising within their respective jurisdictions.

These decisions the President does not review and cannot reverse, but which all Secretaries of the Treasury respect by conforming thereto.

This decision, therefore, of this very high officer of the Treasury Department is the law of my case, in so far as my present relation to these claims in that department is concerned; and while even that decision does not affirmatively declare the whole of my legal rights, as I have ever maintained and do still continue to maintain the same in these premises, yet it is sufficient for the present, and for the purposes of this statement that I rest that branch of my case where that decision has placed it. This decision is an adjudication by a co-ordinate branch of the Government having judicial powers; that resolutions which did not appropriate money then in the treasury of this State confirmed my employment as attorney and agent of this State in these claims, and is binding on all having authority to deal therewith.

It might possibly be information to your Honorable Committee for me to state that Hon. John G. Downey, elected Lieutenant-Governor of California, and who became its Constitutional Governor by virtue of a vacancy occurring in the office of Governor, attempted to revoke the employment of Hon. Samuel B. Smith, theretofore employed by this State to collect certain of its Indian war claims, and that the officers of the Treasury Department in that, as in my case, ignored such attempted revocation, by refusing to recognize the same, and in this connection I call your attention to the fact that said Samuel B. Smith had been appointed by Governor Downey himself. A report of that case was duly made July 27, 1862, to Hon. Leland Stanford, Governor of California, copy of which I attach hereto, make part hereof, and mark Exhibit No. 35.

12. The questions of fact and law so raised in the Treasury Department by the Governor of California, so disposed of by said Auditor, and so adjudicated and determined by said Comptroller, not having as yet had the effect of terminating that branch of my matter in the office of the Governor of California, wherefore the necessity of my appearing before your honorable committee, as a petitioner and in order to show that the good faith of this State towards me has not heretofore and is not now being maintained; provided always, that all the said acts of the Governor of California in these premises, as hereinbefore or as hereinafter shown, are to be recognized by this Legislature as the acts of the State of California, which I deny they are.

13. The Governor of California has incorporated in his regular biennial message to this Legislature an extended reference to me and to my relations to these claims, omitting, however, to extend any reference to any history of the claims themselves, as to when, where, how, under what authority they originated, their past condition, present status, future prospects, or efforts made to collect them, and results attending such efforts in every or any case.

I deem it, therefore, due myself, and eminently proper to take due cognizance of all the recitals in said reference, and in any and all published utterances of the Governor of California in reference to my relations to said claims. I am not willing and do not intend that my silence shall be construed as an acquiescence in or an acceptance, on my part, of the correctness of all the recitals therein made. Wherefore, I now submit to your honorable committee in a respectful manner, such reply as I deem at this time to be pertinent and due myself in all these premises; and hence attach hereto, make part hereof, and mark Exhibit No. 36, an extract from said message of the Governor of California.

14. The Governor of California says: * * * "Since which time (January 19, 1874) the State has had no legally constituted agent or attorney in Washington," etc.

Now the Governor of California must have forgotten, by omitting to state or to disclose to the knowledge of this Legislature, or in any manner bring to its notice, the public fact that Messrs. Hale & Nosler were employed as agents on March 15, 1872, by the Governor of California, Hon. Newton Booth, under authority of a concurrent resolution of the Legislature of this State, adopted March 1, 1872, to collect at Washington the principal of the Rebellion war claims of this State against the United States, and which claims aggregate the sum of $2,938,623, and to do this service for a commission of 10 per cent thereof.

The Governor of California must have further forgotten, by omitting to bring to the notice of this Legislature the further fact that the Legislature of this State on February 26, 1881, after reciting the fact that said ten per cent commission was a totally inadequate compensation for the service to be performed and the necessary expenses to be incurred by said agents, did also in another concurrent resolution, direct the same to be increased to a 25 per cent commission for the collection of said claims (so aggregating $2,938,623).

The Governor of California must have further forgotten, by omitting to bring to the notice of this Legislature, the further fact that under authority of said last named concurrent resolution (California Statutes, 1881, page 150), the Governor of California, Hon. George C. Perkins, on March 1, 1881, fixed the commission of Messrs. Hale & Nosler at 25 per cent of said claims (so aggregating $2,938,623).

While this information might have been elsewhere found, it could certainly have been found recited on pages 468 and 469 of "Mullan's California Claims Reports," a book then and now in the office of the Governor of California, and in the State Library, and in probably every executive office in the Capitol of this State.

These two concurrent resolutions of the Legislature of this State, in the case of Messrs. Hale & Nosler, have not yet lost their life and validity by virtue of the collection of said claims, because said claims, up to this date, remain yet uncollected.

These two concurrent resolutions in their case have not yet been removed from the statutes of this State, because they yet stand still unrepealed.

These two agents, as employes of this State, are not now and heretofore have not been, before your honorable committee as petitioners, because the Governor of California has not yet undertaken to either revoke, vacate, or disturb, either here or in Washington, their employments.

Their employments are not mentioned by the Governor of California in his said message, or in any other state paper, or public letter published by the press for public information, nor are their names by virtue of any relation they sustain to these claims, referred to for private or public condemnation. On the contrary, their employment, to repeat language used by the Governor of California in my case, * * * "have been allowed to continue * * * with great loss to this State." etc., etc., provided always the declaration of the Governor of California in my case be correct, and all of which I deny.

The Governor of California further says "that my commissions equal the sum of $800,000." etc.

This is error, because: First—That sum nearly equals the actual amounts of the principal of the claims which I represent under and by virtue of my said employments derived directly from this State.

Second—The amount of a claim, as alleged or presented, is usually one sum, and the actual amount usually allowed and collected is another and different, and generally a much smaller sum.

This proposition is no where better or later illustrated by Congress than in these very claims themselves, where, in an effort to secure an official examination into these very California Indian war claims, I desired that an inquiry be also authorized to be made to officially ascertain the amount of interest that the State of California has heretofore paid on or obligated. She herself has money to pay in these very old Indian war claims matters; and on Wednesday, February 13, 1889, certain proceedings were had in the Senate upon the bill therefor, to wit, Senate No. 3439, by me referred to on pages 8 and 9 of this statement, and printed on page 17 as my Exhibit No. 23, Part No. 2. These proceedings I extract from page 1905, Congressional Record of February 14, 1889, as follows, to wit:

CALIFORNIA INDIAN WAR CLAIMS.

MR. STEWART: I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate Bill 3439, Order of Business 2315.

By unanimous consent, the bill (S. 3439) authorizing the Secretary of War to ascertain the amount of money which has been expended and the obligations assumed by the State of California, growing out of Indian hostilities therein and upon the borders thereof, not heretofore reimbursed by the United States, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

MR. SHERMAN: I move to amend the bill by striking out the clause beginning in line eighteen down to and including line twenty-two, as follows:

The Secretary of War is hereby authorized and directed to ascertain the amount of interest paid and assumed by said State on obligations incurred for the purposes hereinbefore enumerated, and which has not heretofore been reimbursed by the United States.

And also, in line twenty-six, after the word "enumerated," by striking out all down to and including "United States," in line twenty-nine, as follows:

Including the amount of interest actually paid and assumed by said State on moneys borrowed for the purposes above enumerated and not heretofore reimbursed by the United States.

So as to make the clause read:

The Secretary of War shall report to Congress the amount of money which may be thus ascertained to have been actually paid and assumed by the State of California on account of the matters above enumerated.

MR. STEWART: I have no objection to the amendment.

MR. COCKRELL: What is that amendment?

MR. SHERMAN: I have moved to strike out all that relates to interest. As a matter of course, if the Government ought to pay interest (which I deny, for the Government does not pay interest anyway), it should pay it without respect to any rate paid by the State of California.

MR. STEWART: The bill as it is would not commit us to anything except what has been done.

MR. SHERMAN: It is a recognition of the claim, and I think it had better be stricken out.

MR. STEWART: I do not care about delaying the bill by discussion, and I will consent to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

For the purpose of a full and correct history of this measure I append hereto a copy of said bill, so amended, and which passed the Senate on February 13, 1889, and made part hereof, and marked Exhibit No. 37.

It is proper that I should here also state that Hon. Thomas L. Thompson, of California, made every proper effort to secure the consideration and passage of that Senate Bill, No. 3439 in the House, on February 15, 1889, (see Congressional Record, July 15, 1889, page 2,006), but objection was raised thereto by Hon. S. Z. Landes, of Illinois, but not to my surprise, because that Representative having been supplied with certain material relating to the State Claims of this State, has heretofore used the same apparently to defeat these very claims.

But resuming the allegation of the Governor of California that my commissions will equal the sum of $800,000, I beg to repeat that this is error, but if your Honorable Committee believe this statement of the Governor be correct, then I hereby agree to now take in cash one fifth of that sum and relinquish and surrender forever to this State the remaining four fifths, and to enter into good and sufficient bonds to continue to faithfully prosecute to the end, all of said claims at my own expense, without other cost to this State, and without further or other compensation, and to do this in any manner your Honorable Committee can possibly indicate, or in which this Legislature can in any manner require.

The Governor of California further says "that I received $7,735 30 out of appropriation of $31,583 26 made by Congress," etc.

Now this is another error, and because the $7,735 30, which I did receive, was the exact amount which the Legislature on March 3, 1883, directed to be paid to me for collecting for this State two claims from the United States, to wit:

1. Modoc Indian war claim.....	$495 72
3. Fifteen per cent rebate on this State's quota of the Direct War Tax, $254,538 67.	38,180 80
Making a total aggregate of	$38,676 52

At the date (January 6, 1883) when I collected the first of said claims, the State of California appeared upon the books of the Treasury Department indebted to the United States in the sum of $7,093 26.

This sum the United States claimed to be a debt due by the State of California on account of an unpaid balance of her aforesaid quota of said Direct War Tax.

Therefore the proper Comptroller of the Treasury Department, in this as in all like cases, instead of permitting the amount of the aforesaid Modoc Indian war claim to be paid to this State, either in money or "by draft drawn to the order of the Governor of California," directed that said sum should be duly credited, pro tanto, upon the books of the Treasury Department as a set-off to said amount of California's Direct War Tax debt, which was done, and when done, said debt was reduced to the sum of $6,597 54, at which figure it continued until July 7, 1884, the date I collected for this State said 15 per cent rebate of said War Tax, amounting to the sum of $38,180 80 (see Exhibit No. 6, page 288, "California State Claims Report," November 1, 1886).

The said Comptrollers of the Treasury Department taking the same course in this, as in the former case, directed that said balance of debt, $6,597 54, should be deducted from said $38,180 80, which was done; and being done, left a cash balance of $31,583 26 then due the State of California, and for which a draft was only issued, made payable to the order of the Governor of California, duly delivered to me, by me duly delivered to the Governor of California, and the subject matter by him duly reported to the Legislature in January, 1885 (see my Exhibit No. 10, and pages 10, 11, 29, 30, 31, of Part No. 1 of this statement).

Due reference to this whole direct war tax matter was made by me in the report submitted to the Governor of California November 1, 1886, entitled "Mullan's State Claims Report," and found on the pages thereof as follows, to wit: 20, 21, 22, 127, 128, 131, 135, 140, 141, 142, 143, 144, 145, 146, 147, 159, 164, 176, 200, 209, 223, 246, 262, 277, 278, 279, 280.

While said report may not be of material importance, yet had it been carefully read by the Governor he might not have even made the aforesaid error.

The Governor of California further substantially says:

That my favorite method was by insidious attack upon the General and Common School Funds of this State, and whereby were worn a medley of legislative resolutions with crafty entanglements of executive appointments, etc.

While I have just cause to be aggrieved, and am exceedingly outraged by this language, subscribed in a public State paper by the Governor of California, language seldom used by the Courts of this State in the exercise of a prerogative—peculiarly judicial—even when addressing any of its convicted embezzlers and defaulters of the public funds of this State; and not even then until they are first charged under oath, legally tried, judicially convicted, and in mercy heard in their own defense: yet, even under this provocation and outrage, I cannot, at least now, forget the duty I owe this State as one of its citizens, to wit: to respect the office of its Governor and to be respectful to whomsoever the votes of the majority of the people may have placed therein to perform its duties and to execute their will.

Therefore replying even to said language and to all and to whatsoever possible meaning it was intended to convey, I state and declare that said recitals are utterly without foundation and not true

After the date of my first employment I was not in the State of California at any of the dates of any of my said employments ever thereafter made.

I was not in California at any of the dates when any of the Governors of California either prepared their messages or delivered them to the Legislature of this State in 1883, or in 1885, or in 1887.

I was not in California when the Legislature of this State was in session in either 1883, or in 1885, or in 1887, nor did I have hired in my service any person whomsoever to represent me in either of said years or on any of said occasions, or for any of the purposes of doing that which was done or left undone by any executive officer of this State, or by the Legislature thereof, except the Hon. Grove L. Johnson, in 1887 only, and then contingent only upon any attempt being made to annul my contract with this State.

18. The Governor of California further says: "That no executive officer of this State in the absence of legislation was qualified to employ me," etc.

Now, that might or might not be so, but if admitted it would fail to prove anything in my case; and because my employments having all been made subject to legislative approval, and the Legislature having given its approval in a mode satisfactory to itself, my employments therefore and thereafter became the joint acts of the executive officers who conferred them, and of the Legislature that approved them whenever the latter acted thereon. If this power to employ me was not lodged with the constitutional executive civil officers of this State, then it was lodged with the Legislatures, and vice versa; but in my case the Legislature and constitutional executive civil officers (for it must be remembered that the Governor of California is not the whole Executive Department of California) united and concurred in what was done as in this statement set forth.

19. The Governor of California further says and repeats: "That any attempt to ratify a void Act is itself void," etc. This too is another error, and the declaration of very bad law.

Acts void ab initio, and to be incapable of legislative ratification or validation, are only those which are forbidden by express provision of law, or those which are contrary to the policy of express law, or those which are contrary to public policy, or those which are contra bonos mores or immoral.

I submit that none of my employments belong to either of said classes.

But if any of the Constitutional civil executive officers of this State in any manner exceeded their powers, the Supreme Court of this State has not only declared the power of the Legislature to ratify the same, but has also declared that the mode of such ratification may be by resolution. This rule is a guide for all to follow, and which none are permitted to legally ignore. This rule, so laid down, is as follows, to wit:

In Grogan vs. San Francisco, 18 Cal. 590, 609, the Court, Field, C. J., says:

"The State may ratify the acts of her agents upon a subject within the constitutional control of the Legislature, when they exceed their powers. She may do this by legislation directly affirming the acts, or by legislation proceeding upon their assumed validity. The reason is obvious: There is no limitation as to the mode in which the State may give her assent, except that it must be by an act or resolution of her Legislature."

(See also 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. 3d ed., §139; Crawshaw vs. Roxbury, 7 Gray, 374.)

But if this even be not so and all these employments were void ab initio, then why the necessity of an attempt of the Governor of California to revoke them?

If void, what did the Governor of California find in them to revoke?

20. The Governor of California further says: "That the Legislature of 1883 and 1885 was not prudent or wise." etc.

That may or may not be so; but in either event I submit that it is neither the province nor the prerogative of the Governor of California in 1889 to sit in serious judgment, or decide upon, or officially decree either as to the propriety or as to the wisdom of the Legislature of 1883 or 1885. That legislation has passed beyond the control of the Governor of California in 1889 to approve or disapprove, it is before him now only for his execution.

21. The Governor of California further says: "That it is probable that the Legislatures of 1883 or 1885 had no just conception of the propositions involved." etc.

A sufficient reply to this is, that the employments acted upon by two Legislatures in 1883, and in 1885, were all duly laid before them by two Governors in their regular messages, or referred to in part by other executive officers, in their regular official reports duly published and printed; and all before any action was had thereon by either the Legislature of 1883 or that of 1885.

That these Governors, executive officers, and Legislatures, in their respective official capacities, represented in those years the will and were the choice of the people of this State, and that all knew full well what they were then doing; and that neither of them needed a monitor to instruct or lead them, nor a guardian to protect them.

22. The Governor of California further says, "That it is difficult to see how (my employment or) appointments can be reconciled to the Constitution," etc.

It is a sufficient reply to this to state that the Governor of California is not the tribunal whose official vision is called upon to see, and decide upon the unconstitutionality of any action of the Legislatures of this State of 1883 or 1885; and should he undertake to exercise this prerogative to decide or to execute his own decisions therein, it does not follow that such decisions will be accepted as either orthodox or authoritative, or his attempted execution thereof binding upon those affected thereby. The Courts have decided and writers on the construction of constitutional and statutory law of acknowledged ability, whose writings are the text-books of the age, have declared that this prerogative is judicial.

The Governor of California further says, "that my appointments or any employments were without a pretense of necessity," etc.

A sufficient reply to this is that two of his predecessors and other constitutional civil executive officers, acting in their separate and independent offices, which the Governor of California cannot rightfully invade, and whose functions to do or undo he cannot rightfully exercise, thought differently, and exercising a discretion therein, acted as in this statement set forth, but even their action was submitted to the Legislature of this State, with a recommendation for legislative approval. That the Legislatures of 1883 and 1885, with the whole subjects before them, duly approved and ratified said Acts of said executive officers, and that the matters are, therefore, now res adjudicata and ended; beyond at least the power of the Governor of California in 1889 to vacate or legally disturb.

The principle of stare decisis is no less binding upon the Executive Department of a State than it is upon the Judicial Department; and I submit that it is not only binding upon both, but also upon its Legislative Department in all matters that contain any proposition whereby is sought in any form to impair the obligation of any contract of employment.

24. The Governor of California further says: "That his action in revoking my appointments has been governed by a determination to save to the State the large sum of money attempted to be given to me," etc.

A sufficient reply to this is, the inquiry as follows, to wit:

Why then so forgetful in the effort to save to this State the sum of my commissions—whatever they may be—not also and simultaneously make a similar determination, and a similar effort for a similar purpose, to save a sum five times as large as I expect to ever receive; by also revoking similar employments to collect similar claims for similar Commissions, paid in a similar manner, derived under similar authority, and proceeding under similar Concurrent Resolutions of this State in the case of Messrs. James E. Hale and Thomas M. Nosler?

While the employments of Messrs. Hale and Nosler to collect State claims, aggregating $2,938,623 at a commission of 25 per cent thereof, are thus left intact, undisturbed, at no time place or manner referred to, not even brought to the notice of this Legislature either for information or condemnation, when so large a space in said message is devoted to recitals that relate exclusively to me and to my relations to similar claims?

Why this silence in their cases? Why should my employments alone have been singled out in the past for attempted Executive revocation and for oft-repeated public condemnation, and vigorously continued even up to this date?

Why should my name alone be improperly advertised far and wide, not only in this State, but throughout the country, to my great detriment, and that too not "by the certain and swift communication by the mails and express companies," but by the more swift means of the telegraph; even, too, if it should prove more expensive to this State, to the diminution, and it may be, detriment of the telegraphic service fund provided for the office of the Governor of California. The first notice of the official views of the Governor of California, alleged to be held by him in these premises, were brought to my notice by telegraph on February 3, 1888 (see my Exhibit No. 14, page 61, part 1, of this statement.)

Not only this but the same were renewed, and that too by telegraph (see my Exhibit No. 15, page 62 of this statement, Part No. 1).

Not only this, but notification of this fact was also transmitted to the Honorable Secretary of the Treasury, February 10, 1888, and that too by telegraph (see my Exhibit No. 17, page 63 of this statement, Part No. 1).

Not only this, but notification of this fact was also transmitted to the Honorable Secretary of the Interior and Commissioner of the General Land Office, February 25, 1888, and that too by telegraph (see my Exhibit No. 18, page 63 of this statement, Part No. 1).

Not only this but similar notices (as I am informed) were sent to each Senator and to every Representative in Congress from California, and that too by telegraph.

Why this sudden, simultaneous, swift, and, to this State, expensive procedure in my case, a mode which would have been harsh even had it been adopted and dealt out to an expensive and faithless employé in either private or public service?

I was not a charge upon, or an expense to, the public Treasury of this State, for I was working for a compensation that was to be contingent only at my own expense, and I had been so doing for nearly ten years last past.

Whether I had been active, diligent, and faithful or not, might or might not be for me alone to state; but that fact is fully and credibly vouched for, and abundantly corroborated by being certified to by those who officially know, and knowing have, over their own signatures, so declared, and as set forth in their own letters and my exhibit herein, No. 32, A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H, I, K, L, M, N, O, P, pages 27 to 33 of this statement, Part No. 2; and which diligence and fidelity so therein certified to has not yet been publicly questioned, even by the Governor of California himself, so far as I now know.

Similar certificates from Hon. Thomas L. Thompson and Hon. J. K. Luttrell, came too late to be inserted in Part No. 2 of this statement, and hence I now attach them hereto, and mark same Exhibit No. 32 O and Exhibit No. 32 P (and Exhibits No. 39 and No. 40 herein).

25. To demand full payment for all claims is very easy. To collect partial payment for any claim is very difficult, where the United States is the debtor.

To introduce in Congress bills to pay these claims, have them read a first and second time, and referred to appropriate committees, is a very easy matter, even where the introducer of such bills is their author and framer, but that alone is not legislation, nor that sumum bonum which secures the collection of these claims.

Whatever might be done elsewhere, I affirm that no bill or resolution can be introduced in Congress as late as four or five P. M. in one day, reported back next day, without the party seriously affected by such bill or resolution being first duly and fully heard, and on same day successfully railroaded through either branch of that body, based only upon verbal statements not verified under oath, and without previous notice to the party so seriously affected thereby.

What Congress has expected and without which it would never act favorably upon these unpaid claims of California, were facts, properly supported, properly presented, the necessity, propriety, and wisdom of the proposed legislation fully and satisfactorily shown, and precedents adduced.

The record in my case abundantly shows that ten years of my life have been continuously, actively, and faithfully devoted, at my own expense, in laying broad and well the legal and equitable foundations upon which these claims now rest: and the chief labor having thus been done, the building thereon hereafter, will be the more easy by our Senators and Representatives in Congress from this State.

RESULTS OR CONDITION OF THESE UNPAID CLAIMS ON FEBRUARY 25, 1889.

But even now the results so far secured and the progress at this date made in these claims, are as follows, to wit:

First—Direct War Tax Claim has passed both Senate and House, and on this date, February 25, 1889, is in the hands of the President.

Second—Five Per Cent Claim has passed the Senate, been favorably recommended in the House, where it is now pending awaiting action.

Third—Rebellion War Claim has passed the Senate, been favorably recommended in the House, where it is now pending awaiting action.

Fourth—Indian War Claim has passed the Senate, is now on the Speaker's table in the House, where it is now pending awaiting action.

Fifth—Refunding Interest favorably reported in the House, and unfavorably acted on in the Senate.

Sixth—Return of moneys for improper sales of lands, etc., favorably recommended in the House, where it is now pending awaiting action.

Seventh—Return of fees in process of examination in the General Land Office, pending further possible action thereon by the head of that department.

26. While the public acts and public utterances of the Governor of California, hereinbefore and hereinafter recited, have inflicted great personal, financial, and professional injury upon me in various ways, and while until now I have chosen to be silent (not for the want of very much to say, but only because the time when I deemed it proper and opportune to speak had not, in my opinion, arrived, and at which I could properly and fully submit to this State, or to other of my legal employers, through the Legislature, that which I wished to speak, or as necessary to be by me spoken), yet I submit to your honorable committee that none of these acts and utterances have as yet divorced me from my duty or deterred me from pursuing the even tenor of the way I have hitherto marked out for myself to follow in connection with any of the matters in these premises set forth.

27. I have tried to believe that the Governor of California erred in the past, and I still try to believe that he continues to err in the present—for reasons as follows, to wit:

First—Because either he has not been fully informed, or because he has been misinformed as to all the facts in my case.

Second—Because he has either mistaken, or because he has misapplied the law in my case. The Governor of California has never at any time afforded me, or others knowing equally well with me, the facts, any opportunity, at any time, to explain to him any of the facts in any of these cases, before he placed himself on record in regard thereto, so far as I am now informed.

A continued want of knowledge of all the facts and a continued erroneous understanding or misapplication of the law, on the part of the Governor of California could eventually and inevitably but lead to embarrassments, misunderstandings, and discomfitures, which, while not of my creation I yet could make clear, disentangle, and easily understood, when at any proper time and place they were all compressed within the crucible of truth.

For these and other sufficient causes moving me thereto, I have sought to make this statement not only explicit, but so full that your honorable Committee can easily supply all that it lacks in either explicitness or fullness.

It is for these reasons that I now respectfully further pass in review the causes of the action of the Governor of California as alleged, or, as assigned by himself.

28. First—In his communication to me of February 10, 1888, he said: "That my employments," or as he termed them, my "appointments, were vague, indefinite, and uncertain."

And yet the Governor of California, in that very same communication, described all my said employments with a perspicuity remarkable for clearness and fullness; by naming each claim, each subject, each employment, each employer; by enumerating each date of each Executive and of each Legislative action, and each sum, taking the precaution, seemingly, not to understate in any case, for he overstated in almost every case, the greatest possible sum in each, whenever he stated any sum at all.

After such description and enumeration what, I ask, was left of said employments or appointments to which the terms "vague, indefinite, and uncertain" could possibly apply?

But even if there was anything left to which even the Governor of California might apply these terms, then he should have remembered that by following the maxim, "Certum est quod certum reddi potest"—nothing is uncertain in law or fact that can be made certain—he, too, might have discovered that even that which might have first appeared to him "vague, indefinite, and uncertain," was not so in either fact or law.

29. Second—The reasons assigned by the Governor of California to the honorable Secretary of the Treasury were substantially that my employments were without legal authority; were not ratified, and that by virtue of the power in him vested as the Chief Executive of this State (without, however, defining what those powers were, or the place where said Secretary or any one else could find them in any of the laws or Constitution of this State,) etc., he revoked the same.

But the proper officials of the Treasury Department having the authority of law to consider, adjudicate, and decide upon the facts and the law in this case, in so far as these claims and these matters related to that Department were, or are concerned, not being able to reconcile the view of the law so expressed by the Governor of California, with their views of their own duty in the premises acted, adjudicated, decided, and finally declared as herein stated, and as set forth in Exhibit No. 34.

30. Third—The reasons assigned by the Governor of California to the Legislature are set forth in my Exhibit No. 36. In order that no error of the Governor of California, in this message, may escape unnoticed, or acquiesced in by my silence thereon, and even at the risk of traveling along the line of doubt between matters legislative and judicial, I now submit as follows, to wit: One of the questions that might possibly be asked herein might be whether or not the resolutions of the Legislature of this State, as adopted in my case March 3, 1883, and March 3, 1885, and also as adopted in the case of Messrs. Hale and Nosler, March 1, 1872, and February 26, 1881, should have been approved by the Governor of California, in order to give them full force and effect, or render them binding in good faith upon this State when dealing with either them or myself under our respective separate employments.

Section 407 of the Political Code of California declares that the Secretary of State is charged with the custody:

First—Of the enrolled copy of the Constitution.

Second—Of all Acts and Resolutions passed by the Legislature.

Third—Of the Journals of the Legislature.

Fourth—Of the Great Seal.

Fifth—Of all books, records, deeds, parchments, maps, and papers kept or deposited in his office pursuant to law.

The Secretary of State of California has the custody of all Resolutions passed by the Legislature of this State. I fail anywhere to find either in the Constitution or laws of this State, any legal distinction or legal difference between a Concurrent and Joint Resolution adopted by the Legislature, in fact and in essence they are one and the same thing and mode of expressing the will of the Legislature as contradistinguished from a Bill or Act.

Section 324 of the same Code declares that "every joint resolution, unless a different time is prescribed therein, takes effect from its passage;" and if there be no legal difference or distinction in fact and in essence between a joint or concurrent resolution, and if they are one and the same thing as a mode of expressing the will of the Legislature, then every concurrent resolution, unless a different time is prescribed therein, takes effect from its passage.

A careful examination of the old Constitution, ratified and adopted November 13, 1849, or as amended November 4, 1856, or September 3, 1862, or of the new Constitution, ratified and adopted May 3, 1879, no where discloses to me either the necessity or the authority of the Governor of California to approve either a concurrent or a joint resolution adopted by the Legislature of this State.

A similar examination of all the laws ever passed by the Legislature of California up to and including March 3, 1885, no where discloses to me the necessity or authority of the Governor of California to approve either a concurrent or joint resolution adopted by the Legislature, with probably one exception, where the Legislature proposes amendments to the Constitution of the State.

In view of these facts, and of the further fact that the Constitution of this State is the primary source of power of the Executive, and that the Executive cannot properly exercise any power not granted to him either by it or approved by the Legislature either by Act or resolution, it follows as legally as it does logically that a concurrent or joint resolution would acquire no additional virtue or validity by being approved or signed by the Governor of California; nor would it lack an iota of virtue or validity by the absence of either his approval or signature, and that if such resolution were either approved or signed by the Governor of California, it would be simply superfluous and acts of supererogation.

31. Another question might be, whether the Legislature has the power to approve and ratify employment of an agent or attorney heretofore employed by an executive officer of this State, made subject to the discretion and approval of the Legislature by a Concurrent Resolution?

The Constitution of California does not prohibit the Legislature, the law-making power of this State, from so acting; and as the Legislature can exercise all powers not forbidden, and in any mode not otherwise prescribed, it follows as legally as it does logically, that the Legislature in its unrestricted omnipotence had such power, and having the power it also had the prerogative to exercise that power in any mode its discretion determined, and that in these cases it has chosen to exercise such prerogative and discretion in the form or mode of Concurrent Resolutions.

These resolutions did not authorize the payment by any officer of this State of any money out of the Treasury of this State then in said Treasury, but only out of such antiquated claims of this State (so long neglected that they required expert knowledge to clearly present and successfully establish them) which my services could convert into money then in the Treasury of the United States, beyond the control of this State, except as in this statement set forth. It was therefore agreed that if I could secure the transmutation of these old claims into money, without any cost to this State, that then and in that event I should have a specific share in the fruit and result thereof, as my full compensation in these contracts of my employments.

32. Section 1965 of the Civil Code says "that a contract of employment is one by which one who is called an employer employs another, who is called an employé, to do services for the benefit of the employer or of other persons."

If, therefore, the Legislature of California had the authority to approve my employment, and to do so in any mode not prohibited or otherwise prescribed by the Constitution or laws of this State, and that it has heretofore chosen to exercise that authority in the mode of a concurrent resolution, and that there is no legal difference or distinction, in fact and in essence, in the Constitution or under the laws of this State, between a concurrent and joint resolution, and that a joint resolution has all the effect and force of law from the time of its adoption by the Legislature, it follows, therefore, as legally as it does logically, that if I have diligently performed, and continue to diligently perform, my part of the work recited in these employments, and in these resolutions, that, then, the relations of this State and myself, by virtue of these agreements, were in the nature of a contract of employment, which the Governor of California, acting separately, cannot revoke, and the obligation of which the Legislature, I submit, even if it had the power, ought not in good faith, undertake to impair.

If the rule laid down in the case of "The Trustees of Dartmouth College vs. Woodward, 4 Wheaton, 518," and followed for nearly one hundred years, is to continue to have in this State the respect it commands in other States, then I submit it would be difficult to distinguish my case from that celebrated case, the principle of which, when properly invoked in this Republic, has always staid the hand of attempted absolute, arbitrary, and unbridled power, come whence it may.

I therefore leave this branch of this case by simply again referring briefly to the case of "Grogan vs. San Francisco, 18 Cal. 609," wherein among other propositions, it was declared by the Supreme Court of California that a legislative grant (be it money, land, franchise, privilege, anything), is a contract within that clause of the constitution forbidding the passage of any laws impairing the obligation of a contract which cannot be destroyed by any subsequent legislation, and that perfect equality exists in all contracts, even when the State and its humblest citizen are the contracting parties; and great as is, and must ever be, the power of the Legislature, that even such power when exercised, must and can only legally be exercised in subordination to the principle which protects and secures the inviolability of all contracts.

33. The reasons assigned in writing by the Governor of California to me on the eighteenth of January, 1889, were, among others, in these words:

"It would appear that the honorable Secretary of the Treasury and yourself have conspired together against the promotion of public ends for the purpose of defeating, if possible, my authority in all these matters," etc.

This charge after a month's interval is repeated in another letter, addressed by the Governor of California to the honorable Secretary of the Treasury, bearing date February 18, 1889, and published in the public press of this State on February 19, 1889; copy of which letter, as published, I attach hereto, make a part hereof, and mark Exhibit No. 38.

Said charge so contained in said letter is in words as follows, to wit:

"It was apparent to me then, as it is evident now, that yourself and Captain John Mullan have conspired together against the promotion of the best interests, and for the purpose of defeating, if possible, my authority in all these matters," etc.

That which prior to February 18, 1889, had only "appeared" to the Governor of California to be a conspiracy had on that date, he declared, become "evident" to him as such.

The gravity of this charge so first made, and after a month's interval so positively repeated, embarrasses my reply.

For, if this charge be true, then a most serious crime has been committed, not only against the great commonwealth of the State of California, but also against the greater commonwealth of the United States.

If this charge be true, then the parties so charged should be at once formally and regularly proceeded against; tried by a tribunal having competent jurisdiction to try conspiracies against this State and its Governor, and if found guilty they should be severely punished.

But if, on the contrary, this charge is not true, but is utterly unfounded and totally unwarranted, and coming, as it does, in writing, officially subscribed by the Governor of California, as Governor, whose official declaration is of a very high order, and publicly proclaimed through the public press, then I submit a much more grave crime has been committed, and I ask who shall measure, and where and how shall be measured, a remedy adequate to redress a grievance so grave, so aggravated, as this?

For all the purposes of this statement, I now declare said charge to be not only not true, but it is utterly unfounded, and is totally unwarranted.

What reply the head of the great financial department of sixty million of people, sworn to do his duty under the laws and Constitution of the United States, or what reply those officials of his department referred to in said letter may feel called upon to make thereto, is for them to determine, and not for me to say.

34. In order that other erroneous recitals in said letter of the Governor of California of February 18, 1888, may not be permitted to pass in silence or unnoticed, I deem it proper to further state as follows, to wit:

The Governor of California says as follows, to wit:

"I here say in justice to Governor Stoneman that no record of the issuance of this peculiar appointment claimed to be held by Mullan, appears in this office," etc.

It is sufficient for me to state that the original of that appointment is in my possession, that a full, true, and correct copy thereof is of record in the Treasury Department, that a full, true, and correct copy thereof was submitted by me on November 1, 1886, to Governor Stoneman himself, in my report made to him on that date, entitled "Mullan's California State Claims Report," and which book was in the office of the Governor of California on February 18, 1889, when he signed said letter.

A full, true, and correct copy thereof was my Exhibit No. 7 therein, and printed on page 327 of that report.

Copy hereof is also my Exhibit No. 9 in this sworn statement, Part No. 1.

The contents of said appointment were fully recited by Governor Stoneman himself in his regular biennial message to the Legislature in January, 1885 (see my Exhibit No. 10), and will be also found printed in volume 1, Appendix to Senate and Assembly Journal, twenty-sixth session, pages 7 and 8.

These matters were all before the Legislature in 1885, prior to the date March 3, 1885, when it took action thereon. (See my Exhibit No. 11 of this statement, Part No. 1.)

35. In said letter the Governor of California further says:

"That Governor Perkins did authorize Captain Mullan to represent the State to recover money expended in suppressing Indian hostilities, but that this appointment was never in fact ratified," etc., etc., etc.

This, too, is error, and because Governor Perkins having specially informed the Legislature in his regular message (see my Exhibit No. 5 in this statement, Part No. 1) in January, 1883, that he had appointed me to secure a reimbursement on account of Indian hostilities in this State, between April 15, 1861 and June 27 (printed 22), 1882.

The Legislature on March 3, 1883, duly approved my said employment for the Indian war claims provided for in said Act of Congress of June 27, 1882. (See my Exhibit No. 7 of this statement.)

The Indian war claims referred to in said letter of the Governor of California of February 18, 1889, and in said decision of the Honorable Second Comptroller, of January 25, 1889, arose in this State in August, 1861 (see my Exhibit No. 20 and sub-Exhibits 1, 2, 3, thereto attached), and were examined and allowed by the War Department, and confirmed by the Treasury Department, and appropriated for by Congress, all under said Act of June 27, 1882. (See page 575 United States Statutes, 1888, Act of Congress, October 19, 1888.)

36. I submit that as tedious as my task has been, I have tried to patiently and respectfully pass in review, seriatim, the numerous errors of the Governor of California, whether the same arose from commission, omission, deduction, inference, or otherwise.

37. I have sought to be exact, and hence I make oath to this statement, which I now submit to your honorable Committee, believing that in considering all the matters herein contained, or referred to, you will hold fairly balanced the scales of equal public justice, even when weighing therein, the acts of the Chief Executive officer of this State on the one side, and those of one of its private citizens on the other, and that you will, without fear, favor, or affection, justly determine and declare the rights of both, when you find the same have been assailed, impaired, or wronged by either, in so far as your legislative jurisdiction can extend.

38. I visit the Capital of this State at this time not to ask for charity, but to plead for justice in the defence of right, and in order that wrong might not prevail.

39. I have confined this statement to matters emanating from official sources only; with all others not verified under oath, I have now no concern, unless your honorable committee or any of its members should deign to notice the same.

40. At very great inconvenience to myself and family; at my own cost; to the detriment of my private business; I deemed it due to myself and the Legislature of this State to leave Washington, in order to be present at the earliest days of this session.

Here I have continuously remained, prepared at all times, and at any time willing to fully answer any and all questions that the Governor of California, the Legislature, or any of its committees might properly propound to me in any of these premises.

I have while here urgently sought the earliest opportunity to be fully heard in regard to all these matters, and I shall remain in Sacramento until this Legislature shall have adjourned sine die, for all these purposes only, and for none other.

41. Wherefore, in conclusion, I now respectfully invoke such action by this Legislature, through your honorable Committee, as shall be deemed appropriate herein, based on such facts as you may find, conclusions you may reach, and recommendations you may make herein.

Respectfully,

JOHN MULLAN.

John Mullan, on first being duly sworn, says that he has read the foregoing statement and all the exhibits thereto attached made parts thereof, and knows the contents of all of the same that the same (except the conclusions of law any where contained in any parts of this statement) are true, except to those matters therein stated upon information and belief, as to those and matters he believes the same to be true.

MATT. F. JOHNSON, Notary Public.

EXHIBIT No. 34.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,)
SECOND COMPTROLLER'S OFFICE, January 25, 1889. }

Revocation of the Power of Attorney to a State Agent—Memorandum.

The question to be determined by me is, whether or not Captain John Mullan should be recognized by this office as the agent and attorney for the State of California in settlement No. 3249, of September 18, 1888.

On November 23, 1888, the Third Auditor returned this settlement (with all the accompanying papers) to me with the recommendation that Captain John Mullan be recognized as the attorney therein. On December 29, 1888, I returned the papers to him, bearing an indorsement that the draft based on said settlement should be made payable to the order of the Governor of the State of California, and be sent to him, in care of John Mullan.

The Act of June 27, 1882 (22 Stat. 111), authorizes "the Secretary of the Treasury to examine and report to Congress the amount of all claims of the States of Texas, Colorado, Oregon, Nebraska, California, Kansas, and Nevada, and the Territories of Washington and Idaho, for money expended and indebtedness assumed by said States and Territories in repelling invasions and suppressing Indian hostilities, and for other purposes." The first section of this Act provides "that the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed, with the aid and assistance of the Secretary of War, to cause to be examined and investigated" all said claims of the States and Territories above mentioned.

On the twelfth day of July, 1882, George C. Perkins, Governor of California, wrote the following letter to Captain John Mullan:

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, }
SACRAMENTO, CAL., July 12, 1882. }

DEAR SIR: In reply to your favor of the twenty-second ultimo, relative to certain claims of this State against the United States, for money expended and indebtedness assumed in repelling invasions, suppressing insurrections, and Indian hostilities, I hereby authorize you, on behalf of the State of California, to represent the same in endeavoring to recover such amount as may be found due and owing by the United States Government to the State of California, on the express condition stated in your communication of the twenty-second ultimo.

Very respectfully,

GEORGE C. PERKINS,
Governor of California.

Captain JOHN MULLAN,
Washington, D. C.

Subsequently Governor Perkins sent the following message to the Legislature of the State of California:

Information having been received by me that the expenses incurred by this State, and by the citizens of Siskiyou and Modoc Counties for the suppression of Indian hostilities during the Modoc Indian war of 1872, had never been reimbursed by the General Government, I appointed Captain John Mullan, at Washington City, District of Columbia, to represent said interests, on behalf of this State, before the proper authorities of the United States, for the purpose of securing such reimbursement, and, also, for such as were provided for (for California) under the Act of Congress, approved June 22, 1882, authorizing an examination and adjustment of the claims of the States of Kansas, Nevada, California, Oregon, Colorado, Nebraska, and Texas, for repelling invasion and Indian hostilities therein, between April 15, 1861, and June 22, 1882.

Since writing the above I have just been informed, by telegraph, that success has attended Captain Mullan's efforts, and that the Modoc war bill, reimbursing the State, has passed both houses of Congress. * * *

Deeming the subject of considerable importance, and that the interests of the State required an agent to act in her behalf, with others employed in obtaining an equitable adjustment of these claims, I also authorized Captain Mullan to represent the State before the proper authorities at Washington, and would recommend that these appointments be ratified and confirmed by you, and that you provide for his compensation, to be paid out of the sums he may recover for the State, contingent, however, upon his success, it having been expressly understood that such compensation should be left entirely to your judgment and discretion. * * *

GEORGE C. PERKINS,
Governor of California.

Afterwards, on the third day of March, 1883, the Legislature of California adopted the following resolution:

WHEREAS, The Governor and State Surveyor-General of this State have heretofore respectively appointed Captain John Mullan, of San Francisco, California, agent and attorney to represent the interests of the State of California, before the proper authorities of the United States, at Washington, District of Columbia, in the matter of the claim of this State to the five per cent net proceeds of the sales of the public lands by the United States; and also in the matter of the direct tax levied upon this State by the United States, under the Act of Congress of August sixth, eighteen hundred and sixty-one; and also of her claim arising during the Modoc war, in eighteen hundred and seventy-two; and also under the provisions of the Act of Congress of June twenty-seventh, eighteen hundred and eighty-two; therefore, be it

Resolved by the Assembly of California, the Senate concurring, That the appointments so conferred upon Captain John Mullan by the Governor and Surveyor-General, respectively, are hereby ratified and confirmed; and the Governor of this State be and he is hereby authorized and directed to fix the compensation for the services by Captain John Mullan heretofore, and that may be by him hereafter rendered, at twenty per cent of each of the sums or claims that may be by him collected from the United States, and to pay to him such per cent out of the moneys that may be collected by him and paid to this State on account of each of the foregoing matters respectively; provided, however, that this State shall not in any event become liable for any expenses, fees, and salaries of any nature whatever, other than such contingent commission.

SEC. 2. That the Controller of the State of California be and he is hereby authorized to deliver to Captain John Mullan, or to his authorized agent, all the original vouchers, certificates, and papers of every kind and nature against the Government of the United States, for or on account of each of the foregoing matters, respectively.

SEC. 3. That said Controller shall prepare and take from Captain John Mullan, or from his authorized agent, a receipt, in writing, bound in a book, same as he keeps in his office for all such papers as aforesaid, and which shall show what the papers are in each case, the date thereof, by what Board of Examiners passed, the amount and date of the warrant, and in whose favor drawn.

Governor Perkins was succeeded by Governor Stoneman, who reappointed Captain Mullan as the agent and attorney for said State, as the following message to the Legislature of that State will show:

In reference to the several claims of the State alleged to exist against the United States, I beg to report that the agent for this State at Washington, D. C., under the executive authority heretofore conferred upon him and duly ratified by the Legislature, has brought to the official attention of the proper authorities and departments of the United States, sundry claims of this State. While the reports made by him from time to time in regard thereto show considerable and favorable progress, still, only two of such claims have been allowed and paid by the United States, namely, that of $495 72 on account of the expenses incurred by the State in the year 1872 for the transportation of arms to the northern counties during the Modoc Indian war; and that of $38,180 80, on account of the rebate of the fifteen per centum of the direct war tax levied upon and assessed to this State under the Act of Congress approved August 2, 1861 (U. S. Statutes, Vol. 12, p. 291).

* * * * *

In this connection I beg to report that under the belief that a proper effort, made by a competent person to collect from the United States the old California Indian war debts, would be crowned with success, I have duly appointed Captain John Mullan, present agent, as agent also for such purposes, the appointment being subject to ratification by the Legislature. I have authorized him to present all the matters connected with the said war debt, including the interest paid by and due to this State on account of moneys heretofore expended and guaranteed by this State on account of Indian and other hostilities within its borders, to the proper United States authorities at Washington, with a view to the favorable recognition and payment of such claims. Such a presentation has been made by him, and the State may expect through his efforts an eventually favorable action and final adjustment.

The intelligence and fidelity displayed by Captain Mullan in the matters described fully reflect the confidence reposed in him by his selection for this special work, and I therefore recommend that the Legislature confirm the executive appointment of Captain Mullan made by me for the purpose above described.

(Signed)

GEORGE STONEMAN,
Governor of California.

In pursuance of said message the Legislature of California adopted on the third day of March, 1885, the following resolution:

WHEREAS, The Governor and State Surveyor-General of this State, respectively, have heretofore appointed Captain John Mullan, of San Francisco, California, agent and attorney to represent the State of California before the proper authorities of the United States, at Washington, D. C., in the matter of the claims of the State of California against the United States, growing out of past Indian hostilities, and for interest on moneys heretofore expended by this State on account of military operations herein and borders hereof, and in recovering all land fees heretofore illegally paid to the United States by this State; and whereas, in pursuance of concurrent resolution number twelve, adopted February twenty-sixth, eighteen hundred and eighty-one, and in pursuance of Assembly joint resolution number thirty, adopted March ninth, eighteen hundred and seventy-two, James E. Hale and Thomas M. Nosler were duly appointed and commissioned agents on behalf of the State of California and the Governor thereof, by themselves and their duly constituted agents, to collect from the Government of the United States the cost, charges, and expenses properly incurred by the State of California for enrolling, subsisting, clothing, supplying, arming, equipping, paying, and transporting its troops employed in aiding to suppress the insurrection against the United States; and whereas, said James E. Hale and Thomas M. Nosler have duly constituted said Captain John Mullan their agent and attorney, in pursuance of the foregoing authority conferred on them, in their names, places, and stand, to demand and receive all said moneys from said Government of the United States, and in and about the premises to act as their agent therein; therefore, be it

SECTION 1. Resolved by the Senate of California, the Assembly concurring, That the appointments so conferred upon Captain John Mullan by the Governor and Surveyor-General, respectively, are hereby ratified and confirmed, and the Governor of this State be and he is hereby authorized and directed to fix the compensation for the services by Captain John Mullan heretofore, and that may be by him hereafter rendered, at twenty per cent of each of the sums or claims that may be by him collected from the United States, and to pay to him such per cent out of the moneys that may be collected by him and paid to this State on account of each of the foregoing matters respectively; provided, however, that this State shall not, in any event, become liable for any expenses, fees, and salaries of any nature whatever, other than such contingent commission.

Sec. 2. That the proper State officers of the State of California be and they are hereby authorized and directed to deliver to Captain John Mullan, or to his authorized agent, all the original vouchers, certificates, and papers of every kind and nature relating to the claims of this State against the Government of the United States, for or on account of each of the foregoing matters respectively, and also all Controller's warrants that have been heretofore paid and canceled, and which may be needed to perfect any of the claims of this State against the United States, represented by him.

Sec. 3. That said State officers shall prepare and take from Captain John Mullan, or from his authorized agent, a receipt in writing, bound in a book, same as they keep in their offices for all such papers as aforesaid, and which shall show what the papers are in each case, the date thereof, by what Board of Examiners passed, the amount and date of the warrant, and in whose favor drawn.

The letters and messages hereinabove set out are taken from a brief of Captain John Mullan, filed with me May 8, 1888.

On the tenth day of February, 1888, the Governor of California sent the following telegram to the Secretary of the Treasury:

EXECUTIVE OFFICE, SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA, }
February 10, 1888. }

You are hereby notified, and attention called to the fact, that Captain John Mullan has no authority from me as agent or attorney in representing the State of California before your Department.

Therefore, he cannot receipt for or receive any drafts, warrants, or moneys belonging to the State of California, and you are instructed to hold such drafts, warrants, or money subject to my order.

R. W. WATERMAN,
Governor.

To the Honorable SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY, Washington, D. C.

At the same time he sent a letter to Captain Mullan, a copy of which is as follows:

EXECUTIVE OFFICE, SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA, }
February 10, 1888. }

Referring to my telegrams of the third and sixth, respectively, and after due and careful consideration of the matters therein referred to, I am convinced that certain appointments as agent and attorney to represent the State in Washington made to you by the Governor and State Surveyor-General, and which you endeavored to have ratified and confirmed with a commission of 20 per cent fixed as your fee by concurrent resolution of March 3, 1883, and March 3, 1885, should be, and are hereby most emphatically revoked.

This revocation applies specially to the appointment by Surveyor-General Minis, November 1, 1878, in the matter of the "Five per cent claim," aggregating nearly $1,000,000.

To the appointment of Ex-Governor George C. Perkins, December 12, 1882, in the matter of "Direct tax of August 5, 1864," aggregating over $200,000; also, that of March 7, 1882, in the matter of the "Modoc war claims;" also, that of July 12, 1882, being "Claim for money expended and indebtedness assumed in repelling invasions and Indian hostilities," together with interest on the same; also, claims under the provisions of the Act of Congress of June 27, 1882, known as the "Rebellion claims," aggregating $2,938,623.

To the appointment of Ex-Governor George Stoneman, March 31, 1884, in the matter of "Claims of the State of California growing out of Indian hostilities," and in the matter of all moneys that have been paid in or may be due by the State of California on account of Indian war claims, Indian war bonds, or coupons issued by the State for the purpose of recovering from the United States the payment of the whole of these, together with the interest due on same, aggregating several hundred thousand dollars.

To the appointment of Surveyor-General Willey, October 24, 1883, and December 1, 1885, in the matter of "Refunding certain fees," and "Indemnity for certain swamp lands" therein mentioned.

The appointments above enumerated, when taken in connection with the appointments named and attempted to be confirmed in the concurrent resolutions of March 3, 1883, and March 3, 1885, are vague, indefinite, and uncertain, and that there may be no mistake, I hereby revoke all appointments held by you from the Governor or State Surveyor-General of whatever kind or nature, or named in said concurrent resolutions.

R. W. WATERMAN,
Governor.

Captain JOHN MULLAN,
Washington. D. C.

Since the several appointments were made and confirmed as aforesaid, Captain Mullan has been acting as the agent and attorney for the State, pursuant to the appointments, and has been recognized by this office as the agent and attorney for the State in the prosecution of this claim.

Governor Waterman contends that Captain Mullan "is acting without competent authority, and in direct violation of law—never having been legally appointed or confirmed—who has filed no official bond, and has never qualified as such officer or appointee, as provided by law of this State" [California.]

Captain Mullan, on the other hand, maintains that his interest in this agency is of such a character that even the parties to it cannot, without his assent, annul it, and, a fortiori, the Governor cannot substitute himself for one of the contracting parties, and arbitrarily revoke, vacate, and annul the same.

I. The most important question which arises in this case is, whether the agency of Captain Mullan, granting its validity, can, under any circumstances, be revoked without his consent; because its solution will clear up some obscurities in the further discussion of this employment.

If his authority is coupled with an interest, as he maintains in his brief, there will be no necessity to inquire into the power of Governor Waterman in the premises, because, according to all the authorities, his agency cannot, in that event, be determined at the will of his principal, whoever that may be.

Captain Mullan was authorized to collect the claims designated in the concurrent resolutions mentioned, and to pay the money to the Governor, from whom he was to receive a certain per centum thereof as his compensation.

The contract was to give him a part of the property to be recovered, as a contingent fee for his services. Such contracts, though condemned by the ancient law, are not only sustained by the modern law of this country, but are of frequent occurrence (2 Pomeroy, Eq. Jur. § 936, n²; Hoffman v. Val-lejo, 45 Cal. 564).

It is well settled by the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States that an agreement to pay a contingent fee for the preparation and advocacy of just claims before the Executive Departments of the Government is not in violation of law or public policy (Stanton v. Embrey, 93, U. S. 548; Wright v. Tebbitts, 91 id. 252).

Such contracts, then, being entitled to judicial respect, the question arises whether they can be revoked at the pleasure of the principal. Does the fact that the agent has an interest in the proceeds of the collection, or the proceeds of sale, invest him with irrevocable authority?

Unquestionably it would, if the agent is also the creditor of the principal, and this power is given to enable him to pay the debt out of the proceeds (Story on Agency, 9th ed. § 477; Travers v. Crane, 15 Cal. 12).

It is also held by the Supreme Court of the United States that an agreement to prosecute a claim for a portion of the proceeds, with full power to compromise it, is a power conferred coupled with an interest which is not revoked by the death of the principal (Jeffries v. Mut. Life Ins. Co. of N. Y., 110 U. S., 305).

In Missouri v. Walker (125 U. S., 339) the Jeffries case is referred to, and it is intimated that the clause giving the power to compromise as the attorneys should please, thereby enabling them to establish the claim, imparted an irrevocable quality to their authority.

At first view it would seem that the opinion of the Court in Wylie v. Coxe (15 How. 415) supports the irrevocableness of contracts like the one under consideration. Coxe had been employed by Samuel Baldwin, through his brother and agent, John Baldwin, to prosecute a claim against the Republic of Mexico for personal outrages and losses of property through the officers of that government. He brought the matter to the notice of this Government and urged indemnity. Finally, an Act of Congress was passed and a Board of Commissioners authorized to examine and decide such claims. Coxe did everything that was done in bringing the case before our Government for indemnity. The fee for his services was to be 5 per cent of the claim recovered. The Commissioners allowed the claim, amounting to $75,000. The claimant, Baldwin, however, had died before the claim was presented to the Commissioners. Wylie took out letters of administration on his estate, and though he did not employ Coxe, yet, supposing that he had been engaged as counsel by the widow, he allowed him to take part in the preparation and presentation of the case before the Commission. Subsequently an agent of the widow came on from Mexico, bringing a will of Baldwin, which appointed his wife executrix. This agent dismissed Coxe as attorney in the case, and after this he was not consulted by Wylie, and any services subsequently rendered were voluntary. It was contended, on this statement of facts, that Coxe had no right to the 5 per cent commissions. The Court says:

"The defendant [Wylie] seems to suppose that as, on the death of Samuel Baldwin, the agency of his brother ceased, the contract which had been made by him was no longer in force * * * he had no power to annul the contract, if made bona fide by the complainant [Coxe], and the business had been faithfully prosecuted by him."

In another portion of the decision it is said:

"The evidence proves that the complainant was to receive a contingent fee of five per centum out of the fund awarded, whether money or script. This being the contract, it constituted a lien upon the fund, whether it should be money or script. The fund was looked to, and not the personal responsibility of the owner of the claim."

It might be considered that this justifies the conclusion that Coxe's authority was considered by the Court as coupled with an interest, and, therefore, not affected by the death of the claimant, Baldwin. But a closer study of the language of the Court makes it apparent that it was admitted that the death did work a revocation. The Court expressly contend that the administrator could have "dispensed with the further services of the complainant" [Coxe]. They held that he could not "annul the contract," which, in my opinion, simply means that he should not be deprived of the fruit of his past efforts, though he could be removed from the position and prevented from finishing his work. It is in line with those decisions which hold that a broker who has opened negotiations with a purchaser, without concluding a bargain, is entitled to a proper proportion of the agreed commissions if the party who employed him to sell concludes the bargain himself (Martin v. Silliman, 53 N. Y. 615; Story on Agency, 9th ed. § 329, and cases cited).

Admitting, however, that the doctrine of Wylie v. Coxe is in support of the irrevocability of contracts of this character, it is nevertheless true that all the authorities, including late decisions of the same Court, hold that a contract to prosecute at his own expense certain claims, or to make certain collections or sales of property, and to receive as compensation for his services a certain rate of commissions on the amounts collected or of the proceeds of the sale, does not confer upon the agent a power coupled with an interest in the subject of the contract, which makes the contract of agency irrevocable.

A leading case on this subject in this country is Hartley's Appeal (53 Penn. St., 212). There was an ordinary agency established by letter of attorney to collect moneys that might be due the principal from the estate of her father. For their services the attorneys were to have one half of the net proceeds of what they might recover for her. The Court, following the definition of an "interest coupled with a power" laid down by Chief Justice Marshall in the leading case of Hunt v. Rousmanier's Adm'rs (8 Wheat., 174), says:

"The plaintiffs in error claimed that this clause rendered their power irrevocable by the principal, under the idea that it was a power coupled with an interest. This was a mistake, as all the authorities show. To impart an irrevocable quality to a power of attorney in the absence of any express stipulation, and as the result of legal principles alone, there must co-exist with the power an interest in the thing or estate to be disposed of or managed under the power. * * * In the case in hand the power and the interest could not co-exist. The interest the appellants would have would be in the net proceeds collected under the power, and the exercise of the power to collect the proceeds would be ipso facto to extinguish it entirely, or so far as exercised. Hence the appellants' interest would properly begin when the power ended."

This case was followed in Flanagan v. Brown, 70 Cal. 258, and Chambers v. Seay, 73 Ala. 372. See also Gilbert v. Holmes, 64 Ill. 549; Barr v. Schroeder, 32 Cal. 609; Frank v. Roe, 70 Id., 296.

Admitting, then, that there existed a valid contract between the State of California and Captain Mullan, it must be held, in the light of these authorities, that it was not such a one as prevented the principal from terminating it at pleasure, because of any co-existence of an interest with the power. As an agent he cannot insist upon acting in respect of these claims "when the principal has withdrawn his confidence, and no longer desires his aid." (Story on Agency, 9th ed. § 463.)

If there ever was any doubt about this, it has been set at rest by the recent decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Missouri ex rel. Walker v. Walker (125 U. S. 339). The facts of that case are in many respects similar to those involved in the one under consideration, and are, therefore, given in full:

March 19, 1881, the General Assembly of Missouri authorized the Fund Commissioners, if they deemed it expedient, to employ a competent agent to prosecute to final settlement before Congress and the proper Departments at Washington, certain specified claims of the State against the Government of the United States. The agent thus employed was to prosecute the claims at his own expense, and receive as full compensation for his services such commissions on the amount collected by him as might be agreed upon between him and the Fund Commissioners, not exceeding a certain rate. The officers of the United States were authorized to pay the agent his agreed commissions, but all other payments by the United States must be made to the Treasurer of the State. Certain State officers were to deliver to him, upon the order of the Governor, necessary vouchers, documents, etc., as proofs. The Fund Commissioners appointed on November 28, 1884, John R. Walker as such agent, and agreed upon his commissions. By act of March 28, 1885, the entire act of 1881 was repealed. Walker, nevertheless, demanded a certain voucher of the State Auditor; upon his refusal, he asked for a writ of mandamus. The voucher was one allowed by the Adjutant-General after the passage of the repealing act. The question therefore, was, did the repealing act divest him of his right to have and collect the voucher? Walker's complaint was that the act impaired the obligation of the State's contract, and was, therefore, void. The State court held that his contract was "one of agency, pure and simple," and sustained the demurrer to his petition (State v. Walker, 88 Mo. 279).

The opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States was unanimous in its affirmation of this judgment. They held that the agency was withdrawn by the repealing Act of 1885, as no consideration had been given for it, and it was not so coupled with an interest in the subject-matter as to make it irrevocable. The definition of Chief Justice Marshall in Hunt v. Rousmanier was cited with approval and applied to the facts of the case. The Court says:

There is nothing whatever in the transaction, from the beginning to the end, which shows an intention on the part of the Legislature to part with any interest in or control over the claims, except to the extent of the commissions of the agent after they had been earned. Walker was given no power to compromise any claim. All he could do was to establish the claim, and, when the State was ready to pay it, take his commissions. Clearly such an agency is not irrevocable in law because of its being coupled with an interest in the thing to be collected.

In cases of this kind, if the vouchers and other evidences of debt have been actually delivered to the agent for collection, he may refuse to return them, when his agency is withdrawn, until he has been compensated for what he has already done (Missouri v. Walker, supra). He also has a right to be indemnified for expenses incurred in the proper prosecution of his duties before he received notice of such revocation (United States v. Jarvis, Daveis, 274). But that his agency may be withdrawn, so as to prevent him from taking further steps in his principal's behalf, is beyond doubt, even in cases between man and man. Persons accepting an agency or employment in pursuance of an Act of the General Assembly of a State, which neither fixes, nor contains any provision for fixing by others, a particular term of service, do so with notice of the fact that the same may be terminated at the will of the Legislature (Missouri v. Walker, supra; State v. Davis, 44 Mo. 129.)

A revocation of an authority, which admits of severance, will be good as to the part unexecuted, but not as to the part already executed. If the authority is not severable, and damage will happen to the agent on account of the execution of the authority pro tanto, the principal will not be allowed to revoke the unexecuted part, or at least not without fully indemnifying the agent. (Story on Agency, §466.)

Captain Mullan's interest is in the money to be derived from these claims when collected. His case is like Walker's in this respect, as well as in respect of a consideration. He has parted with no money or other value for the security of which the power of collecting these claims was conferred in the agreement. He has risked in the venture of his agency only his personal services and the expenses incidental to its execution. It is fair to presume that he risked this much in view of the compensation to be reaped as commissions in the event of his success, (Chambers vs. Seay, supra, citing Simpson vs. Lamb, 17 C. B., 603.)

But even if it be granted that Captain Mullan's contract is founded on a valuable consideration, it is not irrevocable on that account.

In the State of California, by statute, a principal may terminate any agency, except one coupled with an interest in the subject matter (Section 2356 of Civil Code of California.) See this section discussed in Flanagan v. Brown, 70 Cal. 258.

Therefore the decisions prior to 1872, at which time the Code was adopted, holding that agencies founded on valuable consideration cannot be revoked at pleasure by the principal, are not entitled to weight at present (see Flanagan v. Brown, supra, for comment on language of Sanderson, J., in Brown v. Pforr, 38 Cal., 550).

II. The whole case, then, being sifted, involves simply this: Was this a valid contract? And if so, can Governor Waterman revoke it?

It does not seem to be clear whether the Governor of California has any constitutional right to create offices or to make appointments like the one under discussion.

The Constitution of the State invests him with power only to fill vacancies, and carefully circumscribes this power (Constitution of California, Art. V, Sec. 8).

But if such right was not in the Governor, it was in the Legislature; and as these appointments have been confirmed and ratified by it, all defects or irregularities, if any existed, have been cured.

The concurrent resolutions of that body dated March 3, 1883, and March 3, 1885, recite in full the acts of the Governor in respect of these appointments, confirm and ratify them, and fix the rate of compensation. In neither case were these resolutions approved by the Governor. There is no reason to believe that such approval was needed. Each Governor had submitted in his regular message to the Legislature, reports of these claims and the employment of Captain Mullan in connection with them. Had the concurrent resolutions been approved, such approval would have been a piece of supererogation, as it would have been but an executive approval of a legislative ratification of an executive contract.

Granting that Governors Perkins and Stoneman exceeded their powers, yet their acts, as agents of the people, have been ratified by the people through their representatives.

In Grogan vs. San Francisco (18 Cal. 590, 609), the Court (Field, C. J.), says:

"The State may ratify the acts of her agents upon a subject within the constitutional control of the Legislature, when they exceed their powers. She may do this by legislation directly affirming the acts, or by legislation proceeding upon their assumed validity. The reason is obvious: There is no limitation as to the mode in which the State may give her assent, except that it must be by an act or resolution of her Legislature. (See also 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. 3d ed., Sec. 139; Crawshaw v. Roxbury, 7 Gray, 374.)

The employment of Captain Mullan, then, if not valid when these Governors made the appointment, was rendered valid from the beginning, by the action of the Legislature, that body having all powers not distributed to others (Ross v. Whitman, 6 Cal. 361, 364; see also 10 Opinions, Atto'y-Gen'l, 449; Story on Agency, 9th ed., Sec. 244).

The Legislature of California possessed the power originally to authorize this appointment. Its power in this respect is complete unless restricted by the Constitution of the State (Beals v. Amador County, 35 Cal. 630).

I have not been able to find any such restriction. The same authority, and that alone, which created this agency can revoke it. This authority, as it seems to me, was the Legislature.

The Governor cannot undo that which the Legislature alone can do.

It is not necessary to comment at length upon the distinction between Government or State contracts, which are under the protection of the Constitution, and public officers, which may be abolished at pleasure (in re Bulger, in re Merrill, 45 Cal. 553, 557; Newton v. Commissioners, 100 U. S. 559), because, in this case, if the employment be considered either as an agency or an office, it may be determined at the pleasure of the Legislature. It is clear, however, that certain employments are not offices, though sometimes mistaken for such (United States v. Maurice, 2 Brock, 96; United States v. Hartwell, 6 Wall. 385; Butler v. The Regents of the University, 32 Wis., 124, 131; Hall v. Wisconsin, 103 U. S. 5).

The difference between an employment by a State Legislature, which constitutes an office, and one which amounts to a contract for work and labor, is clearly shown in Hall v. Wisconsin, supra.

Walker's case has thus been distinguished from Hall v. Wisconsin:

"There was in that case [Hall v. Wisconsin] a positive contract for employment in a particular service, for a particular term, made under the authority of law; and because it was such a contract the State could not, any more than a private individual, rescind it at will. The employment in this case, however, has no such provision. There is no agreement as to time, and the matter stands precisely as that of Hall would, if a statute had been passed authorizing a geological, mineralogical, and agricultural survey of the State, and he had been employed to make it and receive for his services a compensation dependent on the amount of work actually done, or the time actually employed. It would hardly have been contended that under such a contract the State could not stop the survey, and require Hall to quit work at any time it pleased." (Missouri v. Walker, supra, at pp. 344-5.)

It is manifest that, though the appointment of Captain Mullan was made by the Governor, and though this appointment was confirmed by the Legislature, he was not constituted a public officer. The Legislature did not intend to create an office, but to ratify an employment and prescribe the emolument attached to it. A public office embraces the ideas of tenure, duration, emolument, and duties (United States vs. Hartwell, 6 Wall., 385.) Captain Mullan was merely employed as an agent for a specific purpose, and it is not necessary, therefore, for him to conform to the usual requirements concerning qualification for duty imposed upon officers of the State. His relation to the State of California is similar to Hall's or Butler's relation to the State of Wisconsin, except that it lacks the element of a certain period of service.

The appointment of Captain Mullan constitutes him the agent of the State of California, and though this relation may be dissolved by the State at pleasure, it seems clear that the same power must issue the revocation that confirmed and ratified the selection of the agent.

If both the Legislature of the State and the Governor of the State may exercise this power, then Captain Mullan must serve two masters. He might quit his duties upon notice to that effect from the Governor, and be threatened for neglect of duty by the Legislature. If his appointment had to be ratified by the Legislature, it must be concluded that under the laws and constitution of the State, it holds good until revoked by the same body, or until the Governor's revocation is approved by that body.

I hold, therefore, that Captain John Mullan has been duly appointed to prosecute the claim above mentioned before this Department; that such appointment constitutes him an agent, not a public officer, of the State of California; that his authority is not coupled with an interest in the subject-matter of the agency, and is, consequently, revocable at the pleasure of the State; that this power of revocation is lodged with the Legislature, not with the Governor of California; and that, as the Legislature has taken no action in the premises, Captain Mullan must be recognized by this office as the agent and attorney of the State of California, notwithstanding the notification of Governor Waterman dated February 10, 1888.

SIGOURNEY BUTLER,
Comptroller.

NEW YORK, July 27, 1862.

To his Excellency, LELAND STANFORD, Governor of California.

SIR: In accordance with the requirements of the law, I respectfully submit to you this report, showing the settlement made by the Commissioners of the California War Debt with the proper United States authorities of claims due to the State of California for expenses incurred in the suppression of Indian hostilities, under the Act of Congress of March 2, 1861:

As a part, also, of this report, I forward to the State Treasurer a book prepared by Mr. Phelan, Clerk of the Commission, duly certified by him to be a true copy of the settlement in all its details, which will show the specific amount allowed by the General Government on each voucher or claim, and which will serve as a perfect guide to the State Treasurer in disbursing the moneys to be allowed to parties presenting bonds to him for payment. You will, of course, notice the various claims have been very considerably reduced by the award; this was unavoidable, seeing that the allowances, as originally made by the State, were fixed without reference to the United States laws, and the law of Congress making the appropriation required that the settlement should be made as near as possible in strict accordance with the United States rules and regulations. (Vide Act of Congress of March 2, 1861, section 2.)

The settlement herewith reported should henceforth serve as a guide to be always consulted when future appropriations are asked for, (for the payment of expenses incurred in the suppression of Indian hostilities,) as it may be taken for certain that no higher rates of payment will be allowed by the General Government. It is of course known to your Excellency that the late Governor, Hon. John G. Downey, undertook to declare my office, as Commissioner, vacant, and commissioned Mr. B. Nordheimer as my successor. I had been engaged in the City of Washington some three weeks or more in the performance of my duties when Mr. Nordheimer arrived there and notified me of his appointment. I refused to recognize him as my successor, and so advised Governor Downey. I also informed Mr. Atkinson, United States Third Auditor, of all the facts in the case. Subsequently, Mr. Atkinson having notified me that he would not go behind Governor Downey's commission, General Denver and myself filed with him all the original vouchers for settlement.

The unwarrantable interference of Governor Downey has cost the State and the bondholders many months of delay. Nearly all that the Commissioners could do towards effecting a settlement had been done by General Denver and myself before the arrival of Mr. Nordheimer. We had obtained from the Secretary of War a letter to the Third Auditor, stating, substantially, that he was satisfied of the necessity existing for calling out the various expeditions in the State of California (see Act of Congress, March 2, 1861, section 24,) instructing him to audit the accounts of the State. All the work that could be done thereafter was merely clerical, which Mr. Phelan stood ready to perform. All that has been done since has been done by him; the whole matter resting in the office of the Third Auditor. The collision between the claims of Mr. Nordheimer and myself produced a delay of several weeks in filing the vouchers. If this had not occurred, I am satisfied the whole matter could have been settled before the first of November, the date of filing the vouchers, as the Government manifested a strong disposition to have the matter closed before General Denver would be required to take the field, (he having been appointed Brigadier-General in the United States service.) I will only add that the entire clerical labor connected with the settlement, which has been very heavy, has been performed by Mr. Phelan, and that his services have been of great value to the State.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

SAMUEL B. SMITH,

Commissioner of the California War Debt

EXHIBIT NO. 36.

CAPTAIN JOHN MULLAN'S APPOINTMENTS.

By Act approved April 1, 1870, the Surveyor-General of the State was authorized to appoint and employ an agent in Washington.

Under Act approved January 19, 1874, the above law was repealed, since which time the State has had no legally constituted agent or attorney in Washington.

Soon after assuming the duties of Chief Executive of this State, my attention was called to numerous appointments held by Captain John Mullan, of San Francisco, from the Governor and State Surveyor-General to act as agent for the State in Washington.

Knowing that these unauthorized appointments, if allowed to continue, would necessarily lead to inevitable confusion, with great loss to the State, I did, on February third, sixth, and tenth, revoke all of said appointments, as is shown by the following communication:

EXECUTIVE OFFICE,
SACRAMENTO, February, 10 1888. }

Captain JOHN MULLAN, Washington, D. C.:

Referring to my telegrams of the third and sixth, respectively, and after due and careful consideration of the matters therein referred to, I am convinced that certain appointments as agent and attorney to represent the State in Washington, made to you by the Governor and State Surveyor-General, and which you endeavored to have ratified and confirmed, with a commission of 20 per cent fixed as your fee by concurrent resolution of March 3, 1883, and March 3, 1885, should be and are hereby most emphatically revoked.

This revocation applies specially to the appointment by Surveyor-General Minis, November 1, 1878, in the matter of the five per cent claim, aggregating nearly $1,000,000.

To the appointment of Governor George C. Perkins, December 12, 1882, in the matter of "Direct Tax of August 5, 1861," aggregating over $200,000; also that of March 7, 1882, in the matter of the "Modoc War Claim," also that of July 12, 1882, being "Claim for money expended and indebtedness assumed in repelling invasions and Indian hostilities," together with interest on the same; also claims under the provision of the Act of Congress of June 27, 1882, known as the "Rebellion Claims," aggregating $2,938,623.

To the appointment of Governor George Stoneman, March 31, 1884, in the matter of "Claims of the State of California growing out of Indian hostilities," and in the matter of all moneys that have been paid in or may be due by the State of California on account of Indian war claims, or Indian war bonds, or coupons issued by the State for the purpose of recovering from the United States the payment of the whole of these, together with the interest due on the same, aggregating several hundred thousand dollars.

To the appointment of Surveyor-General Willey, October 24, 1883, and December 1, 1885, in the matter of "refunding certain fees" and "indemnity for certain swamp lands" therein mentioned.

The appointments above enumerated, when taken in connection with the appointments named and attempts to be confirmed in the concurrent resolutions of March 3, 1883, and March 3, 1885, are vague, indefinite, and uncertain, and that there may be no mistake I hereby revoke all appointments held by you from the Governor or State Surveyor-General, of whatever kind or nature, or named in said concurrent resolutions.

(Signed)

R. W. WATERMAN, Governor.

The entire amount involved in these claims covered by these several appointments is over four million ($4,000,000) dollars, of which amount Mullan would secure twenty per cent, or one fifth of the same, equal to eight hundred thousand ($800,000) dollars.

Captain John Mullan has already received seven thousand seven hundred and thirty-five dollars and thirty cents ($7,735 30) as compensation for alleged services in the matter of the "Direct Tax"—this sum having been paid him by Governor Stoneman, on September 25, 1884, out of an appropriation made by Congress, of thirty-one thousand five hundred and eighty-three dollars and twenty-six cents ($31,583 26), while the same was in transitu from the National Treasury in Washington to the State Treasury in Sacramento.

His favorite method of insidious attack on the General and Common School Fund of the State was by securing appointments from the Governor or State Surveyor-General, and into this crafty entanglement of executive appointments were woven a medley of legislative concurrent resolutions, attempting to confirm these appointments, and directing the Governor to fix his compensation, and pay him (Mullan) 20 per cent for alleged services rendered, or one fifth of the entire amount to be appropriated by Congress.

I think it clear that no executive officer of the State, in the absence of any legislation, was qualified to appoint Captain John Mullan, of San Francisco, agent and attorney in Washington; and that all such appointments were issued without authority of law, and any attempt to ratify or confirm said void acts would itself be void.

The adoption by the Legislature of concurrent resolutions March 3, 1883, and March 3, 1885, was neither wise nor prudent legislation on the part of the State; nor is it probable that the Legislature had any just conception of the financial propositions involved therein. It is hardly necessary to call your attention to the illegality of these unauthorized appointments and concurrent resolutions so skillfully drawn, and it is difficult to see how they and the Constitution can be reconciled.

The attempted donation of these large sums of money to Captain John Mullan, without consideration or service to the State, out of Congressional appropriations that rightfully belong to the people, through unauthorized appointments and concurrent resolutions, is not warranted by the Constitution as declared in Sections 15 and 22, Article IV; Section 4, Article IX, and Section 16, Article XX—he never having been legally appointed or confirmed, has filed no official bond, and has never qualified as such officer or appointee, as provided by the law of this State.

My action in revoking these appointments has been governed by a determination to save to the State the large sum of money attempted to be given to Captain John Mullan for alleged services, which are without a pretense of necessity, for the reason that the matter of these claims is one purely of legislation and for the favorable action of our Senators and members of Congress. (Message of the Governor of California, January, 1889.)

SUBSTITUTE BILL.

[Fiftieth Congress, first session, S. 3439.]

August 14, 1888.—Mr. Stewart introduced the following bill, which was read twice, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs:

A BILL authorizing the Secretary of War to ascertain the amount of money which has been expended and the obligations assumed by the State of California, growing out of Indian hostilities therein and upon the borders thereof, not heretofore reimbursed by the United States.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of War, through the Board of War Claim Examiners, appointed under section two of the Act entitled "An Act for the benefit of the States of Texas, Colorado, Oregon, Nebraska, California, Kansas, and Nevada, and the Territory of Washington, and Nevada when a Territory," approved August fourth, eighteen hundred and eighty-six, be and he is hereby authorized and directed to examine all vouchers, accounts, papers, and evidence which heretofore have been or which hereafter may be submitted to him in support of the Indian war claims and Indian war obligations of the State of California, and to ascertain the amount of money actually expended and obligations incurred by said State, growing out of Indian hostilities therein and upon the borders thereof, and which have not heretofore been reimbursed by the United States.

The Secretary of War shall report to Congress the amount of money which may be thus ascertained to have been actually paid and assumed by the State of California on account of the matters above enumerated.

And the Secretary of War shall report the circumstances and exigencies under which, and the authority by which, such expenditures were made, and what payments have been made on account thereof by the United States; and the money necessary to enable the Secretary of War to comply with the provisions of this Act is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated. EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, STATE OF CALIFORNIA,

SACRAMENTO, February 18, 1889.

Hon. C. S. FAIRCHILD, Secretary of the Treasury, Washington, D. C.:

SIR: On February 10, 1888, I revoked all appointments held by Captain John Mullan as "attorney and agent" in Washington, and as a matter of courtesy notified you by telegraph of the fact. On February 13, 1888, H. S. Thompson, acting Secretary, acknowledged receipt and caused the same to be "referred to the honorable First and Second Controllers for their information." On February 21, 1888, I was graciously informed by John S. Williams, Third Auditor, as follows:

I now have the honor to inclose herewith a copy of Captain John Mullan's authority to act as agent, etc., and also a copy of the Senate concurrent resolution adopted March 3, 1885, showing the subsequent ratification by the Legislature of his appointment and his commission, for your consideration.

On March 6, 1888, I answered this note, and called your attention to the fact that the subject-matter embraced in the papers referred to were but a fraction of the claims represented by the appointments claimed to be held by Mullan, including which were the five per cent claim, the direct tax claim, and claims under the provisions of the Act of Congress of June 27, 1882, the same being cited in the concurrent resolution adopted March 3, 1883. To my letter of March 6, 1888, I have never had a response.

It was apparent to me then, as it is evident now, that yourself and Captain John Mullan have conspired together against the promotion of the best interests of this State, and for the purpose of defeating, if possible, my authority in all these matters, to the end that Mullan might obtain possession of any drafts representing moneys appropriated by Congress for the benefit of this State, made payable to me as Governor of the State, and attempt in the garb of a pretended agent to levy a tribute of twenty per cent out of the same as his compensation for pretended "services rendered."

Acting upon this determination, you did, some time after October 18, 1888, and against my written instructions, deliver to Mullan, as "agent and attorney," to convey to Sacramento, two drafts payable to me representing $11,723 64. This was entirely unnecessary, as the mails and express were at your command; but the extraordinary part of this questionable transaction was the fact that you permitted this money to be divided into two portions, one fifth representing the amount claimed by Mullan, and four fifths, as you assume, representing the amount due the State. Your manipulation of these drafts in favor of Mullan, although intended to give Mullan the benefit of "collecting" this money for the State, and put him on good fighting ground against me, avail him nothing at the present time, nor will it in the future. On January eighteenth Mullan, on my demand, and as a private citizen, or messenger, surrendered the drafts into my custody, and the State will receive the whole amount.

To sustain this peculiar and unprecedented proceeding, and as an answer to my letter dated March 6, 1888, above referred to, I am now informed, through Washington press dispatches of February 9, 1889, that "Secretary Fairchild referred the matter to Second Controller Butler, who finished an elaborate review of the case, in which he decides in Captain Mullan's favor." This decision is printed with prominent headlines, such as "Mullan Recognized," "Waterman's Action," etc., and is put forth prominently at this time to discredit my action in removing Mullan, and to throw dust in the eyes of our legislators who are not informed as to the true facts of the case.

In defense of my prerogative in removing Mullan, and for the information of our Legislature, now in session, I am moved to notice this "elaborate review," which decides that "Captain John Mullan must be recognized by this office (the Treasury Department) as the agent and attorney of the State of California, notwithstanding the notification of Governor Waterman, dated February 10, 1888."

It is unfortunate for Second Controller Butler that, in his zeal to aid Captain John Mullan in breaking into the money chest of this State, he has entered the arena against me, without being fully equipped as to the facts or informed as to the law, his information being fragmentary and elliptical in its character. Laying aside the proposition that he, a sub-officer of the Treasury Department, undertakes to decide judicially as to the validity of an appointment and a concurrent resolution adopted by our State Legislature, as against the plain provision of our Constitution, and pretend to advise me as to my duties in the premises, he assumes for his groundwork of attack a false assumption of facts, that in truth do not exist. He lays down as the keystone of his armament for this "elaborate review," which is called a "decision," these three propositions: "First—Mr. Butler shows that Captain Mullan was originally appointed by Governor Perkins on July 12, 1882, and that the Governor's action was confirmed by the Legislature in the following March. Second—Governor Stoneman, who succeeded Mr. Perkins, appointed Captain Mullan, and the Legislature a second time confirmed the appointment at its next session. Third—The appointment of Captain Mullan, if not valid when these Governors made the appointments, was rendered valid from the beginning by the action of the Legislature."

In reply I will say: First—On July 12, 1882, Governor Perkins did "authorize Captain John Mullan to represent the State to recover money expended in suppressing Indian hostilities," etc., but this appointment was never in fact ratified or confirmed by any law or concurrent resolution of "the Legislature in the following March," as an honest and intelligent comparison of the documents will prove.

Second—Governor Stoneman in his appointment of Mullan, dated March 31, 1884, did not embrace the same matters as are included in Governor Perkins' appointment, cited as of July 12, 1882. I would here say in justice to Governor Stoneman, that no record of the issuance of this peculiar appointment, claimed to be held by Mullan, appears in this office.

Third—His third proposition it is not necessary to notice, except to say that all the appointments issued to Mullan were without authority of law, and any attempt to ratify or confirm said void acts would itself be void. Out of the several appointments claimed to be held by Captain John Mullan from the Governor of this State, as before mentioned, the honorable Second Controller selected but one, that of Governor Perkins, July 12, 1882 (thinking it was double-barreled), on which to display his intellectual capacity and profound legal training. He has served your purpose well, and as a pawn in the hands of Captain John Mullan—a piece always accounted insignificant in itself—Mr. Butler has proved a success.

In view of the facts as above stated, it is not necessary to further review this “elaborate” decision, which, in Mr. Butler’s case, was a clear waste of time, midnight oil, and brain work, at the expense of the Government.

Very respectfully,

R. W. WATERMAN, Governor.

MY DEAR SIR: Referring to your request, recent date, I take pleasure in testifying to the fidelity with which you have served the State of California, as agent, in looking after the recovery of moneys due from the United States.

My observation and personal knowledge of the situation leads me to the belief that had it not been for the pains taken and energy displayed by you in presenting these matters in proper form, the reimbursements already made would not have obtained to the State.

Very respectfully,

Captain JOHN MULLAN, Sacramento, California:

MY DEAR SIR: In reply to your letter of recent date, received by me at my home in Sonoma County only the day I left there for Sacramento, I beg to say that I take great pleasure in bearing witness to the fact that while I was in Congress from this State, you were ever diligent and faithful in trying to have adjusted by the United States such unpaid claims of this State as you then represented as agent and attorney for California; and whatever this State may eventually receive from these claims will, in my opinion, be largely due to your active and zealous efforts in that behalf.

Yours very truly,

To the Special Joint Committee appointed under Assembly Concurrent Resolution No. 5, adopted by the Legislature of California, January 25, 1889:

SIRS: Under leave by me asked (see page fifteen of my statement, part No. two) to file such other letters as I might deem proper or necessary, as parts of said Exhibit No. 32, referred to in said page fifteen, I now submit herewith a telegram by me this day received from Hon. George Hearst, United States Senator, dated February 28, 1889, Washington, D. C., and I attach same hereto, make part hereof, and mark Exhibit No. 41 (and also, Exhibit No. 32 Q).

Second—Also, telegram from Washington, D. C., of February 27, 1889, setting forth the passage by the Senate of the United States, on February 27, 1889, of a resolution submitted by Senator Stewart, authorizing the Hon. Secretary of War to fully examine into and report to Congress upon the entire subject-matter of the present unpaid Rebellion war claims of the States of California, (Oregon, and Nevada,) etc.

This resolution of Senator Stewart relates to the same unpaid California Rebellion war claims described by me on pages forty-nine to fifty-three, Part No. 1, and also on pages nine to fifteen, Part No. 2, and is identical with Senator Stewart's bill, to wit: Senate Bill No. 3420, printed as my Exhibit No. 27, page twenty, Part No. 2 of this statement.

This last action by the Senate on this measure is in harmony with suggestions made by me to Senator Stewart, after my arrival in Sacramento, and is also in harmony with the request of this Legislature, as expressed in Assembly Concurrent Resolution No. 10, introduced by Hon. W. P. Mathews, and unanimously adopted by the Assembly on February 14, 1889, and which on February 21, 1889, upon motion of Senator Britt—Chairman of the Committee on Federal Relations, by which it was considered and finally recommended—it was unanimously adopted by the Senate.

Wherefore, I now move your honorable committee that the foregoing and the exhibits hereto attached may be printed as portion of Part No. 3 of this statement.

Respectfully,

JOHN MULLAN.

Captain JOHN MULLAN, Sacramento, California:

DEAR SIR: It gives me great pleasure to bear witness to your persistent diligence, fidelity, and usefulness in prosecuting and urging the settlement between the United States and the State of California of all unpaid claims due California.

In attending to all the details necessary for the proper presentation and prosecution of said claims, you have performed a task which could not be expected from a Representative in Congress, and which would be impossible for him to perform.

Should California recover any of these claims, her citizens will appreciate your efforts.

PACIFIC COAST WAR CLAIMS CONSIDERED.

War Claims—A Resolution of Interest to the Pacific Coast.

WASHINGTON, February 27.—Senator Stewart to-day secured the passage through the Senate of a resolution in regard to the examination of California, Oregon, and Nevada war claims. This resolution is in substance the bill which he introduced at the last session of Congress. It becoming evident that the bill would not be reached in the House, Senator Stewart consulted the War Department officials to ascertain if the examination might not be had under a resolution of the Senate.

Upon being assured that it could, he had passed by the Senate to-day a resolution which provides that the Secretary of War, through the Board of War Claims Examiners, is authorized and directed to examine all accounts, papers, evidence which heretofore have been or which hereafter may be submitted to him in support of the war claims of the States of California, Oregon, and Nevada, growing out of the war of the Rebellion, and in suppressing Indian war hostilities and disturbances during the war of the Rebellion, and in guarding the overland mails and emigrant routes during and subsequently to the war, and to ascertain and state what amount of money each of the States of Nevada, California, and Oregon actually expended for military purposes in aid of the Government.

The Secretary of War is also directed to ascertain what amount of interest has been paid by each of the States on account of these incurred obligations. The bill provides also that the Secretary of War is to report to the Senate his findings in the matter. The report of the Board will be an official ascertainment of the facts, and the only question for Congress to determine will be whether they will pay the money disbursed by the Pacific States at the request of the President and Secretary of War, or whether they will repudiate the same.

The difficulty heretofore has been to ascertain the exact expenditures and have them authenticated. That difficulty is remedied by this resolution. Senator Stewart prepared a report at the last session on these claims, giving the circumstances under which these expenditures were made. The interest of California in this claim amounts to about $3,000,000, and the claims of Oregon and Nevada are about $300,000 each.—[San Francisco Chronicle, February 28, 1889.]

STATE EXECUTIVE OFFICERS OF CALIFORNIA, ETC.

SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA, February 8, 1889.

SIR: The Special Joint Committee appointed by the Legislature of this State under its Assembly Concurrent Resolution No. 5, adopted January 25, 1889, respectfully requests that you may inform them whether there are at this time any correspondence or records or other data in your office that show what steps or efforts, if any, were taken by the Senators and Representatives in Congress from California, prior to the dates hereinafter recited, to secure through Congress or before any other appropriate Departments of the Government of the United States a recognition and adjustment by the United States of the several unpaid claims or demands of the State of California against the United States alleged to be due this State in the following named cases, to wit:

First—The efforts by them so made prior to November 1, 1878, to have the United States pay to the State of California five per cent of the net proceeds of the cash sales of all public lands made by the United States in this State.

Second—The efforts by them so made prior to March 7, 1882, to have the United States reimburse the State of California all expenses and costs incurred by her for the "common defense" during the suppression of the Modoc Indian hostilities in this State in 1871 and 1872.

Third—The efforts by them so made prior to July 12, 1882, to have the United States reimburse the State of California all expenses and costs incurred by her for the "common defense" during the suppression of Indian hostilities in this State other than Modoc Indian hostilities arising between March 2, 1861, and June 27, 1882, and not provided for by Congress prior to June 27, 1882.

Fourth—The efforts by them so made prior to December 12, 1882, to have the United States reimburse the State of California all the "Direct War Tax," or any portion thereof, paid by this State to the United States under the Act of Congress approved August 5, 1861, when levying for war purposes a tax of $20,000,000 upon the several States of the Union and organized Territories, etc., commonly known as the "Direct War Tax," Act of Congress, August 5, 1861.

Fifth—The efforts by them so made prior to October 24, 1883, to have the United States reimburse the State of California all moneys by her improperly paid to the United States as "fees" upon the several selections of lands made by and not approved to this State, but which selections were subsequently canceled by the United States.

Sixth—The efforts by them so made prior to March 31, 1884, to have the United States reimburse the State of California all expenses and costs incurred by her for the "common defense" in the suppression of Indian and other hostilities in this State and in adjoining States and Territories, or upon the borders of either thereof, and for interest paid thereon not reimbursed to this State prior to March 31, 1884, and of a character other than that of either of those cases hereinbefore named.

Seventh—The efforts by them so made prior to December 1, 1885, to have the United States indemnify the State of California for losses by her, sustained by virtue of an improper disposition by the United States of any lands granted to this State September 28, 1850, by Congress, or confirmed to this State July 23, 1866, by Congress.

Eighth—If any such correspondence, or other data or records in relation to any of the foregoing matters, and either prior or subsequent to the dates as hereinbefore stated in each of said cases, are now of record in your office, then please inform this committee of the dates thereof and names subscribed thereto, and of the places where written, and of the name and description of the books, volumes, or other records in your office in which such information is kept and may be found, and also the character of said correspondence or information, if any, in each of the aforesaid cases.

This committee asks that the foregoing request may have your immediate attention and very early reply.

SACRAMENTO, February 18, 1889. }

Hon. W. P. MATHEWS, Chairman Committee, etc., Assembly Chamber:

DEAR SIR: I am in receipt of your communication propounding certain questions and interrogations as to "efforts of our Congressmen" as to certain claims therein mentioned, and beg leave to reply as follows:

As to the questions propounded in the first 7 (seven) subdivisions of your communication I will remark that they can only be answered by a critical examination of the Journals of the United States Senate and House of Representatives—the reports of the Committee of the two Houses—and an examination of the files of the "Congressional Globe" and the later official organ of Congress, the "Congressional Record." Further, I would respectfully inform you that there is no law that requires a United States Senator or Congressman to communicate with this office as to pending legislation affecting the interests of this State. I do find in our statutes of 1858, that our Legislature on March 11, 1858, adopted Concurrent Resolution asking "Congress a donation of 5 (five) per cent upon the sale of public lands for school purposes."

In answer to question 8 (eight) I would say that there is some correspondence in this office directed to preceding Governors from John Mullan, claiming to be State Agent in Washington, but which is unimportant in its character. I find also in the office a book of five hundred and eighty pages, entitled "Mullan's California State Claims Reports," from November 1, 1878, to November 1, 1886. I find in looking through the pages of this book, which is made up of exhibits to five per cent claim, page sixty to one hundred and twenty; exhibits to direct tax, page one hundred and twenty-one to two hundred and eighty; exhibits to "Indian war claim," page two hundred and eighty-nine to four hundred and sixty-four; exhibits to rebellion claim, page four hundred and sixty-five to four hundred and eighty-six; "exhibits of claim of interest," page four hundred and eighty-seven to five hundred and seventy-two. These exhibits are made up of proceedings in Congress, reports of committees, copies of bills, tables prepared by heads of departments, joint resolutions of the General Assembly of Iowa, opinion of Supreme Court of the United States in case of State of Iowa and State of Illinois, letters from Secretary of the Treasury, letter from Delos R. Ashley, State Treasurer; minority report on direct tax, copies of bills relating to Georgia, and the defense of her frontiers against Indians from 1795 to 1818; committee reports on these bills, concurrent resolutions of our Legislature, extracts from "Congressional Record," reports of war taxes, speech of Price, of Wisconsin; direct tax in State of Georgia, report of Secretary of Treasurer on direct tax, thirty-two pages; exhibits Modoc war claim, report of joint committee of Legislature in 1872 on Indiana war bonds, memorials on Indiana matters, copies of Acts of Congress, letters from Secretary of War, letters from Third Auditor, Controller's report on Indian war bonds, statement of Indian war bonds by Mullan, report of the Committee on Indian affairs to accompany Bill 9729, twenty-five pages; speech of Hon. I. N. Dolph and others on Indian depredation claims, thirty-four pages; report of debate by Edmunds and Allison on Indian claims, letters of Attorney-General Brewster to Folger, Secretary of the Treasurer: "reports of committees on advances made to United States by Maryland and Virginia," reports of debate, First Session, Thirty-fifth Congress, May 31, 1858, between Iverson, Benjamin, Hamlin, Hunter, and Toombs of Georgia, and Fessenden; report on Relief of the First National Bank of Newton, Mass. I notice that in this book occasionally appears the name of John Mullan, and for further information on that point I would respectfully refer you to the book itself. There is an office book of record that contains memorandum of the appointment by Governor George C. Perkins of Mullan in two cases. The correspondence I have referred to I will collect together and put in shape so that you can examine it, on Tuesday afternoon, February 19, 1889, at 4 o'clock P. M. I presume this will be more satisfactory to you than giving you the character of said correspondence in writing.

Very truly your obedient servant,

R. W. WATERMAN,
Governor.

SACRAMENTO, February 8, 1889.

To Hon. W. P. MATHEWS, Chairman Special Joint Committee, State Capitol:

SIR: In reply to yours of this date, I would inform your honorable body, through you, that there are no correspondence, records, or other data that show any step or efforts were taken by the Senators and Representatives in Congress from California prior to the dates recited in your communication to secure through Congress, or before any other appropriate departments of the Government of the United States, a recognition and adjustment by the United States of the several unpaid claims or demands of the State of California against the United States, alleged to be due this State.

Respectfully,

W. C. HENDRICKS,
Secretary of State.

SACRAMENTO, February 11, 1889.

Hon. W. P. MATHEWS, Chairman Special Joint Committee of the Legislature:

SIR: I have the honor to state, in reply to your letter of inquiry dated the eighth instant, that this office does not contain, so far as I am aware or can ascertain, any correspondence or other records indicating any action taken by Senators or Representatives in Congress from this State, to secure from the United States the sums alleged to be due the State of California in the matters recited in said letter of February 9, 1889.

Respectfully,

JOHN P. DUNN, Controller.

Hon. W. P. MATHEWS, Chairman of the Special Joint Committee appointed by the Legislature under and by virtue of Assembly Concurrent Resolution Number Five, adopted January 25, 1889:

DEAR SIR: In reply to your letter of inquiry, dated February 7, 1889, permit me to say that there are no correspondence or records, so far as I am aware or can ascertain, showing any action on the part of the members of Congress in this State, relative to the matter embraced within your letter of inquiry. The only information I have relating to the subject of your letter is the report of Captain John Mullan, dated November 1, 1886, to Honorable George Stoneman, Governor of California, and can be found in volume eight, appendix to journals of Senate and Assembly, twenty-seventh session.

Yours truly,

Hon. W. P. MATHEWS, Chairman Special Joint Committee appointed by the Legislature of this State under its Assembly Concurrent Resolution Number Five:

DEAR SIR: Your communication of February eighth, asking for such information as might be of record or on file in this office, concerning the various points of inquiry embraced in your communication, has been received and its contents carefully noted. In reply, I beg to state that there is not, to my knowledge, any records in this office or any data on file concerning the various matters referred to in your communication.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Hon. W. P. MATHEWS, Chairman:

SIR: Referring to your letter of the eighth instant, making certain inquiries, I have to state that I have made an examination of records of this office and I am unable to find any correspondence prior to November 1, 1878, relative to making an effort to have the United States pay to this State 5 per cent of the net proceeds of the cash sales of all the public lands made by the United States in this State, nor do I find any record of any correspondence relative to having the United States refund all expenses and costs incurred by the State for the "common defense" in any of the cases referred to in your letter.

All that I have been able to find is the appointment of Capt. John Mullan by Wm. Minis, Surveyor-General, November 1, 1878, Letter Book No. 5, page 526, and the appointment of Capt. John Mullan by H. I. Willey, Surveyor-General, October 24, 1883, Letter Book No. 12, pages 422 and 423. Both of the above letters dated at Sacramento, California.

Very respectfully,

THEO. REICHERT,
Surveyor-General.

Hon. W. P. MATHEWS, Chairman of Special Joint Committee on Claims, California Legislature:

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication dated February eighth, asking if this office contains certain papers bearing upon claims against the Government of the United States in favor of this State.

In reply I will say that all the papers appertaining to the early Indian wars formerly on file in this office, and which should be here now, were sent by my predecessor to Captain John Mullan, Washington, D. C., and that the only records now here are contained in a volume entitled "Reports to Hon. George Stoneman, Governor of California, on certain claims of the State of California against the United States," by John Mullan, agent and counsel for the State of California.

Hon. WILLIAM P. MATHEWS, Chairman Special Joint Committee of the Legislature:

SIR: In reply to your communication addressed to this office under date of February eighth, instant, asking for information "whether there are at this date or time any correspondence, or records, or other data in your office that show what steps or efforts, if any, were taken by the Senators and Representatives in Congress from California, prior to the dates hereinafter recited, to secure through Congress, or before any other appropriate Departments of the Government of the United States, a recognition and adjustment by the United States of the several unpaid claims or demands of the State of California against the United States, alleged to be due this State," the same being fully set forth and embraced within the eight subdivisions of your communication, I have this to reply: That I regret to state that there is nothing in this office, of record or otherwise, that would enable me to render your honorable committee the desired information.

I am, very truly yours,

ADAM HEROLD,
Treasurer of State.

IN THE MATTER

OF

ASSEMBLY BILL NO. 505.

Being an Act entitled an Act to enfranchise the Women Citizens of the State, and prescribing their qualifications as Electors.

ARGUMENT.

To the honorable J. H. SEAWELL, Chairman of the Judiciary Committee of the Assembly:

I have the honor to submit, for the consideration of the members of your committee and other members of your honorable body, the following points bearing upon the constitutionality of Assembly Bill No. 505, regarding which, you have informed me, your committee are in doubt:

I.

The question of the constitutional right of the Legislature to enfranchise women by statutory law is one of exceeding interest, and involves, perhaps, one of the most delicate points of constitutional law, which still remains (so far as my reading or knowledge extends) res integra. For these reasons I do not for a moment presume that what I have to offer will be conclusive in settling this point; but from the interpretation of statutes, where a conflict with the organic law of the State has been claimed upon provisions any way similar to the question at issue in this case, I am disposed to claim that the Legislature has the power to enfranchise the women of this State by a statute under the provisions of the Constitution of California, except women who belong to either of those classes interdicted by the concluding paragraph of section one of article two of the Constitution:

ARTICLE II.

SECTION 1. Every native male citizen of the United States, every male person who shall have acquired the rights of citizenship under or by virtue of the treaty of Queretaro, and every male naturalized citizen thereof, who shall have become such ninety days prior to any election, of the age of twenty-one years, who shall have been a resident of the State one year next preceding the election, and of the county in which he claims his vote ninety days, and in the election precinct thirty days, shall be entitled to vote at all elections which are now or may hereafter be authorized by law; provided, no native of China, no idiot, no insane person, or person convicted of any infamous crime, and no person hereafter convicted of the embezzlement or misappropriation of public money, shall ever exercise the privileges of an elector in this State.

The concluding clause of said section explicitly designates the class or classes who "shall never exercise the privileges of an elector in this State."

Obviously, the Legislature could not exclude any male citizen or person mentioned in the first part of said section from the right, guaranteed to to them therein, to vote, except by an amendment to the Constitution: nor could the Legislature extend the right of suffrage to any of those expressly prohibited by the concluding clause in said section, without also amending the organic law.

And now let us inquire if the Legislature has the power to enfranchise women who do not belong to the interdicted classes.

The rule by which the constitutionality of a legislative enactment is to be determined is: "Does the Constitution of the State prohibit it?" Or, in other words, we look in the Constitution of the United States for grants of legislative power, but in the Constitution of a State to ascertain if any limitations have been imposed upon the complete power with which the Legislative Department of the State was vested in its creation.

"Congress can pass no laws but such as the Constitution authorizes, either expressly or by clear implication; while the State Legislature has jurisdiction of all subjects on which its legislation is not prohibited."

Cooley on Constitutional Limitations, pp. 173, 174.

That the Legislature has power to enact any measure not actually prohibited by the State Constitution (saving always the National Constitution also) is a principle of law so well established, and so fully recognized in the interpretation of constitutional power, as to make it seem almost superfluous to multiply authorities, but the importance of the subject justifies a somewhat extended review of constitutional constructions and decisions.

Story on the Constitution, section five hundred and thirty-four, in contrasting the power of the judicial and legislative branches of the Government, says:

"It" (the judicial) "can do nothing for itself. It must do everything for others. It must obey the laws; and if it corruptly administers them, it is subjected to the power of impeachment. On the other hand, the legislative power, except in the few cases of constitutional prohibition, is unlimited."

To the same point, in People vs. Draper, 15 N. Y., 543, the Court say:

"Plenary power in the Legislature, for all purposes of civil government, is the rule. A prohibition to exercise a particular power is an exception. In inquiring, therefore, whether a given statute is constitutional, it is for those who question its validity to show that it is forbidden." Not that every possible limitation upon legislative power must be positively expressed, for there are many implied limitations, but nearly every case in which legislative bodies have been held to have transcended their constitutional authority in passing laws which were not actually prohibited by the Constitution, have been where such measures were a restriction upon the vested rights of citizens, rarely if ever in the extension or enlargement of rights or privileges.

Benson vs. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 10 Barb. 244.

Cooley on Constitutional Limitations, Section 4, Chapter 7.

Jackson vs. Wright, 4 John. 79.

Englishbee vs. Helmuth, 3 Conn. 295.

Goshen vs. Stonington, 4 Conn. 225.

Purcell vs. Smith, 21 Iowa, 540.

Implied restrictions upon legislative power seem to be very cautiously determined in judicial decisions, and Cooley on Constitutional Limitations, 129, would seem to imply that all limitations should be expressed. He says, and the same language was used in State ex rel. Garnes vs. McCann, 21 Ohio Statutes, 211 and 212:

"Where the power which is exercised is legislative in its character, the Courts can enforce only those limitations which the Constitution imposes; not those implied restrictions which, resting in theory only, the people have been satisfied to leave to the judgment, patriotism, and sense of justice of their representatives."

Terrett vs. Taylor, 3 Cranch. 43.

4 Michigan 248.

20 Wend. 382.

But independently of these restraints, express or implied, every subject within the scope of civil government is liable to be dealt with by the Legislature.

Sedgwick, on the construction of constitutional law, speaking of the implied or expressed inhibitions against statutory enactments, which have led to their being decided unconstitutional, says:

"It is difficult precisely to classify these objectionable laws, but they will be found generally under the three heads:

"First—Where the Legislature has, by a special Act, sought to dispense with a general law in favor of an individual.

"Second—Where the Act is one of legislation for a particular case.

"Third—Where the Act is in its nature judicial."

To declare an Act unconstitutional, therefore, it must be shown that it is an infringement upon recognized rights by clear implication, or that it is absolutely prohibited. Thus we can show that an Act to enfranchise women is neither to destroy vested rights nor to extend privileges to a proscribed or inhibited class.

Constitution of California, Section 1, Article 2.

In the case of the People vs. Board of Supervisors, etc., 27 Barb. 593, the Court, in an able and exhaustive review of constitutional limitations upon legislative enactments, say:

"The power of the Legislature is not derived from or conferred by the Constitution. * * The power is the sovereign power of the people, and in a political and judicial sense it is omnipotent and irresponsible, except when it is expressly restrained by the organic instrument. Whatever the people might do, the Courts cannot prevent their representatives from doing, unless the people have positively and expressly forbidden it. The Constitution (of N. Y.) is to be resorted to, therefore, not to see what powers are conferred upon the Legislature, but what are withheld; not how they are authorized to act, but in what respects they are restrained, or forbidden to exercise power. * * There is a wide distinction between such an instrument and a grant of limited power like the Constitution of the United States. The same strict construction which demands an express grant of a doubtful power in the latter is bound to furnish an explicit restriction in the former."

See People vs. Gallagher, 4 Michigan, pages 249, 250, and 251, and cases cited.

In 5 Michigan, Sears vs. Cotrell, page 257, the Court say:

"The purpose and object of a State Constitution are not to make specific grants of power, but to limit that power where it would otherwise be general or unlimited. * * * With the Constitution of the United States the case is directly the reverse. * * * In the one case, therefore, the inquiry is, has the power in question been granted? In the other, has it been prohibited?"

In 17 California, page 547, in case of The People ex rel. Smith, the same universally recognized rule of interpretation of Constitutions is given.

Chancellor Kent says, Com. 1 vol., 448:

"The principle in the English Government, that Parliament is omnipotent, does not prevail in the United States. Though, if there be no constitutional objection to a statute, it is with us as absolute and uncontrollable as laws flowing from the sovereign power under any other form of government." * * *

Nor has this point remained res integra. In our own State, ex rel. Smith vs. Judge, Twelfth Dist. Court, 17 Cal., 559, the Court say:

"The Legislature can pass such laws as it may judge expedient, subject only to the prohibitions of the Constitution."

Again, in Ross vs. Whitman, 6 Cal., 365, the Court say:

"The power of the Legislature is supreme, except where it is expressly restricted." 45 Cal., 559.

Thus the same rule of construction has been reiterated again and again by our own Supreme Court.

II.

And, now, let us inquire in what manner the words "male citizens," in Section 1 of Article II of the Constitution, supra, can affect legislation enfranchising women citizens.

It may be urged that the oft-quoted maxim, expressio unius est exclusio alterius, will apply herein, and that women are thereby excluded; but the context shows the fallacy of such an application, for the concluding clause excludes women from those classes absolutely prohibited from voting, and the maxim, if applicable at all in the case, is applicable to that clause alone.

Again, if "the express mention of one thing implies the exclusion of those not mentioned" should be applied in the interpretation of Constitutions, it would not only lead to a degree of conservative construction, never contemplated by the framers of the organic law, but to an entire overthrow of well established rules by which the construction of constitutions and statutes has been distinguished. This position cannot be maintained upon any showing of res adjudicata. On the contrary, there are many decisions in which this claim has been entirely rejected.

Ex parte Lynch, 16 S. C., 33.

State vs. Tate, 22 Iowa, 141.

People vs. Highway Com'rs, 15 Mich., 347.

People vs. Ingham Co., 20 Mich., 95.

Walcott vs. People, 17 Mich., 68.

There can be no plainer exposition of this rule than that given in Purcell vs. Smith, 21 Iowa, Article I, Section 22, of the Constitution of Iowa: Provides that resident foreigners shall enjoy the same rights in respect to property as native born citizens. The Legislature of that State passed a statute conferring the same property rights upon non-resident foreigners, and the cause went to the Supreme Court on this claim that the "expression of one excludes all others."

The Court say: "The Constitution having provided that resident foreigners shall enjoy certain rights, it becomes a limit or prohibition upon the legislative power to deprive such foreigners of those rights, but it is not a restriction upon the Legislature as to the granting of like rights or privileges to other foreigners than those named."

Now I ask you gentlemen, as lawyers, if you are prepared to entertain the thought that this rule of wise construction does not apply to Assembly Bill 505? Let the words "male citizens" be substituted for those of "resident foreigners," and those of "female," or "women citizens," for those of "non-resident foreigners," and you will see that your objection that "this bill is unconstitutional" has been overruled by an able decision already rendered.

Again: The absurdity of this proposition becomes more and more apparent as we investigate the provisions of the Constitution further, and particularly those pertaining to suffrage. He who contends for the application of this maxim must, to be consistent, admit that the whole subject is settled by the Constitution, and nothing is left for the Legislature, except it be to regulate and prescribe the manner in which votes are to be cast. But according to the familiar rule which requires all parts of an instrument to be construed together, and such a construction given as will tend to harmonize and give a meaning to every part, what is to be done with Section 24, of Article I, of the Constitution, which reads: "No property, qualification shall ever be required for any person to vote or hold office," clearly indicating, as it does, that the Constitution does not settle the qualifications of an elector absolutely; for applying the same maxim, we must acknowledge that the Legislature can prescribe other qualifications for electors than that of a property qualification.

Again: Section 1, Article II, Constitution of California, speaks of voting as a "right," a "privilege," and in Section 21 of Article I the Constitution says: "No special privileges or immunities shall ever be granted which may not be altered, revoked, or repealed by the Legislature; nor shall any citizen or class of citizens be granted privileges or immunities, which, upon the same terms, shall not be granted to all citizens." No one disputes that women are "citizens," or that the right to vote is a "privilege," extended in this instance specially to certain male citizens, therefore the Legislature has a special power conferred upon it by the Constitution to alter, revoke, or repeal any laws pertaining to suffrage without further aid from the Constitution.

Minor vs. Happersett, 21 Wall. 162.

But it is useless to pursue this subject farther, as I am convinced that every lawyer who investigates this question of the power of the Legislature to extend the "privilege of an elector" to women, will admit it is without doubt constitutional. It may be of interest to know that several States have passed laws allowing women to vote upon school matters where the Constitutions thereof contain the same special qualifications for electors that the Constitution of California does. We refer you to the general laws of Kansas, page fifty-eight, where the right of school suffrage is conferred upon women, although the State Constitution has the word "male" as one of the qualifications for suffrage.

In the general laws of Massachusetts, Page 68, Chapter 6, Section III, is a provision granting school suffrage to women citizens, and strangely enough the Constitution of Massachusetts, in Article III, defines an elector including only male citizens, and expressly declares it to be a bar to all others. The general laws of Minnesota, page 168, confer the right to vote on educational matters upon women citizens, and Section 1, of Article VII, of her State Constitution, is almost a copy of Section 1, of Article II, of our State Constitution, except Indians are mentioned in the former and Chinese in the last named.

Respectfully submitted.

LAURA DE FORCE GORDON.

IN THE MATTER OF THE CLAIM

OF

DENNIS JORDAN.

TWENTY-EIGHTH SESSION.

1889.

IN THE MATTER OF THE CLAIM OF DENNIS JORDAN.

SACRAMENTO, February 7, 1889.

In the Matter of the Claim of Dennis Jordan.—Taken before the Senate Committee on Claims, Thursday, February 7, 1889. Present—Meany, Chairman: Roth, Fraser, and Langford.

THE CHAIRMAN: Gentlemen, this is the claim of Dennis Jordan, for work done on the Branch Prison at Folsom. The claim was before the Committee on Claims the last session of the Legislature, and all the evidence taken and sworn to, and it seemed to me that they simply took the whole thing away from——. I am familiar with the matter myself, but I desire that every member of this committee shall be familiar, also, with the nature of the claim before passing upon it. There is here some of the testimony taken two years ago, which I think ought to be read to the committee.

MR. RYAN: I will read this testimony—it is signed by every member of the Committee on Claims in the Assembly—I will just read this for the benefit of the committee. It was Mr. Jordan's wishes two years ago that the testimony be taken, which was done. I will read this report, presented by Mr. Mulgrew, Chairman of the Committee on Claims of the Assembly. It is as follows:

“MR. SPEAKER: Your Committee on Claims have had under consideration Assembly Bill No. 178, to pay D. Jordan, contractor, for labor and materials furnished in the construction of the Branch State Prison at Folsom, and beg leave to make the following report:

“It was Mr. Jordan's request that the committee examine every competent witness obtainable. Your committee had before them a printed copy of the evidence given before the Joint Committee on Claims at the last Legislature, which is a part of the Appendix to the Journal of the twenty-seventh session. The witnesses were as follows:

“D. Jordan, the contractor; John Calvert, John L. Cook, Willis E. Davis, Daniel McHenry, Michael Murphy, Thomas Welch, ex-Lieutenant-Governor Jas. A. Johnson, and Hon. Thos. Beck, ex-Secretary of State, who acted as Prison Directors at the time the work was going on, also Jas. M. Duncan, who acted as Superintendent of the work on behalf of the State.

“At the twenty-seventh session the Committee on Claims of the Senate and Assembly unanimously recommended the payment to Mr. Jordan of $50,345 45, the original bill asking for $79,000 to cover profits on work completed, interest, plant, etc.

“Shorn of these items, the amount recommended by the Joint Committee was to cover the unfinished payments for work done by Mr. Jordan under the contract, money actually expended and extra work ordered by the Prison Commissioners upon recommendation of the architect.

“The testimony taken two years ago was printed and placed before the members of the Legislature, both branches whereof passed the bill as amended. It went to the Governor at the close of the session. His Excellency, without investigation as to the merits or demerits of claim bills, drew a line against all where there had been a failure to comply with Section 672 of the Political Code, with reference to their presentation to the State Board of Examiners.

"At the present session, a bill to provide for the payment to Mr. Jordan of the amount recommended by the last Legislature was introduced. In its report to this Legislature the State Board of Examiners, with reference to Mr. Jordan's claim, which had been submitted to them, report as follows:

"This claim was fully considered by a joint committee of both houses, during the last session of the Legislature, and a bill was passed making an appropriation to pay the same, but which failed to become a law by reason of the refusal of the Governor to approve it. This Board does not wish to act in a judicial capacity, where the Legislature and the Executive do not agree, and, therefore, we refer the claims to your honorable bodies without any special recommendation, except, in order that no injustice may be done, to call your attention to the report of the Joint Committee on Claims of the last session of the Legislature, published in Volume 8, of the Appendix to the Journal of the Senate and Assembly, twenty-seventh session.'

"Your committee, to whom this claim has been referred, beg leave to report, additional to the foregoing statement of facts, that it has had recourse to the testimony to which attention is directed by the State Board of Examiners, and additional thereto, the principal witnesses, whose testimony was heard at the twenty-seventh session, were subpoenaed and appeared before us during our investigation.

"We find that Dennis Jordan entered into a contract with the State on July 25, 1878, to build a branch prison at Folsom for the sum of $161,500, to be paid in monthly installments at the rate of ninety per cent of the value of the work done, on the first of every month. We find from the evidence and the records of the Treasurer's office that those monthly payments were not made in accordance with terms of the contract. Mr. Jordan commenced work on or about August 1, 1878, and from that date to February 1, 1879 (six months), he received only two payments—November 28, 1878, $4,222 59, and on December 30, 1878, $5,182 08, making a total for six months of $9,404 67—while during this time it was in evidence that Mr. Jordan had done extra work authorized by the architect and Commissioners amounting to $10,196 90, which would leave coming to him for extra work, over what he had received from the State up to that time, a balance of $792 23.

"It was conclusively established that Mr. Jordan was, from the outset of his contract, hampered and harassed by the architect, who, by virtue of a clause requiring the work to be done 'to the satisfaction of the architect,' exacted unreasonable and well-nigh impossible performances on Mr. Jordan's part. It was in evidence that Mr. Bennett, the architect, did not appear at the building on or about the first of the month to make the 'progress estimate,' as per contract; that whenever he did come he had gone around condemning the work that had been done under the supervision of Superintendent Duncan.

"Mr. BECK testified: It appeared to me to be a very unreasonable proceeding on the part of the architect. I know he was very unreasonable. He expected better work than was required, and better work than the spirit and meaning of the contract ever intended. On one occasion, in company with Governor Irwin, Lieutenant-Governor Johnson, and Mr. Bennett, I went where the latter wished us to go and condemn work done by Mr. Jordan. On arriving at the grounds, Mr. Bennett called our attention to the floor of the cells, about sixty feet long, which he said was not level, and had to be taken up. Now, as Mr. Bennett came there with us,

I thought it was very strange that he should know the floor was not level. The floor was laid with large slabs of stone, in most cases the full size of the cell. I said, 'Before we put that to a vote, I propose to level and see this for myself.' I procured a straight-edge, twenty feet long, and leveled the whole floor, and ascertained that it was scarcely three eighths of an inch out of level, which, considering the large size of the stone slabs and the extent of the floor, would be as near as any one could possibly make it. The architect then called us inside the cells, where he showed us stone laid in the walls that he had marked with red chalk here and there, all over the walls. Mr. Bennett said he had condemned those marked stones. That stone, used on the front of an elegant building on Montgomery or Kearny Streets, would hardly pass; but in a cell, for strength and such things as that, it was perfectly satisfactory to any reasonable man. To take these stones out meant to take the whole wall down, because they were put in with iron dowels and were just like one solid stone. I wish to state here that I am an architect myself, and know what I am talking about.

"Q. How far had the work progressed at the time Jordan was forced to give up the contract? A. Well, he had the outside wall pretty near finished, and a large portion of the cells. I don't know exactly what portion of the cells, but he had them pretty well progressed.

"Q. Would you estimate that he had half his contract completed, or a little more? A. Yes, sir; a little more. I said to Mr. Bennett after we returned to Sacramento: I never want you to place me in that position again; it is a very disagreeable position to place me, holding the office I do, because it compels me to appear as a friend of Mr. Jordan's. Your unreasonableness with him shows me to be working as a friend to him and against the State. Well, there were a hundred little things I should mention, which made it appear that Bennett wanted to freeze him out. There were many other things I would have objected to had I not been placed in that disagreeable position. His order to put on so many men and so much material, three or four months before it was needed, was unreasonable, while some of the material was never needed at all. I rather chaffed at being placed in the position of apparent friend to Mr. Jordan and so I acquiesced regarding the order. Mr. Beck's evidence is corroborated by that of Lieutenant-Governor Johnson, and also by Superintendent Duncan, who says: 'Mr. Jordan should be paid; I think the State threw obstacles in his way.'

"Q. Do you think that, at the time the State took the work from Mr. Jordan, he had completed half or more than half the work? A. Yes, he had completed more than half.

"Q. What do you know about the extra work that Mr. Jordan claims? A. I know that he had a supplementary contract for building a culvert, amounting to $2,400. I know he took up a large number of cell foundations and rebuilt them. These foundations were put in under the Mills' contract, and as they did not go down deep enough to secure a good foundation, the walls had settled in all directions; and, through my advice, the architect and Commissioners had the walls taken up, and in some places went down to a depth of fifteen feet. I also know that when we came to put in the foundations of the approach building, we had to excavate to a depth of twenty-two feet; and in order to reach the bottom, we had to case the sides of the trenches with plank, in the same manner as is done in excavating for sewers, to prevent the earth from caving in. The dirt had to be hoisted out in tubs, and the stone lowered to its place. This was very expensive work.

"Q. Do you know how much this extra work cost? A. No, I do not; but the walls were about six feet thick at the bottom. I was ordered by Mr. Bennett to take measurements as the work progressed.

"Q. Did you take measurements? A. I did, and also made sketches every day. I had to do this, as we filled in around the walls as it was built. Mr. Briggs, foreman mason for Mr. Jordan, and myself agreed upon these measurements as the work progressed, and when Mr. Bennett came to make his progress estimates, I gave him those measurements, and Mr. Bennett would invariably cut down my estimates without any apparent cause.

"Q. Do you know how much plant Mr. Jordan had on the ground at the time the State took charge? A. Yes, sir; the plant was estimated to be worth between ten and eleven thousand dollars.

"Q. What way have you of knowing it to be worth as much as that? A. Well, the plant was attached, and an inventory taken of it, and Mr. Davis came in and paid off all the attachments. It was estimated to be worth $10,000, but I know it was worth more than that.

"Willis E. Davis testified: I am the son of Mr. Davis, of Davis & Cowell, of San Francisco; that his father had furnished materials and advanced money to Mr. Jordan. I went to the prison building to represent my father's interest, and while I remained there Mr. Jordan carried on the work continuously. I was there till he was pushed out by the State.

"Q. What were your observations and what were your conclusions as to Mr. Jordan's trouble? What was it that created his difficulties? A. Well, the trouble commenced. Of course, the main thing was his not being allowed sufficient pay according to the work he had done, and the continual trouble with the men, which was brought about, as we supposed, through the agent of Bennett, who caused dissension among them. This was brought about by the architect telling the men that Jordan could not carry on the work, and caused them to strike and delay the work with the object in view of getting him out. Mr. Bennett came to me one day, and said that I had better try and induce my father to drop Jordan; that he would have to be gotten out of that; that it would be a bad business to continue with him. He wanted me to induce my father to withdraw from Jordan all the time. On account of the small estimates made by Mr. Bennett, my father furnished money to Jordan to carry on the work, so Mr. Bennett was very anxious to have me induce my father to withdraw from it, as another means of crippling Mr. Jordan.

"Q. Is it your opinion that some officer or officers of the State at that time put some obstacles in the way of Mr. Jordan? A. Most assuredly. I could see Mr. Bennett go among the workmen and talk to them. I could not overhear him, but it was a very common thing for him, when he came up there to make an estimate, to go among the men; I knew what his object was.

"Daniel McHenry, foreman for Jordan, and afterwards for the State, corroborated most of Mr. Davis' testimony, and, in reply to a committee-man's question, 'When you saw Mr. Bennett talking to the men here and there, was it settled in your mind that Mr. Bennett had a job on Mr. Jordan, and wanted to oust him?' he answered, 'Yes, sir; he talked that way to me.'

"N. P. Perine was sworn and testified: I am an old contractor, and know Mr. Bennett and Mr. Jordan. Shortly after Mr. Jordan commenced the work Mr. Bennett told me in San Francisco that he was 'going to bust Jordan wide open.' I thought it very unjust of Mr. Bennett, and told Mr.

Jordan shortly after they took the work away from him, that if it ever came to a suit, and he wanted me to testify, I would willingly do so.

"JOHN L. Cook testified: I had a contract with Mr. Jordan to do the iron work. When I commenced my contract Mr. Bennett started in to abuse us, and tried his very best to get us off the ground.

"Q. In what way did Mr. Bennett try to get you off the ground? A. He would go around and knock his cane against the work and say, 'This won't do, this don't look right,' and when I would ask him, 'What didn't look right?' he would give me no explanation but would say, 'It is not done right.' I asked him one time if the State would do the work if they got Mr. Jordan off, when he replied, 'Jordan was no man to do it, and would never carry it out.'

"Q. Did you hear him at any time make statements that 'It would be better for all parties when the State got it out of his hands?' A. Yes, sir; he stated that to me. He intimated to me that if the Livermore crowd got it, it would be better for all hands.

"Q. How do you account for those underestimates and those derelictions on the part of the State? A. Well, I don't know how to account for them more than I think Mr. Bennett wanted to get his bids in.

"Q. Wanted to control it himself? A. Wanted to control it himself."

After hearing all this testimony we have come to this conclusion:

That Mr. Jordan had completed one half the work, and that therefore he is entitled to one half the amount of $161,500, the amount of his contract—

Which would come to.....	$80,750 00
Mr. Jordan's bill for extra work performed, would amount to	10,196 00
And for his plant.....	10,000 00
Amounting in all to	$100,946 00

From this amount are to be made the following deductions, paid him by the State:

Total amount of architect's certificates.....	$32,033 24
Money paid for plant.....	5,350 00
Total.....	$37,383 24
Leaving a balance coming to D. Jordan of.....	$63,563 00

The joint committee of the twenty-seventh session took for a basis of calculation the amount actually expended by Mr. Jordan, namely, $73,645 03 instead of $80,750 00, the sum equal to half the contract; in brief, refusing to allow anything for profit. It also refused to allow anything additional for the plant, and rejected some items put in Mr. Jordan's claim for extra work, thus reducing the total of the claim to $50,345 45, for the payment of which latter amount Assembly Bill No. 178 provides, and your committee recommend that it do pass.

MR. LANGFORD: Is Mr. Jordan here?

MR. MEANY: Yes, sir. Mr. Jordan, you will please be sworn.

TESTIMONY OF DENNIS JORDAN.

Sworn.

Examined by MR. LANGFORD: What transpired between you and the Governor—was there any compromise or settlement—or what did transpire? Answer—There is nothing did transpire. I made my complaint to the Governor and the Commissioners, and the Commissioners told me that they could not possibly interfere between the architect, because he had all the power, and they were powerless. There was a letter here; there was a letter introduced in my former testimony here, that I had received from the Governor in answer to my complaint about not getting my payment—not getting it regular, and not getting enough of it.

THE CHAIRMAN: The idea Mr. Jordan wished to convey was that if they had given him the 90 per cent on the work performed, and not pay him a great deal less, that he would have been able to continue the contract.

THE WITNESS: I was getting along with it nicely—I got it all through the rainy season—I worked on it nine months, and I was just starting in the first of May.

MR. LANGFORD: I don't know that I understand you, and I may do you an injustice, and I wish to do you justice. I have a recollection that Governor Irwin stated before this committee, in 1880—you were here then, were you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were well represented then, and the case was pretty fresh? A. Yes, sir.

Q. On what grounds did this committee refuse you in 1880? A. I did not have any claim in '80; I was only subpoenaed here as a witness; that was the investigation of the State Prison Committee, and I was subpoenaed, like others, as a witness.

MR. RYAN: You will find from the report of that committee, that they said that Mr. Jordan had a good claim against the State if he wanted to put it before the Legislature.

MR. LANGFORD: What year was it that this case was first tried here? A. I think it was in 1880.

Q. This same claim? A. I had no claim in at that time.

Q. How was it? A. I had no claim before the Legislature of that year. I only came here as a witness to give testimony as to the way this thing was managed.

Q. How did it happen that you did not present your claim then? Was there a settlement of any kind? I am trying to find out whether there was or not. A. There never was a settlement made, and the whole report is in that book. We have the book here. I think Mr. Ryan has the book here to-night.

MR. ROTH: Am I right about this—that you and Mr. Bennett fell out about the character of the work, and the manner that you executed the work; he claimed that it was not up to the contract? A. No; he found fault with the stone work, and I had some of it changed, and he always accepted this work; none of that was taken up.

Q. Well, what was the trouble between you and Mr. Bennett? A. About the peine, that work.

Q. Peine-hammered? A. Well, we had the stone hammered. The trouble was they did not pay me my money, and the Treasurer's books will show that up to the time they took the work away from me I had only actually received, over and above the extra work, ten thousand four hundred dollars. Then I worked on it nine months, and I done half the work, or more: and I done ten thousand dollars' worth of extra work—ten thousand two hundred dollars.

Q. Well, what evidence have you about the extra work—is that in Mr. Beck's testimony there, who gives testimony here that you done extra work? A. Duncan, the Superintendent.

THE CHAIRMAN: Duncan, the State Superintendent, was not there working for you, but he was watching for the State? A. Yes, sir.

MR. RYAN: Here is the part of the committee's report, taken from the twenty-third session of the Legislature. The Legislative Commission investigated the acts of the Commission, and here is some of their report, which shows one of the reasons why he was forced to give up his contract. I will read it:

"It was ordered that Dennis Jordan, the contractor for the building of the Folsom Branch State Prison, be required to place on the said work, in addition to the one hundred and fifty men required to be placed thereon by an order of date April 1, 1879, and keep continuously thereon, the following number of mechanics and laborers, to wit: Seventy-five stonecutters, fifty quarrymen, seventy-two stone-masons, twenty-eight tenders, six blacksmiths, ten general laborers. And to procure the following material, to wit: Five hundred barrels of Portland cement, one hundred barrels Rosendale cement, five hundred barrels lime, five hundred cubic yards sand, six thousand pounds steel (including hammers), five hundred pounds plugs and feathers, one million bricks, ten tons Cumberland coal, three dozen blacksmiths' files, three mules, two one-inch Norway iron chains eighteen feet long, four three-fourths-inch Norway iron chains fifteen feet long, two bundles five-eighth Norway iron, twelve bars three-fourth Norway iron, two coils four and one half-inch Manilla rope, two coils four-inch Manilla rope, three sets blocks twelve or fourteen inches, one hundred kegs assorted nails, two hundred kegs blasting powder, one thousand feet fuse, ten sets blacksmiths' tools, forges, etc., one hundred and seventy-five thousand feet lumber and sufficient mill work."

Now, you will see that it calls for one million brick, but not more than one hundred thousand brick was used altogether: but they ordered him to have one million brick, and this he was to provide in fifteen days. The report proceeds as follows:

"It appears from the testimony that the architect and Governor Irwin were the prime movers in the making of such requisition, and that many of the things directed to be procured at once would not be required for months afterwards, and until near the completion of the work: and Governor Irwin himself stated, that when he made the requisition he did not expect that Mr. Jordan could fulfill it: that he thought it was impossible for Mr. Jordan to comply with the requisition. By the terms of the contract, the contractor was to have fifteen days from the making of any such requisition in which to comply with its terms: but, notwithstanding, it appears by the records of the Board of Prison Directors, that on May 19, 1879, six days after the requisition was made, and before the work came under the control of the Directors, the Board employed Mr. Johnson as foreman of the work at the prison, at a salary of $200 per month. It appears, also, from the testimony of Governor Irwin and Mr. Duncan, that within a few days after the making of this requisition, Governor Irwin instructed Mr. Duncan to procure anything that was necessary for continuing the work of Mr. Livermore."

MR. LANGFORD: Who was the attorney in that case? A. I did not have any attorney; all that evidence you will find in the Senate Journal of that year.

Q. It strikes me I was a member of that committee that year? A. No; I don't think you were, Senator.

MR. ROTH: Why didn't you present your claim at that time? A. Well, I was all broken up; it was just after the work had been taken away from me, and I didn't hardly know what I would do about it. I should have presented it before, but I didn't know how to go about it. I knew I could not sue the State, and that year I had not thought about presenting my claim to the Legislature.

MR. LANGFORD: And you now know that you cannot sue the State, and you knew then that you could not sue the State; what I am getting at is, if there was a compromise, or whether there was any money paid you? A. No, sir; not a cent—not one five cents.

Q. How did I get it in my head that this thing was compromised in '80, or prior to '80? A. Well, it was on account of that investigation that they had of the prison; that is the way you got it in your head.

Q. The investigation was conducted by Tyler, was it not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it was Tyler's intention to give Irwin all the trouble he could? A. Well, I don't know about that.

Q. I think there was something in that, and it seems to me if we could get that proceeding, we could find out. A. Well, Mr. Ryan has gone after that.

Q. Who were the Commissioners that year? A. Governor Irwin, Lieutenant-Governor Johnson, and Secretary Beck; but they could do nothing with the architect; the Governor told me several times that it was impossible.

Q. Who appointed the architect? A. The Commissioners.

Q. And they could ship him, could they not? A. I suppose they could, I don't know; but his name was mentioned in the bill that was passed appropriating the money to go on with this work. I think Bennett's name was in that bill.

Q. Did you have any acquaintance with Bennett when you took the contract? Did you know anything about him as an architect? A. Yes, sir; I knew him as an architect.

MR. LANGFORD: He was appointed an architect of this building once.

MR. FRASER: He drew the Merced jail and Court House.

MR. LANGFORD: And the jail in Stanislaus County.

THE WITNESS: I think he had all that built before.

Q. Was he the architect at the Tulare jail? A. I don't know whether he was at Tulare or not.

THE CHAIRMAN: Yes, he was.

THE WITNESS: All that work I think was done in 1876.

MR. LANGFORD: I don't know how I got it in my head that there was a complete settlement between you and the State about that work? A. No, sir; there was never any settlement between me—the first time I ever appeared to look after this claim was the last session of the Legislature. That was the first time I ever put in any claim.

MR. FRASER: Was there any settlement about your tools or plant? A. They allowed me for the tools and plant five thousand three hundred and fifty dollars, and that is credited in this account.

THE CHAIRMAN: That is credited in this statement.

MR. FRASER: The Board of Commissioners, Beck and Johnson, allowed you for the tools? A. Yes, sir; they might have allowed me one thousand dollars, and I would have taken it the same.

MR. LANGFORD: How did they come to get you out of there? A. They made this requisition on me to put on seventy-five stonecutters, and seventy-two stonemasons, and to furnish several hundred kegs of powder, and to put on so much more tools, and to furnish a million and a half of lumber, and to furnish a million of brick, when their own report, the Commissioners report, of that year showed what they paid for brick only amounted to four hundred dollars; that includes the freight from Sacramento up there and delivering them on the ground. It would not amount to over thirty-five thousand brick at the outside.

THE CHAIRMAN: You say there were only about thirty-five thousand brick used, and they made a requisition on you for one million? A. Yes, sir; for a million. There was no brick required except to use in the chimneys.

MR. LANGFORD: Who was the attorney that was here in '80?

MR. RYAN: I don't know whether there was any attorney here at all. There was an investigation of the State Board of Prison Directors—not an investigation of Mr. Jordan's claim; but Mr. Jordan's claim that he now makes came up indirectly, but he did not have any claim before the Legislature at that time, but they as much as said in the report that he ought to be recompensed for the loss that he had sustained by reason of the failure of the State to keep their contract or keeping their faith with him.

MR. LANGFORD: I don't see how in the world they got him out. If a man has a contract with the State, and he goes off, and they pay him for his tools, it is something that is not just exactly in accordance with the routine of business.

MR. RYAN: He was forced off. They took it away from him absolutely, and did not give him any say in the matter one way or the other. They took it away from him, and put another man there. The contract shows it had not lapsed or would not for six months. They just simply put another man there, and the balance of that work cost the State the sum of two hundred thousand and odd dollars. The attorney was Catlin.

THE WITNESS: The report is in that Journal.

MR. RYAN: Now, here is the portion of that report—the report of the State Prison Committee—their findings in 1880.

MR. LANGFORD: What are you going to read from?

MR. RYAN: I am going to read from the report of 1880 and 1881. This is the testimony that was taken before the Committee on Claims two years ago, and it is quoted from the report of the examination there by the State Prison Committee—by a joint committee of the Senate and Assembly in 1880 and 1881. Here is what they say:

“We find that for some reason or other the architect seemed disposed to put obstacles in the way of Mr. Jordan in the finishing of the contract, often condemning work and requiring it to be removed that had been accepted by the Superintendent, Mr. Duncan; and he often stated to the men working for Jordan that there would not be money enough coming to him, Jordan, to pay the men their wages at the end of the month, and telling them at the same time that it would be better for them when Jordan should cease work, and the Directors take the finishing of the work into their own hands. To such an extent was this carried that Mr. Beck, who seems to have been perfectly just and fair toward Mr. Jordan, stated that he at times was forced to place himself in the position of seeming to act as the friend of Mr. Jordan in the contest between him and the architect.”

Now, there is one thing you refer to here, that is peine-hammered stone. It seems to me that in the original contract or specification the work was to be “well hammered,” and after the bid was in the contract was changed to peine-hammered—it was done at the suggestion of the architect; there is where the great difficulty arose between Mr. Jordan and Mr. Bennett.

Mr. Bennett seemed to take advantage of that to insist upon the work being done peine-hammered; and the work that was done by Mr. Jordan, as testified here by Mr. Beck and Mr. Duncan, is the best work that is in the prison to-day; and the work that was subsequently done by the State does not begin to compare with the work that he did.

MR. LANGFORD: That might be, but still it might be that Mr. Jordan did not complete his contract in the way of doing his work.

THE WITNESS: Yes; it was all satisfactory, except where he had those stones marked with the red chalk—they were not taken out, but I peine-hammered them over again in this place without taking them out—peine-hammered them over.

MR. RYAN: You will find from the testimony of Mr. Jordan that that was perfectly satisfactory.

THE CHAIRMAN: It seems to me that it is entirely irregular to wait until they got the work up, and then undertake to tear it down; they had a State Superintendent there to attend to that.

MR. ROTH: Did they have a State Superintendent?

THE CHAIRMAN: Yes, sir.

THE WITNESS: The architect, Mr. Bennett, would go around once a month, or once in two months, and find all manner of faults.

MR. LANGFORD: What does Mr. Catlin know about that: does he know anything about that? A. Well, he acted as the lawyer for Governor Irwin.

MR. RYAN: I will state that Mr. Catlin drew up the report of the committee for Governor Irwin, and that report was never signed by any member; but the report that was signed was the report that was favorable to Mr. Jordan. You will find that in the Appendix of the Journal.

MR. LANGFORD: Mr. Johnson was the Lieutenant-Governor at that time? A. Yes, sir.

THE WITNESS: Johnson stated that he was not at the prison much because he was down at the other prison; he was acting as the Warden of the other prison, and he did not come there often, but he was there on this occasion when Bennett wanted the work taken up.

MR. RYAN: And when Beck made the measurement and found it was only three-eighths of an inch out of plumb ———.

THE WITNESS (interrupting): Mr. Johnson gave his testimony to corroborate all that Mr. Beck said as far as he knew about it.

MR. FRASER: How long did you have to do all this contract work in? A. Fifteen months.

Q. How long did you work at it? A. I worked at it nine months.

Q. What part of the contract did you do in nine months—did you do the half of it or two thirds? A. Well, I considered there was a full half of it done.

Q. Half of it in nine months? A. Yes, sir; and that was in the winter months. It was a very bad winter that winter, and it took some time to get my plant and everything on the ground, and open a quarry, and build a railroad track from the quarry to the prison, and through the prison, through the aisles and corridors of the prison, and I got my stone right in there and set them with the derrick.

MR. LANGFORD: What is the testimony in regard to this extra work—who designated the extra work? A. Well, there was some extra work on a supplemental contract; there was twenty-four hundred dollars agreed upon, but it could not be figured until we had taken up the foundation and went down and measured, as Mr. Duncan says in his statement there. Mr. Duncan was authorized to measure the work as the work progressed, and he did not say. He made measurements and made sketches at that time of it, and I gave them to Mr. Bennett.

Q. Mr. Bennett is not living, is he? A. Yes, sir.

THE CHAIRMAN: Yes, sir; we sent for Mr. Bennett two years ago, but he never put in an appearance. He was subpoenaed by the committee.

THE WITNESS: Mr. Bennett is paralyzed—he cannot speak.

THE CHAIRMAN: He cannot speak. His mouth is paralyzed and he is not in very good health.

THE WITNESS: No; he cannot speak.

THE CHAIRMAN: We had Tom Beck here last time—the Secretary of State. He was one of the Commissioners. He said Mr. Jordan was very badly treated and that he ought to be paid, and he said so too in the street afterwards. He said at that time that he never saw a man as badly treated as Mr. Jordan. That it rendered him a wreck physically, mentally, and financially—it broke him right up. And Duncan was here and testified before the Commission.

MR. LANGFORD: Let me ask you a question, Mr. Jordan. How it was and why it was you did not present your claim in 1880? A. Well, sir, I was so broke I didn't know hardly what I was doing, Senator—it set me almost crazy. If I was to put a rifle in every one of my men's hands to keep off the Governor when they were going to take the work away from me, I could not keep the work. If I were to put a rifle in every man's hand, he could call out the militia. He had the power.

Q. My impression is that you had been settled with and compromised with, and they allowed you so much and you put in your tools that you had there? A. No, sir.

Q. I don't know that I am right about that? A. I am on my oath now, Senator.

THE CHAIRMAN: We will swear you, Senator Langford. Do you want to be made a witness, Senator Langford?

MR. RYAN: No; you will find there was no settlement; we have been trying to get one.

MR. LANGFORD: Well, it is very strange that the claim was not put in.

MR. RYAN: Well, there are a great many strange things that occur in regard to State affairs.

THE CHAIRMAN: Here is my judgment about it: I guess Mr. Jordan was pretty badly broken up when he was put out. If he had a big sack behind him he would be better able to fight. Beck gave his testimony in a very feeling way when he gave his testimony two years ago, and thought Jordan ought to be relieved.

MR. ROTH: I have only one side of it; I have not heard Johnson, who was Lieutenant-Governor at the time.

THE CHAIRMAN: He was here and testified in this man's favor. Johnson was here the other night, and testified the other night.

MR. LANGFORD: Where is his testimony?

MR. RYAN: Here is the testimony taken two years ago. He was sworn and examined by Attorney Young. I will read it.

“Testimony of Lieutenant-Governor James A. Johnson. Sworn. Examined by Attorney Young:

“Q. You were present on the occasion referred to by Mr. Beck, were you? A. Yes, sir; I was present on both occasions mentioned by Mr. Beck.

“Q. Without further questioning, please state what you think about the matter? A. Well, I was there about the time of the dispute about the floor. I saw Mr. Beck take the level and go over it, and the result was as he has stated; the work was not disturbed. I was there upon the other occasion, although I was not often there. I was there when these stones were marked on the inside of the cells to be taken out. They were not taken out. There was a great deal of harping about it, and a great deal of talk, and some very angry feeling. About the attitude laid to the architect and his arbitrary manner of exercising his authority, I don't want to say anything about. He may have been trying to force Mr. Jordan out, and he may not have been. He may have thought it was his duty to get the very best work to be got, and if he could not get good work, to discharge Mr. Jordan. I don't know what his object was. I would not like to find any fault with Mr. Bennett, although the result of his administration was to break Mr. Jordan up.

"Q. That would have been the result, I presume, with any contractor and with such an unreasonable architect? A. I suppose so. I believe Mr. Jordan was not paid 90 per cent of the work as it went on—was not paid 90 per cent of the work as it progressed, was he?

"MR. BECK: That was the contract price, but it was held back on many occasions, and the full amount on many occasions was not paid to him.

"THE WITNESS: I want to state to the committee, as I was one of the Prison Directors, that I did not live here. They had to hold meetings in Mr. Beck's office, or the Governor's office. They held meetings every few days. I never was notified and attended very few meetings. Besides these two occasions that Mr. Beck speaks about, there was only one other time I visited the prison during the four years I was Director. I used to attend the meetings once in awhile. Well, the result was to force Mr. Jordan to give up the contract. It was ruled, I suppose at somebody's instance, that he should furnish seventy-five men to work, so many barrels of lime, so many barrels of cement, and so forth, and the State did not furnish him the money.

"ATTORNEY YOUNG: In corroboration of this witness' testimony, and also of the statement of Mr. Beck, as to the claims being withheld, we will introduce in evidence a written statement of when the work was performed. Work was finished December 26, 1878; it was allowed March thirteenth, and was not paid till May 13, 1879. The work was completed and the estimate made on December 26, 1878; and then, as the evidence showed the other day, instead of it being ninety per cent, it was only about thirty per cent."

MR. RYAN: So the testimony of Lieutenant-Governor Johnson was that he was not paid according to his contract, and also that the effect of Bennett's administration was to break up Mr. Jordan?

MR. LANGFORD: That would cut no figure in the case, if Mr. Jordan was not doing his work according to the terms of his contract.

MR. ROTH: It seems to me that it would not make a single particle of difference, as long as the State had a man there to accept the work, and he accepted it. If the State had a man there, under pay, to take charge of that work for the State, and that man accepted that work, day after day, and week after week, I don't care whether the work was made of straw, I claim we have a right to pay him.

MR. FRASER: I was going to ask Mr. Jordan if that stuff that they made a requisition for had to go into the building, under your contract? A. No, sir. You can judge what the requisition was, when they ordered me to furnish a million brick; and to-day you will find by the report of the Commissioners that the total amount of money they paid out for brick was about $400.

Q. Did you keep a copy of that requisition? A. Yes, sir; it is in that report—the report of the Commissioners of that year; it is in their report.

MR. FRASER: That would have been pretty good evidence, for you to show that they had made a demand on you for things that could not have gone into the building, under your contract? A. Yes, sir; we did so at the last session of the Legislature. If you recollect, reference was made to that at that time; things all came out in that investigation.

THE CHAIRMAN: How much brick do you say was used? A. About thirty-five thousand of brick. No brick was required, except to top out the chimneys. It was all stone work, and I had all the outside walls completed at that time.

Q. If you had complied with the demand, you would have had all those bricks on your hands? A. Yes, sir; they were not wanted there.

MR. FRASER: And how about the lumber? A. The lumber was not wanted—not the half of it.

THE CHAIRMAN: Was it by reason of this immense requisition that you got in this quarrel with the State? A. That was the excuse.

MR. FRASER: You did not have time to perform this work—you could not fulfill your contract—when they made an arbitrary demand on you to furnish this material at that time? A. That was their object.

MR. RYAN: It is stated in their report, in 1883, that they knew at the time he could not furnish these things when they made the demand. It was for the purpose of breaking him up.

MR. LANGFORD: It would require better evidence than a simple assertion before I would believe that Governor Irwin would do anything of that kind.

THE CHAIRMAN: I am satisfied that it was Bennett that did it: and Beck says so, and Johnson said so, and Perrine testified that he told him in San Francisco that he would burst Jordan wide open.

MR. LANGFORD: What kind of peine work does that contract call for?

MR. RYAN: Peine-hammered.

THE WITNESS: It says to be done according to the plans and specifications. It does not mention the peine-hammered work; but there was some work done there under the Miles contract, and this was to be the class of work I was to do. When I went up there I went to see what kind of work was already done, and some of this work Miles done had to be taken up. Where I took up Miles' work I used the same stone in the same cells, and this was the work that Mr. Bennett objected to more than any other. I took those stones as they were and used them, because they had been in use before, and those were the principal stones that he objected to; and there were three witnesses that showed where Bennett had talked with them about driving me off from the work.

MR. LANGFORD: I do not take it that a State officer like the Governor of the State of California—

MR. RYAN [interrupting]: We do not say that; we say the Governor was controlled entirely by the architect.

THE CHAIRMAN: I guess the Governor had something else to think of.

MR. RYAN: The Governor was perfectly honest; I have no doubt about that. Mr. Davis testified: "I am the son of Mr. Davis, of Davis & Cowell, of San Francisco; that his father had furnished materials and advanced money to Mr. Jordan. I went to the prison building to represent my father's interest, and while I remained there Mr. Jordan carried on the work continuously. I was there till he was pushed out by the State."

THE CHAIRMAN: Were the payments to be weekly or monthly payments? A. Monthly payments.

THE CHAIRMAN: Mr. Bennett did not seem to be satisfied with that, but he tried to keep anybody from furnishing Mr. Jordan with money, and this is in accordance exactly with the statement of Mr. Beck.

MR. ROTH: The State went on and completed the work, and it cost the State some two hundred and odd thousand dollars.

THE CHAIRMAN: Well, we will assume it did not cost any more; still the work was not as good as Jordan had done.

MR. LANGFORD: How much money was he paid in all?

THE CHAIRMAN: Thirty-two thousand five hundred dollars.

MR. ROTH: That is shown by the warrants in the State Controller's office.

MR. LANGFORD: What do you claim now—how many thousand? A. I claim I completed half the work, and done $10,000 extra work; and afterwards the State took charge, and bought the tools at Sheriff's sale.

Q. Who prosecuted you in that suit—outside parties or the State? A. Outside parties; I think about $1,900.

Q. Then you just come in and lump it off?

THE CHAIRMAN: No; these figures were made by the committee two years ago. His claim was for $70,000, and we reduced it to $50,000. We aimed to give Mr. Jordan the difference between what he actually spent on the building and what he received. That is the way we arrived at those figures, as well as I understand.

MR. ROTH: Yes, sir; that is the way it was arrived at.

MR. FRASER: Did you owe any money to the workmen on this building? A. No, sir; not a dollar.

Q. Has Christy any claim on that building? A. Not a dollar; no, sir.

Q. Has he got his money for the lime he furnished you? A. He never furnished lime; he furnished an engine. I took it on the ground; he was to sell it to me for $800, but he sold it to the State for more than $800. That is in the Commissioners' report.

Q. What did the State do with it? A. Used it there. I had two engines of my own besides that one, used at the quarry.

THE CHAIRMAN: It seems this extra work was on the Miles contract? A. The surface settled and I had to take it up.

MR. FRASER: Did they allow you anything at all for any extra work in any settlement they had with you? A. Yes, sir; they allowed me on the twenty-sixth of December for a portion of this extra work, but not half of it. They did afterwards make an estimate allowing me for some more that I was entitled to get on the twenty-sixth of December. They made another estimate, and I didn't get it until May.

THE CHAIRMAN: Well, does this $32,000 include all the money you received—extra work and all? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That would leave you $22,000 on the whole contract? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And $10,000 as extra work? A. Yes, sir.

Q. The extra work was all the foundation? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you got up above the foundation, and started up with your walls, we will say you were paid $10,000 for this extra work, that would only leave you on your original contract about $22,000? A. The extra work came to $10,192.

Q. You received in all $32,033 24? A. Yes.

Q. Ten thousand dollars of that was for extra work? A. Ten thousand one hundred and ninety-two dollars.

Q. That would leave you about $22,000 and a fraction over; no—would leave you a little over $21,800 on your original contract; something like that? A. Up to that time they took the work away from me I only received in all about $19,000.

MR. LANGFORD: Then they paid you some after they took the work away? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did it happen that they paid you one payment more? A. I say the estimate was made on the twenty-sixth of December, but didn't get my money—never was paid—until after they took the work away from me. There was an estimate made and allowed on the twenty-sixth of December, but I never got that money then.

Q. There was an estimate made, but who made that estimate that was to give the 90 per cent, as I understand it? A. No; the 90 per cent I never got at all. I had to take anything the architect gave me—9 or 10 per cent—in some cases I didn't get 10 per cent.

MR. FRASER: They passed on all the work that was done? A. But they didn't give me what I done. It is shown here that when the last estimate was made—for May—Mr. Bennett only allowed me $1,900 for the work that was done in the month of May, and I went to the Governor and complained to him of the great injustice that was done. I had to pay the stonecutters, and a great many stonemasons, and I showed this to the Governor, and the Governor ordered the man that took charge of the work in my place—Dennison, his name was—he ordered him to go and measure this work that Bennett measured. He went over this work again, and he allowed me, I think, $2,200 more. That was only for about fourteen days. It was only about fourteen days' work, and I done outside work. Bennett allowed me $1,900, and Mr. Dennison he came out there for the Governor and Mr. Beck, and he measured the same work I had done in May, and allowed me $2,200 more for it.

MR. LANGFORD: Now, then, that was up to that time? That was all the work done up to that time? A. No, sir; only the work that was done in the month of May, commencing where Bennett started from.

Q. You must have been very good natured to let him impose upon you this way. A. I ought to have killed him—I could not sleep at night, because I ought to have killed the scoundrel: but now he is paralyzed, and cannot walk, and cannot speak.

MR. FRASER: You have the advantage of him there.

THE CHAIRMAN: Duncan was here two years ago I remember very well, that about half of the work was completed; and Mr. McHenry testified, I think, to that same thing.

MR. LANGFORD: You did not put this bill in because you were frustrated—that is all the reason you have—you were frustrated, you say, at that time? A. Yes, sir.

Committee on River, Harbor, and Coast Defenses.

REPORT.

MR. PRESIDENT: Your Committee on River, Harbor, and Coast Defenses beg leave to submit the following report:

By appointment, at ten o'clock on February 11, 1889, the Committee on River, Harbor, and Coast Defenses met, at his headquarters, Phelan Building, Brigadier-General Nelson A. Miles, commanding the Division of the Pacific, and Lieutenant J. E. Runcie, First Artillery, United States Army, and were taken by these gentlemen to visit the different fortifications surrounding San Francisco Harbor.

We may say here though, without further proceeding, that since the report of the last Senate Committee, in 1887, on River, Harbor, and Coast Defenses, there have been no changes in the condition of the defenses of the Harbor of San Francisco, except such as is due to gradual decay, the destructive action of storm, and a total lack of protection and repair. This destruction and decay is the less to be deplored, as the defenses and their armament are practically obsolete, and would prove, in their present state, inefficient against even a fleet of thirty years ago, not speaking of a modern fleet. Still, so as to give some idea of the defenseless condition of San Francisco, a city whose prosperity, subject to ransom, amounts to three hundred and fifty millions of dollars, and also to show the urgent necessity for immediate consideration of this matter, let us state a few facts as they appeared to us.

The first point visited on our inspection was Fort Mason (Black Point). The fortifications here were erected at a time when it was feared that the Confederate cruiser Alabama might visit this port. By this it can be easily perceived, that works deemed sufficient to repel the attack of a wooden cruiser of twenty-five years ago would be utterly inadequate to cope with the guns of a modern, steel-clad ship of war. These works consist of two earthen barbette batteries (batteries in which the guns are mounted so as to fire over the top of the parapet), but the parapets here are so low and thin that the entire gun and upper portion of the carriage is exposed and would be wholly at the mercy of an enemy's fire. It has also been necessary of late to dismount some of the guns in the batteries at this post, the carriages having become through age and decay so weak as to be unable to support the guns mounted on them. All the guns at this post are smooth bores; three of them being fifteen-inch guns which for want of carriages and position have never been mounted.

At Alcatraz, the next point visited, the works are more pretentious, but being in an unfinished state—work on them having been discontinued in 1876—are hardly of greater use. The armament here consists of four mounted fifteen-inch Rodman smooth bore guns and a few minor pieces.

At Angel Island the three small batteries built over twenty years ago are absolutely useless for purposes of defense; their ordnance is obsolete, and their gun carriages have been long since condemned. On the south side of the Golden Gate stands Fort Winfield Scott, a masonry structure incapable of resisting for an hour the attack of a single ship furnished with high power guns. During the past year the guns mounted in the barbette of this work were removed, their ancient carriages being too much decayed to support even their small weight. In the casemates are mounted sixteen eight-inch rifled guns, converted from the old ten-inch cast-iron smooth bore by inserting a rifled tube of wrought-iron. These guns, though incapable of contending with any hope of success against modern guns of equal caliber, are, nevertheless, the most powerful guns in the harbor. They are mounted in an intenable structure, in positions which reduce their usefulness to a minimum. On the bluff behind the fort is an earthen barbette battery, in which are mounted eleven fifteen-inch smooth-bore guns. These works, like those at Alcatraz, have also been left unfinished since 1876. On the northern side of the entrance to the harbor are three earthen barbette batteries unfinished, unarmed, and going to decay.

There are some torpedo cases at Alcatraz, but no further arrangements appear to have been made for a torpedo defense. And such defense, made extremely difficult by the great depth of the water and the strong tides in the channel, would be of no avail without powerful guns on shore to prevent a hostile fleet from picking up or blasting out the obstructions to its passage.

It will be seen from the foregoing that the port of San Francisco, the second in importance in the United States, is practically without means of defense against the attack of a single modern armored ship, and the condition of things, in this respect, is constantly growing worse, for while all possible enemies are constantly improving their means of attack, our feeble defenses are as constantly going to decay for the lack of means necessary to preserve them. With regard to the other ports of this State little need be said; except at San Francisco, there is not a gun mounted between the Columbia River and the Mexican line.

Although Congress, in the last few years, has shown some disposition in this matter in appropriating money for our navy, still it would be very wise for our Senators and Congressmen representing this State to urge the expenditure of some of the vast amount of money lying idle, and which is constantly increasing, in placing San Francisco in a defensible condition.

This is a matter, we think, that has been considered long enough, and that it is about time that some action was displayed, as past experience has shown. It has shown that this country, through lack of facilities, is incapable of producing armament to cope with that of Europe. It has also shown that the few experimental orders given by this country to the workshops of Europe have only been filled after long delays, for the reason that they are wholly occupied by their own demands. If such is the case in small orders, how can we estimate the time required for the delivery of the large quantities we urgently need. Moreover, war would put at once a stop to such importations and leave us helpless in the emergency. Now, if our Government, instead of building vaults to store the nation's surplus money, would expend some of it in placing our navy yards in such a condition that instead of having to rely upon Europe for our means of defense we could manufacture them at home, not only giving employment to many thousands of our countrymen, encouraging home industries, promoting ingenuity, and increasing the nation's wealth, but also rendering our defenses independent of other countries. San Francisco may be shelled by vessels lying in the open sea five miles off the Cliff House, and there are no guns in this country of sufficient size and caliber to effectively meet this attack. Another matter of importance is that one of the navy yards that should be placed in condition is Mare Island, for the reason that it would be impossible to transport any of the heavy modern guns from the East, on account of the existing railroad bridges and trestles being insufficient to sustain their great weight. We must also consider the time necessary to place San Francisco in a defensible condition, for it will take no less than three years to complete the projected system, including the armament.

It is time, then, to arouse ourselves and ask for that protection which Congress owes us. The people are taxed in order that Congress may pay the debts and provide for the common defense and general welfare of the United States. Our defense has not been provided for, and yet there is complaint that no way is known to use the money flowing into the Treasury. Our fortifications are years behind the other great nations of the earth, and still Congress until recently has remained inactive and heedless. We are all apt to overlook the vast expenditures of life and money which our wars have cost us, and fasten our attentions upon the results obtained. This past policy has made our military history a succession of blunders, to prevent a recurrence of which we must accept and act upon the maxim, "In peace prepare for war."

Your committee again recommend that our Senators be instructed and our Congressmen be requested to immediately urge such appropriations as will protect our harbors against all foreign invasions.
